13 July 1951–10 August 1951 (CBS); 26 January 1952–29 March 1952 (CBS); 1954 (SYNDICATED) Neither of the TV versions of this adolescent sitcom were as successful as the radio version, which ran from 1943 to 1955, and was based on F. Hugh Herbert's play, Kiss and Tell. The show surfaced on television briefly in 1951, in what was apparently a trial run, and was revived early in 1952. It starred Lugene Sanders as Corliss Archer, a headstrong teenager (Sanders played the part on radio for a time and later played Babs on The Life of Riley). Also featured were Fred Shields as her father, Harry Archer, an insurance agent; Frieda Inescort (1951) and Irene Tedrow (1952) as her mother, Janet Archer; and Bobby Ellis as Dexter Franklin, Corliss's boyfriend. When the series resurfaced in 1954, only Bobby Ellis remained from the first TV cast. Ann Baker was now seen as Corliss, with John Eldredge as Harry and Mary Brian as Janet. Also featured was Ken Christy as Dexter's father, Mr. Franklin. The 1954 series, which featured offscreen narration and still cartoons, was filmed and was widely syndicated during the 1950s.

MEET McGRAW NBC
2 July 1957–24 June 1958 This half-hour crime show starred Frank Lovejoy as McGraw, a private eye with no first name; as Lovejoy put it at the beginning of each episode, "This is McGraw, just McGraw. It's enough of a name for a man like McGraw." Lovejoy first played the part on an episode of Four Star Playhouse, "Meet McGraw," aired 25 February 1954. Angie Dickinson guest-starred on one of the early episodes, broadcast 9 July 1957. The series was rerun on ABC during part of the 1958–1959 season. The show's theme, "One for My Baby," was written by Harold Arlen and Johnny Mercer.

MEET ME AT THE ZOO CBS
10 January 1953–30 May 1953 This half-hour educational series for children was broadcast from the Philadelphia Zoo. Each week host Jack Whitaker (who later became a CBS sportscaster) brought three young visitors along to chat with zoo director Freeman Shelly and meet the zoo's residents. Glen Bernard directed the show, which was aired Saturdays.

MEET MILLIE CBS
25 October 1952–28 February 1956 The misadventures of a Manhattan secretary were the subject of this half-hour sitcom. With Elena Verdugo as Millie Bronson; Florence Halop as her widowed mother, Mrs. Bronson, eager to find a husband for her daughter; Ross Ford as J. R. (Johnny) Boone, Jr., the boss's son, Millie's occasional romantic interest; Earl Ross and Roland Winters as J. R. Boone, Sr., Millie's boss; Marvin Kaplan as Alfred, the young man who lived next door; and Ray Montgomery (1955–1956) as Jack. Though Meet Millie was set in New York, it was one of the first series broadcast from CBS's Television City facility in Hollywood.

MEET THE BOSS DUMONT
10 JUNE 1952–12 MAY 1953 Leaders of American industry were profiled on this half-hour series. Bill Cunningham, the first host, was succeeded by Robert Sullivan.

MEET THE CHAMPIONS NBC
7 JULY 1956–12 JANUARY 1957 Jack Lescoulie interviewed athletes on this fifteen-minute Saturday-evening series.

MEET THE MASTERS NBC
24 FEBRUARY 1952–4 MAY 1952 This half-hour series of classical music was seen on alternate Sunday afternoons. Violinist Jascha Heifetz was the guest on the premiere.

MEET THE PRESS NBC
6 NOVEMBER 1947– Network television's oldest program has changed little since its inception: Each week a well-known guest, usually a political figure, is grilled by four journalists. The show was created by Martha Rountree, who brought it to radio in 1945; Lawrence E. Spivak, then editor of American Mercury magazine, was a permanent panelist from the earliest days, and producer Rountree also served as moderator. In 1953 Spivak bought out Rountree's interest in the show, and Ned Brooks succeeded her as moderator. By the early 1960s Spivak himself had become moderator and remained there until 1975. Spivak decided to retire from the show in November of that year, and the guest on Spivak's last regular show (an hour-long special aired 9 November, commemorating the series' twenty-eighth anniversary on television) was President Gerald Ford; it was the first time that an incumbent President had appeared on the program. NBC newsman Bill Monroe was the moderator from 1975 to 1984; Marvin Kalb subsequently took over as moderator and Monroe became a permanent panelist. Chris Wallace succeeded Marvin Kalb as moderator in 1987 and was in turn succeeded by Garrick Utley in 1988. Tim Russert took over as moderator in December 1991. On 20 September 1992 the series expanded to a full hour. As of January 1995 Meet the Press's most frequent guest was Senator Robert Dole of Kansas, who had appeared more than fifty times.

MEET THE PROFESSOR ABC
5 FEBRUARY 1961–14 MAY 1961; 7 JANUARY 1962–1 JULY 1962; 11 NOVEMBER 1962–9 JUNE 1963 A Sunday-afternoon show with an academic flavor. Each week Dr. Harold Taylor, former president of Sarah Lawrence College, interviewed a guest from the world of education. When the series returned in 1962, there was no regular host.

MEET THE VEEP NBC
1 FEBRUARY 1953–1 SEPTEMBER 1953 Alben W. Barkley, former Vice President under Harry S Truman, chatted with Earl Goodwin on this public affairs program. It began as a half-hour show on Sundays and later switched to fifteen minutes on Fridays, then Tuesdays.

MEET YOUR CONGRESS NBC/DUMONT
1 JULY 1949–12 NOVEMBER 1949 (NBC); 8 JULY 1953–4 JULY 1954 (DUMONT) Broadcast from Washington, this public affairs program was moderated by Blair Moody; each week four Congressional representatives, two from each party, discussed topical issues. Charles Christiansen produced the half-hour series.

MEET YOUR COVER GIRL CBS
24 OCTOBER 1950–1 NOVEMBER 1951 Robin Chandler interviewed guest models on this half-hour daytime series.

MEET YOUR MATCH NBC
25 AUGUST 1952–5 SEPTEMBER 1952 This prime time audience participation quiz show was hosted by Jan Murray. The fifteen-minute series was telecast only six times, while the stars of Those Two, the series whose time slot it occupied, were on vacation.

MEETING OF MINDS PBS

1977–1981 An unusual talk show created and hosted by versatile Steve Allen, Meeting of Minds featured guests not from the present, but from the past. Each week four or five historical figures (played by actors) got together and discussed matters past, present, and future. Steve Allen's "guests" on the premiere included Cleopatra (played by Jayne Meadows, Allen's wife), Thomas Aquinas (Peter Bromilow), Thomas Paine (Joe Sirola), and Theodore Roosevelt (Joe Earley). The hour series won a Peabody Award for the year 1977.

MEL & SUSAN TOGETHER ABC

22 APRIL 1978–13 MAY 1978 Four-week variety show hosted by country and western singer Mel Tillis and former Miss California Susan Anton. The executive producers of the half-hour series were Merrill and Alan Osmond, and the show was taped at the Osmonds' production facilities in Orem, Utah.

THE MEL MARTIN SHOW

THE MEL TORMÉ SHOW CBS

17 SEPTEMBER 1951–21 AUGUST 1952 One of the first shows to be broadcast in color, The Mel Tormé Show was a half-hour daytime musical variety show. Assisting Tormé were singers Ellen Martin and Peggy King, comedienne Kaye Ballard, Haitian dancer Jean Leon Dustine, and a French sketch artist known as Monsieur Crayon.

MELBA CBS

28 JANUARY 1986; 2 AUGUST 1986–13 SEPTEMBER 1986 Melba Moore starred in this ill-fated sitcom as single mother Melba Patterson, who ran the Manhattan Visitors' Center in New York. The series premiered on 28 January 1986, the day of the Challenger space shuttle explosion, and was lifted from CBS's schedule after a single airing until August, when the remaining episodes were played. As TV Guide noted, its return on Saturday, August 2, contributed to CBS's lowest-rated prime-time evening in the network's history. Other regulars included Barbara Meek as Melba's mom, Rose; Jamila Perry as Melba's young daughter, Tracy; Gracie Harrison as Melba's lifelong friend, Susan Slater; and Lou Jacobi and Evan Mirand as Jack and Gil, two of Melba's coworkers.

THE MELBA MOORE-CLIFTON DAVIS SHOW CBS

7 JUNE 1972–5 JULY 1972 A five-week summer replacement for The Carol Burnett Show, this musical variety hour was cohosted by Melba Moore and her husband, Clifton Davis. Also on hand were Timmie Rogers, Ron Carey, Dick Libertini, and Liz Torres.

MELODY, HARMONY & RHYTHM NBC

13 DECEMBER 1949–16 FEBRUARY 1950 Broadcast from Philadelphia on Tuesdays and Thursdays before the network news, this fifteen-minute show featured the music of the Tony DeSimone Trio and singers Carol Reed and Lynne Barrett.

MELODY STREET DUMONT

23 SEPTEMBER 1953–5 FEBRUARY 1954 Half-hour musical variety series hosted by Elliott Lawrence.

MELODY TOUR ABC

8 JULY 1954–30 SEPTEMBER 1954 This half-hour musical revue was set in a different locale each week. It featured pianist Stan Freeman, soprano Nancy Kenyon, baritones Norman Scott and Robert Rounseville, dancers Nellie Fisher, Jonathan Lucas, and Peter Gladke, and comedienne Jorie Remes.

MELROSE PLACE FOX

8 JULY 1992– Spun off from Beverly Hills 90210, this hour serial examined the lives of several young adults, most of whom lived in a Los Angeles apartment building. The original cast included Grant Show as Jake Hanson (the character was introduced on 90210 as an old friend of Dylan's); Andrew Shue as writer Billy Campbell; Courtney Thorne-Smith as Alison Parker; Doug Savant as gay social worker Matt Fielding; Amy Locane as Sandy Louise Harling; Vanessa Williams as aerobics instructor Rhonda Blair; Thomas Calabro as medical intern Michael Mancini, who was also the building manager; and Josie Bissett as Michael's wife, Jane Mancini, a designer. Locane and Williams were gone by the end of the first season, as two new characters were added in midseason: Daphne Zuniga as photographer Jo Beth Reynolds; and Heather Locklear as scheming Amanda Woodward, who was Alison's boss at an advertising agency. Locklear was originally signed for only four episodes, but her character was so popular with viewers that she was made a permanent cast member; by the end of the season, Amanda had bought the apartment house.

Marcia Cross joined the cast at the end of the 1992–1993 season as Dr. Kimberly Shaw, and Laura Leighton joined in the fall of 1993 as Jane's younger sister, Sydney Andrews. By the end of the second season, Michael had divorced Jane and had married Sydney. Occasionally featured during the 1993–1994 season were William R. Moses as Keith; Parker Stevenson as Steve; Beata Pozniak as Katya; Kristian Alfonso as Lauren; Mara Wilson as Nikki; Wayne Tippit as Palmer Woodward; Jason Beghe as Jeffrey; James Wilder as Reed; and Linda Gray as Hillary Michaels (Hillary was spun off into her own series, Models Inc., in the summer of 1994). Tippit and Beghe also appeared occasionally during the 1994–1995 season, as did Tracy Nelson as Meredith Parker, Alison's sister; Andrew Williams as Chris; Cheryl Pollak as Susan; Jasmine Guy as Caitlin; Jack Wagner as Dr. Peter Burns; David James Elliott as Terry; Traci Lords as Rikki; Kristin Davis as Brooke Armstrong, who married Billy; and Dan Cortese as Jess. The 1994–1995 season ended with a bang, as Kimberly blew up the apartment building. Antonio Sabato, Jr., joined the cast briefly in the fall of 1995 as Jack Parezi, Amanda's ex-husband.

MEMORIES . . . THEN AND NOW SYNDICATED

1990–1991 Half-hour syndicated look back at events and personalities of the past, incorporating newsreel footage, celebrity biographies, and present-day interviews. Chuck Scarborough and Kathryn Kinley cohosted.

THE MEN ABC

21 SEPTEMBER 1972–1 SEPTEMBER 1973 The Men was the umbrella title for three alternating hour-long adventure series: see Assignment: Vienna, The Delphi Bureau, and Jigsaw.

MEN ABC

25 MARCH 1989–22 APRIL 1989 This five-episode dramatic series was reminiscent of the 1982 film Diner. Like Diner, it was set in Baltimore, and traced the lives of four men who became friends in high school and who continued to get together for a weekly poker game. Unlike Diner, Men was set in the present, not in the 1950s. Appearing as the four pals were Ted Wass as Steven Ratajkowski, a surgeon; Ving Rhames as Charlie Hazard, a lawyer; Saul Rubinek as Paul Armas, a reporter; and Tom O'Brien as Danny McDaniel, a cop. Men finished at the bottom of the 1988–1989 ratings heap, tied for 125th out of 126 prime-time series.

1965 Edmond O'Brien narrated this half-hour biographical series, which focused on great decision makers. The show was produced and directed by Alan Landsburg.

MEN INTO SPACE

CBS

30 SEPTEMBER 1959–7 SEPTEMBER 1960 The first of the post-Sputnik space shows, Men into Space was filmed with the cooperation of the Department of Defense, which retained script approval. Thus, the show dealt with space travel in a fairly plausible fashion and avoided the use of aliens, monsters, and secret weapons. Thirty-eight half-hour episodes were filmed, with William Lundigan as Colonel Ed McCauley, American space pioneer. Occasionally featured were Joyce Taylor as his wife, Mary, and Tyler McVey as General Norgath. Lewis Rachmil produced the series.

MEN OF ANNAPOLIS

SYNDICATED

1957 Produced by Ziv TV, Men of Annapolis was a companion piece to Ziv's 1956 service academy show, West Point. The half-hour anthology series was filmed largely on location at the United States Naval Academy in Annapolis, Maryland.

MENASHA THE MAGNIFICENT

NBC

3 JULY 1950–11 SEPTEMBER 1950 Half-hour sitcom starring Menasha Skulnik as a restaurant manager. Skulnik had previously played Uncle David on the radio version of The Goldbergs and joined the television cast of that series in 1953. Produced by Martin Goodman, the show was given a weekly slot some months after the pilot, "Magnificent Menasha," was telecast on 20 February 1950.

THE MEREDITH WILLSON SHOW

NBC

31 JULY 1949–21 AUGUST 1949 Half-hour musical variety series hosted by bandleader-composer Meredith Willson. Also featured were the Talking People, a five-member vocal group. Bill Brown produced and directed the series.

THE MERV GRIFFIN SHOW

NBC/SYNDICATED/CBS

1 OCTOBER 1962–29 MARCH 1963 (NBC); 1965–1969 (SYNDICATED); 18 AUGUST 1969–11 FEBRUARY 1972 (CBS); 1972–1986 (SYNDICATED) Merv Griffin hosted talk shows almost continuously from 1962 to 1986. Before that he had been featured on several series, first as a singer, later as a game show host (The Freddy Martin Show, Going Places, Keep Talking, Play Your Hunch, The Robert Q. Lewis Show, and Song Snapshots on a Summer Holiday). On 1 October 1962, the day that Johnny Carson took over as host of the Tonight show, Griffin began hosting an afternoon talk show on NBC; the fifty-five-minute daily show lasted twenty-six weeks. After developing two game shows—Jeopardy and Word for Word (he also emceed the latter)—Griffin again hosted a talk show. This effort, syndicated by Westinghouse, was seen on weekday afternoons in most markets and fared well enough to attract the attention of CBS. At that time CBS, which had not previously aired a late-night talk show, was interested in finding someone to challenge Johnny Carson at 11:30 p.m. The network signed Griffin to a lucrative contract and renovated the Cort Theater in New York especially for the new show. Griffin's guests on the 1969 premiere included Woody Allen, Hedy Lamarr, Moms Mabley, Ted Sorensen, and Leslie Uggams. Also on hand were announcer Arthur Treacher and the Mort Lindsey Orchestra, both of whom had been with Griffin on the Westinghouse show. In March of 1970 antiwar activist Abbie Hoffman came on the show wearing a red, white, and blue shirt that resembled the American flag. The network, skittish about possible political repercussions, decided to air the tape, but arranged to have Hoffman's image electronically obscured; when the program was broadcast, Griffin and his other guests could be seen clearly, while Hoffman's voice emanated from within a jumble of lines. Although the incident attracted some controversy, it did little to bolster the show's ratings; the network continued to have difficulty in lining up enough affiliates to mount a serious challenge to Carson (many local stations found that running old movies against the Tonight show was more profitable). In September of 1970, the show moved from New York to Los Angeles, but to no avail. Griffin and CBS called it quits early in 1972; later that year, after negotiating again with Westinghouse, Griffin signed with Metromedia and began hosting his second syndicated talk show. That show, like the Westinghouse show, was seen on weekday afternoons in most markets. Directed by Dick Carson, brother of Johnny Carson (and former director of the Tonight show), it proved to be Griffin's most successful effort, lasting fourteen years. On the evening of the show's final telecast, 5 September 1986, Griffin was a guest, for the first time, on The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson. By then, thanks to his prowess at developing game shows (Jeopardy and Wheel of Fortune being the most successful of his efforts), Griffin had become one of the wealthiest people in show business.

METROPOLITAN OPERA AUDITIONS ON THE AIR ABC

15 JANUARY 1952–1 APRIL 1952 Viewers had the rare opportunity to watch auditions for the Metropolitan Opera Company on this prime-time half-hour series. Milton Cross, "the voice of the Met," hosted the show.

MIAMI UNDERCOVER SYNDICATED

1961 Low-budget half-hour crime show starring Lee Bowman as Jeff Thompson, a private eye employed by the Miami Hotel Owners Association, and Rocky Graziano as his partner, Rocky.

MIAMI VICE NBC

16 SEPTEMBER 1984–26 JULY 1989 This was the series that most captured the style of the 1980s, as The Man from UNCLE had reflected the style of its time twenty years earlier. On one level Miami Vice was a straightforward cop show, with its two protagonists—one white, one black—battling the usual parade of bad guys each week. But on another level it was a treat for the senses because of its meticulous attention to form, color, and sound.

The genesis of the series was a two-word notation made by NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff: "MTV cops." Tartikoff had in mind an action show that would incorporate the bold, fast-paced visual style of the music videos popularized by MTV. Anthony Yerkovich, who had written for and produced Hill Street Blues, wrote the pilot script. Michael Mann, who had previous experience in TV and film, was hired as executive producer. After briefly considering New York City, they decided to set the new series in Miami. Some local resistance was encountered at first, as officials feared that the city would be portrayed unflatteringly; most of those concerns evaporated after the show went on the air. The opening title sequence, reminiscent of Hawaii Five-O's, was virtually a tourism ad for the city.

Although other crime shows had been set there (e.g., Miami Undercover, SurfSide 6, Michael Shayne, and Caribe), this was the first to make Miami itself an integral part of the show; the city's splashy architecture was fully exploited. The show's production staff chose buildings and exterior locations with great care; one of the early "rules" was that there be no brick, no reds, and no browns.

Pulsating under the titles and through the stories was Jan Hammer's theme and score (Tim Truman scored the show during its final season, though Hammer's theme was retained). A native of Czechoslovakia with a rock and jazz background, Hammer linked music to story as effectively as Henry Mancini had done in Peter Gunn a generation earlier. Contemporary rock music, performed by the original artists, was also liberally employed, at a cost of up to $50,000 per episode. Hammer's theme reached Number One on the pop music charts, and two successful Miami Vice LP's (featuring Hammer's music and songs by other artists) were released.

The casting, for the regulars and the guest stars, was offbeat. None of the regulars was a household name in 1984. Don Johnson had made a handful of films and five unsuccessful TV pilots before signing on as Detective James "Sonny" Crockett, an undercover cop who (as high-roller Sonny Burnett) drove a Ferrari and lived on a boat with a pet alligator named Elvis. Philip Michael Thomas, who had some stage and screen experience, costarred as his hip partner, Detective Ricardo Tubbs, newly arrived from New York (originally to investigate the death of his brother), who cruised around town in a vintage Cadillac. Tubbs was given an urban look, with double-breasted jackets, ties and silk shirts, while Crockett was given an ultra-casual look, with European jackets thrown over T-shirts and baggy pants, with neither belts nor socks. Crockett even sported an unshaven look for the first season, but, fortunately, the stubble look never really caught on with male viewers.

Rounding out the cast were Edward James Olmos as Lieutenant Martin Castillo, the unsmiling, laconic head of the Organized Crime Bureau (Olmos replaced Gregory Sierra, who had played Lieutenant Lou Rodriguez and was killed off in the fourth episode); Saundra Santiago as Detective Gina Calabrese; Olivia Brown as Detective Trudy Joplin (Gina and Trudy often seemed to go undercover as hookers); Michael Talbott as Detective Stanley Switek; and John Diehl as Switek's partner, Detective Larry Zito, who was killed off in a two-parter in December 1986. Martin Ferrero was frequently seen as hapless hustler Izzy Moreno.

Many of the show's guest stars were persons who were seldom, if ever, seen on dramatic TV: rockers Phil Collins, Ted Nugent, and Glenn Frey (who recorded "Smuggler's Blues" and "You Belong to the City" for the show), jazzman Miles Davis, singer/poet Leonard Cohen, Watergate figure G. Gordon Liddy, boxer Roberto Duran, socialite Bianca Jagger, auto magnate Lee Iacocca, and stage actor Julian Beck. Another notable guest was Melanie Griffith, Don Johnson's ex-wife, who played a madam in an 1987 episode directed by Johnson. As a result of their onscreen reacquaintance, their offscreen relationship was rekindled.

Originally scheduled Fridays at 10 P.M., Miami Vice did well in the ratings, finishing ninth in its second season. In June 1986 the show was moved back an hour, to go head to head with CBS's Dallas, which was going into its tenth season. The show also changed its "look," consciously adopting darker tones. The combination backfired, as Miami Vice slipped to 23rd place in 1986–1987, and 36th in 1987–1988. Singer Sheena Easton joined the cast in the fall of 1987 as rocker Caitlin Davies, who married Crockett; their wedding episode, telecast 20 November 1987, was the first to top Dallas in the ratings. Caitlin was killed off later in the season.

Executive producer Mann decided that the fifth season would be the series' last. The chief reason for this decision was financial; Miami Vice ran consistently over its budget, and the show needed to be sold into syndication in order for Universal Studios to recoup its investment. A move back to 10 P.M. for the final season was ineffective, as the series finished in 53rd place. On the two-hour "finale," aired 21 May 1989, Crockett and Tubbs left the force. The series was sold to the USA Cable Network, which began running it in the fall of 1989. The package included one episode, "Too Much Too Late," which never ran on NBC; the story, involving a mother who sold her daughter for sex in order to buy cocaine, was considered too objectionable by the network.

MICHAEL NESMITH IN TELEVISON PARTS NBC

14 JUNE 1985–27 JULY 1985 Following the cancellation of The Monkees in 1968 and the breakup of the group, Michael Nesmith remained active in music as a songwriter and as a solo artist. By the end of the 1970s he had begun producing videos for himself and for other artists. His 1982 effort, "Elephant Parts," won the first Grammy award given for a video. On 7 March 1985 he hosted a comedy special on NBC, with guests Martin Mull and Garry Shandling. Three months later his series was given a brief run. The half hour was a potpourri of videos and comedy skits, emceed by Nesmith. Four of the seven programs were shown in prime time on Fridays; the last three were pieced together as a late-night special on Saturday, 27 July.

MICHAEL SHAYNE NBC

30 SEPTEMBER 1960–22 SEPTEMBER 1961 Michael Shayne, the private eye created by Brett Halliday (the pen name of Davis Dresser), first appeared on radio in 1944. The television series, which ran a full hour, was set in Miami Beach and featured Richard Denning as Michael Shayne; Jerry Paris as reporter Tim O'Rourke; Patricia Donahue and Margie Regan as Shayne's secretary, Lucy Hamilton; Gary Clarke as Dick, Lucy's younger brother; and Herbert Rudley as Lieutenant Gentry, Miami Beach cop.

3 OCTOBER 1955–24 SEPTEMBER 1959

THE NEW MICKEY MOUSE CLUB SYNDICATED

MICKEY MOUSE CLUB DISNEY

1989–1994 The second television series from Walt Disney Studios, The Mickey Mouse Club was introduced as a Monday-through-Friday show a year after Disneyland premiered. The filmed show was seen for an hour a day during its first two seasons and was trimmed to a half-hour in the fall of 1957. Unlike other popular children's shows of the day, The Mickey Mouse Club did not use a studio audience, and, instead of a sole adult host (such as Pinky Lee or Buffalo Bob Smith), it employed a group of child performers; the T-shirted, mouse-hatted company was known, of course, as the Mouseketeers.

Though the format of each day's show was approximately the same (a typical hour usually consisted of a newsreel or other short documentary film, a production number or sketch, an episode of a filmed serial, and a Disney cartoon), the show for each day of the week was constructed around a general theme. Monday was "Fun with Music Day," on which original musical numbers were performed; Tuesday was "Guest Star Day," featuring appearances by celebrities; Wednesday was "Anything Can Happen Day," on which a potpourri of features was presented; Thursday was "Circus Day," which featured a cartoon appearance by Jiminy Cricket followed by stunts and games involving the Mouseketeers; Friday was "Talent Roundup Day," on which talented youngsters performed and were then made "Honorary Mouseketeers." During the show's first two seasons, a short, child-oriented newsreel was shown three times a week.

The thread that held the show together was the Mouseketeers, who sang, danced, starred in the filmed serials, introduced the cartoons, and provided an audience for the guest stars and talent acts. Twenty-four youngsters were featured regularly during the first season: Nancy Abbate, Sharon Baird, Billie Jean Beanblossom, Bobby Burgess, Lonnie Burr, Tommy Cole, Johnny Crawford, Dennis Day, Dickie Dodd, Mary Espinosa, Annette Funicello, Darlene Gillespie, Judy Harriet, John Lee Johann, Bonni Lou Kern, Carl "Cubby" O'Brien, Karen Pendleton, Mary Sartori, Bronson Scott, Michael Smith, Ronnie Steiner, Mark Sutherland, Doreen Tracey, and Don Underhill. Three other youngsters were featured on the earliest shows, but left after only a few weeks: Paul Petersen (who later was featured on The Donna Reed Show), and Tim and Mickey Rooney, Jr. (sons of actor Mickey Rooney). Two adults, similarly hatted and shirted, rounded out the cast: Jimmie Dodd, an actor and songwriter who was, in effect, the show's host and Roy Williams ("The Big Mooseketeer"), a veteran Disney writer and animator; it was Williams who designed the Club hat.

Only ten of the first two dozen Mouseketeers returned for the 1956–1957 season: Sharon, Bobby, Lonnie, Tommy, Dennis, Annette, Darlene, Cubby, Karen, and Doreen. Seven new Mouseketeers were added: Sherry Allen, Eileen Diamond, Cheryl Holdridge, Charley Laney, Larry Larsen, Jay-Jay Solari, and Margene Storey. Again, ten of that group returned for the remaining seasons (the shows seen during the fourth season were actually produced in 1958): Sharon, Bobby, Lonnie, Tommy, Annette, Darlene, Cubby, Karen, Doreen, and Cheryl. Four newcomers were added: Don Agrati (later known as Don Grady when he was featured on My Three Sons), Bonnie Lynn Fields, Linda Hughes, and Lynn Ready. Other youngsters were featured as Mouseketeers from time to time, especially those who appeared in the serials.

The Mickey Mouse Club was one of the few children's shows that presented made-for-TV serials. Several features were produced, most of which consisted of fifteen to thirty episodes. Among the more popular cliff-hangers were: "Corky and White Shadow," with Darlene Gillespie, Buddy Ebsen, and Lloyd Corrigan; "The Hardy Boys: The Mystery of the Applegate Treasure," with Tim Considine, Tommy Kirk, and Florenz Ames (a sequel, "The Hardy Boys: The Mystery of Ghost Farm," was also produced); "Clint and Mac," with Neil Wolfe and Jonathan Bailey; "Annette," with Annette Funicello, Tim Considine, and Roberta Shore. The most popular of the serials, however, was "The Adventures of Spin and Marty," the story of two boys at the Triple R Ranch, a western summer camp; it featured Tim Considine (as Spin Evans), David Stollery (as Marty Markham), J. Pat O'Malley, and Roy Barcroft. "Spin and Marty" was introduced during the 1955–1956 season, and two sequels were produced.

Produced by Bill Walsh, the series left ABC in the fall of 1959 after a four-year run. Reruns were syndicated in 1962 and again in 1975. In the fall of 1976 the series was revived, as production began on The New Mickey Mouse Club. This version was a half-hour series, and was videotaped. A new group of Mouseketeers (that included black and Asian-American faces) was formed, which included: Pop Attmore, Scott Craig, Nita DiGiampaolo, Mindy Feldman, Angelo Florez, Allison Fonte, Shawnte Northcutte, Kelly Parsons, Julie Piekarski, Todd Turquand, Lisa Whelchel, and Curtis Wong. Ron Miller was the executive producer.

A new Mickey Mouse Club set sail on The Disney Channel in April 1989, with a decidedly modern look: no mouse ears and no uniforms for the new multi-ethnic band of Mouseketeers. Rap music and computer graphics also helped update the show. Fred Newman and Mowava Pryor were the adult cohosts. It remained in production for more than five years.

THE MICKEY ROONEY SHOW NBC

28 AUGUST 1954–4 JUNE 1955 Also seen under the title Hey Mulligan, this half-hour filmed sitcom starred Mickey Rooney as Mickey Mulligan, a TV studio page, aspiring to become a performer. Also featured were Regis Toomey as his father, Joe Mulligan, a cop; Claire Carleton as his mother, Nell Mulligan, a former burlesque queen; Carla Belenda as Pat Harding, his girlfriend; Joey Forman as his pal Freddie; John Hubbard as his boss, Mr. Brown, the program director; and Alan Mowbray as Mickey's drama coach, Mr. Swift. Blake Edwards and Richard Quine created the series.

MICKIE FINN'S NBC

21 APRIL 1966–1 SEPTEMBER 1966 Half-hour musical variety series cohosted by Fred Finn and his wife, Mickie Finn. The show, which had a gay nineties flavor, was taped at a replica of the Finns' San Diego nightclub, where Fred led the band while Mickie played the banjo.

MIDDLE AGES CBS

3 SEPTEMBER 1992–1 OCTOBER 1992 Hour continuing drama about a group of friends in suburban Chicago who were about to turn 40. With Peter Riegert as salesman Walter Cooper, whose job was in jeopardy; Ashley Crow as his wife, Cindy; William Russ as Walter's friend, Terry; Michael O'Keefe as Walter's friend, Ron Steffey; James Gammon as Dave Nelson, Walter's father-in-law; Kyle Secor as Walter's hard-driving boss, Brian Conover; Lisa Zane as Nora, Brian's wife; Maria Pitillo as Brian's secretary, Robin; Ryan McWhorter as Walter and Cindy's son, Carson; Alex McKenna as Walter and Cindy's daughter, Hilary; and Ruby Dee as cleaning woman Estelle Williams. One of the series's story lines concerned the efforts of Walter, Terry, and Ron to reform the Deacons, the rock band they had had years earlier until their female singer had died. Amy Brenneman was featured as their new singer, Blanche, while Holly Gagnier appeared in flashbacks and dream sequences as the old singer, Jill Peabody. Stan Rogow and John Byrum created the series.

MIDDLETOWN PBS

24 MARCH 1982–21 APRIL 1982 In 1929 sociologists Helen and Robert Lynd wrote a book, Middletown, a study of Muncie, Indiana, a town they had selected as "typically American." In 1981 producer Peter Davis revisited Muncie and filmed this documentary series. Although six programs were filmed, complaints from students, parents, and the series' underwriter (Xerox) forced one segment to be withdrawn before its scheduled broadcast; one reason for the complaints was that Davis had filmed several high-schoolers smoking marijuana.

MIDNIGHT CALLER NBC

25 OCTOBER 1988–2 AUGUST 1991 An atmospheric hour dramatic series, starring Gary Cole as Jack "Nighthawk" Killian, a San Fransisco cop who left the force after accidentally killing his partner and became the host of a late-night radio talk show. With Wendy Kilbourne (1988–1990) as Devon King, owner of the station (KJCM); Arthur Taxier as Lieutenant Carl Zymak of the S.F.P.D.; Dennis Dun as Jack's producer and engineer, Billy Po; and Mykel T. Williamson (1989–1991) as investigative reporter Deacon Bridges. Lisa Eilbacher joined the cast in the fall of 1990 as Nicky Molloy, Jack's new boss, as did Steven Anthony Jones as Inspector Martin Slocum. One first-season episode, "After It Happened," generated controversy because of its AIDS-related story line. According to AIDS activists, an early draft of the script called for a woman to shoot the bisexual man who had infected her and others; the ending was modified before the show aired. For the sequel, televised during the second season, the show's producers invited some of the protesting groups to advise them on the script.

THE MIDNIGHT HOUR CBS

23 JULY 1990–14 SEPTEMBER 1990 Broadcast live from Hollywood, this hour late-night (12:40 A.M.) talk show featured a different guest host each week; Joy Behar led off, followed by Peter Tilden. Jennifer Martin was the announcer, Patrice Rushen the bandleader. The show featured an 800 telephone number on which viewers could talk to the guest host or the guests.

THE MIDNIGHT SPECIAL NBC

2 FEBRUARY 1973–1 MAY 1981 Network television's first regularly scheduled attempt at late-late night programming, The Midnight Special was a ninety-minute rock music show, which ran from 1:00 A.M. to 2:30 A.M. on Fridays. Helen Reddy hosted the premiere telecast and also served as regular host from 1975 to 1977. America's legendary disc jockey Wolfman Jack was the announcer. Burt Sugarman was the executive producer.

MIDWEST HAYRIDE SYNDICATED/NBC/ABC

1951–1961 Midwest Hayride, also known as Midwestern Hayride, was a long-running country and western music show that was filmed (and later taped) on location throughout the nation. It was hosted by Willie Thall (1951–1955), Hugh Cherry (1955–1956), and Paul Dixon (1957–1961). The syndicated show was occasionally picked up by one of the major networks as a summer replacement; it was seen on NBC during the summers of 1951, 1952, 1954, 1955, and 1959, and on ABC during the summers of 1957 and 1958. NBC also carried the show during the 1955–1956 season.

MIGHTY HEROES CBS

29 OCTOBER 1966–2 SEPTEMBER 1967 This half-hour cartoon series, which replaced Mighty Mouse Playhouse on CBS's Saturday-morning schedule, featured an odd quintet of superheroes, led by a powerful baby named Diaper Man. The deep-voiced infant and his four cohorts—Tornado Man, Strong Man, Rope Man, and Cuckoo Man—battled an assortment of villains each week. Produced by Terrytoons, the series was directed by Ralph Bakshi, who would later direct such innovative animated films as Fritz the Cat and Lord of the Rings.

MIGHTY MORPHIN POWER RANGERS FOX

28 AUGUST 1993– Daily half-hour live-action kids show about a group of teenagers who could "morph," or transform themselves into the Power Rangers, a spandex-clad and helmeted crew who fought various extraterrestial villains. The show was derived from a Japanese television series, Zyu Rangers, with a similar format. American producer Haim Saban hired American actors to play the teens, then spliced in the Japanese action sequences with the Americans' voices; as the Power Rangers were all helmeted, the faces of the Japanese performers could not be seen. The cast included Amy Jo Johnson as Kimberly, who became the Pink Ranger; David Yost as Billy, the Blue Ranger; Walter Jones (1993–1994) as Zack, the Black Ranger; Austin St. John (1993–1994) as Jason, the Red Ranger; Thuy Trang (1993–1994) as Trini, the Yellow Ranger; Jason Frank (added early in the first season) as Tommy, the Green Ranger (he became the White Ranger for the second season); Steve Cardenas (1994– ) as Rocky, the Red Ranger; Karan Ashley (1994– ) as Aisha, the Yellow Ranger; Johnny Yong Bosch (1994– ) as Adam, the Black Ranger; and Paul Schrier and Jason Narvy as Bulk and Skull, two bullies who hassled the teens. As the Power Rangers, the teens battled Rita Repulsa and Zordon; they could also summon the Dino Zords, a group of robotized dinosaurs who could meld together into a giant Mega-Zord.

The series became an immediate hit with young viewers, and millions of dollars of Power Ranger merchandise was sold in 1993 and 1994. A feature film was released in mid-1995. The series was retitled Power Rangers Zeo in April 1996.

THE MIGHTY MOUSE PLAYHOUSE CBS

10 DECEMBER 1955–22 OCTOBER 1966 The star of this long-running Saturday-morning cartoon show was Mighty Mouse, a caped crimefighter who was the rodent equivalent of Superman. Although other segments were also telecast on the series, such as "The Adventures of Gandy Goose," the Mighty Mouse episodes are the best remembered, primarily because of their operatic style. See also The New Adventures of Mighty Mouse and Heckle and Jeckle, and Mighty Mouse: The New Adventures.

MIGHTY MOUSE: THE NEW ADVENTUES CBS

19 SEPTEMBER 1987–2 SEPTEMBER 1989 Mighty Mouse returned to television in a new series of Saturday-morning cartoons, produced by veteran animator Ralph Bakshi. Surprisingly, the series managed to attract some controversy because of a brief scene in one program showing Mighty Mouse sniffing a handful of crushed flowers; media watchdog Reverend Donald Wildmon claimed that the famed rodent was actually sniffing cocaine. Though CBS and Bakshi denied the assertion, the offending scene was cut when the episode was rerun.

THE MIGHTY ORBOTS ABC

8 SEPTEMBER 1984–31 AUGUST 1985 The main characters on this Saturday-morning cartoon show were five twenty-third-century robots who could combine themselves into a single synergistic robot.

MIKE AND BUFF CBS

20 AUGUST 1951–27 FEBRUARY 1953 Mike Wallace and Buff Cobb, who was Wallace's wife at the time, cohosted one of CBS's first color shows in 1951. The experimental telecasts were conducted weekday mornings, and in its earliest days their show was called Two Sleepy People. By November of 1951, the show had been retitled Mike and Buff and was seen—in black and white—on weekday afternoons, where it remained for the next fifteen months.

MIKE & MATY ABC

11 APRIL 1994– This hour daytime magazine series replaced The Home Show. Its coanchors were Michael Burger, a former standup comic, and Maty Monfort, who had hosted several Spanish language series in Miami. Joining them in the summer of 1994 as special correspondent was ten-year-old Michael Kearney, America's youngest college graduate.

THE MIKE DOUGLAS SHOW SYNDICATED

1963–1982 One of television's durable talk-show hosts, Mike Douglas started out as a singer and was a featured vocalist on such shows as College of Musical Knowledge and Club 60. From 1953 to 1955 he hosted his own daytime variety program in Chicago, Hi Ladies. In 1961 he started hosting a daily ninety-minute talk show in Cleveland. That program was nationally syndicated by 1963, and two years later Douglas's operation moved to Philadelphia, where it remained for thirteen years; during that time it was the only major national series to originate from that city. Each week Douglas was joined by a celebrity cohost (the first was Carmel Quinn); most of Douglas's guests came from New York, a two-hour limousine drive from Philadelphia. In 1978, however, Douglas left Philadelphia for Los Angeles, primarily because of the comparative ease of booking guests on the West Coast. Douglas's first producer was Woody Fraser; subsequent producers included Jack Reilly, Brad Lachman, Vince Calandra, and E. V. DiMassa. In 1967 The Mike Douglas Show became the first syndicated talk show to win an Emmy. After almost two decades, Douglas's distributor, Group W, dropped the show in mid-1980, and hired John Davidson to host a new talk show. Douglas carried on for two more years with another distributor; during its final months the show was titled The Mike Douglas Entertainment Hour.

MIKE HAMMER SYNDICATED

1958 Mike Hammer, the gritty private eye created by Mickey Spillane, was played by Darren McGavin in this half-hour show. Seventy-eight episodes were filmed. The character returned in a made-for-TV movie with one of the longest titles ever: "Mickey Spillane's Mike Hammer: 'Murder Me, Murder You.' " Broadcast by CBS on 9 April 1983, it starred Stacy Keach, Lisa Blount, and Tanya Roberts.

MIKE HAMMER CBS

26 JANUARY 1984–14 APRIL 1984; 30 AUGUST 1984–18 JANUARY 1985; 4 MAY 1985–6 JUNE 1985; 22 APRIL 1986–6 MAY 1986; 20 SEPTEMBER 1986–9 SEPTEMBER 1987 The second TV incarnation of Mickey Spillane's ultra-macho private eye became a weekly series after two made-for-TV movies had been televised (the second of the two, "More Than Murder," actually led off the series). Stacy Keach starred as Mike Hammer, the brawling, womanizing, chain-smoking New York detective. Also featured were Don Stroud as Hammer's friend, Captain Pat Chambers of the N.Y.P.D.; Kent Williams as Hammer's humorless nemesis, Assistant District Attorney Barrington; Lindsay Bloom as Hammer's shapely secretary, Velda; and Danny Goldman (1984–1985) as Ozzie the Answer, one of Hammer's street sources. Also featured was a mysterious woman (credited only as "The Face") who made a brief appearance in each episode. The role was played by Donna Denton. Lee Benton appeared as Jenny, the bartender at Mike's favorite watering hole.

Before he agreed to let the series be produced, Hammer's creator, Mickey Spillane, made three demands: that it be filmed in New York, that Hammer be "surrounded" by beautiful women, and that Hammer carry a .45 automatic rather than the less macho .38. Executive producer Jay Bernstein and the network acceded to all three demands.

Unfortunately, production of the show's second season was interrupted when Stacy Keach encountered his own legal troubles. On 4 April 1984 he was arrested in England for possession of cocaine, and subsequently served a jail term there. After his release a new TV-movie, "The Return of Mickey Spillane's Mike Hammer," was broadcast, and in the fall of 1986 The New Mike Hammer found a place on CBS's schedule. The "new" Hammer may have been less sexist, but he remained every bit as violent as the "old" Hammer. In May 1987 Hammer finally came face to face with The Face, and learned that she was a mystery writer. On 21 May 1989 a TV-movie sequel was aired on CBS: "Mickey Spillane's Mike Hammer: Winner Takes All" found Hammer in Las Vegas. Hammer again returned in the clumsily titled TV-movie, "Come Die with Me: A Mickey Spillane's Mike Hammer Mystery" (6 December 1994, CBS). Rob Estes starred as Hammer, and Pamela Anderson filled the role of Velda.

THE MIKE WALLACE INTERVIEW ABC

28 APRIL 1957–14 SEPTEMBER 1958 Mike Wallace interviewed a single guest each week on this half-hour series. Though Wallace is best known today as one of 60 Minutes' hard-hitting reporters, his earliest TV appearances were as an actor (see Stand By for Crime), as the cohost of a daytime variety show (see Mike and Buff), and as emcee of a game show (see The Big Surprise). He honed his interviewing techniques during the mid-1950s on a local show in New York, Nightbeat, which led to this nationally televised series.

MILLER'S COURT SYNDICATED

1982–1985 Topical legal issues were dramatized in a courtroom setting and then discussed by the studio audience, in this half-hour informational series. Harvard law professor Arthur Miller was the host, and he was joined each week by prominent lawyers.

THE MILLION DOLLAR VIDEO CHALLENGE SYNDICATED

1990–1991 One of several programs attempting to capitalize on the popularity of home videos, this one was hosted by Steve Kelley. Each week a celebrity panel judged videos submitted by viewers in four categories: music, children, comedy, and real-life.

THE MILLIONAIRE CBS

19 JANUARY 1955–28 SEPTEMBER 1960 Essentially an anthology series, The Millionaire starred Marvin Miller as Michael Anthony, executive secretary to a reclusive multibillionaire whose hobby was giving away a million dollars to persons he had never met. Typically, the show began with Anthony being summoned to the study of his employer, John Beresford Tipton, at "Silverstone," Tipton's 60,000-acre estate. After a brief conversation, Tipton (whose face was never shown to viewers) gave Anthony a cashier's check together with instructions on its delivery. Anthony would track down the donee and present the check, explaining to the recipient that the million dollars was tax free, the donor wished to remain anonymous, and the donee merely had to agree never to divulge the exact amount of the check or the circumstances under which it was received (except to his or her spouse, if the donee should marry). Anthony then disappeared, leaving the recipient richer, if not wiser. The voice of the benevolent Mr. Tipton was supplied by Paul Frees. Don Fedderson, the producer of the series, disclosed in a 1955 TV Guide interview that Tipton's name was "a composite of Fedderson's home town, his wife's home town, and his lawyer's first name." Fedderson also managed to include his wife, Tido Fedderson, as an uncredited extra in almost every episode. TV Guide later reported that Marvin Miller regularly received requests from people who wanted their own check for a million dollars. Miller's customary reply was to send each person a "check" for "a million dollars' worth of good luck." The half-hour series was syndicated under the title If You Had a Million. On 19 December 1978 CBS televised a two-hour made-for-TV movie based on the series; titled "The Millionaire," it featured Robert Quarry as Michael Anthony.

THE MILTON BERLE SHOW (THE TEXACO STAR THEATER) NBC

21 SEPTEMBER 1948–9 JUNE 1953

THE BUICK-BERLE SHOW NBC
29 SEPTEMBER 1953–14 JUNE 1955
THE MILTON BERLE SHOW NBC
27 SEPTEMBER 1955–5 JUNE 1956
THE KRAFT MUSIC HALL NBC
8 OCTOBER 1958–13 MAY 1959
THE MILTON BERLE SHOW ABC
9 SEPTEMBER 1966–6 JANUARY 1967 Milton Berle was television's first superstar. His first series, The Texaco Star Theater, was the most popular variety show in video history; its phenomenal success proved that TV was more than a toy and that it could (and would) compete effectively with stage and screen as an entertainment medium. Berle's sobriquet, "Mr. Television," was fully deserved.

Though he is remembered today chiefly as a television entertainer, Berle had an extensive background in vaudeville, films, and radio; he was five years old when he first appeared on stage. He was also one of the first persons to appear on television, having participated in some experimental broadcasts in 1929 and 1933. During the 1940s Berle hosted several radio shows, the last of which were The Philip Morris Playhouse, a 1947 anthology series of comedies, and The Texaco Star Theater, a comedy-variety show. Among the writers on the latter show were Nat Hiken, Aaron Ruben, and brothers Danny and Neil Simon.

By the spring of 1948 Texaco had become interested in sponsoring a variety show on television. Several prospective hosts, including Berle, "auditioned" on Tuesday nights during the summer of 1948; Berle first hosted the program on 8 June, with guests Pearl Bailey, Harry Richman, Bill "Bojangles" Robinson, and Señor Wences. Pleased with Berle's performance, Texaco chose him as permanent host of the show. Berle's guests on the fall premiere (21 September) included Phil Silvers, Evelyn Knight, Stan Fisher, Smith and Dale, Park and Clifford, and the Four Carters.

The new show was an immediate smash, scoring ratings as high as eighty during its first season. Theater and nightclub attendance dwindled on Tuesdays, as people gathered at the homes of friends who owned television sets. Many of those people soon bought sets of their own—set ownership passed the million mark early in 1949 and doubled later that year. The millions who tuned in on Tuesdays saw broad comedy; Berle, who was actively involved with every aspect of the show's production, capitalized on the visual impact of the medium, relying heavily on outlandish costumes (many of which were designed by his sister, Rosalind) and sight gags. Laughter from the studio audience was further guaranteed by the presence of Berle's mother at almost every telecast. Guest stars were featured each week, and most programs concluded with a musical sketch. Woody Kling and Buddy Arnold, who wrote the show's theme, "We're the Men from Texaco," composed hundreds of numbers for the program. Also featured from the earliest days was vaudevillian Sid Stone, who, as a pitchman, delivered the commercials through 1951.

Berle continued to do the radio version during the 1948–1949 season and also found time to host the first telethon on 4 April 1949, for the Damon Runyon Cancer Fund. After a summer's rest he returned to TV (but not to radio) in the fall of 1949. The show continued to top the ratings and again dominated Tuesday-night viewing. Ad-libbing at the end of one show that season, Berle referred to himself as "Uncle Miltie," a nickname that endeared him to younger viewers. The Texaco Star Theater continued as TV's number-one show in its third season (1950–1951), though the margin between it and its competition was lessening. In 1951 Berle signed a thirty-year contract with NBC, which guaranteed him an annual income of $200,000 whether he worked or not.

In the fall of 1951, as Texaco's fourth season began, Berle cut back his schedule, hosting the show three out of every four weeks. The show was finally surpassed in the ratings (by Arthur Godfrey's Talent Scouts); Berle attributed the decline to the fact that he was appearing less regularly, but in all probability the show's popularity would have tapered off anyway. In the fall of 1952, Berle's last show with Texaco as his sponsor, several changes were made. Veteran radio writer Goodman Ace was brought in as head writer, and several new writers were added, including Selma Diamond, George Foster, Mort Greene, and Jay Burton. Greg Garrison, a young director with several years' experience in the medium, was also hired. A new "show-within-a-show" format was introduced—Berle played himself, the star of a TV variety show, and was joined by a group of regulars: Ruth Gilbert as his secretary, Max, Fred Clark as his agent, and Arnold Stang as Francis the stagehand. Ventriloquist Jimmy Nelson as his dummy, Danny O'Day, handled the commercials.

In spite of all the changes, the show's ratings continued to slip (Texaco Star Theater finished fifth that year), and Texaco dropped its sponsorship of the Berle show at the end of the 1952–1953 season (Texaco sponsored a Saturday-night show in the fall of 1953 on NBC, with Jimmy Durante and Donald O'Connor alternating as hosts). Buick, however, picked up the Tuesday-night slot in the fall of 1953; The Buick-Berle Show ran for two seasons, continuing with the same format that had been introduced in the fall of 1952. Singers Charlie Applewhite and Connie Russell also joined the cast.

Buick decided to switch its allegiance to CBS—and Jackie Gleason—in 1955. Berle moved his operation from New York to Hollywood that summer and hosted an hour show on Tuesdays—The Milton Berle Show—for one more season. It was one of the first color variety shows broadcast from the West Coast. One of the guests on the final telecast in 1956 was Elvis Presley. Though Berle's Tuesday-night shows came to an end in 1956, he continued to be seen throughout the next decade. In the fall of 1958 he hosted The Kraft Music Hall, a half-hour variety show on Wednesday nights (see also that title). In the fall of 1960 he hosted an unsuccessful sports show, Jackpot Bowling Starring Milton Berle (see that title). In 1965 Berle renegotiated his thirty-year contract with NBC; annual payments were reduced to $120,000, and Berle received the right to appear on other networks. In the fall of 1966 Berle hosted a Friday-night variety hour on ABC, which was canceled in midseason. Produced by Bill Dana, the show also featured Donna Loren, Bobby Rydell, and Irving Benson as an offstage heckler. Berle has also made several dramatic appearances in such series as The Mod Squad, Mannix, and Batman (as Louie the Lilac), and has guest-starred on dozens of variety shows. On 26 March 1978, almost thirty years after he first stepped into thousands of television homes, Milton Berle was honored in a celebrity-studded, televised special, "A Tribute to Milton Berle"; he was also given a special award at the 1978–1979 Emmy Awards show.

MILTON THE MONSTER ABC

9 OCTOBER 1965–8 SEPTEMBER 1968 Saturday-morning cartoon show starring Milton the Monster, a lovable denizen of Transylvania's Horrible Hill.

THE MIND PBS

12 OCTOBER 1988–14 DECEMBER 1988 On this nine-part sequel to the 1984 series The Brain, host George Paige explored "what the brain does." Among the many topics examined were memory, aging, autism, and language.

MIND YOUR MANNERS NBC

24 JUNE 1951–2 MARCH 1952 Allen Ludden, who would later host such shows as College Bowl and Password, was the moderator of this Sunday-afternoon public affairs program on which teenaged panelists discussed current events.

MINDREADERS NBC

13 AUGUST 1979–11 JANUARY 1980 Dick Martin presided over this daytime game show of "hunch and ESP." The game involved a team of four women and a team of four men, each captained by a celebrity; each of the several rounds required the players to predict how their teammates, or a panel of studio audience members, would respond to a personal or hypothetical question.

MINOR ADJUSTMENTS NBC/UPN

16 SEPTEMBER 1995–19 NOVEMBER 1995 (NBC); 23 JANUARY 1996– (UPN) Half-hour sitcom about an African-American child psychologist and his home life. With standup comedian Rondell Sheridan as Dr. Ron Aimes; Wendy Raquel Robinson as his wife, Rachel; Bobby E. McAdams II as their ten-year-old son, Trevor; Camille Winbush as their young daughter, Emma; Mitchell Whitfield as Dr. Bruce Hampton, an orthodontist who shared offices with Ron; Linda Kash as Dr. Francine Bailey, a pediatrician who also shared offices; and Sara Rue as Bruce's niece, Darby, their dimwitted receptionist.

MIRROR THEATER (REVLON MIRROR THEATER) NBC/CBS

23 JUNE 1953–1 SEPTEMBER 1953 (NBC); 19 SEPTEMBER 1953–5 DECEMBER 1953 (CBS) Sponsored by Revlon, this half-hour dramatic anthology series was hosted by Robin Chandler. It was seen Tuesdays on NBC during the summer of 1953, then shifted to Saturdays on CBS that fall. Presentations included: "The Little Wife," with Eddie Albert (23 June); "Salt of the Earth," with Richard Kiley (30 June); "Because I Love Him," with Joan Crawford (her first major TV role, 19 September); and "Uncle Jack," with Jack Haley (28 November). Donald Davis and Dorothy Mathews produced the series, and Daniel Petrie directed it. The NBC version was broadcast live from New York; the CBS version was on film from Hollywood.

THE MISADVENTURES OF SHERIFF LOBO NBC

18 SEPTEMBER 1979–2 SEPTEMBER 1980

LOBO NBC

30 DECEMBER 1980–25 AUGUST 1981 This hour comedy-adventure series, spun off from BJ and the Bear, starred Claude Akins as the slightly corrupt sheriff of Orly County, Elroy S. Lobo. Also featured during the 1979–1980 season were Mills Watson as bumbling Deputy Perkins, who was also Lobo's brother-in-law; Brian Kerwin as Deputy Birdie Hawkins; Leann Hunley as hotelkeeper Sarah Cumberland; Cyd Crampton as Lobo's sister (and Perkins's wife), Rose; and Janet Lynn Curtis as Margaret Ellen. When the series returned for its second season, it was retitled Lobo. Lobo and his deputies had been invited to Atlanta, where they became special cops. Joining Akins, Watson, and Kerwin as regulars were Nicolas Coster as their new boss, Chief J. C. Carson; Nell Carter as Sergeant Hildy Jones; and Tara Buckman and Amy Botwinick as Brandy and Peaches, a pair of undercover cops. Glen Larson was the executive producer.

MISERY LOVES COMPANY FOX

30 SEPTEMBER 1995–22 OCTOBER 1995 Half-hour sitcom about four men who hung out together in New York City. With Dennis Boutsikaris as film professor Joe DeMarco, recently divorced after twelve years of marriage, who moved in with his single younger brother; Christopher Meloni as his brother, Mitch; Julius Carry as their divorced pal, Perry; Stephen Furst as their unhappily married pal, Lewis, a dentist; Wesley Jonathan as Connor, Perry's teenage son; Nikki Deloach as Tracy, Lewis's teenage daughter; and Kathe Mazur as Nicky St. Hubbin, proprietor of Nicky St. Hubbin's, the guys' favorite hangout.

MISFITS OF SCIENCE NBC

4 OCTOBER 1985–21 FEBRUARY 1986 Three young adults with unusual powers were melded into a crimefighting unit on this Friday night adventure hour. Featured were Dean Paul Martin as Dr. Billy Hayes, a scientist with the Humanidyne Institute, who organized the unit; Kevin Peter Hall (variously billed as seven-foot-two or seven-foot-four, certainly the tallest person ever to be a TV series regular) as Dr. Elvin "El" Lincoln, who could shrink himself to a size of six inches for up to fifteen minutes an hour; Mark Thomas Miller as Johnny "Johnny B" Bukowski, a former rock star who had been electrocuted at a concert and could now unlease powerful bolts of current through his fingertips; Courteney Cox as seventeen-year-old Gloria Dinallo, a juvenile delinquent who possessed telekinetic powers; Jennifer Holmes as Jane Miller, Gloria's probation officer; Max Wright as Dick Stetmeyer, director of the institute; and Diane Civita as Miss Nance, the receptionist. A fourth misfit, Arnold Biefneiter (played by Mickey Jones), who could freeze anything, was featured on the pilot episode.

MISS SUSAN NBC

12 MARCH 1951–28 DECEMBER 1951 This unusual soap opera starred Susan Peters, an actress who was paralyzed from the waist down as the result of a hunting accident in 1945. On the show she appeared as Susan Martin, a wheelchair-bound lawyer who had just moved back to her hometown, Martinsville, Ohio. Also featured on the series were Mark Roberts, Robert McQueeney, Katharine Grill, Natalie Priest, and Jon Lormer. The daily, fifteen-minute show was broadcast live from Philadelphia, where it was written by William Kendal Clarke and produced and directed by Kenneth Buckridge.

MISS WINSLOW & SON CBS

28 MARCH 1979–2 MAY 1979 Half-hour sitcom based on the British series Miss Jones & Son. With Darleen Carr as artist Susan Winslow, mother of a son by a man with whom she had lived for two years but who left her for South America (she named the baby Edmund Hillary Winslow, after the man who first scaled Mount Everest); Roscoe Lee Browne as Harold Neistadter, her neighbor; Elliott Reid as her father, Warren Winslow, a pharmacist; Sarah Marshall as her mother, Evelyn Winslow; William Bogert as Mr. Callahan, her boss. Ted Bergmann and Don Taffner were the executive producers for T.T.C. Productions.

MISSING LINKS NBC/ABC

9 SEPTEMBER 1963–27 MARCH 1964 (NBC); 30 MARCH 1964–25 DECEMBER 1964 (ABC) Daytime game show on which contestants tried to predict the ability of celebrity guests to supply the missing words to a story previously read aloud. The show, a Mark Goodson-Bill Todman Production, was hosted by Ed McMahon on NBC and Dick Clark on ABC.

MISSING PERSONS ABC

30 AUGUST 1993–17 FEBRUARY 1994 Set in Chicago, this hour cop show centered on the Department of Missing Persons. Daniel J. Travanti played Lieutenant Ray McAuliffe, head of the unit. With him were Erik King as Bobby Davidson; Fred Weller as Johnny Sandowski; Jorjan Fox as Connie Karadzik; Bob Swan as Dan Manaher; Juan Ramirez as Carlos Marrone; and Paty Lombard as Ray's wife, Barbara.

MISSING/REWARD SYNDICATED

1989–1991 Half-hour informational series, hosted by Stacy Keach, which offered rewards for the recovery of stolen goods or the apprehension of wanted fugitives; a few "rewards" were offered by collectors of various goods looking for additional items for their collections. Like America's Most Wanted and other similar shows, the series presented dramatizations of crimes and interviews with law enforcement personnel. Unlike America's Most Wanted, with its toll-free 800 number for viewers to call, Missing/Reward featured a 900 number for which users were charged. Most of the rewards were offered by private sources; some seemed unlikely to be collected, such as the $2,000,000 bounty posted for the return of any living American MIA from Southeast Asia, or a reward offered for the return of a set of rare coins last seen in 1906.

MISSION: IMPOSSIBLE CBS

17 SEPTEMBER 1966–8 SEPTEMBER 1973 Bruce Geller was the executive producer of this durable hour-long adventure series, which depicted the exploits of the I.M.F. (Impossible Missions Force), a government agency that undertook extremely hazardous or intricate espionage missions. Typically, the I.M.F. leader received his instructions on a miniature tape recorder ("Your mission, Jim, should you decide to accept it"), which self-destructed after its message had been conveyed. After assembling his crew of experts, the leader explained to them the nature of the project, usually with the help of films or photos. The first head of the I.M.F. was Dan Briggs, played by Steven Hill. He was replaced, however, after one season, ostensibly because of the difficulty of accommodating the show's production schedule to the preferences of Hill, an Orthodox Jew, who declined to work after sundown Fridays and on Saturdays. The new leader of the I.M.F. was Jim Phelps, played by Peter Graves, who remained with the show for the rest of its run. The rest of the I.M.F. crew included: Martin Landau (1966–1969) as Rollin Hand, an expert at disguises; Barbara Bain (1966–1969) as Cinnamon Carter, who could turn on the charm when needed; Greg Morris as Barney Collier, ace mechanic and electronics technician; and Peter Lupus as hefty Willy Armitage, resident strong man. Landau and Bain (who was married to Landau) quit the show after three seasons in a dispute over budget cuts. Leonard Nimoy was added in the fall of 1969 as Paris, the new master of disguise; Nimoy left the show after two seasons. Other additions to the crew included: Lesley Warren (1970–1971) as Dana Lambert; Sam Elliott (1970–1971) as Doug; Lynda Day George (1971–1972) as Casey; and Barbara Anderson (1972–1973) as Mimi Davis. The voice on the tape recordings was supplied by Bob Johnson.

In 1988 the series was revived: see below.

MISSION IMPOSSIBLE ABC

23 OCTOBER 1988–24 FEBRUARY 1990; 26 MAY 1990–9 JUNE 1990 This remake of the classic 1966–1973 series was hastily put together to fill some gaps in ABC's schedule caused by the 1988 writers' strike. It was produced in Australia, and used some of the scripts from the earlier series. Peter Graves returned as Jim Phelps, head of the Impossible Missions Force (this was Graves's second Australia-based series; he'd done Whiplash in 1961). His new crew included Phil Morris (son of Greg Morris) as technical ace Grant Collier, son of Barney Collier; Tony Hamilton as muscleman Max Harte; Thaao Penghlis as actor Nicholas Black; Terry Markwell (1988–1989) as Casey Randall; and Jane Badler (spring 1989–1990) as athlete Shannon Reed. Technological change even came to the series' opening sequence: instead of the old self-destructing audio tape, the new version featured a self-destructing laser disc.

MISSION: MAGIC! ABC

8 SEPTEMBER 1973–31 AUGUST 1974 Saturday-morning cartoon show about a group of six high school students and their teacher, who traveled together through time. They were assisted in their weekly journeys by the cartoon form of Australian singer Rick Springfield, who performed a song each week. Springfield went on to greater fame on General Hospital, from which he was able to relaunch his musical career.

MISSION TO THE WORLD

See LIFE IS WORTH LIVING

THE MISSISSIPPI CBS

25 MARCH 1983–6 MAY 1983; 27 SEPTEMBER 1983–13 MARCH 1984 This hour dramatic series starred Ralph Waite as Ben Walker, a big-city criminal attorney who suddenly left the city to realize his lifelong dream of running a riverboat on the Mississippi River; Walker was still able to use his lawyering skills, however, as his travels brought him in contact with people who needed legal help. Also on board were Linda G. Miller (the daughter of Jackie Gleason) as Stella McMullen, a former client of Walker's who was now studying law; and Stan Shaw as Walker's pilot, Lafayette "Lafe" Tate. The series was filmed on location.

MISSUS GOES A-SHOPPING CBS

19 NOVEMBER 1947–12 JANUARY 1949 CBS's first commercial daytime series was an audience participation show, broadcast live from various Manhattan supermarkets. John Reed King was the original host. Toward the end of its run the show was retitled This Is the Missus and was hosted by Bud Collyer.

MR. ADAMS AND EVE CBS

4 JANUARY 1957–23 SEPTEMBER 1958 Half-hour sitcom with Howard Duff as film star Howard Adams and Ida Lupino as his wife, film star Eve Adams (known professionally as Eve Drake). Also featured were Hayden Rorke as Steve, their agent; Olive Carey as Elsie, their housekeeper; Alan Reed as J. B. Hafter, the head of the studio; and Larry Dobkin as their director. Sixty-eight episodes were produced. Collier Young, former husband of Ida Lupino, was the executive producer.

MR. AND MRS. JIMMY CARROLL DUMONT

18 OCTOBER 1950–13 APRIL 1951 Fifteen-minute twice-weekly variety program, cohosted by Jimmy and Rita Carroll.

MR. AND MRS. NORTH CBS/NBC

3 OCTOBER 1952–25 SEPTEMBER 1953 (CBS); 26 JANUARY 1954–20 JULY 1954 (NBC) Mr. and Mrs. North began on radio as a situation comedy, but by 1942 it had shifted to a lighthearted murder mystery show. A "pilot" program was telecast 4 July 1949, starring Joseph Allen, Jr. and Mary Lou Taylor, but it was not until 1952 that production of a TV series got underway. Produced by John W. Loveton and directed by Ralph Murphy, the filmed, half-hour series starred Richard Denning as Jerry North, a publisher, and Barbara Britton as his wife, Pamela North, a New York couple who seemed to stumble on an unsolved murder every week. Also featured was Francis DeSales as Lieutenant Bill Weigand. Both the radio and the television series were based on the stories written by Richard and Frances Lockridge.

MR. ARSENIC ABC

8 MAY 1952–26 JUNE 1952 Half-hour mystery anthology series hosted by Burton Turkus, author of Murder, Inc.

MR. BELVEDERE ABC

15 MARCH 1985–26 APRIL 1985; 16 AUGUST 1985–11 SEPTEMBER 1987; 30 OCTOBER 1987–16 DECEMBER 1989; 1 JULY 1990–8 JULY 1990 A resilient sitcom about the sarcastic, and "veddy British" male housekeeper for a Pittsburgh sportswriter and his family, starring Christopher Hewett as Lynn Belvedere; onetime major leaguer Bob Uecker as his employer, George Owens; Ilene Graff as George's wife, Marsha, a law student; Rob Stone as teenage son Kevin; Tracy Wells as teenage daughter Heather; and Brice Beckham as younger son Wesley. At the end of almost every episode, Mr. Belvedere wrote the "lesson" of the evening's story in his diary. The series was actually canceled at the end of the 1986–1987 season, but was hastily ordered back into production to replace the sagging Max Headroom in October 1987. When the series was lifted in December 1989, ten completed episodes had yet to air.

The character was made famous by Clifton Webb in three movies made between 1948 and 1951. A TV series had been proposed as early as 1959, with Hans Conried as Belvedere, but never materialized.

MR. BLACK ABC

19 SEPTEMBER 1949–7 NOVEMBER 1949 This Monday-night mystery anthology series was hosted by Anthony Christopher as Mr. Black, a mysterious soul who was seen each week in his cobweb-shrouded study. Broadcast from Chicago, the half-hour series was written by Bill Ballanger and directed by Tony Rizzo.

MR. BROADWAY CBS

26 SEPTEMBER 1964–26 DECEMBER 1964 Garson Kanin created this unsuccessful hour-long adventure series, which starred Craig Stevens as New York public relations man Mike Bell. Also featured were Lani Miyazaki as Toki, his assistant; Horace McMahon as Hank McClure, his contact at the police department. David Susskind and Daniel Melnick produced the series, and Dave Brubeck supplied music. The thirteen episodes included rare guest appearances by Liza Minnelli (in her first TV dramatic role, "Nightingale for Sale," 24 October), Sandy Dennis ("Don't Mention My Name in Sheboygan," 7 November), and Lauren Bacall ("Something to Sing About," 19 December).

MR. CHIPS SYNDICATED

1976 Bill Brown and Don McGowan cohosted this series aimed at the do-it-yourselfer.

MR. CITIZEN ABC

20 APRIL 1955–20 JULY 1955 Allyn Edwards hosted this unusual anthology series, which depicted real-life incidents in which ordinary citizens had come to the assistance of those in need. A prominent American presented the "Mister Citizen Award" each week to the person whose efforts had been cited.

MR. DEEDS GOES TO TOWN ABC

26 SEPTEMBER 1969–16 JANUARY 1970 The television adaptation of Frank Capra's 1936 film starred Monte Markham as Longfellow Deeds, a newspaper publisher from the small town of Mandrake Falls who inherited a huge corporation from his late uncle. Also on hand were Pat Harrington, Jr., as Tony Lawrence, his aide; Ivor Barry as George the butler; and Herb Voland as Henry Masterson, chairman of the board of Deeds Enterprises. The half-hour sitcom was pounded by Hogan's Heroes and The Name of the Game and was dropped at midseason.

MR. DISTRICT ATTORNEY ABC/SYNDICATED

1 OCTOBER 1951–23 JUNE 1952 (ABC); 1954 (SYNDICATED) Created by Ed Byron, Mr. District Attorney began on radio in 1939 and twice came to television. Jay Jostyn, who had taken over the role on radio in 1940, was the first D.A. and was known simply as "The D.A." or "Chief." (Thomas E. Dewey, New York's district attorney during the 1930s, and presidential contender in 1948, was reported to have been the model for the role.) Also featured were Vicki Vola as Miss Miller, the D.A.'s secretary, and Len Doyle as Detective Harrington, an investigator for the D.A.'s office. In 1954 Ziv TV revived the series with David Brian in the lead role; by this time the D.A. had a name— Paul Garrett. Jackie Loughery now played his secretary, Miss Miller. The 1951–1952 series, which was seen on alternate Mondays, was produced and directed by Ed Byron.

MISTER ED SYNDICATED/CBS

1961 (SYNDICATED); 1 OCTOBER 1961–4 SEPTEMBER 1966 (CBS) Half-hour sitcom about a talking horse. With Alan Young as Wilbur Post, an architect who discovered the horse, Mister Ed, in the barn of their new house and also discovered that he was the only person to whom the horse deigned to talk; Connie Hines as Carol Post, Wilbur's wife; Larry Keating (1961–1964) as next-door neighbor Roger Addison; Edna Skinner (1961–1964) as Roger's wife, Kay Addison; Leon Ames (1964–1966) as next-door neighbor Gordon Kirkwood; and Florence MacMichael (1964–1966) as Gordon's wife, Winnie Kirkwood. The voice of Ed was provided by former western star Allan "Rocky" Lane. Al Simon was executive producer of the series, and Arthur Lubin the producer-director.

MR. EXECUTIVE SYNDICATED

1954 Host Westbrook Van Voorhis interviewed leading American industrialists on this half-hour documentary series.

MR. GARLUND CBS

7 OCTOBER 1960–13 JANUARY 1961 This light adventure series starred Charles Quinlivan as Frank Garlund, a young tycoon whose origins were uncertain. Also featured were Kam Tong as Kam Chang, his foster brother, and Philip Ahn as Po Chang, the Chinese businessman who raised Garlund. In November of 1960 the show's title was changed to The Garlund Touch, but under either title the show proved weak competition for 77 Sunset Strip and The Bell Telephone Hour.

MR. I. MAGINATION CBS

29 MAY 1949–28 JUNE 1952 This half-hour children's show was partly educational and partly fantasy. As Mr. I. Magination, Paul Tripp hosted the series, which was set in Imagination Town, a place where any child's wish could come true. Also featured was Tripp's wife, Ruth Enders. The show, which featured much original music, was produced by Worthington Miner, Irving Pincus, and Norman Pincus.

MR. LUCKY CBS

24 OCTOBER 1959–3 SEPTEMBER 1960 This half-hour adventure series was based on the 1943 film that had starred Cary Grant. On TV John Vivyan starred as Mr. Lucky, owner of the Fortuna, a casino ship moored off the California coast. Ross Martin costarred as Andamo, Lucky's man Friday, and Pippa Scott played Lucky's girlfriend, Maggie Shank-Rutherford. The show was a Blake Edwards production, and music was supplied by Henry Mancini. By midseason the show's sponsor, Lever Brothers, demanded that gambling be deemphasized on the series; accordingly, the Fortuna became a floating restaurant and nightclub.

MR. MAGOO SYNDICATED/NBC/CBS

1960–1962 (SYNDICATED); 19 SEPTEMBER 1964–21 AUGUST 1965 (NBC); 10 SEPTEMBER 1977–9 SEPTEMBER 1979 (CBS) Quincy Magoo, the myopic star of hundreds of theatrical cartoons (the first of which was made in 1949), first came to television in a syndicated series. He is better known as the star of a prime-time series on NBC, which lasted one season. Officially titled The Famous Adventures of Mr. Magoo, the series cast Magoo in a different role each week, usually a historical figure. Magoo returned to TV in 1977 on a half-hour weekend cartoon show, What's New, Mister Magoo?, in which he was teamed up with McBaker, a nearsighted dog. Jim Backus supplied Magoo's distinctive voice.

MISTER MAYOR CBS

26 SEPTEMBER 1964–18 SEPTEMBER 1965 This Saturday-morning kids' show featured Bob Keeshan (who played Captain Kangaroo weekday mornings) as Mister Mayor, Jane Connell as Aunt Maud and Miss Melissa, and Rollo the hippopotamus.

MR. MERLIN CBS

7 OCTOBER 1981–15 SEPTEMBER 1982 Barnard Hughes starred in this half-hour sitcom as Merlin, the 1600-year-old wizard who had once worked for King Arthur; now known as Max Merlin, he opened an auto repair shop in San Francisco, where he hoped to find an apprentice. Also featured were Clark Brandon as Zac Rogers, the young man chosen to be the apprentice; Jonathan Prince as Zac's pal, Leo Samuels; and Elaine Joyce as the mysterious Alexandria, Merlin's friend and contemporary.

MR. NOVAK NBC

24 SEPTEMBER 1963–31 AUGUST 1965 Hour-long dramatic series set at Jefferson High School in Los Angeles. With James Franciscus as John Novak, English teacher; Dean Jagger (to December 1964) as Albert Vane, the principal; Burgess Meredith as Martin Woodridge, Vane's successor as principal; Steve Franken (1963–1964) as Mr. Allen, French teacher; Jeanne Bal (1963–1964) as Jean Pagano, assistant vice principal; Donald Barry (1963–1964) as Mr. Gallo; Marian Collier as Miss Scott; Vince Howard as Pete Butler; André Phillippe as Mr. Johns; Stephen Roberts as Mr. Peeples; Kathleen Ellis as Mrs. Floyd; Marjorie Corley as Miss Dorsey; Phyllis Avery (1964–1965) as Ruth Wilkinson, girls' vice principal; Bill Zuckert (1964–1965) as Mr. Bradwell; David Sheiner (1964–1965) as Paul Webb; Peter Hansen (1964–1965) as Mr. Parkson; and Irene Tedrow (1965) as Mrs. Ring. E. Jack Neuman was executive producer for M-G-M.

MR. PEEPERS NBC

3 JULY 1952–12 JUNE 1955 Broadcast live from New York, this low-key situation comedy starred a young comedian named Wally Cox as Robinson J. Peepers, a mild-mannered science teacher at Jefferson Junior High. The talented cast also included Tony Randall as Peepers's pal, English teacher Harvey Weskitt; Georgann Johnson as Marge Weskitt, Harvey's wife; Patricia Benoit as Nancy Remington, the school nurse who married Peepers on 23 May 1954; Marion Lorne as Mrs. Gurney, Peepers's daffy landlady; Reta Shaw as Aunt Lil; Jack Warden as Coach; Ernest Truex as Mr. Remington, Nancy's father; and Sylvia Field as Mrs. Remington, Nancy's mother. The half-hour series was created especially for Cox by David Swift in association with producer Fred Coe. Originally sponsored by Ford Motor Company, the show was introduced in 1952 as a summer replacement for Ford Theater. The series earned rave reviews, and Mr. Peepers was brought back by NBC in the fall of 1952 with a new sponsor—Reynolds Aluminum—after a Sunday-night sitcom, Doc Corkle, bombed. Reviewing the series in 1954, TV Guide opined that Mr. Peepers "comes close to being the perfect TV show."

MR. PIPER SYNDICATED
1962 This children's show was hosted by Alan Crofoot as Mr. Piper; produced in England, it was distributed by ITC.

MR. PRESIDENT FOX
3 MAY 1987–2 APRIL 1988 The American presidency was the subject of two sitcoms during the Reagan years. The first, Hail to the Chief, had starred Patty Duke as the first woman chief executive. This one starred George C. Scott (in his first series role since East Side, West Side left the air in 1964) as President Samuel Arthur Tresch, a former governor of Wisconsin; Carlin Glynn as First Lady Meg Tresch; Andre Gower as their twelve-year-old son, Nick; Maddie Corman as their sixteen-year-old daughter, Cynthia; Susan Wheeler Duff as their married daughter, Jennifer Hayes; Daniel McDonald as her husband, Fred Hayes; Conrad Bain as presidential aide Charley Ross; Allen Williams as staffer Daniel Cummings; and Earl Boen as staffer Dave. In the fall of 1987 Carlin Clynn left the show, and Madeline Kahn joined the cast as Meg's sister, Lois Gullickson, who assumed the duties of First Lady.

MR. ROBERTS NBC
17 SEPTEMBER 1965–2 SEPTEMBER 1966 The remake of the 1955 film starred Roger Smith as Lieutenant Douglas Roberts, a Naval officer assigned to duty in the South Pacific aboard the Reluctant, a cargo ship. Desperate to be transferred to a ship that would see some action, Mr. Roberts found his efforts thwarted by the captain. Also featured were Richard X. Slattery as Captain John Morton; Steve Harmon as Ensign Frank Pulver; George Ives as Doc; Ronald Starr as Seaman Mannion; Richard Sinatra as Seaman D'Angelo; Ray Reese as Seaman Reber; and John McCook as Seaman Stefanowski. James Komack produced the half-hour comedy.

MISTER ROGERS' NEIGHBORHOOD PBS
1968– Public television's longest-running children's program is hosted by Fred Rogers, a Presbyterian minister from Pittsburgh. Rogers had previously worked on a 1955 network kids' show, The Children's Corner, but is best known as the host of this series of half hours. Through the use of puppets, guests, and musical numbers, Rogers and his crew have gently taught young viewers to handle problems such as divorce, impatience and anger, and minor crises such as the death of a pet. Other regulars on the show have included Betty Aberlin, Betsy Nadas, Joe Negri, David Newell, Don Brockett, François Clemmons, Robert Trow, Audrey Roth, Elsie Neal, and Yoshi Ito. The show was televised in Canada, in a fifteen-minute format, from 1963 to 1967, when it was first shown on a group of NET stations in this country. It has been produced at WQED-TV in Pittsburgh, and Rogers has been the executive producer. In its early years the title was spelled MisteRogers' Neigborhood. Production ceased in 1975, but resumed in 1979; each year a few new programs were produced, and were blended in with older shows. PBS honored Rogers in March 1990 with a prime-time retrospective, "Our Neighbor, Fred Rogers."

MR. SMITH NBC
23 SEPTEMBER 1983–16 DECEMBER 1983 The title character in this series was an orangutan who accidentally swallowed a chemical concoction that transformed him into a talking ape with an IQ of 256. Now known as Mr. Smith, the anthropoid went to work for a Washington, D.C., government consulting firm. He continued to live with his former trainer, Tommy Atwood (played by Tim Dunigan), and the trainer's little sister, Ellie (Laura Jacoby). Also featured were Leonard Frey as Raymond Holyoke, a government official assigned to be Mr. Smith's liaison man; Terri Garber as Judy Tyson, one of Smith's coworkers; and Stuart Margolin as Dr. Kline, a top-sider at the consulting outfit. The ape was played by a real orangutan, C. J., who had extensive showbiz experience, having costarred with Clint Eastwood in the film Any Which Way You Can, and with Bo Derek in Tarzan. The voice of Mr. Smith was supplied by Ed. Weinberger, who created the series with Stan Daniels. The third TV sitcom to feature a monkey in a leading role (see also The Hathaways and Me and the Chimp), Mr. Smith got off to a slow start on NBC's low-rated Friday-night lineup.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON ABC

29 SEPTEMBER 1962–30 MARCH 1963 Half-hour sitcom based on the 1939 film that starred James Stewart. On TV Fess Parker starred as Eugene Smith, an honest but unsophisticated politician from a rural state who was elected to a Senate vacancy following the death of the incumbent. Also featured were Sandra Warner as Pat Smith, his wife; Red Foley as the Senator's Uncle Cooter; Rita Lynn as his secretary, Miss Kelly; and Stan Irwin as the chauffeur, Arnie.

MR. SUNSHINE ABC

28 MARCH 1986–3 SEPTEMBER 1986 Jeffrey Tambor starred in this unusual half-hour sitcom as Paul Stark, a fiercely independent blind college professor who moved into an attic apartment after separating from his wife. Other regulars included Nan Martin as Grace D'Angelo, his typist; Cecilia Hart as Janice Hall, his on-again, off-again female friend; Barbara Babcock as June Swinford, his landlady; and Leonard Frey as Stark's colleague, drama professor Leon Walters.

MISTER T NBC

17 SEPTEMBER 1983–6 SEPTEMBER 1986 The sudden popularity of The A Team, the prime-time NBC series that debuted in January 1983, prompted the network to commission a Saturday-morning cartoon show built around one of The A Team's stars, Mr. T. On this series, T ran a gymnasium, and he and a group of teenaged pals became involved in various adventures. The bejeweled, spangled, Mandinka-coiffed Mr. T appeared in filmed inserts at the beginning and end of each program, to explain the social message of the day's adventure, and he also provided the voice of his cartoon character. Joe Ruby and Ken Spears were the executive producers for Ruby-Spears Enterprises.

MR. T AND TINA ABC

25 SEPTEMBER 1976–30 OCTOBER 1976 This half-hour sitcom was one of the first casualties of the 1976–1977 season: only five episodes were shown. Produced by James Komack, the show starred Pat Morita as Taro Takahashi, a widowed Japanese inventor who moved to Chicago with his children; Susan Blanchard as Tina Kelly, a young woman from Nebraska hired by Mr. T as governess for the children; Pat Suzuki as Michi, Mr. T's sister-in-law; Jerry Fujikawa as Uncle Matsu; June Angela as Sachi, Mr. T's young daughter; Eugene Profanato as Aki, Mr. T's young son; Ted Lange as Mr. Harvard, the handyman; and Miriam Byrd-Nethery as Miss Llewellyn, the landlady.

MR. TERRIFIC CBS

9 JANUARY 1967–28 AUGUST 1967 This insignificant half-hour sitcom, an imitation Batman, featured Stephen Strimpell as Stanley Beamish, the owner of a service station in Washington, D.C., who was on call as an agent for the Bureau of Special Projects. Beamish could take a pill developed by the Bureau, which gave him an hour's worth of super powers and turned him into Mr. Terrific, a caped crusader. Also on hand were Dick Gautier as Hal, Beamish's friend; John McGiver as Barton J. Reed, director of the Bureau; and Paul Smith as Harley Trent, another Bureau agent. Jack Arnold produced the series, which should not be confused with Captain Nice, a similar spoof that ran on NBC at the same time (Strimpell had tested for Captain Nice before landing the role on Mr. Terrific).

MR. WIZARD (WATCH MR. WIZARD) NBC/NICK

3 MARCH 1951–4 JULY 1965; 11 SEPTEMBER 1971–2 SEPTEMBER 1972 (NBC); 1983– (NICK) On this long-running educational series for children, Don Herbert (as Mr. Wizard) explained the principles of science and showed how to perform various experiments. Each week a dutifully amazed boy or girl was on hand to marvel at Mr. Wizard's revelations. The series ran continuously for fourteen years and returned six years later for one season. Broadcast from Chicago, it was produced by Jules Pewowar. Don Herbert returned in 1983 to host Mr. Wizard's World on the Nickelodeon cable TV channel. The series ceased production in 1990, but continued to be shown in reruns.

See KATE LOVES A MYSTERY

MRS. G GOES TO COLLEGE CBS

4 OCTOBER 1961–5 APRIL 1962 This half-hour sitcom starred Gertrude Berg, the creator and star of The Goldbergs, as Sarah Green, a widow who decided to go to college. Also featured were Sir Cedric Hardwicke as Professor Crayton; Skip Ward as freshman Joe Caldwell; Marion Ross (later to star in Happy Days) as Sarah's daughter, Susan; Leo Penn as Sarah's son-in-law, Jerry; Mary Wickes as Maxfield, Sarah's landlady; Paul Smith as George Howell; Aneta Corsaut as Irma Howell; and Karyn Kupcinet as Carol. Though the show's title was changed in January to The Gertrude Berg Show (as Sarah bought a half interest in Maxfield's rooming house), the ratings did not improve. Hy Averback produced the series. Costar Hardwicke explained the motivation for taking his role in a 1962 interview in TV Guide: "If you're going to work in rubbish, you might as well get paid for it."

MRS. ROOSEVELT MEETS THE PUBLIC NBC

12 FEBRUARY 1950–15 JULY 1951 Sunday-afternoon panel discussion show moderated by Eleanor Roosevelt. Produced by Roger Muir, the series was originally titled Today with Mrs. Roosevelt.

MIXED DOUBLES NBC

5 AUGUST 1949–12 NOVEMBER 1949 Carleton E. Morse produced, wrote, and directed this half-hour sitcom about two newlywed couples who lived next door to each other in a New York apartment building. The cast included Billy Idelson, Ada Friedman, Eddy Firestone, and Rhoda Williams.

MOBILE ONE ABC

12 SEPTEMBER 1975–29 DECEMBER 1975 Hour-long adventure series with Jackie Cooper as Peter Campbell, news reporter for KONE-TV, a West Coast station; Julie Gregg as Maggie Spencer, the producer; and Mark Wheeler as Doug McKnight, Campbell's camera operator. Jack Webb was the executive producer of the series, which was created by James M. Miller.

MOBY DICK AND THE MIGHTY MIGHTOR CBS

9 SEPTEMBER 1967–6 SEPTEMBER 1969 Saturday-morning cartoon show from Hanna-Barbera Productions. The two segments depicted the adventures of Moby Dick, a great white whale whose pals were a pair of boys named Tom and Tub, and The Mighty Mightor, the super-powered alter ego of a cave boy named Tor.

THE MOD SQUAD ABC

24 SEPTEMBER 1968–23 AUGUST 1973 Hour-long crime show about three young people who comprised the Mod Squad, an undercover unit of the Los Angeles Police Department. With Michael Cole as Pete Cochrane; Clarence Williams III as Linc Hayes; Peggy Lipton as Julie Barnes; and Tige Andrews as Captain Adam Greer, their boss, the only other officer who knew of their identities. Aaron Spelling was the producer. The four principals were reunited in a two-hour made-for-TV movie, "The Return of Mod Squad," broadcast 18 May 1979 on ABC.

MODELS INC. FOX

29 JUNE 1994–6 MARCH 1995 An hour dramatic serial spun off from Melrose Place (which in turn was spun off from Beverly Hills 90210), Models Inc. was set at an elite Los Angeles modeling agency. The cast included Linda Gray as the agency owner, Hillary Michaels; Brian Gaskill as her son, David, who schemed to open his own agency; Cameron Daddo as photographer Brian Petersen; Teresa Hill as model Linda Holden; David Goldsmith as Linda's boyfriend, Eric Dearborn; Carrie-Anne Moss as model Carrie Spencer; Cassidy Rae as model Sarah Owens; Stephanie Romanov as Carrie's younger sister, model Teri Spencer, who was murdered in the first episode but continued to appear in flashback sequences (Romanov later played new model Monique); Kylie Travis as Australian model Julie Dante; Heather Medway as Stephanie, the receptionist; Robert Beltran as Lieutenant Louis Soto, who investigated Teri's murder; Garcelle Beavais (July 1994–1995) as model Cynthia; James Wilder (September 1994–1995) as Adam Louder; Emma Samms (September 1994–1995) as his estranged wife, Gayson Louder; Nancy Lee Grahn as Detective Beverly Towers; Don Michael Paul (October 1994–1995) as Craig; William Katt as Paul Carson; Leann Hunley as his wife, Marcia; John Haymes Newton as Mark; and Harley Venton as Dr. Heller.

MODERN ROMANCES NBC

4 OCTOBER 1954–19 SEPTEMBER 1958 A new five-part story was introduced each week on this fifteen-minute weekday series. Martha Scott was originally the host and narrator; Mel Brandt succeeded her, and later guest celebrities took over the duties. The stories were all adapted from those appearing in Modern Romances magazine.

THE MOHAWK SHOWROOM

See THE MORTON DOWNEY SHOW; THE ROBERTA QUINLAN SHOW

MOLLOY FOX

25 JULY 1990–15 AUGUST 1990 Half-hour sitcom about a thirteen-year-old girl who moved in with her father and his family in Beverly Hills after her mother's death. With Mayim Bialik as Molloy Martin, a performer on Wonderland, a children's TV show; Kevin Scannell as her father, Paul, program director at a radio station; Pamela Brull as her stepmother, Lynn, a designer; Jennifer Aniston as her self-absorbed older stepsister, Courtney; Luke Edwards as her younger stepbrother, Jason; I. M. Hobson as Simon, one of the adult performers on Wonderland; Ashley Maw as Sara, one of the teen performers; Bumper Robinson as Lewis Jackson, another of the teens; and Terri Hoyos as Marguerita, the maid. George Beckerman created the series.

THE MOLLY PICON SHOW ABC

1 MARCH 1949–12 APRIL 1949 Half-hour variety series hosted by Yiddish actress Molly Picon.

MOMENT OF FEAR NBC

1 JULY 1960–23 SEPTEMBER 1960 First seen during the summer of 1960, this half-hour anthology of thrillers was broadcast live. NBC also televised reruns of other anthology series under the title Moment of Fear during the summers of 1964 and 1965.

MOMENT OF TRUTH NBC

4 JANUARY 1965–5 NOVEMBER 1965 This half-hour daytime serial was produced in Toronto and was set in an Ontario college town. Principal players included: Douglass Watson as Dr. Bob Wallace, a psychologist; Louise King as his wife, Nancy Wallace; Sandra Scott as Lila, Nancy's sister; Robert Goodier as Walter Leeds; Lynne Gorman as his wife, Wilma Leeds; Stephen Levy as Jack Williams; Barbara Pierce as Sheila; Michael Dodds as Johnny; Toby Tarnow as Carol; Lucy Warner as Helen Gould; Mira Pawluk as Barbara Harris; Peter Donat as Vince Conway; Ann Campbell as Diane; Alan Bly as Arthur; John Bethune as Dr. Gil Bennett; Ivor Barry as

Dr. Russell Wingate; Fernande Giroux as Monique; John Horton as Eric; Chris Wiggins as Dexter; and Anne Collings as Kathy. After a ten-month run the half-hour series was replaced by Days of Our Lives.

MOMENTS OF MUSIC ABC
24 JULY 1951–11 SEPTEMBER 1951 A fifteen-minute filmed musical interlude.

THE MOMMIES NBC
18 SEPTEMBER 1993–10 SEPTEMBER 1994; 2 JANUARY 1995–3 APRIL 1995; 10 JUNE 1995 Half-hour sitcom based on the standup comedy routines of housewives Marilyn Kentz and Caryl Kristensen, who joked about the topics they knew best: domestic life and motherhood. Kentz and Kristensen appeared as Marilyn Larson and Caryl Kellogg, next-door neighbors and best friends. Joining them were David Dukes as Marilyn's husband, Jack, an accountant; Robin Thomas (1993–1994) as Caryl's husband, Paul, a computer troubleshooter; Ashley Peldon as Casey, Jack and Marilyn's young daughter; Shiloh Strong as Adam, Jack and Marilyn's teenage son; Sam Gifaldi as Danny, Caryl and Paul's older son; Ryan Merriman as Blake, Caryl and Paul's younger son (a third son, Zack, was born during the 1993–1994 season); and Jennifer Blanc as Tiffany, Adam's dimwitted girlfriend. Over the course of the next season and a half, several changes occurred, most of them involving the addition of adult characters and the de-emphasis of the children. Julia Duffy was added in the late fall of 1993 as neighbor Barb Ballantine, who ran the perfect household to the chagrin of Caryl and Marilyn; Taylor Nix was featured as Barb's son, Christopher. In March 1994 Jere Burns (late of Dear John) joined as neighbor Tom Booker, a stay-at-home husband who learned the fine points of domestic life from his female cohorts while his wife worked overseas. Also added were Justin Berfield and Courtney Peldon (sister of Ashley Peldon) as Tom's kids, Jason and Beth. The series did not appear on NBC's fall 1994 schedule, but resurfaced in January 1995. Now known as Mommies, it featured Kristensen, Kentz, Duffy, and Burns as returning adult regulars, with Lane Davies replacing Robin Thomas as Paul Kellogg. Courtney Peldon and Justin Berfield also appeared, but the other children were rarely seen; David Dukes was no longer a regular, but did appear in some episodes.

MONA McCLUSKEY NBC
16 SEPTEMBER 1965–14 APRIL 1966 Half-hour sitcom about a glamorous movie star struggling to make ends meet on the salary of her serviceman husband. With Juliet Prowse as Mona Carroll McCluskey (known professionally as Mona Jackson); Denny Miller as her husband, Sergeant Mike McCluskey of the U.S. Air Force; Herbert Rudley as General Crone; Bartlett Robinson as Mr. Caldwell, Mona's producer; Robert Strauss as Sergeant Stan Gruzewsky, a friend of Mike's; Elena Verdugo as Alice, Stan's girlfriend; and Frank Wilcox as General Somers. George Burns produced the series.

MONCHHICHIS ABC
10 SEPTEMBER 1983–1 SEPTEMBER 1984 The central characters on this Saturday-morning cartoon series were the Monchhichis, a group of happy little humanoids who lived in the treetops of Monchhia, a land ruled by a kind wizard. Their idyllic existence was threatened by the gloomy Grumplins of nearby Grumplor.

THE MONEY MAZE ABC
23 DECEMBER 1974–4 JULY 1975 On this daytime game show, hosted by Nick Clooney, contestants first answered questions; the winning contestant then tried to guide his or her spouse through a maze for prizes. Don Lipp was the producer.

MONITOR (FIRST CAMERA) NBC
12 MARCH 1983–1 APRIL 1984 Another attempt by NBC to launch a viable television newsmagazine series, Monitor was introduced some seven months after the demise of its predecessor, NBC Magazine. The title Monitor was borrowed from the network's long-running weekend radio service. The hour series premiered in March 1983 in one of NBC's weakest time slots, Saturdays at 10:00 p.m. (NBC Magazine with David Brinkley had foundered there during the 1980–1981 season), and despite critical praise, consistently finished at the bottom of the ratings heap. Its hosts were Lloyd Dobyns, Steve Delaney, and Rebecca Sobel. In the fall of 1983, the network revamped the program; the new show sported a new title—First Camera—a new set, new music, and a new reporter (Mark Nykanen). It also received a new time slot: Sundays at 7:00 p.m., directly opposite CBS's eminently successful newsmagazine show 60 Minutes. This bold scheduling move was viewed as suicidal by some NBC affiliates; nine percent of the NBC stations declined to carry the program. This low "clearance rate" (the lowest of NBC's prime-time shows that season) further helped to guarantee continued low ratings for First Camera.

THE MONKEES NBC

12 SEPTEMBER 1966–19 AUGUST 1968 This half-hour comedy featured a rock-and-roll group that was supposed to be the American version of the Beatles (even the names of the two groups were similar plays on words); the loosely structured show was obviously inspired by the Beatles' films A Hard Day's Night and Help. Open auditions were held for the four roles, and more than 400 actors were tested by producers Bert Schneider and Robert Rafelson. Four young men were finally selected: Mickey Dolenz, Davy Jones, Mike Nesmith, and Peter Tork. Dolenz had had prior television experience: he had starred in Circus Boy (under the name of Mickey Braddock). Nesmith and Tork had had prior musical experience, while Jones had been a jockey in England, his native country. The four spent most of the summer of 1966 learning improvisational acting techniques (the producers wanted spontaneity) and had little time to learn to play music together. Their first records, which they lip-synched on the show, were produced by Don Kirshner, and, except for some of the vocal parts, were actually performed by studio sidemen. Nevertheless, because of the weekly exposure given the group, the early records were tremendously popular: more than eight million Monkees albums had been sold by the end of 1966. By 1967, however, Dolenz, Jones, Nesmith, and Tork, after a heated meeting with Kirshner, secured the right to perform their own music. Their third album, "Headquarters," produced without Kirshner, also proved successful. Their TV series, though popular with younger viewers, was hurt by competition from Gunsmoke in its second season and was dropped in 1968; reruns were shown Saturdays on CBS and later on ABC. Mike Nesmith remained in the music business, primarily as a songwriter (he wrote "Different Drum" for Linda Ronstadt and the Stone Poneys) and video producer. Davy Jones and Mickey Dolenz teamed up in 1975 with Tommy Boyce and Bobby Hart (who had written such Monkees's hits as "Last Train to Clarksville"), but the group went nowhere. In the late 1980s three of the original group—Jones, Dolenz, and Tork—teamed up for a successful reunion tour, and were even joined by Nesmith on a few dates; the original series enjoyed a renaissance on MTV. Unfortunately, overeager producers couldn't leave well enough alone, and a new version of the series was trotted out, to disastrous results, in 1987: see The New Monkees.

MONOPOLY ABC

16 JUNE 1990–1 SEPTEMBER 1990 A rare prime-time game show, hosted by Mike Reilly (himself a former Jeopardy contestant). Three players competed, standing before a giant Monopoly board; the players worked their way around the board, earning properties and money by answering questions correctly. Each set of properties of the same color was awarded to a single player. In the second round, the players spent some of their money to improve the properties, and traveled around the board a second time. The player with the most amount of money at the end of the game played a bonus round for a possible top prize of $50,000 Kathy Davis rolled the dice for the contestants.

THE MONROES ABC

7 SEPTEMBER 1966–30 AUGUST 1967 Hour-long western about a pioneer family headed for Wyoming; when the parents drowned in the first episode, the children decided to go on and set up a homestead on the land their father had marked out years earlier. With Michael Anderson, Jr., as Clayt Monroe, the eldest; Barbara Hershey as Kathy Monroe; Keith Schultz as Jefferson (Big Twin) Monroe; Kevin Schultz as Fenimore (Little Twin) Monroe; Tammy Locke as Amy Monroe, the youngest; Ron Soble as Jim, an Indian whom the Monroes befriended; Liam Sullivan as Major Mapoy, an evil land dealer; Jim Westmoreland as Ruel; and Ben Johnson as Sleeve.

THE MONROES ABC

12 SEPTEMBER 1995–19 OCTOBER 1995 Hour prime time serial, set in Maryland, home state of the politically ambitious Monroe clan. With William Devane as the patriarch, John Monroe, newly announced candidate for governor; Susan Sullivan as his wife, Kathryn Monroe; David Andrews as son Billy, a Congressman; Steven Eckholdt as son James, an astronaut; Cecil Hoffmann as daughter Greer, a lawyer; Tracy Griffith as daughter Ruby, recently (but unhappily) married; Tristan Tait as son Gabriel, who attended Georgetown University; Darryl Theirse as Michael Bradley, a lawyer and trusted family adviser; and Lynn Clark as Anne.

MONSTER SQUAD NBC

11 SEPTEMBER 1976–3 SEPTEMBER 1977 Live-action Saturday-morning kids' show about a night watchman in a wax museum who could summon the resident monsters to help him fight crimes. With Fred Grandy as Walter, the watchman; Henry Polic II as Dracula; Buck Kartalian as Wolfman; and Michael Lane as Frankenstein.

THE MONTE CARLO SHOW SYNDICATED

1980 Patrick Wayne was the host of this hour variety series, taped on location at the Sporting Club in Monte Carlo, Monaco.

THE MONTEFUSCOS NBC

4 SEPTEMBER 1975–23 OCTOBER 1975 Together with Fay, another ill-fated Thursday-night sitcom, The Montefuscos was the first casualty of the 1975–1976 season. The story of a big Italian-American family living in Connecticut, it featured Joe Sirola as Tony (Papa) Montefusco; Naomi Stevens as Rose (Mama) Montefusco; Ron Carey as their son, Frank, a dentist; Phoebe Dorin as Frank's wife, Theresa; Sal Viscuso as their son, Nunzio, an actor; John Aprea as their son, Joey, a priest; Linda Dano as Angelina, their daughter; Bill Cort as Jim Cooney, Angie's husband; Damon Raskin as Anthony Patrick Cooney, Jim and Angie's son; Dominique Pinassi as Gina, Frank and Theresa's daughter; Jeff Palladini as Anthony Carmine, Frank and Theresa's son; and Robby Paris as Jerome, Frank and Theresa's second son. Bill Persky and Sam Denoff created the show and were its executive producers; Don Van Atta and Bill Idelson produced it.

THE MONTEL WILLIAMS SHOW SYNDICATED

1991– Hour daytime talk show, hosted by Montel Williams. A former naval intelligence officer, Williams had begun counseling the wives and families of fellow servicemen during his tour of duty. After leaving the Navy he became a motivational speaker. His series was test marketed in several cities in the middle of 1991 before being offered nationally that fall.

MONTY FOX

11 JANUARY 1994–15 FEBRUARY 1994 Ten years after he last played Fonzie on Happy Days, Henry Winkler returned to series TV as Monty Richardson, the conservative host of "Rightspeak," a Long Island cable television program, who, when he wasn't battling liberals on the air, battled with his family at home. Also featured were Kate Burton as his wife, Fran, a schoolteacher; David Krumholtz as their fourteen-year-old, David; David Schwimmer as their older son, Greg, a college grad who returned home with his new girlfriend; China Kantner (daughter of Jefferson Airplane members Grace Slick and Paul Kantner) as the girlfriend, Geena, whose nontraditional ways irked Monty; Joyce Guy as Monty's African-American producer, Rita Simon; and Tom McGowan as Monty's announcer, Clifford Walker.

MONTY NASH SYNDICATED

1971 Half-hour crime show starring Harry Guardino as government investigator Monty Nash.

MONTY PYTHON'S FLYING CIRCUS PBS

1969–1974 Produced for the BBC and aired in Great Britain from 1969 to 1974, Monty Python's Flying Circus was not made available in the United States until 1974. The half-hour series consisted of skits (some filmed, some videotaped), blackouts, and animated sequences, vaguely unified by a common comic thread. Though the show was sometimes uneven, its best moments were probably those which satirized television programming—boring talk shows and pretentious documentaries were favorite targets of the Python troupe. Six young men comprised the group, though only five—Graham Chapman, John Cleese, Eric Idle, Terry Jones, and Michael Palin—appeared on camera regularly. The sixth member and the sole American, Terry Gilliam, designed the animated sequences. Ian MacNaughton produced the show. Only forty-five shows were made (Cleese did not appear in the final half-dozen). Following the series, the troupe reassembled for three movies (Monty Python and the Holy Grail, Life of Brian, and Monty Python's The Meaning of Life) and a 1982 performance film, Monty Python Live at the Hollywood Bowl, and embarked on a number of solo projects in film and television. See also Fawlty Towers.

MOON OVER MIAMI ABC

15 SEPTEMBER 1993–22 DECEMBER 1993 A clone of Moonlighting, this hour private eye show starred Bill Campbell and Ally Walker as Walter Tatum and Gwen Cross. Walter, a Miami Beach private detective, ended up with Gwen as his partner after her father hired him to investigate her jumping from a yacht at her wedding. Also featured were Agustin Rodriquez as Tito, and Marlo Marron as Billie, who helped out the principals.

MOONLIGHTING ABC

3 MARCH 1985–2 APRIL 1985; 6 AUGUST 1985–14 MAY 1989 Described by its creator as "the show that knows it's on television," Moonlighting was a witty, fast-paced detective show beset by production problems that hastened its cancellation. The series' first two seasons went fairly smoothly, but a bungled story line, unavailable stars, and behind-the-scenes personality conflicts all contributed to a rocky final two seasons.

Inspired by the 1940 film His Girl Friday, starring Cary Grant and Rosalind Russell, Glenn Gordon Caron sold ABC on the idea of a series about a former high-fashion model who discovered that her business manager had embezzled most of her fortune. One of the remaining assets was the Blue Moon Detective Agency, with a fast-talking male private eye who was able to persuade her to keep the business. Caron envisioned a series with rapid, overlapping dialogue and with sexual chemistry between the two stars. Cybill Shepherd, herself a former high-fashion model, agreed to play the female lead, Maddie Hayes. Bruce Willis, a virtual unknown, was selected as the male lead, David Addison. The chemistry was there: Shepherd played the icy Maddie to the hilt, deftly turning away David's incessant amorous advances. Allyce Beasley played the third regular, secretary Agnes Dipesto.

The writers had fun, churning out pages of dialog for David and Maddie full of rhymes, puns, in-jokes, and double entendres. Sometimes, the characters commented on the plot or talked directly to the camera. A 1985 episode was produced in black and white. One 1986 program was a full-dress version of Shakespeare's The Taming of the Shrew, while another referred slyly to the show's having won only one Emmy out of the sixteen for which it had been nominated. Unfortunately, the elaborate productions led to production delays and cost overruns. Only twenty episodes were produced during the 1985–1986 season, at least two short of the expected number. One episode ran short of the usual forty-eight minutes; Willis and Shepherd simply talked to the camera to fill the gap. Some shows were not delivered until a day or two before airtime, which prevented them from being promoted. In other cases, reruns had to be substituted at the last moment. One reason for the delay was the length of the scripts; there was so much dialogue between David and Maddie that scripts were 50 percent longer than those of other hour series. Another reason for the delay was Shepherd's dissatisfaction with many of the scripts; she felt that her character was becoming too bitchy and had grown weary of the "screaming Maddie" formulas. Another new cast member was hired in the fall of 1986: Curtis Armstrong as Herbert Viola, who was hired by Maddie as a temporary accountant but who chose to stay on as an apprentice detective. Secretary Dipesto fell for him.

Nevertheless, the series enjoyed high ratings, finishing in a tie for 20th place in 1985–1986. Ratings improved over the following season, as Moonlighting rose to ninth place. The series culminated in March of 1987 with Maddie and David, after two years of foreplay, finally making love. The story line, however, was almost certainly mishandled, as Maddie also made love with another suitor, Sam Crawford (played by Mark Harmon), and eventually married a third man whom she met on a train (the marriage was later annulled); many viewers were turned off by the character's apparent promiscuity.

In real life, complications arose when Cybill Shepherd announced her pregnancy (with twins) in February 1987. When Shepherd was available to film new episodes in June 1987, Willis was away making a movie; when Willis returned, Shepherd was unavailable for medical reasons. She did not return to the set until January 1988 (and when she did, she was upset with all the lines of apology that had been written for Maddie). The result was that only fourteen new episodes were made during the chaotic 1987–1988 season, few of which featured Willis and Shepherd together; one program starred supporting players Beasley and Armstrong. On the show, Maddie Hayes became pregnant as well, but suffered a miscarriage. Moonlighting lost about 20 percent of its audience that season, but still managed to finish twelfth in the ratings race.

Tensions escalated before the 1988–1989 season got underway. A power struggle between Caron and Shepherd resulted in Caron's departure from the series; three of the show's writers also left. Jay Daniels took over as executive producer, and the series finished its run with a disappointing 41st-place finish, following several changes of time slot.

MORECAMBE AND WISE SYNDICATED

1980 Half-hour comedy series hosted by the British comedy duo Eric Morecambe and Ernie Wise.

THE MOREY AMSTERDAM SHOW CBS/DUMONT

17 DECEMBER 1948–7 MARCH 1949 (CBS); 21 APRIL 1949–12 OCTOBER 1950 (DUMONT) Morey Amsterdam, the cello-stroking comic with a joke on any subject, hosted a half-hour comedy-variety series which began on CBS and later moved to the DuMont network. The CBS version was set at a nightspot known as the Golden Goose Café and featured Art Carney (in one of his earliest TV roles) as Charlie the doorman and Jacqueline Susann (who would later write several best-selling novels) as Lola the cigarette girl. Susann's husband, Irving Mansfield, produced and directed the show. The DuMont version was set at the Silver Swan Café and featured Art Carney as Newton the waiter and singer Vic Damone. Amsterdam later cohosted Broadway Open House and appeared on The Dick Van Dyke Show.

MORK & MINDY ABC

14 SEPTEMBER 1978–12 AUGUST 1982 A sitcom about an alien visiting Earth, Mork & Mindy was the most popular new series of the 1978–1979 season. Unfortunately, personnel and time-slot changes proved disastrous, and Mork & Mindy was never able to win back its large first-season following. The show starred Robin Williams, a brilliant improvisational comedian with almost no television experience, as Mork, a free-spirited humanoid who was an outcast on his native planet, Ork, where emotions had been bred out of the citizenry. Dispatched to Earth to learn more about its backward ways, Mork's eggshaped space capsule landed in Boulder, Colorado. There Mork met a young woman, Mindy, and persuaded her to let him stay in her apartment while he studied human civilization; gradually, they fell in love. Pam Dawber costarred as Mindy McConnell, who introduced Mork to a world of emotions and educated him about human behavior.

Also featured during the first season were: Conrad Janis as Mindy's square father, Fred McConnell, who owned a music store; Elizabeth Kerr as Mindy's hip grandmother, Cora Hudson; and Jeffrey Jacquet as Eugene, a black youngster who frequented the store. By the end of the season two other regulars had been added: Tom Poston as the downcast downstairs neighbor, Franklin Bickley, who designed greeting cards; and Robert Donner as Exidor, a demented Earthling who was convinced that the Venusians were coming.

Scheduled on Thursdays during its first season, Mork & Mindy was a smash hit, finishing third in the annual ratings; some of Mork's sayings, such as "Na-noo, nanoo" (Orkan for "hello") and "Shazbat!" ("drat!") crept into the American vocabulary. Curiously, the network decided to move the show to Sundays for the following season, assuming that its audience would follow. It didn't—ratings plummeted, and Mork & Mindy was moved back to Thursdays in January 1980. But even there, the show failed to perform as well as it had a year earlier. It ended the season at 26th in the ratings. Another reason for this drop in popularity may have been the departure of three regulars: Janis, Kerr, and Jacquet. It was explained that Fred McConnell had been hired as a trombonist with the Salt Lake City Orchestra. Three new regulars were added in 1979: Jim Staahl as Mindy's boorish cousin, Nelson Flavor; Jay Thomas as Remo DaVinci, who moved to Boulder from New York to open the New York Delicatessen there; and Gina Hecht as Remo's sister, Jean DaVinci, a med student. Conrad Janis was rehired (and given a substantial raise) for the 1980–1981 season, and Elizabeth Kerr also reappeared occasionally. Crissy Wilzak joined the cast as Glenda Comstock, an obnoxious neighbor. By this time, Mindy had landed a job at a TV station; Foster Brooks appeared as Mr. Sternhagen, the station manager, and Pat Cranshaw played camera operator Jake Loomis.

In a final effort to revitalize the show, which had dropped to 49th in the ratings, veteran improvisationist Jonathan Winters was hired for the 1981–1982 season. Winters was Robin Williams's comedic idol, and it was hoped that the chemistry between the two would lift the show to new heights. To incorporate Winters as a character, Mork proposed to Mindy and married her on 15 October 1981. They then hatched a son, Mearth, who was played by Winters (on Ork, children were born full grown in body but not in mind, from giant eggs). The results were disappointing, as Mork & Mindy concluded its run that year, 60th in the ratings. The series lasted four seasons, one longer than the previous alien-visits-Earth sitcom, My Favorite Martian.

The half-hour series was created by Garry Marshall, Joe Glauberg, and Dale McRaven. The character first appeared on an episode of Happy Days, another popular Marshall sitcom. Ralph James provided the voice of Orson, Mork's Orkan superior, to whom Mork dutifully reported at the end of each of the 95 episodes. In 1982 a cartoon version appeared (see following).

THE MORK & MINDY/LAVERNE & SHIRLEY/FONZ HOUR ABC

25 SEPTEMBER 1982–3 SEPTEMBER 1983 This Saturday-morning cartoon show consisted of two segments. "Mork & Mindy," based on the prime-time series that had been canceled a month earlier, found a teenaged Mork attending high school, and living with Mindy and her father; Mork's six-legged dog, Doyng, also hung around, as did their young black friend, Eugene. Robin Williams and Pam Dawber supplied their own voices for the series. In "Laverne & Shirley," also based on the prime-time series, the two women were in the Army, stationed at Camp Fillmore, where their friend Fonz (and his dog, Mr. Cool) was assigned to the motor pool. Both "Laverne & Shirley" and "Fonz" had been the central characters in other cartoon series (see also The Fonz and the Happy Days Gang; Laverne & Shirley).

THE MORNING SHOW CBS
15 MARCH 1954–5 APRIL 1957 An unsuccessful attempt to compete with NBC's Today show, The Morning Show went through several changes of personnel during its three low-rated years. CBS newsman Walter Cronkite, who was then hosting You Are There, was the first host; Charles Collingwood read the news, and other features were handled by Estelle Parsons, Jack Lyman, and the Bil and Cora Baird Puppets. Cronkite had left by the summer of 1954, and on 16 August, Jack Paar replaced him. Paar had previously hosted a weekly daytime show, and he brought with him most of the regulars from that series: pianist Jose Melis, Pupi Campo and his Orchestra, and singer Edie Adams. Betty Clooney and Charlie Applewhite also joined The Morning Show when Paar took over, and Charles Collingwood and the Baird Puppets also remained. By November of 1954, the Baird Puppets were gone, and when Paar took a brief vacation that winter, a young comedian named Johnny Carson filled in. Paar lasted until June 1955, and was succeeded briefly by John Henry Faulk, the folksy humorist who was blacklisted a few months later (and who subsequently won a libel suit against his accusers). Faulk was succeeded late in 1955 by Dick Van Dyke. Van Dyke's regulars included singers Merv Griffin and Sandy Stewart. Ginger Stanley was the weather forecaster; as a stunt, for one three-week period in 1956 she was forced to do the weather chores while immersed in a tank of water. Will Rogers, Jr., was the last host of the series, and when he took over on 20 February 1956, the show's title was changed to Good Morning. Before the show left the air fourteen months later, its title was again changed to The Will Rogers, Jr. Show. The network later introduced The Jimmy Dean Show at the same hour (7 a.m.) as The Morning Show, but shifted Dean to a later time slot after a few weeks. The idea of a morning show was shelved until 1963, when The CBS Morning News was introduced. The Morning Show began as a two-hour program and was reduced to one hour on 3 October 1955, when Captain Kangaroo premiered in the 8 a.m. slot. Among the writers for The Morning Show was Barbara Walters, who would later cohost Today.

MORNING STAR NBC
27 SEPTEMBER 1965–1 JULY 1966 This daytime serial starred Elizabeth Perry and Shary Marshall as Katy Elliott, a fashion designer who moved to New York from New England after her fiancé had been killed. Also featured were Adrienne Ellis as her younger sister Jan; Nina Roman as Liz; Olive Dunbar as Ann Burton; Edward Mallory as Bill Porter; Ed Prentiss as Uncle Ed; Sheila Bromley as Aunt Milly; and Burt Douglas as Gregory Ross.

MORNING STRETCH SYNDICATED
1981 Half-hour exercise show hosted by Joanie Greggains. The series had begun as a local program on San Francisco's KPIX-TV in 1980.

MORNINGSTAR/EVENINGSTAR CBS
25 MARCH 1986–6 MAY 1986 Earl (The Waltons) Hamner developed this sappy dramatic series about a group of orphans who moved into an old folks' home (Eveningstar) after a fire destroyed the orphanage (Morningstar); the idea was that the two generations would learn from each other. Appearing as the seniors were: Mason Adams as Gordon Blair; Jeff Corey as Bill MacGregor; Scatman Crothers as Excell Dennis; Ketty Lester as Nora Blake; Kate Reid as Martha Cameron; Sylvia Sidney as Binnie Baylor; Elizabeth Wilson as Kathy Kelly; and Teresa Wright as Alice Blair, Gordon's wife. Sherry Hursey and Darrell Larson played Debbie Flynn and Bob Lane, the two social workers who concocted the idea, and who themselves were lovers. The youngsters were played by Missy Francis as Sarah Bishop; David Goldsmith as Martin Palmer; Chris Peters as Kevin Murphy; Leaf Phoenix as Doug Roberts; Ebonie Smith as Eugenia Waters; and Fred Savage as Sarah's mute brother, Alan Bishop.

MORTON & HAYES CBS

24 JULY 1991–28 AUGUST 1991 Rob Reiner paid an affectionate tribute to the slapstick comedy film shorts of the 1930s and 1940s in this offbeat comedy series. Reiner, who created the show with Phil Mishkin, served as the "host" of the program, introducing the supposedly long-lost black and white short films of comedy duo Morton and Hayes; in reality, of course, the shorts were filmed in 1991 specifically for the series. Kevin Pollak and Bob Amaral starred as comics Chick Morton and Eddie Hayes, an Abbott-and-Costello-esque pair.

THE MORTON DOWNEY SHOW NBC

2 MAY 1949–9 DECEMBER 1949 Irish tenor Morton Downey hosted his own fifteen-minute musical show three nights a week; it was officially titled Mohawk Showroom and featured Carmen Mastren's Orchestra and announcer Bob Stanton. See also The Roberta Quinlan Show.

THE MORTON DOWNEY, JR., SHOW SYNDICATED

30 MAY 1988–8 SEPTEMBER 1989 Morton Downey, Jr.'s show was much different from his father's. It was a throwback to the confrontational talk shows pioneered by Joe Pyne and Alan Burke in the late 1960s. The Morton Downey, Jr., Show began on 12 October 1987 as a live evening talk show on New York–New Jersey superstation WWOR; the patriotic, chain-smoking host quickly acquired a cult following, especially among young men, for his loud, abrasive style and his penchant for insulting his guests; on one January 1988 show Downey wrapped an American flag around his bottom and told his Iranian guest to kiss it. In May 1988 the show was nationally syndicated and enjoyed a brief reign of popularity. The series' opening featured Downey heading onstage from a corridor to the cheers of his devout audience. On one of the more notorious shows a fight broke out between black activist Roy Innis (who was also involved in an altercation on Geraldo) and outspoken black minister Al Sharpton. Another bizarre incident occurred offstage in 1989, when Downey claimed to have been attacked and beaten by skinheads in the San Francisco airport; no corroborating evidence was ever adduced. Inevitably, audiences soon tired of the style, and the show vanished quietly fourteen months after its national premiere.

MOSES THE LAWGIVER CBS

21 JUNE 1975–2 AUGUST 1975 This six-part miniseries about the life of Moses was filmed in Israel. An Italian-English production, it featured Burt Lancaster as Moses, Irene Papas as Zipporah, Anthony Quayle as Aaron, and Laurent Terzieff as Pharaoh.

THE MOST DEADLY GAME ABC

10 OCTOBER 1970–16 JANUARY 1971 Hour-long crime show with three ace criminologists: Ralph Bellamy as Ethan Arcane; Yvette Mimieux as Vanessa Smith; and George Maharis as Jonathan Croft. The series was produced by Mort Fine, David Friedkin, and Joan Harrison and was developed by Aaron Spelling.

MOST WANTED ABC

16 OCTOBER 1976–20 AUGUST 1977 Hour-long crime show about a special unit of the Los Angeles Police Department that went after the big crooks. With Robert Stack as Captain Link Evers; Shelly Novack as Charlie Benson; and Jo Ann Harris as Kate Manners. Quinn Martin, John Wilder, and Paul King were the executive producers.

MOTHER GOOSE AND GRIMM CBS

MOTHER'S DAY ABC

13 OCTOBER 1958–2 JANUARY 1959 Dick Van Dyke hosted this daytime game show; each day three mothers competed at household tasks for the chance to win prizes.

MOTHER'S DAY LIFETIME
1983–1989 Daytime talk show aimed at mothers with young children, hosted by busy Joan Lunden, who was simultaneously cohosting ABC's Good Morning America.

THE MOTHERS-IN-LAW NBC
10 SEPTEMBER 1967–7 SEPTEMBER 1969 Half-hour sitcom about two next-door neighbors whose children intermarried. With Eve Arden as Eve Hubbard; Herbert Rudley as her husband, Herb Hubbard, a lawyer; Roger C. Carmel (1967–1968) and Richard Deacon (1968–1969) as Roger Buell, a TV writer; Kaye Ballard as his wife, Kaye Buell; Jerry Fogel as Roger and Kaye's son, Jerry Buell; and Deborah Walley as Eve and Herb's daughter, Suzie, who married Jerry and lived with him in the Hubbard garage. Desi Arnaz, the executive producer of the series, also appeared occasionally as bullfighter Raphael del Gado.

MOTORMOUSE ABC
12 SEPTEMBER 1970–4 SEPTEMBER 1971 Formerly featured on Cattanooga Cats, Motormouse headlined his own show for one season. The Saturday-morning cartoon show was a Hanna-Barbera production.

THE MOTOROLA TV HOUR ABC
3 NOVEMBER 1953–18 MAY 1954 Sponsored by Motorola, this hour-long dramatic anthology series alternated on Tuesdays with The U.S. Steel Hour. Presentations included: "Outlaw's Reckoning," with Eddie Albert and Jane Wyatt (3 November); "Westward the Sun," with Brian Keith (in his first major TV role, 17 November); "The Brandenburg Gate," with Jack Palance and Maria Riva (1 December); "The Thirteen Clocks," with John Raitt (29 December); and "Love Song," with Oscar Homolka and Lisa Kirk (4 May).

MOTORWEEK PBS/SYNDICATED
1982– (PBS); 1993– (SYNDICATED) Half-hour weekly informational series on cars — how to purchase them, how to test them, how to drive them, and how to repair them. John Davis hosted, with help from Pat Goss on repair, and Craig Singhaus and Lisa Barrow on other topics. Produced by Maryland Public Television, the series ran on public TV for eleven years before being offered in national syndication in 1993.

THE MOTOWN REVIEW NBC
9 AUGUST 1985–13 SEPTEMBER 1985 Six-week summer variety hour, hosted by singer-songwriter William "Smokey" Robinson, one of the best-known artists who recorded for Motown Records, the seminal "soul" label founded in Detroit by Berry Gordy, Jr. Other regulars were comedians Arsenio Hall, Cheryl Roads, George Solomon, and Douglas Wood, and The Hitsville Gang Dancers.

THE MOUSE FACTORY SYNDICATED
1972 Old Walt Disney cartoons and film clips were presented on this half-hour series aimed principally at children. Each show was hosted and narrated by a guest celebrity.

THE MOVIE GAME SYNDICATED
1969–1970 Films were the subject of this game show. First hosted by Sonny Fox, it featured two three-member teams, each consisting of two stars and one contestant. When Larry Blyden succeeded Fox as host, the format was changed slightly—to two panels of three stars each, playing for a home viewer. Hollywood columnist Army Archerd was also featured on both versions.

MOVIELAND QUIZ ABC
19 AUGUST 1948–26 OCTOBER 1948 The questions on this half-hour prime-time game show were based on film clips from old movies that were shown to the show's contestants. Arthur Q. Bryan, the first emcee, was succeeded by Ralph Dumke.

MOVIN' ON NBC

12 SEPTEMBER 1974–14 SEPTEMBER 1976 Hour-long adventure series about a couple of truckers: Claude Akins as gritty Sonny Pruett, and Frank Converse as Will Chandler, an idealistic fellow who had attended law school. During the second season a second pair of truckers was added: Rosey Grier as Benjy and Art Metrano as Moose. Like Route 66, a highway adventure show of the 1960s, Movin' On was filmed on location all over the United States. Philip D'Antoni and Barry Weitz were the executive producers.

MOYERS: IN SEARCH OF THE CONSTITUTION PBS

19 APRIL 1987–21 JUNE 1987 Bill Moyers helped celebrate the 200th anniversary of the United States Constitution with this ten-part series, which consisted mainly of interviews with constitutional scholars and with Supreme Court Justices Brennan, Blackmun, and O'Connor.

MOYERS: THE POWER OF THE WORD PBS

15 SEPTEMBER 1989–20 OCTOBER 1989 Contemporary American poets read from their works and discussed them with host Bill Moyers on this six-part series.

MOYERS: THE PUBLIC MIND PBS

8 NOVEMBER 1989–29 NOVEMBER 1989 Bill Moyers probed the effects on the American public of public relations, advertising, and political reportage in this thought-provoking four-part series.

MUDDLING THROUGH CBS

9 JULY 1994–7 SEPTEMBER 1994 Dark sitcom about a woman, recently paroled after shooting her husband, who returned to the family coffee shop, Drego's Oasis. With Stephanie Hodge as the parolee, Connie Drego; Jennifer Aniston as her older daughter, Madeline; Aimee Brooks as her younger daughter, Kerri, a tenth-grader; Scott Waara as Duane Sawyer, the state trooper who had arrested Connie and who was now married to Madeline; D. David Morin as Sonny, Connie's husband; and Hal Landon, Jr., and Hank Underwood as the cafe's two elderly regulars, Gidney and Lyle. Barton Dean created the series.

MUGGSY NBC

11 SEPTEMBER 1976–2 APRIL 1977 Taped in Bridgeport, Connecticut, this half-hour Saturday-morning children's show starred Sarah McDonnell as Muggsy, a teenager. Also featured were Ben Masters as Nick, her half-brother; Star-Shemah as Clytemnestra, her friend; Donny Cooper as T. P.; Paul Michael as Gus; and Jimmy McCann as Li'l Man. George A. Heinemann was the executive producer, and Joseph F. Callo the producer.

MULLIGAN'S STEW NBC

25 OCTOBER 1977–13 DECEMBER 1977 The story of "nine people and two bathrooms," Mulligan's Stew was a short-lived family drama. Mr. and Mrs. Mulligan had not only their own three kids to care for, but also four nieces and nephews whose parents had been killed in a plane crash in Hawaii. With Lawrence Pressman as Mike Mulligan, a high school teacher and football coach; Elinor Donahue as Jane Mulligan, his wife; Johnny Doran as Mark, their elder son; Julie Anne Haddock as their daughter, Melinda; K. C. Martel as Jimmy, their younger son; Christopher Ciampa as Adam (Moose) Friedman, their nephew; Suzanne Crough as Stevie Friedman, their niece; Lory Kochheim as Polly Friedman, their niece; and Sunshine Lee as Kimmy Nguyen Friedman, their youngest niece, a Vietnamese orphan whom the Friedmans had adopted. Joanna Lee produced the hour series. The show finished dead last—109th—in the 1977–1978 prime-time seasonal ratings race.

THE MUNSTERS CBS

24 SEPTEMBER 1964–1 SEPTEMBER 1966 Like The Addams Family, which premiered on ABC in 1964 and ran for two seasons, The Munsters was a half-hour sitcom about a motley family of misfits. With Fred Gwynne as Herman Munster, a six-foot ten-inch funeral director who resembled Frankenstein's monster; Yvonne DeCarlo as his vampirish wife, Lily Munster; Beverly Owen (to December 1964) and Pat Priest (from January 1965) as their attractive niece, Marilyn Munster, considered by the rest of the clan to be the abnormal one; Al Lewis as Lily's ancient father, Grandpa; and Butch Patrick as Edward Wolfgang (Eddie) Munster, Herman and Lily's lycanthropic young son. Joe Connelly and Bob Mosher, who had worked together on Leave It to Beaver, created the series for Universal Television. Three members of the original cast—Gwynne, DeCarlo, and Lewis—were reunited for "The Munsters' Revenge," an NBC made-for-TV movie broadcast 27 February 1981. K. C. Martel played Eddie, and Jo McDonnell played Marilyn. The series was remade in 1988: see The Munsters Today.

THE MUNSTERS TODAY SYNDICATED

1988–1990 An updated version of The Munsters, completely recast and shot in color on videotape. With John Schuck as Herman Munster; Lee Meriwether as Lily Munster; Howard Morton as Grandpa; Jason Marsden as Eddie; and Hilary Van Dyke as Marilyn. The premise was the Grandpa had accidentally frozen the family back in 1966, and they thawed out twenty-two years later.

MUPPET BABIES CBS

15 SEPTEMBER 1984–5 SEPTEMBER 1992 This Saturday-morning series placed Jim Henson's Muppet characters, famous from Sesame Street and The Muppet Show, back in time to their early childhood, where they all lived together in a nursery. The Muppet Babies were seen in cartoon form, but the series imaginatively mixed in live-action footage, music, and guest appearances by real-life showbiz people. The series began in 1984 as a thirty-minute show, and expanded to a full hour in 1985, with the title Jim Henson's Muppets, Babies & Monsters (in May of 1986 it reverted to Jim Henson's Muppet Babies). In the fall of 1987 it was hastily expanded to ninety minutes in order to fill the gap caused by the cancellation of Garbage Pail Kids, a controversial cartoon show that never aired. In the fall of 1988 it went back to an hour.

THE MUPPET SHOW SYNDICATED

1976–1981 The Muppets, the lovable puppets created by Jim Henson and company, starred in their own half-hour comedy-variety show. Each week a guest celebrity was also on hand to assist master of ceremonies Kermit the Frog. At one time ABC could have picked up the program, but the network let its option lapse because it did not think that adults would watch the show. Henson then accepted an offer to produce the series in England. It went on to become the most popular first-run syndicated series in TV history, reaching hundreds of millions of viewers in more than one hundred countries.

MURDER ONE ABC

19 SEPTEMBER 1995– The most highly acclaimed new series of the 1995–1996 season, Murder One was created by Steven Bochco. A continuing drama, it presented a first degree murder case, from the crime scene to the jury's verdict, over the course of the season. The series opened with the discovery of the body of a fifteen-year-old girl; charged with murder was a prominent philanthropist who was having an affair with the victim's older sister. The cast included Daniel Benzali as lead defense attorney Teddy Hoffman; Mary McCormack as his associate, Justine Appleton; Michael Hayden as associate Chris Docknovich; Grace Phillips as associate Lisa Gillespie; J. C. Mackenzie as associate Arnold Spivak; Stanley Tucci as the original prime suspect, Richard Cross; Dylan Baker as police detective Arthur Polson; Vanessa Williams as Hoffman's receptionist, Lila Marquette; John Fleck as Hoffman's administrative assistant, Lewis Heinsbergen; Barbara Bosson as prosecutor Miriam Grasso; Kevin Tighe as David Blalock, who was killed off early in the season; Patricia Clarkson as Hoffman's wife, Georgia; and Jason Gedrick as actor Neil Avedon who became the chief suspect and defendant.

MURDER, SHE WROTE CBS

30 SEPTEMBER 1984– One of the few series in television history in which the sole lead character was a woman, Murder, She Wrote was one of the most popular series of the decade. A formulaic whodunnit created by Richard Levinson, William Link, and Peter S. Fischer, it was reminiscent of their earlier series, Columbo and Ellery Queen. It starred Angela Lansbury as Jessica Fletcher, a widowed mystery writer living in Cabot Cove, Maine, who was often called upon to solve real crimes. Supporting players included Tom Bosley (1984–1988) as Sheriff Amos Tupper; William Windom (1985– ) as Dr. Seth Hazlitt (Windom described his role to a Canadian reporter as "the eunuch doctor of Cabot Cove with a crusty New England bedside manner"); Michael Horton (1985–1988) as Jessica's nephew, accountant Grady Fletcher; and Ron Masak (1988– ) as the new sheriff, Mort Metzger, a former New York cop. One unusual episode, "Strangest of Bargains," was broadcast 3 May 1987; it reunited Harry Morgan, Jeffrey Lynn, and Martha Scott, three of the stars of the 1949 film Strange Bargain. By the 1989–1990 season, Lansbury's role was reduced so that she was no longer required to star in each episode; on several shows she appeared only at the beginning, to introduce the evening's "guest sleuth." In the fall of 1991 Lansbury returned to the show full-time, as Jessica split her time between Cabot Cove and New York, where she had taken a teaching job. In subsequent seasons, Fletcher spent even less time in Cabot Cove, traveling all over the country and the world to solve crimes. By 1994 Murder, She Wrote was the longest currently running drama on network television, and had consistently placed in the top ten of the annual Nielsen rankings.

MURPHY BROWN CBS

14 NOVEMBER 1988– Half-hour sitcom set in Washington, D.C., at the offices of F.Y.I., a fictitious TV newsmagazine show. With Candice Bergen as Murphy Brown, high-strung reporter who gave up booze and cigarettes after a stay at the Betty Ford Clinic; Grant Shaud as her new, twenty-five-year-old producer, Miles Silverberg; Faith Ford as empty-headed reporter, and former Miss America, Corky Sherwood; Joe Regalbuto as intense reporter Frank Fontana; Charles Kimbrough as the stuffy anchor, Jim Dial; Pat Corley as Phil, owner of Phil's Place, the local watering hole; and Robert Pastorelli (1988–fall 1994) as Eldin Bernecky, the world's slowest painter, hired by Murphy to redo her apartment. Occasionally featured over the several years were Colleen Dewhurst (1988–1991) as Murphy's mother Avery Brown; John Hostetter as John, the stage manager; Scott Bryce (1989–1993) as Will Forrest, who married Corky (thereby giving her the name of Corky Sherwood Forrest; they eventually divorced); Alan Oppenheimer (1990–1992) as network executive Gene Kinsella; Julius Carry (1992–fall 1993) as network executive Mitchell Baldwin; Jane Leeves (1992–fall 1993) as Miles's girlfriend, Audrey; Scott Bakula (1993– ) as reporter Peter Hunt; Garry Marshall (spring 1994– ) as network executive Stan Lansing; and Paula Korologos (1995– ) as young reporter McGovern. One of the series's running gags was Murphy's inability to find a suitable secretary; on almost every episode a new candidate was tried out and was quickly dismissed. Among the more notable hopefuls were Carol Kester (played by Marcia Wallace, who had originated the role on The Bob Newhart Show) and Stan Lansing's nerdy nephew (played by Paul Reubens who became a semi-regular) Andrew Lansing; young Lansing later became a network executive.

During the 1990–1991 season Murphy had a relationship with Jerry Gold (played by Jay Thomas), and a brief fling with ex-husband Jake Lowenstein (played by Robin Thomas; they'd once been married for five days). In the fall of 1991 she learned that she was pregnant with Jake's baby. She decided to have the child, and to raise it by herself; the baby was born on the final episode of the season. The event attracted little attention until Vice President Dan Quayle, in a May 1992 speech addressing the "poverty of values" in America, criticized the fictional character's decision to bear a child out of wedlock. The controversy raged during the summer, and propelled Murphy Brown's fall 1992 premiere to the top of the ratings. Murphy did not refer to the issue during that episode on which she decided to name her baby Avery, but a subsequent episode did address the uproar.

Just as she was unable to keep a secretary at work, Murphy was unable to keep a nanny for the baby. Eventually, Eldin (still at work painting her place) agreed to do the job. However, Eldin left in the fall of 1994 to study art (in real life, Robert Pastorelli left for his own sitcom, Double Rush). By that time, young Avery was played by Dyllan Christopher. Meanwhile, Miles had begun a relationship with Corky (the two impulsively got married in 1995 but quickly regretted it), and Murphy had embarked on one with Peter Hunt. Christopher Rich was added in 1995 as anchorman Miller Redfield.

One of the few TV series of the 1980s and 1990s to remain in a stable time slot, Murphy Brown was a fixture on Mondays at 9 P.M. It cracked Nielsen's Top Ten in the 1991–1992 season, finishing third, and again the following season, finishing fourth. It won a Peabody Award in 1991. Diane English and Joel Shukovsky created the series.

MURPHY'S LAW ABC

2 NOVEMBER 1988; 3 DECEMBER 1988–18 MARCH 1989 There were two new series in the fall of 1988 with the word Murphy in their titles; only one succeeded. Murphy's Law was George Segal's second flop series in as many years (see also Take Five). Here he played Daedalus Patrick Murphy, an insurance investigator recovering from alcoholism. Maggie Han played model Kimiko Fannuchi, who shared an apartment with Murphy and who sometimes worked as his assistant, and Josh Mostel played Murphy's boss, Wesley Hardin.

MUSCLE WB

11 JANUARY 1995–24 MAY 1995 One of the first series on the new Warner Bros. Network, this was a half-hour sitcom which, like Soap, featured a continuing story line. Set mostly at the Survival Gym, a posh Manhattan health club, the program featured Wendy Benson as Cleo, an aspiring actress; Michael Boatman as Garnett, a media-savvy lawyer; Nestor Carbonell as Johnny, a gigolo; Dan Gauthier as Kent Atkinson, son of the club's late owner; Stephan "Tower" Henneberry as bodybuilder Sam Pippin; Shannon Kenny as Jane Atkinson, widow of the club's owner; Jerry Levine as Robert Bingham, a recently paroled white collar criminal; Amy Pietz as Kent's cousin, Bronwyn Jones, a gay TV anchorwoman; Alan Ruck as Dr. Marshall Gold, a gossipy psychiatrist; T. E. Russell as Victor; and Michole White as Angela.

MUSIC BINGO NBC/ABC

29 MAY 1958–11 SEPTEMBER 1958 (NBC); 5 DECEMBER 1958–1 JANUARY 1960 (ABC) Two contestants played a version of bingo on this game show. By correctly identifying a song, a contestant won a square on a giant bingo board. Johnny Gilbert hosted the series, which was introduced as a prime-time show over NBC and moved to a daytime slot when it switched networks.

MUSIC COUNTRY NBC

26 JULY 1973–6 SEPTEMBER 1973; 17 JANUARY 1974–16 MAY 1974 Taped in Nashville, Music Country was an hour of country music, all performed by guest artists. The show's official title was Dean Martin Presents Music Country.

MUSIC '55 CBS

12 JULY 1955–13 SEPTEMBER 1955 Bandleader Stan Kenton hosted this half-hour musical variety series.

MUSIC FOR A SPRING NIGHT

See MUSIC FOR A SUMMER NIGHT

MUSIC FOR A SUMMER NIGHT ABC

3 JUNE 1959–21 SEPTEMBER 1959; 2 MARCH 1960–21 SEPTEMBER 1960 This musical variety show featured guest artists and the music of Glenn Osser's Orchestra. From March to May of 1960 it was titled Music for a Spring Night.

MUSIC FROM CEDAR GROVE ABC

23 MAY 1953–26 DECEMBER 1953; 26 JANUARY 1956–19 APRIL 1956 This hour-long musical variety series was broadcast from Frank Dailey's Meadowbrook in Cedar Grove, New Jersey (the show was also titled Music from Meadowbrook). In 1953 Jimmy Blaine was the emcee, and music was provided by Ralph Marterie's Orchestra. Singer Bill Williams was also a regular in 1953. When the series returned in 1956, it was in a half-hour format, with Blaine as emcee and Ralph Flanagan's Orchestra; Hannah Flanagan was a regular guest.

MUSIC FROM CHICAGO DUMONT

15 APRIL 1951–17 JUNE 1951 Another of the several Chicago-based music and variety shows, this one was broadcast on Sundays over the DuMont network. See also Chicago Jazz; Chicago Symphony Chamber Orchestra; Concert Tonight; The Music Room; Music in Velvet; Sing-Co-Pation; and Vaudeo Varieties.

MUSIC HALL AMERICA SYNDICATED

1976 Hour-long country music series, taped in Nashville.

MUSIC IN VELVET ABC

16 JANUARY 1949–17 APRIL 1949; 15 JULY 1951–28 OCTOBER 1951 Broadcast from Chicago, Music in Velvet was first seen in the Midwest in 1948 and was one of the first shows to be televised live in the East after coaxial cable facilities linking Chicago and New York became operational early in 1949. Don Lindley and the Velveteers were featured on the 1949 version, which was produced and directed by Ed Skotch. Rex Maupin and his orchestra were featured on the 1951 version of the half-hour show.

MUSIC ON ICE NBC

8 MAY 1960–11 SEPTEMBER 1960 This frosty summer variety show, taped somewhere in Brooklyn, was hosted by singer Johnny Desmond and featured skater Jacqueline du Bief, the singing Skip-Jacks, the dancing Blades, and the Bob Boucher Orchestra.

THE MUSIC SCENE ABC

22 SEPTEMBER 1969–12 JANUARY 1970 This popular music series featured appearances by guest artists from the rock and folk scene. The forty-five-minute series preceded The New People, another forty-five-minute series, on Monday nights. It was hosted by comedian David Steinberg, and the resident troupe of performers included Chris Bokeno, Larry Hankin, Paul Reid Roman, Christopher Ross, and Lily Tomlin (who joined Laugh-In shortly after the series folded). Stan Harris and Ken Fritz were the producers.

THE MUSIC SHOP NBC

11 JANUARY 1959–8 MARCH 1959 Half-hour musical variety show, hosted by bandleader Buddy Bregman. Rock-and-roller Ritchie Valens made a rare TV appearance on the premiere, just three weeks before his death in a plane crash.

THE MUSIC SHOW DUMONT

19 MAY 1953–17 OCTOBER 1954 Broadcast from Chicago, this half-hour series presented light classical and popular selections without commercial interruptions. Robert Trendler conducted the orchestra, and vocalists included Mike Douglas, Henri Noel, Jackie Van, and Eleanore Warner. J. E. Faraghan produced the series and Barry McKinley directed it.

MUSICAL CHAIRS NBC

9 JULY 1955–17 SEPTEMBER 1955 The first of the two programs by this title was a prime-time game show hosted by Bill Leyden (It Could Be You), who quizzed a celebrity panel on musical subjects. The panel included Mel Blanc, singer Peggy King, lyricist Johnny Mercer, and trumpeter Bobby Troup.

MUSICAL CHAIRS CBS

16 JUNE 1975–31 OCTOBER 1975 The second of the two shows titled Musical Chairs was a daytime game show hosted by singer Adam Wade. Contestants listened to songs and then tried to select the next line of the song from three choices shown to them. Produced by Bill W. Chastain, Jr., Musical Chairs is notable in that it was the first game show emceed by a black performer.

MUSICAL COMEDY TIME NBC

2 OCTOBER 1950–19 MARCH 1951 This Monday-night anthology series shared a time slot with Robert Montgomery Presents. Presentations included: "Anything Goes," with Martha Raye (2 October); "Babes in Toyland," with Dennis King (25 December); "No No Nanette," with Jackie Gleason and Ann Crowley (5 March); and "Flying High," with Bert Lahr (19 March).

MUSICAL MERRY-GO-ROUND NBC

MUSICAL MINIATURES NBC

10 MAY 1948–12 JANUARY 1949 A twenty-minute musical series with no regulars, broadcast two or three times a week before the evening newsreel. The show was also aired under the titles Topical Tunes and Musical Almanac. It was also seen irregularly later in 1949.

MY FAVORITE HUSBAND CBS

12 SEPTEMBER 1953–27 DECEMBER 1955 This domestic sitcom, starring Lucille Ball, came to radio in 1948 and lasted three seasons there. It was resurrected for TV in 1953. Because Lucille Ball was then starring in I Love Lucy, Joan Caulfield was chosen for the part of Liz Cooper, the scatterbrained wife of George Cooper, a Manhattan banker; Barry Nelson costarred as George. Also featured were Alix Talton as neighbor Myra Cobb and Bob Sweeney as her husband, Gilmore Cobb. In the fall of 1955 Vanessa Brown replaced Joan Caulfield as Liz Cooper, and Alix Talton was seen as neighbor Myra Shepard; Bob Sweeney also left the series and Dan Tobin joined the TV cast as Myra's husband, Oliver Shepard. The half-hour show was directed by George Cahan, who was the husband of costar Talton. The latter episodes were rerun on CBS during the summer of 1957.

MY FAVORITE MARTIAN CBS

29 SEPTEMBER 1963–4 SEPTEMBER 1966 Half-hour sitcom about a Martian whose spaceship crash landed on Earth and who moved in with the reporter who witnessed the crash landing. With Bill Bixby as Tim O'Hara, reporter for the Los Angeles Sun; Ray Walston as the Martian, who took the name Martin O'Hara (Tim's uncle) when he settled in; Pamela Britton as Mrs. Lorelei Brown, Tim's befuddled landlady; and Alan Hewitt as Bill Brennan, a Los Angeles cop. Jack Chertok produced the series, of which 107 episodes were made. See also My Favorite Martians.

MY FAVORITE MARTIANS CBS

8 SEPTEMBER 1973–30 AUGUST 1975 This Saturday-morning cartoon show was derived from the 1963 sitcom, My Favorite Martian. In the cartoon version, there were three Martians who were discovered by two Earthlings. Norm Prescott and Lou Scheimer produced the series.

MY FAVORITE STORY SYNDICATED

1953–1954 This half-hour filmed dramatic anthology series was hosted by Adolphe Menjou.

MY FRIEND FLICKA CBS

10 FEBRUARY 1956–1 FEBRUARY 1957 My Friend Flicka, a half-hour western based on Mary O'Hara's book (and a 1943 movie), was the first filmed series from 20th Century-Fox. Set at the Goose Bar Ranch in Montana at the turn of the century, it featured Johnny Washbrook as Ken McLaughlin; Gene Evans as his father, Rob McLaughlin; Anita Louise as his mother, Nell McLaughlin; and Frank Ferguson as Gus the ranch hand. Flicka, Ken's equine companion, was played by an Arabian sorrel named Wahama. The thirty-nine half-hour episodes were filmed in color.

MY FRIEND IRMA CBS

8 JANUARY 1952–25 JUNE 1954 Created by Cy Howard, My Friend Irma began on radio in 1947 and ran for seven years. The television adaptation was less successful, even though most of the members of the radio cast recreated their roles for TV. The half-hour sitcom starred Marie Wilson as Irma Peterson, a not-too-bright legal secretary living in a New York boardinghouse; Cathy Lewis (1952–1953) as her roommate, Jane Stacey, a level-headed young woman who, like George Burns on The Burns and Allen Show, addressed the viewing audience directly from time to time during the show; Sid Tomack (1952–1953) as Al, Irma's boyfriend, a scheming con man; Brooks West as Richard Rhinelander III, Jane's wealthy boyfriend; Gloria Gordon as Mrs. O'Reilly, proprietor of the boardinghouse; Donald McBride as Mr. Clyde, Irma's boss; and Richard Eyer as Bobby, Irma's young nephew. In the fall of 1953 Mary Shipp succeeded Cathy Lewis as Irma's new roommate, newspaper reporter Kay Foster, and Hal March replaced Sid Tomack as Irma's new boyfriend, Joe. The series was produced by Nat Perrin and directed by Richard Whorf; in the fall of 1952 it became the first series to be broadcast from CBS's Television City facility in Hollywood.

MY FRIEND TONY NBC

5 JANUARY 1969–31 AUGUST 1969 Hour-long crime show with James Whitmore as Professor John Woodruff, teacher of criminology and private detective, and Enzo Cerusico as Tony Novello, Woodruff's partner, an Italian whom Woodruff had met during World War II. Sheldon Leonard created the series and was its executive producer.

MY HERO NBC

8 NOVEMBER 1952–1 AUGUST 1953 Half-hour sitcom starring Bob Cummings as Bob Beanblossom, an inept real estate salesman; John Litel as Mr. Thackery, his boss; and Julie Bishop as Thackery's secretary and Beanblossom's girlfriend, Julie Marshall. Produced by Mort Green for Don Sharpe Enterprises, My Hero was the first of several sitcoms for Cummings: see also The Bob Cummings Show, Love That Bob, and My Living Doll.

MY LIFE AND TIMES ABC

24 APRIL 1991–30 MAY 1991 Ron Koslow created this hour series, set in a retirement home in the year 2035, from which an 85-year-old man looked back at events in his life. It featured Tom Irwin as retired writer Ben Miller (Irwin appeared as a younger man in the flashbacks); Helen Hunt as his wife, Rebecca Eastman Miller; and Megan Mullally as Susan, who worked at the retirement home.

MY LITTLE MARGIE CBS/NBC

16 JUNE 1952–30 JULY 1953 (CBS); 2 SEPTEMBER 1953–24 AUGUST 1955 (NBC) Half-hour sitcom about a womanizing widower and his meddlesome daughter. With Gale Storm as Margie Albright; Charles Farrell as her father, investment counselor Vern Albright; Don Hayden as Margie's boyfriend, Freddie Wilson; Clarence Kolb as Vern's boss, George Honeywell, president of Honeywell & Todd; Hillary Brooke (1952–1954) as Vern's frequent girlfriend, Roberta Townsend; Gertrude Hoffman as their kindly old neighbor, Mrs. Odetts; and Willie Best as Charlie, the elevator operator in their New York apartment house. Produced by Hal Roach, Jr., and Roland Reed, the series was first introduced as a summer replacement for I Love Lucy and found a place on CBS's fall schedule for one season before shifting networks. A radio version was also introduced in 1952. The 126 TV episodes were widely syndicated throughout the 1950s and 1960s.

MY LITTLE PONY AND FRIENDS SYNDICATED

1986–1990 Half-hour cartoon series featuring the "My Little Pony" characters, based on the popular line of kids' toys, and introducing "The Glo Friends," "The Moondreamers," and "The Potato Head Kids."

MY LIVING DOLL CBS

27 SEPTEMBER 1964–8 SEPTEMBER 1965 Half-hour sitcom about a psychiatrist and his live-in patient, a female robot. With Bob Cummings as Dr. Bob McDonald; Julie Newmar as Rhoda, the government-built robot (Project AF709); Jack Mullaney as Dr. Peter Robinson, a colleague of McDonald's; Doris Dowling as Irene McDonald, Bob's sister, who also lived at home with Bob and Rhoda; and Nora Marlowe as Mrs. Moffat. Bob Cummings quit the series after twenty-one episodes, and Dr. Robinson became Rhoda's caretaker for the remaining shows (it was explained that Dr. McDonald had been sent to Pakistan).

MY MOTHER THE CAR NBC

14 SEPTEMBER 1965–6 SEPTEMBER 1966 Universally blasted as one of the feeblest sitcoms of the decade, My Mother the Car told the story of a man who heard his late mother's voice emanating from a 1928 Porter. With Jerry Van Dyke as lawyer Dave Crabtree; Maggie Pierce as his wife, Barbara Crabtree; Cindy Eilbacher as their daughter, Cindy; Randy Whipple as their son, Randy; Avery Schreiber as the evil Captain Manzini, an antique automobile collector desperate to add the 1928 Porter to his collection; and Ann Sothern as the voice of Dave's mother, Gladys. Created by Allan Burns and Chris Hayward, the half-hour series was produced by Rod Amateau.

MY PARTNER THE GHOST SYNDICATED

1973 Produced in England, where it was titled Randall & Hopkirk (Deceased), this lighthearted crime show featured Mike Pratt as private eye Jeff Randall; Kenneth Cope as Marty Hopkirk, Jeff's former partner who was killed on the job but who returned as a ghost (visible only to Randall) to help his associate; and Annette Andre as Marty's widow, Jean Hopkirk, who worked as Randall's secretary.

MY PET MONSTER ABC

12 SEPTEMBER 1987–3 SEPTEMBER 1988 Saturday-morning cartoon series based on the stuffed toy; in the TV series the toy, who belonged to a boy named Max, could turn into a friendly six-foot-tall monster.

MY SECRET IDENTITY SYNDICATED

1988–1991 Half-hour syndicated sitcom, produced in Canada, about a teenage boy who became endowed with superpowers after his accidental exposure to a scientific experiment. With Jerry O'Connell as the teenager, Andrew Clements; Derek McGrath as the scientist, Dr. Jeffcoat, Andrew's next-door neighbor; Wanda Cannon as Jerry's mother, Stephanie; and Marsha Moreau as Jerry's kid sister, Erin.

MY SISTER EILEEN CBS

5 OCTOBER 1960–12 APRIL 1961 Ruth McKinney's book was the subject of two movies and this half-hour comedy series. With Elaine Stritch as Ruth Sherwood, magazine writer; Shirley Bonne as her sister, Eileen Sherwood, an actress; Leon Belasco as Mr. Appopolous, their Greenwich Village landlord; Rose Marie as Bertha, a friend of theirs; Jack Weston as Chick Adams, a reporter; Stubby Kaye as Marty, Eileen's agent; and Raymond Bailey as Mr. D. X. Beaumont, Ruth's boss.

MY SISTER SAM CBS

6 OCTOBER 1986–7 NOVEMBER 1987; 22 MARCH 1988–12 APRIL 1988 Half-hour sitcom about a San Francisco photographer whose kid sister moved in with her. With Pam Dawber as Samantha (Sam) Russell; Rebecca Schaeffer as Patti, her sixteen-year-old sister, a sophomore at Fillmore High; Jenny O'Hara as Dixie Randazzo, Sam's assistant; Joel Brooks as J. D. Lucas, Sam's agent; and David Naughton as Jack

Kincaid, a photojournalist who lived across the hall from Sam and Patti. Diane English was executive producer. The show fared well in its first season, ranking 21st in the prime-time ratings; a shift to a Saturday time slot in the fall of 1987 proved disastrous, as the series slipped to 84th place and was lifted in November; a few more episodes surfaced in the spring of 1988. In July 1989 twenty-one-year-old Rebecca Schaeffer was shot and killed outside her West Hollywood apartment by an obsessed fan.

MY SO-CALLED LIFE ABC

25 AUGUST 1994–26 JANUARY 1995 Created by Marshall Herskovitz and Edward Zwick, the duo responsible for thirtysomething, this hour dramatic series was set in suburban Pittsburgh, and examined life from a tenth grader's point of view. It starred Claire Danes as frequently confused fifteen-year-old Angela Chase, and featured Bess Armstrong and Tom Irwin as her parents, Patty and Graham, who ran a printing business; Lisa Wilhoit as her younger sister, Danielle; A. J. Langer as Angela's flaky new pal, Rayanne Graf; Wilson Cruz as gay teen Rickie Vasquez; Jared Leto as teen hunk Jordan Catalano; Devon Odessa as Sharon; and Devon Gummersall as nerdy neighbor Brian Krakow. Occasionally featured were: Patti D'Arbanville-Quinn as Amber, Rayanne's mom; Mary Kay Place as Camille, Sharon's mom; May Quigley as Ms. Lerner; and Lisa Waltz as Hallie Lowenthal. Although praised by the critics and popular with teens, My So-Called Life failed to attract a large enough audience and was dropped, amid protests, in midseason. MTV picked up the reruns in April 1995.

MY SON JEEP NBC

4 JULY 1953–22 SEPTEMBER 1953 Half-hour sitcom about a widower and his young son. With Jeffrey Lynn as Doc Allison; Martin Huston as his son, Jeep; Anne Sargent as Barbara, Doc's receptionist and secretary; Betty Lou Keim as Jeep's older sister, Peggy; and Leona Powers as the housekeeper. Though regular broadcasting of the series did not begin until July, a "sneak preview" was telecast 3 June 1953.

MY TALK SHOW SYNDICATED

1990 Like Fernwood 2-Night of the late 1970s, My Talk Show attempted to parody the talk show format. It was set in the living room of a Derby, Wisconsin, homemaker. Cynthia Stevenson played the host, Jennifer Bass, and Stephanie Hodge played Jennifer's next-door neighbor and cohost, Angela Davenport. Before the end of the series's brief run, Stevenson had been replaced by Debra McGrath, as Anne Marie Snelling, from whose living room the show was now broadcast. Like Fernwood 2-Night, the show's guests included both real-life celebrities and fictional guests played by actors.

MY THREE SONS ABC/CBS

29 SEPTEMBER 1960–2 SEPTEMBER 1965 (ABC); 16 SEPTEMBER 1965–24 AUGUST 1972 (CBS) Second only to Ozzie and Harriet as network television's longest-running situation comedy, My Three Sons starred Fred MacMurray as widower Steve Douglas, a West Coast aerodynamics engineer trying to raise three boys. His first "three sons" were played by Tim Considine as Mike, the eldest; Don Grady (a onetime Mouseketeer) as Robbie; and Stanley Livingston as Chip, the youngest. Also featured was William Frawley as the boys' grandfather, "Bub" O'Casey, who also resided in the Douglas household. In the fall of 1963 Meredith MacRae joined the cast as Mike's girlfriend, Sally Morrison. Midway through the 1964–1965 season William Frawley left the series for health reasons, and William Demarest was brought in as Charley O'Casey, the boys' live-in uncle. Several more changes took place in the fall of 1965 as My Three Sons shifted networks: eldest son Mike married Sally, and the two were written out of the series; a new "son" joined the household: Ernie, a bespectacled orphan, was adopted by Steve. The role was played by Barry Livingston, younger brother of costar Stanley Livingston. Tina Cole joined the crew a year later as Robbie's girlfriend, Katie Miller; she and Robbie subsequently got married, continued to live at home, and eventually had triplets. The three youngest Douglases—Charlie, Steve, and Robbie, Jr.— were played by Michael, Daniel, and Joseph Todd. In the fall of 1969 Steve Douglas remarried. His new wife, Barbara Harper (played by Beverly Garland), had been one of Ernie's high school teachers; Barbara was a widow and the mother of a small daughter, Dodie (played by Dawn Lyn). In the fall of 1970 Ronnie Troup joined the cast as Polly Williams, a college classmate of Chip (the original youngest son); she and Chip were married that year. Don Fedderson was the executive producer of the series.

MY TRUE STORY ABC

5 MAY 1950–22 SEPTEMBER 1950 Produced in cooperation with True Story magazine, this half-hour dramatic anthology series presented stories based on the ostensibly true accounts from the periodical. The television show was not nearly as successful as the radio adaptation, which ran from 1943 to 1961. Charles Powers was the producer and director of the television version.

MY TWO DADS NBC

20 SEPTEMBER 1987–28 FEBRUARY 1988; 5 JUNE 1988–29 JULY 1988; 11 JANUARY 1989–10 JANUARY 1990; 5 MARCH 1990–30 APRIL 1990; 2 JUNE 1990–16 JUNE 1990 A premise for a TV series that would have been inconceivable a generation earlier was calmly accepted in this sitcom. A single mother died, leaving her twelve-year-old daughter to the two men she had loved thirteen years ago, either of whom could be her father. The two men, whose lifestyles were vastly different, accepted the assignment, moving in together to help raise the child. The cast included: Paul Reiser as financial analyst Michael Taylor; Greg Evigan as artist Joey Harris; Staci Keanan as the girl, Nicole Bradford; Florence Stanley as Judge Wilbur, who oversaw the unusual arrangement; Dick Butkus (1987–1989) as Ed Klawicki, who owned a nearby diner; Vonni Ribisi as Nicole's boyfriend, Cory Kupkus; Amy Hathaway as her friend, Shelby Haskell; Chad Allen (1988–1990) as her old boyfriend Zach; and Don Yesso (1989–1990) as Justin, the new chef at the diner.

MY WILDEST DREAMS FOX

28 MAY 1995–25 JUNE 1995 Half-hour sitcom starring standup comic Lisa Ann Walter as Lisa McGinnis, a wisecracking woman who put her dreams of being a rock star on hold while coping with a husband and two kids. Also featured were John Posey as her husband, Jack; Evan Bonifant as their son, Danny (Lisa and Jack also had a baby daughter, Delilah); Kelly Bishop as Lisa's mother, Gloria; Mary Jo Keenen as Lisa's sister, Stephanie; and Miguel A. Nunez, Jr., as Chandler Trapp, owner of Mound of Sound, the recording studio where Lisa worked.

MY WORLD AND WELCOME TO IT NBC

15 SEPTEMBER 1969–7 SEPTEMBER 1970 This whimsical sitcom was based loosely on the life and writings of humorist James Thurber. It starred William Windom as John Monroe, a writer and cartoonist for Manhattanite magazine who, like Walter Mitty, frequently fantasized about what life could be like; animated sequences were regularly employed to depict Monroe's daydreams and other diversions. Also featured were Joan Hotchkis as Monroe's wife, Ellen; Lisa Gerritsen as their daughter, Lydia; and Harold J. Stone as Monroe's boss, Hamilton Greeley. Henry Morgan was occasionally featured as Monroe's colleague, Phil Jensen (the character was reportedly inspired by that of Robert Benchley). Sheldon Leonard was the executive producer of the half-hour series, and Danny Arnold produced it.

MYSTERIES OF CHINATOWN ABC

4 DECEMBER 1949–23 OCTOBER 1950 One of the first ABC shows telecast from Hollywood, Mysteries of Chinatown was a half-hour crime show set in San Francisco's Chinatown. The cast included Robert Bice, Spencer Chan, Herb Ellis, and Cy Kendall. Ray Buffum produced the series and Richard Goggin directed it.

MYSTERY! PBS

5 FEBRUARY 1980– Most of the presentations on this mystery anthology series were made in England. Among the highlights have been John Mortimer's "Rumpole of the Bailey," a series of several mysteries starring Leo McKern as barrister Horace Rumpole; "Malice Aforethought," a four-parter with Hywel Bennett and Judy Parfitt; and "Sergeant Cribb," another recurring series, with Alan Dobie. The highlight of the 1984–1985 season was the first of several Sherlock Holmes stories. Unlike the Basil Rathbone–Nigel Bruce movies of the 1940s, these stories were true to Arthur Conan Doyle's original tales, and were set in the late nineteenth century. Jeremy Brett played Holmes brilliantly, ably complemented by David Burke as trusty Doctor Watson. Later highlights included a series of mysteries with David Suchet as Hercule Poirot, a series with Michael Gambon as Chief Inspector Maigret, another with Patrick Malahide as Inspector Alleyn, and still another with Derek Jacobi as Brother Cadfael, a twelfth-century sleuth. The most highly acclaimed of Mystery!'s many presentations, however, were the several "Prime Suspect" mysteries, first shown here in January 1992, starring Helen Mirren as Deputy Chief Inspector Jane Tennison. Gene Shalit hosted the series during the 1980 season; Vincent Price succeeded him in 1981. Diana Rigg took over as host in 1989.

THE MYSTERY CHEF NBC

1 MARCH 1949–29 JUNE 1949 One of NBC's first daytime programs, this cooking show was broadcast from Philadelphia, where it was hosted by John MacPherson, the "Mystery Chef." First seen on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons, the show later shifted to Wednesdays.

MYSTERY SCIENCE THEATER 3000 COM

18 NOVEMBER 1989– An offbeat comedy series in which a janitor and two robots were blasted into space by a team of mad scientists and forced to watch bad movies. The trio, who appeared silhouetted at the bottom of the movie image, proceeded to wisecrack their way through an array of some of the worst motion pictures ever made, such as Godzilla vs. Megalon, Girls Town, Invasion U.S.A., and The Slime People, to name just a few. The series was the brainchild of Joel Hodgson, a former standup comic who sold the idea to a local station in Minneapolis in 1988; a year later it was picked up by the fledgling Comedy Channel, which merged with Ha! into Comedy Central in 1991. Hodgson played Joel Robinson, and series writers Kevin Murphy and Trace Beaulieu provided the voices of the two robots, Tom Servo and Crow. Mike Nelson (who was head writer and had previously played various roles on the show) succeeded Hodgson as the robots' human companion in October 1993. The series, which usually featured hundreds of pop-culture-laden asides from the trio during each telecast, quickly acquired cult status, and won a Peabody Award in 1993.

NBA INSIDE STUFF NBC

27 OCTOBER 1990– Pro basketball and its players were the subjects of this half-hour Saturday-afternoon series, cohosted by Ahmad Rashad and Julie Moran. Willow Bay succeeded Moran as cohost in 1991.

THE NBC COMEDY HOUR NBC

8 JANUARY 1956–10 JUNE 1956 The successor to The Colgate Comedy Hour, The NBC Comedy Hour was a Sunday-night variety show hosted by a different guest star each week, except during the spring of 1956, when Gale Storm was the permanent host.

NBC DRAMATIC THEATRE NBC

17 APRIL 1949–10 JULY 1949 Also known as NBC Repertory Theatre, this hour anthology series was a temporary replacement for Philco Television Playhouse. Vaughn Taylor starred in the premiere telecast, "Mr. Mergenthwirker's Lobblies."

NBC FOLLIES NBC

13 SEPTEMBER 1973–27 DECEMBER 1973 Thursday-night variety hour, hosted by Sammy Davis, Jr. Mickey Rooney was featured in most of the shows.

THE NBC FRIDAY NIGHT MYSTERY NBC

22 OCTOBER 1993–13 MAY 1994 The umbrella title for various two-hour made-for-TV movies. Among the presentations were two "Perry Mason" features, four "Hart to Hart" films (reuniting Robert Wagner and Stefanie Powers), two "MacShane" movies (starring Kenny Rogers), and several one-shot films.

NBC MAGAZINE WITH DAVID BRINKLEY NBC

NBC MAGAZINE NBC

25 SEPTEMBER 1981–31 JULY 1982 This hour magazine show was hosted during its first season by veteran NBC newsman David Brinkley; regular contributors included Betsy Aaron, Douglas Kiker, Jack Perkins, and Garrick Utley. The series presented both hard and soft features, anchored by Brinkley's wry commentary, and was critically praised. Unfortunately, it was originally scheduled on Fridays opposite Dallas on CBS, and finished at the bottom of the ratings heap almost every week. A midseason shift of time slots to Saturdays at 10:00 P.M., a chronic weak spot for NBC, helped little. NBC Magazine with David Brinkley finished 97th—out of 97 series—in the 1980–1981 Nielsen ratings; nevertheless, it was renewed for another season. In the fall of 1981 the show suffered an even greater setback: the loss of David Brinkley, who ended a thirty-eight-year career with NBC and signed with ABC. The show carried on with an abbreviated title (NBC Magazine was doubtlessly a wiser choice than NBC Magazine without David Brinkley) in another luckless time slot, opposite The Dukes of Hazzard on CBS. With or without Brinkley, NBC Magazine marked the network's fifth attempt since 1969 to establish a successful magazine series (see also First Tuesday, Chronolog, Weekend, and Prime Time Sunday); undaunted, NBC tried again in 1983 with a new effort, Monitor.

THE NBC MYSTERY MOVIE/THE NBC SUNDAY MYSTERY MOVIE/ THE NBC WEDNESDAY MYSTERY MOVIE NBC

These were the umbrella titles for the several multipart series that ran on NBC between 1971 and 1977. The composition changed slightly each year. In the fall of 1971 The NBC Mystery Movie included Columbo, McCloud, and McMillan and Wife. Two umbrella series were featured in the fall of 1972: The NBC Sunday Mystery Movie (Columbo, McCloud, McMillan and Wife, and Hec Ramsey) and The NBC Wednesday Mystery Movie, which introduced three new crime shows: Banacek, Cool Million, and Madigan. The composition of The NBC Sunday Mystery Movie remained intact during the 1973–1974 season, but The NBC Wednesday Movie presented Banacek and three newcomers: Faraday and Company, The Snoop Sisters, and Tenafly. By the fall of 1974 The NBC Wednesday Movie was gone entirely, but The NBC Sunday Mystery Movie carried on for three more seasons. Columbo, McCloud, and McMillan and Wife shared space with a new fourth member each season—Amy Prentiss in 1974–1975, McCoy in 1975–1976, and Quincy in 1976–1977 (Quincy was given its own regular slot partway through the 1976–1977 season). See individual titles for details.

NBC NEWS NBC

16 FEBRUARY 1948– Nightly newscasts on the NBC television network began in February 1948 with The Camel Newsreel Theatre, a ten-minute Fox Movietone Newsreel sponsored by Camel Cigarettes; earlier, the network had experimented with a fifteen-minute weekly newscast, NBC Television Newsroom (also known as The Esso Newsreel). The Camel Newsreel Theatre lasted a year; on 14 February 1949 John Cameron Swayze took the helm of The Camel News Caravan, a nightly fifteen-minute broadcast. Like most of television's early newscasters, Swayze had worked in radio for several years before switching to the new medium. He had appeared on local television in Kansas City as early as 1937. There was little on-the-spot reportage on The Camel News Caravan; the newscasts consisted mainly of Swayze reading the evening's news. Swayze anchored the Monday-through-Friday broadcasts for more than seven and one-half years (during the 1949–1950 season NBC also carried a Saturday-evening newscast, anchored by Leon Pearson); he later hosted a game show (Chance for Romance) and served as commercial spokesman for Timex watches. In 1954 The Camel News Caravan became the first network news show to be broadcast in color (though regular colorcasting did not begin until 15 November 1965).

On 29 October 1956 The Camel News Caravan was succeeded by The Huntley-Brinkley Report, a fifteen-minute newscast coanchored by Chet Huntley and David Brinkley, two NBC newsmen who had been paired up that summer to host the network's coverage of the political conventions. Huntley, a westerner, had worked for several radio stations before joining CBS News in 1939. From 1951 to 1955 he worked for ABC News, earning a Peabody Award in 1953 for his radio reporting; in 1955 he joined NBC. Brinkley, a southerner, joined NBC News in 1943 after a stint with the United Press, and served as a local reporter in Washington during the early 1950s. The Huntley-Brinkley Report soon became television's top-rated news show, and remained in that position for most of its fourteen-year run. Huntley and Brinkley complemented each other almost perfectly, with Huntley's no-nonsense toughness neatly offset by Brinkley's dry and wry wit. Their familiar closing exchange— "Good night, Chet/Good night, David"—was suggested by producer Reuven Frank in order to provide a touch of warmth to the newscast. In real life, however, the two saw little of each other, for Huntley was usually based in New York while Brinkley generally broadcast from Washington. NBC followed CBS's lead in expanding its newscasts from fifteen to thirty minutes in 1963; NBC's initial half-hour show was on 9 September, just a week after CBS's. In 1970 Huntley announced his retirement, and the final Huntley-Brinkley Report was broadcast 31 July 1970. Huntley died in 1974.

After Huntley's departure, the newscast was retitled NBC Nightly News, and seven-nights-a-week broadcasts were inaugurated. The weeknight newscasts were first anchored solely by David Brinkley, but in August of 1971 John Chancellor became the new anchorman. Chancellor, who joined NBC News in 1950, had been a floor correspondent at the 1956 political conventions (when Huntley and Brinkley were upstairs), and later served as a correspondent in Vienna, London, and Moscow before succeeding Dave Garroway as host of the Today show in 1961; in 1964 Chancellor took a leave of absence from NBC to head the Voice of America. Throughout the 1970s Brinkley and Chancellor were teamed together, though Brinkley's role has fluctuated between coanchor and commentator. In October 1979 Brinkley left the coanchor position, and no longer appeared regularly. He moved to ABC in 1981.

John Chancellor remained as the sole anchor until the spring of 1982. NBC reintroduced a dual anchor on 5 April of that year, as Tom Brokaw and Roger Mudd took over. (Chancellor continued to do editorial commentaries on the newscast until his retirement in July 1993). Brokaw had been an NBC news correspondent for many years and had most recently hosted the Today show. Mudd had been a CBS correspondent for many years and had moved to NBC shortly after Dan Rather had been named to replace Walter Cronkite as anchor of The CBS Evening News. Mudd and Brokaw were unable to improve NBC's news ratings substantially, and Mudd quit the anchor desk on 2 September 1983, leaving Brokaw as sole anchor. Though the newscast often finished in third place in the hotly contested evening news ratings game, NBC Nightly News achieved some major successes during the late 1980s, including an exclusive interview in 1986 (by Henry Champ) with Abul Abbas of the Palestine Liberation Front and an exclusive interview (by Brokaw) in November 1987 with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. By lucky coincidence, Brokaw happened to be on assignment in West Germany in the fall of 1989 when the Berlin Wall was opened; Brokaw was the first of the network anchormen to be on the scene for the event. By 1993 NBC Nightly News's ratings had climbed, and the newscast usually finished second in the ratings, behind ABC. In 1993 Brokaw began cohosting a weekly newsmagazine series: see Now.

NBC NEWS AT SUNRISE NBC

1 AUGUST 1983– This early-morning news show was the successor to Early Today. It was first anchored by Connie Chung, a former CBS news reporter who had left that network to anchor a local news broadcast in Los Angeles. Chung anchored the broadcast until March 1986 and returned to CBS News a month later. Bob Jamieson took over for her and remained there until January 1987, when Deborah Norville succeeded him. In September 1989 Norville was moved up to the Today show, as John Palmer (who had read the news on Today) was moved back to replace her on the early broadcast. Faith Daniels, who had previously anchored the early morning news on CBS, succeeded Palmer in June 1990. She was succeeded by Ann Curry in 1991.

NBC NEWS OVERNIGHT NBC

5 JULY 1982–2 DECEMBER 1983 The success of ABC News Nightline led NBC to introduce its own late-late news program. Broadcast Monday through Thursday nights from 1:30 to 2:30 A.M., and Friday nights from 2:00 to 3:00 A.M., the show was originally coanchored by Lloyd Dobyns and Linda Ellerbee. Dobyns left the show in November of 1982 (he subsequently turned up on Monitor and First Camera), and was succeeded by Bill Schechner. After seventeen months of low ratings and meager advertising revenues, NBC News Overnight was laid to rest. The concept was revived in 1991: see Nightside.

NBC NOVELS FOR TELEVISION NBC

14 FEBRUARY 1979–21 MARCH 1979 An umbrella title for a group of miniseries, each of which was based on a best-selling novel. The show led off with "From Here to Eternity," an adaptation of James Jones's novel, set in Hawaii in 1941. The three-parter featured William Devane as Sergeant Milt Warden; Roy Thinnes as his commanding officer, Captain Holmes; Natalie Wood as Karen Holmes, his wife; Steve Railsback as Private Robert E. Lee Prewitt; Kim Basinger as Lorene, a prostitute; and Peter Boyle as Fatso Judson. The second miniseries was "Studs Lonigan," a three-parter based on James T. Farrell's trilogy chronicling the coming of age of a tough young man in Chicago during the 1920s. Featured were Dan Shor and Harry Hamlin as Studs Lonigan; Charles Durning as his father; Colleen Dewhurst as his mother; and Lisa Pelikan as Lucy, his girlfriend.

NBC REPORTS NBC

12 SEPTEMBER 1972–4 SEPTEMBER 1973 A series of news documentaries, NBC Reports shared a time slot on Tuesdays with First Tuesday and America.

NBC SPORTS IN ACTION NBC

17 JANUARY 1965–5 JUNE 1966 This sports anthology series, hosted by Jim Simpson, was seen both on Sunday afternoons and in prime time.

N.E.T. FESTIVAL NET/PBS

6 DECEMBER 1967–29 SEPTEMBER 1970 Umbrella title for a series of American- and foreign-produced hour-long programs devoted to the arts.

N.E.T. JOURNAL NET/PBS

1966–1970 Umbrella title for a series of documentaries.

N.E.T. PLAYHOUSE NET/PBS

9 OCTOBER 1966–24 JANUARY 1972 Dramatic anthology series. The premiere telecast was "Ten Blocks on the Camino Real" by Tennessee Williams.

N.F.L. MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL ABC

21 SEPTEMBER 1970– ABC took a gamble in 1970 when it chose to experiment with coverage of a professional football game on Monday nights during the fall; professional football had not been played regularly on that night previously. It was reported that the network paid $8 million for the Monday-night rights, but the gamble paid off. For most seasons a trio of broadcasters has handled the games, but occasionally a duo or quartet has been used. Keith Jackson, Don Meredith, and ABC's ubiquitous sportscaster, Howard Cosell, handled the chores during the 1970–1971 season. In the fall of 1971 former New York Giants running back Frank Gifford replaced Jackson, joining Meredith and Cosell; that group stayed together for two more seasons. In the fall of 1974 Meredith left to try his hand at acting and was replaced by former defensive back Fred Williamson; Williamson was replaced later that season by Alex Karras, an ex-lineman for the Detroit Lions. Karras, Gifford, and Cosell were featured during the 1975 and 1976 seasons as well. In the fall of 1977, however, Don Meredith returned, replacing Karras. Fran Tarkenton was added in the fall of 1979 and stayed for two seasons. In 1983 former Buffalo Bills running back O. J. Simpson joined Meredith, Cosell, and Gifford. Cosell retired after the 1983 season, but did not fade quietly away. In his 1985 autobiography, I Never Played the Game, he managed to criticize most of his broadcasting compatriots (citing Gifford's propensity for on-the-air gaffes, Meredith's lack of preparation, and Simpson's insecurity) while gloating over the fact that the show's ratings slipped the year after he departed ("the telecasts were dreadful," he observed). Another book disclosed that Cosell's off-the-air nicknames for Gifford and Meredith were "The Mannequin" and "The Imbecile."

Simpson, Meredith, and Gifford carried on for the 1984 season, after which Meredith left. Former New York Jets quarterback Joe Namath joined Simpson and Gifford for the 1985 season. In 1986 the network experimented with a duo in the broadcast booth—Frank Gifford (who now did the color commentary) and Al Michaels (doing the play-by-play). For the 1987 season former St. Louis Cardinal lineman Dan Dierdorf joined them; that trio remained together through the end of the decade, and into the 1990s, becoming a quartet during the 1988 season when ex-Pittsburgh Steeler receiver Lynn Swann was added.

N.O.P.D. SYNDICATED

1956 N.O.P.D. stood for the New Orleans Police Department in this low-budget crime show, starring Stacy Harris as Detective Beaujac and Lou Sirgo as Detective Conroy, who was on leave from the department. Frank Phares produced the series, which was filmed on location; thirty-nine episodes were made.

N.Y.P.D. ABC

5 SEPTEMBER 1967–16 SEPTEMBER 1969 Filmed on location in New York, N.Y.P.D. was produced by Talent Associates and was filmed with the cooperation of the real N.Y.P.D., the New York Police Department. Most of the filming was done with 16-millimeter cameras. The half-hour show starred Jack Warden as Detective Lieutenant Mike Haines; Frank Converse as Detective Johnny Corso; and Robert Hooks as Detective Jeff Ward.

NYPD BLUE ABC

21 SEPTEMBER 1993– Steven Bochco's police drama attracted controversy even before it premiered, as word leaked out of its steamy sex scenes and coarse language. Some fifty-seven ABC affiliates initially declined to carry the show, though eighteen relented during the first season. The series was highly acclaimed and proved popular, finishing a surprisingly high nineteenth in the Nielsen ratings after its first season, despite the lack of nationwide clearance. Set in New York, the hour drama starred David Caruso as Detective John Kelly, a troubled hero, and Dennis Franz as his older partner, Detective Andy Sipowicz, who battled his own demons, including alcohol. Caruso quickly became a major star, but left the series early in its second season after his demands for a hefty salary increase were not met. He was replaced in November 1994 by Jimmy Smits as Sipowicz's new partner, Detective Bobby Simone, who had previously worked on the police commissioner's personal staff. Also featured were James McDaniel as the boss, Lieutenant Arthur Fancy; Sherry Stringfield (1993–1994) as Kelly's ex-wife, Laura Hughes Kelly, a lawyer; Amy Brenneman (1993–fall 1994) as rookie Officer Janice Licalsi, who had an affair with Kelly and was later convicted of homicide; Nicholas Turturro as young detective James Martinez; Sharon Lawrence as assistant district attorney Sylvia Costas, who became involved with Sipowicz and married him in the spring of 1995 (in an early episode, before their romance, Sipowicz had called her a "pissy little bitch"); Gail O'Grady as administrative assistant Donna Abandando; Gordon Clapp as Detective Greg Medavoy; Wendy Makkena as Detective Sharon LaSalle; Justine Micelli as Detective Adrienne Lesniak; Debra Messing (1994– ) as Donna's sister, Dana Abandando; Kim Delaney (1995– ) as Detective Diane Russell; and Bill Brochtrup (1995– ) as receptionist John Irvin.

Caruso's departure did not hurt NYPD Blue's ratings, which rose to seventh place during its second season. The series was nominated for 26 Emmys in 1994, a record for a first-year program.

NAKED CITY ABC

30 SEPTEMBER 1958–29 SEPTEMBER 1959; 12 OCTOBER 1960–11 SEPTEMBER 1963 Filmed entirely on location in New York, this popular crime show began as a half-hour series in 1958 and ran for one season. It returned after a season's absence in an hour-long format, which ran for three seasons. The first cast included James Franciscus as Detective Jim Halloran of the Sixty-fifth Precinct; John McIntire as Lieutenant Dan Muldoon, his superior; and Harry Bellaver as Sergeant Frank Arcaro. Suzanne Storrs was occasionally featured as Halloran's wife, Janet. McIntire left the series in March of 1959 and was replaced by Horace McMahon as Lieutenant Mike Parker. When Naked City returned in the fall of 1960, Bellaver and McMahon returned with it, Paul Burke was introduced as Detective Adam Flint, and Nancy Malone was featured as Flint's girlfriend, Libby. Naked City's famous tag line ("There are eight million stories in the naked city; this has been one of them") was first used in the 1948 film from which the series was derived. The title of the film and the series was taken from a book of photographs published by Arthur H. Fellig, better known as "Weegee." Herbert B. Leonard was the executive producer of the series, and some of the many guest stars who appeared were Robert Redford ("Tombstone for a Derelict," 5 April 1961), Dustin Hoffman ("Sweet Prince of Delancey Street," 7 June 1961, his first major TV role), Peter Fonda ("The Night the Saints Lost Their Halos," 17 January 1962, his first major TV role), Sandy Dennis ("Idylls of a Running Back," 26 September 1962, her first major TV role), and Jon Voight ("Alive and Still a Second Lieutenant," 6 March 1963, his first major TV role).

NAKED HOLLYWOOD A&E

28 JULY 1991–1 SEPTEMBER 1991 An unflattering six-part documentary series on the entertainment industry's movers and shakers, produced by the British Broadcasting Company. Portions of one BBC segment, focusing on film producers Don Simpson and Jerry Bruckheimer, were not televised in the A&E version.

THE NAKED TRUTH ABC

13 SEPTEMBER 1995– Half-hour sitcom starring Tea Leoni as Nora Wilde, who spurned a lucrative divorce settlement and found work as a photographer for a tabloid newspaper. Also featured were Holland Taylor as her boss, Camilla Dane, editor of The Comet; Jonathan Penner as fellow photographer Nicky Columbus; Amy Ryan as Chloe, the adult daughter of Nora's ex-husband; and Jack Blessing as Nora's landlord, Earl Donner.

NAKIA ABC

21 SEPTEMBER 1974–28 DECEMBER 1974 Hour-long crime show starring Robert Forster as Nakia Parker, a Navajo who was a deputy sheriff in New Mexico. With Arthur Kennedy as Sheriff Sam Jericho; Taylor Lacher as Hubbell Martin, another deputy; and Gloria DeHaven as Irene James, also a deputy. Charles Larson was executive producer of the series, which was filmed largely on location.

THE NAME DROPPERS NBC

29 SEPTEMBER 1969–27 MARCH 1970 Daytime game show cohosted by Los Angeles disc jockeys Al Lohman and Roger Barkley. The object of the game was for selected members of the studio audience to determine which of the three celebrity guest panelists was related to the "name dropper," a guest who described his or her relationship to the celebrity (without, of course, divulging which of the celebs was the "correct" relative).

THE NAME OF THE GAME NBC

20 SEPTEMBER 1968–10 SEPTEMBER 1971 This ninety-minute crime show was a tripartite series: Each of the three stars appeared every third week. It starred Gene Barry as Glenn Howard, publisher of Crime magazine; Tony Franciosa as investigative correspondent Jeff Dillon; Robert Stack as senior editor Dan Farrell, a former FBI agent. Also featured were Susan Saint James as Peggy Maxwell, their research assistant; Ben Murphy (1968–1970) as Dan's assistant, Joe Sample; Cliff Potter as Andy Hill, a young correspondent; and Mark Miller as reporter Ross Craig. Each of the three costars selected his own producer: Richard Irving produced the Barry episodes, E. Jack Neuman (and, later, Leslie Stevens) the Franciosa episodes, and David Victor the Stack episodes. In a 1969 article TV Guide reported that the series was the most expensive in the history of television, budgeted at $400,000 per episode. The pilot for the series, "Fame Is the Name of the Game," starring Tony Franciosa and Susan Saint James, was telecast 26 November 1966.

NAME THAT TUNE NBC/CBS/SYNDICATED

6 JULY 1953–14 JUNE 1954 (NBC); 2 SEPTEMBER 1954–19 OCTOBER 1959 (CBS); 1970 (SYNDICATED); 29 JULY 1974–3 JANUARY 1975 (NBC); 1974–1980 (SYNDICATED); 3 JANUARY 1977–10 JUNE 1977 (NBC) The best known of the musical identification game shows, Name That Tune has been presented in several different formats over the years. Created by Harry Salter, the show first appeared as a prime-time series in the summer of 1953, with Red Benson as host. When it switched networks the following season, Bill Cullen became the host; he was succeeded in 1955 by George DeWitt. At that time the show featured two contestants, who stood at one side of the stage while the orchestra played a musical selection; the contestant who could identify it then raced across the stage and rang a bell (female contestants were placed closer to the bell than male contestants). The winner of that round then tried to identify several songs within a specified time period. After an eleven-year absence a syndicated version of the show appeared in 1970 with Richard Hayes as host. In 1974 both a new network and a new syndicated version appeared. The network version was a daytime show, hosted by Dennis James; the syndicated show was emceed by Tom Kennedy. Both versions added two new features: the "Bid-a-Note" round, in which the contestants challenged each other to identify a song from as few notes as possible, and the "Golden Medley," in which the winning contestant tried to identify seven songs in thirty seconds. In 1976 the syndicated version was retitled The $100,000 Name That Tune—a contestant who won the "Golden Medley" could return to try to identify a "mystery tune" for a grand prize of $10,000 a year for the next ten years. When the series was revived for network television again in 1977, Tom Kennedy hosted; top prize on that daytime effort was $25,000. In the fall of 1977 vocalist Kathie Lee Johnson was added to the syndicated version and a playoff system was devised to award the grand prize. Ralph Edwards was the executive producer of the 1970s versions.

NAME YOUR ADVENTURE NBC

12 SEPTEMBER 1992–2 SEPTEMBER 1995 This Saturday morning series gave youngsters who wrote in to the show the opportunity to live out their fantasies, which might include meeting famous persons or going on an adventure. Mario Lopez and Jordan Brady were the cohosts.

THE NAME'S THE SAME ABC

5 DECEMBER 1951–7 OCTOBER 1955 On this prime-time game show a celebrity panel tried to discern the names of the contestants; each contestant's name was the same as that of a well-known personality or famous event. The show was first hosted by Robert Q. Lewis, and then by Dennis James, Clifton Fadiman, and finally by Bob (Elliott) and Ray (Goulding).

NANCY NBC

17 SEPTEMBER 1970–7 JANUARY 1971 Insipid sitcom about the daughter of the President, who, while vacationing in Iowa, met and married a Center City veterinarian. With Renne Jarrett as Nancy Smith; John Fink as Adam Hudson, the vet; Celeste Holm as Abby Townsend, Nancy's official chaperone (and the press secretary of the President's wife); Robert F. Simon as Adam's Uncle Everett; William Bassett as Agent Turner of the Secret Service; Ernesto Macias as Agent Rodriquez; and Eddie Applegate as Willie, a local reporter. Sidney Sheldon created and produced the half-hour series.

See THE HARDY BOYS/NANCY DREW MYSTERIES

THE NANCY WALKER SHOW ABC

30 SEPTEMBER 1976–23 DECEMBER 1976 Half-hour sitcom starring Nancy Walker as Nancy Kitteridge, a Hollywood talent agent. Also featured were William Daniels as her husband, Kenneth Kitteridge, a Merchant Marine commander who had just retired after being at sea for most of their twenty-nine years of marriage; Beverly Archer as their forlorn daughter, Loraine; and Ken Olfson as Terry Folsom, their gay boarder, a struggling actor. Produced by Norman Lear's T.A.T. Communications, the series was canceled in midseason. Walker returned a few weeks later in a new (and equally unsuccessful) sitcom, Blansky's Beauties.

THE NANNY CBS

3 NOVEMBER 1993– Fran Drescher starred in this half-hour sitcom as native New Yorker Fran Fine, who lost her job at a Flushing bridal shop and found work as a nanny for a wealthy Manhattan widower. Also featured were Charles Shaughnessy as her boss, Maxwell Sheffield; Lauren Lane as Maxwell's lusty business associate, Cece Babcock; Daniel Davis as Niles the butler; Nicholle Tom as older daughter, Maggie; Benjamin Salisbury as son, Brighton; Madeline Zima as younger daughter, Gracie; and Ann Guilbert (1994– ) as Fran's grandmother, Yetta. Guilbert is best known for her role as Millie Helper on The Dick Van Dyke Show (when she went by Ann Morgan Guilbert). Occasionally featured were Renee Taylor (1994– ) as Fran's mother Sylvia; and Rachel Chagall (1995– ) as Fran's pal, Val.

NANNY AND THE PROFESSOR ABC

21 JANUARY 1970–27 DECEMBER 1971 Half-hour sitcom starring Juliet Mills as Phoebe Figalilly, better known as Nanny, housekeeper and governess to a widowed professor and his three children. Gifted with mysterious powers, Nanny attributed her abilities to "a little bit of faith and lots of love." Also featured were Richard Long as Professor Howard Everett; David Doremus as son Hal; Trent Lehman as son Butch; and Kim Richards as daughter Prudence. Elsa Lanchester joined the cast in the fall of 1971 as Nanny's Aunt Henrietta. Charles B. FitzSimmons produced the series.

NASHVILLE 99 CBS

1 APRIL 1977–22 APRIL 1977 Hour-long crime show starring Claude Akins as Lieutenant Stoney Huff of the Nashville Police Department. With Jerry Reed as his sidekick, Detective Trace Mayne; Lucille Benson as Stoney's mother, Birdie Huff. Ernie Frankel created the miniseries and was its executive producer.

NASHVILLE ON THE ROAD SYNDICATED

1976 Country-and-western music show, taped on location around the country.

NASHVILLE PALACE NBC

24 OCTOBER 1981–28 NOVEMBER 1981; 3 JULY 1982–7 AUGUST 1982 This hour variety show, consisting mostly of country-and-western music and comedy skits, was taped at the Nashville Palace Theater; inexplicably, it was scheduled on Saturdays at 9:00 p.m., immediately following NBC's other hour of country-and-western music and comedy, Barbara Mandrell and the Mandrell Sisters. Viewers seemed to have tired quickly of the format, as Nashville Palace was the first announced cancellation of the 1981–1982 season. Featured were Slim Pickens, Lynn Hancock, Chuck Bulot, Terri Gardner, Harry Murphy, Kent Perkins, Donna Siegel, Wendy Suits, and the Dixie Dozen Dancers.

NASTY BOYS NBC

19 FEBRUARY 1990–22 JULY 1990 The title characters of this hour crime show comprised a special undercover unit of the North Las Vegas Narcotics Bureau (such a unit actually existed). The Boys wore ninja hoods while in action to aviod identification, and the unit was permitted to keep one half of all assets seized for use in subsequent operations. With Jeff Kaake as Paul Morrisey; Benjamin Bratt as Officer Eduardo Cruz; Don Franklin as Officer Alex Wheeler; Craig Hurley as Officer Danny Larsen; James Pax as Officer Jimmy Kee; Dennis Franz as the boss, Lieutenant Stan Krieger; Nia Peeples as Eduardo's wife, Serena Cruz; and Sandy McPeak as Chief Bradley.

THE NAT KING COLE SHOW NBC

5 NOVEMBER 1956–24 JUNE 1957; 2 JULY 1957–17 DECEMBER 1957 Nat King Cole, the popular black pianist and singer, appeared frequently as a guest star on variety shows during the 1950s. In the fall of 1956 he was given his own fifteen-minute show, broadcast on Mondays before the network news. In the summer of 1957 he was shifted to a half-hour slot on Tuesdays at 10:00 P.M., and in September he was given the 7:30 P.M. slot that night. The Nelson Riddle Orchestra and the Randy Van Horne Singers were featured on all three shows. Sadly, Cole's show failed to attract a nationwide sponsor and was dropped in midseason. Though it was reported that potential sponsors feared a southern boycott, it should be noted that several NBC affiliates in the North as well as the South declined to carry the show. Cole's show is sometimes described as the first network variety program hosted by a black performer, but in fact Cole was preceded by Hazel Scott and Billy Daniels. In any event, it was not until 1966 that a black performer—Sammy Davis, Jr.—again hosted a network variety series.

NATIONAL BARN DANCE ABC

21 FEBRUARY 1949–7 NOVEMBER 1949 Also known as ABC Barn Dance, this half-hour musical series was the television version of the long-running radio series that began locally in Chicago in 1924 and was broadcast nationally beginning in 1933. John Dolce hosted most of the television broadcasts.

NATIONAL BOWLING CHAMPIONS NBC

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC EXPLORER NICKELODEON/WTBS

7 APRIL 1985–11 JANUARY 1986 (NICKELODEON); 2 FEBRUARY 1986– Magazine show produced by National Geographic magazine. The series was originally seen in a three-hour format on Nickelodeon and was reduced first to two hours, and later to one hour, when it switched to WTBS.

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC SPECIALS CBS/ABC/PBS

1964–1973 (CBS); 1973–1975 (ABC); 1975– (PBS) Produced in cooperation with the National Geographic Society, this long-running series of specials on biological, historical, and cultural subjects was first produced by Wolper Productions, later by Metromedia, and again by Wolper. Approximately four new specials are produced each year. Joseph Campanella narrated many of the specials on CBS, and E. G. Marshall has narrated most of those on PBS.

NATIONAL VELVET NBC

18 SEPTEMBER 1960–10 SEPTEMBER 1962 Based on the 1944 film (which had starred Elizabeth Taylor) about a young girl who trained her horse for the Grand National Steeplechase, this half-hour dramatic series starred Lori Martin as Velvet Brown; Arthur Space as her father, Herbert Brown; Ann Doran as her mother, Martha Brown; James McCallion as Mi Taylor, the Browns' handyman; Carole Wells as Edwina, Velvet's sister; and Joey Scott as Donald, Velvet's brother. Rudy Abel produced the series.

THE NATION'S FUTURE NBC

12 NOVEMBER 1960–16 SEPTEMBER 1961 John K. M. McCaffery was the moderator of this Saturday-night public affairs program, which presented debates on topical issues. Edwin Newman succeeded McCaffery as moderator in June 1961. Irving Gitlin was the producer.

NATURE PBS

10 OCTOBER 1982– An hour series of documentaries on biological subjects. The series led off with the three-part "Flight of the Condor," a lyrical look at the great bird's travels through the South American continent.

THE NATURE OF THINGS NBC

NAVY LOG CBS/ABC

20 SEPTEMBER 1955–25 SEPTEMBER 1956 (CBS); 17 OCTOBER 1956–25 SEPTEMBER 1958 (ABC) A half-hour anthology series about Navy life, Navy Log was produced by Simeon G. Gallu, Jr. The show's opening, in which 2,000 sailors formed the words "Navy Log," was filmed aboard the U.S.S. Hancock. James Cagney made a very rare TV appearance as host of one episode, "The Lonely Watch," aired 9 January 1958; the episode starred Clint Eastwood, in one of his first television roles.

NEARLY DEPARTED NBC

10 APRIL 1989–8 MAY 1989 Former Monty Python trouper Eric Idle stepped down to the world of the mundane sitcom in this update of Topper. Idle and Caroline McWilliams played Grant and Claire Pritchard, a deceased couple who continued to inhabit their old house and made life difficult for the new owners, the Dooleys. Also featured were Stuart Pankin as Mike Dooley; Wendy Schaal as Liz Dooley; Jay Lambert as their son, Derek; and Henderson Forsythe as Grampa, the only person who could see or hear the two ghosts.

NED AND STACEY FOX

11 SEPTEMBER 1995– An updated version of 1966's Occasional Wife, Ned and Stacey was a half-hour sitcom about an ambitious New York ad executive who won a promotion by telling his boss he was getting married; he then found someone who agreed to marry him so that she could have a place to live. The cast included Thomas Haden Church (late of Wings) as adman Ned Dorsey; Debra Messing as his new wife, Stacey Colbert, a reporter for the Village Voice; Greg Germann and Nadia Dajani as Ned's friends Eric and Amanda Moyer; Harry Goz as Stacey's dad, Saul Colbert; Dori Brenner as Stacey's mom, Ellen Colbert; and Alan Oppenheimer as Ned's boss, Spencer Haywood.

NED BLESSING: THE STORY OF MY LIFE & TIMES CBS

18 AUGUST 1993–15 SEPTEMBER 1993 Atmospheric western, narrated by the elderly title character who looked back on his days as a lawman while he awaited his execution. With Brad Johnson as Ned Blessing, who had returned to the town of Plum Creek to care for his father; Tim Scott as the deputy, Sticks Packwood; Luis Avalos as Crescencio Salas; Bill McKinney as bad guy Verlon Borgers, who was struck deaf and blind; Rob Campbell as his son, Roby; Brenda Bakke as Wren; Richard Riehle as Judge Longley; Rusty Schwimmer as Big Emma; and Wes Studi as One Horse, the Native American. The title character had been introduced in a TV-movie, "Ned Blessing" (14 April 1992, CBS), which starred Daniel Baldwin and was based on the Larry McMurtry novel.

NEEDLES AND PINS NBC

21 SEPTEMBER 1973–28 DECEMBER 1973 Half-hour sitcom set in New York's garment district. With Deirdre Lenihan (a newcomer to television) as Wendy Nelson, a designer from Nebraska who got a job at Lorelei Fashions; Norman Fell as her boss, Nathan Davidson; Louis Nye as Davidson's dilettante brother-in-law, Harry Karp; Sandra Deel as Sonia Baker, the bookkeeper; Bernie Kopell as Charlie Miller, the salesman; Larry Gelman as Max Popkin, the cutter; Alex Henteloff as Myron, the patternmaker; and Milton Selzer as Singer, Davidson's chief competitor. David Gerber was executive producer of the series, and Hy Averback produced and directed it.

THE NEIGHBORS ABC

29 DECEMBER 1975–9 APRIL 1976 Silly game show on which five neighbors exchanged gossip about each other for the chance to win prizes. Regis Philbin, assisted by Jane Nelson, was the host, and Bill Carruthers the executive producer of this short-lived daytime show.

NERO WOLFE NBC

16 JANUARY 1981–25 AUGUST 1981 Rex Stout's reclusive detective came to television in this hour series. It featured William Conrad as Nero Wolfe, the epicurean private eye who preferred to stay put in his West 35th Street townhouse; Lee Horsley as his energetic legman, Archie Goodwin; George Voskovec as the butler, Fritz Brenner; Robert Coote as horticulturist Theodore Horstman, who helped Wolfe tend his orchid collection; George Wyner as Wolfe's investigator, Saul Panzer; and Allan Miller as Inspector Cramer of the New York Police Department. Ivan Goff and Ben Roberts were the executive producers for Paramount TV.

NEVER TOO YOUNG ABC

27 SEPTEMBER 1965–24 JUNE 1966 This daytime serial focused on a group of active teenagers and their harried parents. Set at Malibu Beach, the cast included: Michael Blodgett as Tad; Cindy Carol as Susan; Pat Connolly as Barbara; Tony Dow (late of Leave It to Beaver) as Chet; Robin Grace as Joy; John Lupton as Frank; Tommy Rettig (formerly of Lassie) as JoJo; David Watson as Alfie; and Patrice Wymore as Rhoda. Though Never Too Young failed in its attempt to attract teenaged viewers to a continuing drama, its successor in the late-afternoon time slot—Dark Shadows—performed admirably.

THE NEW ADAM 12 SYNDICATED

1990–1991 A new version of the 1968–1975 crime show, with Peter Parros as Officer Gus Grant and Ethan Wayne as his partner, Officer Matt Doyle, two uniformed members of the Los Angeles Police Department who shared a patrol car. Also featured was Miguel Fernandes as Sergeant Harry Santos.

THE NEW ADVENTURES OF GILLIGAN ABC
7 SEPTEMBER 1974–4 SEPTEMBER 1977 Saturday-morning cartoon show based on the 1964 sitcom, Gilligan's Island (see also that title). Five members of the Gilligan's Island cast—Bob Denver, Alan Hale, Jr., Jim Backus, Natalie Schafer, and Russell Johnson—lent their voices to the animated production, and two new voices—those of Jane Webb and Jane Edwards—were added. Norm Prescott and Lou Scheimer were the executive producers. See also Gilligan's Planet.

THE NEW ADVENTURES OF HUCKLEBERRY FINN NBC
15 SEPTEMBER 1968–7 SEPTEMBER 1969 This half-hour Sunday-night series bore almost no resemblance to Mark Twain's classic. The series combined live action with animated sequences, and its premise was that Huck, Tom, Becky, and Joe had been caught in a time warp and were trying to find their way through time and space back to Missouri. With Kevin Schultz as Tom Sawyer; Michael Shea as Huck Finn; Lu Ann Haslam as Becky Thatcher; and Ted Cassidy as Injun Joe. The show was a Hanna-Barbera production.

THE NEW ADVENTURES OF MADELINE ABC
9 SEPTEMBER 1995–21 OCTOBER 1995 Short-lived half-hour Saturday morning cartoon show based on the characters created by author Ludwig Bemelman: French schoolgirl Madeline, her eleven schoolmates, and the little boy who lived next door, Pepito (son of the Spanish ambassador). Christopher Plummer narrated.

THE NEW ADVENTURES OF MIGHTY MOUSE AND HECKLE AND JECKLE CBS
8 SEPTEMBER 1979–12 SEPTEMBER 1982 Mighty Mouse, the caped rodent who left network TV in 1967, returned in a series of new cartoon adventures, in which he battled his nemesis, Oilcan Harry, to save the honor of Pearl Pureheart. Other segments on the Saturday-morning series included new adventures of Heckle and Jeckle, the mischievous crows, and Quacula, a vampirish duck. See also Heckle and Jeckle; The Mighty Mouse Playhouse.

THE NEW ADVENTURES OF WINNIE THE POOH ABC
10 SEPTEMBER 1988–2 SEPTEMBER 1989; 8 SEPTEMBER 1990–23 JANUARY 1993 Saturday-morning cartoon series from Disney Studios, featuring the characterrs from the A. A. Milne books: Winnie the Pooh, Piglet, Owl, Kanga and Roo, Rabbit, Eeyore, and Tigger. Jim Cummings supplied the voice of Pooh, and Paul Winchell (one of TV's early stars) that of Tigger. The series had been broadcast on The Disney Channel before coming to ABC in 1988. During the 1989–1990 season it merged with a second Disney series: see The Gummi Bears.

THE NEW ANDY GRIFFITH SHOW CBS
8 JANUARY 1971–21 MAY 1971 The New Andy Griffith Show was the title given to the series that began in the fall of 1970 as Headmaster and changed formats in midseason. Griffith had played an educator on Headmaster; in the new format he played a role more similar to that he'd played on The Andy Griffith Show—the mayor of a small town in North Carolina. Featured were Andy Griffith as Andy Sawyer; Lee Meriwether as his wife, Lee Sawyer; Marty McCall as their son, T. J.; Lori Ann Rutherford as their daughter, Lori; Glen Ash as town councilman Buff McKnight; and Ann Morgan Guilbert as Nora, Lee's unmarried sister.

NEW KIDS ON THE BLOCK ABC

8 SEPTEMBER 1990–27 JULY 1991 The phenomenally popular teen singing group came to Saturday-morning television in this show, which blended bits of live action and concert footage into a mostly animated story line. The five New Kids—Donnie Wahlberg, Jordan Knight, Jonathan Knight, Joe McIntyre, and Danny Wood—appeared as themselves. See also Guys Next Door.

A NEW KIND OF FAMILY ABC

16 SEPTEMBER 1979–21 OCTOBER 1979 One of the first casualties of the 1979– 1980 season, this was a half-hour comedy about two families—a widow with three kids, and a divorcée with one child—who ended up renting the same house. With Eileen Brennan as Kit Flanagan, the widow, who moved west from New York; Gwynne Gilford as Abby Stone, the divorcée, who was starting law school; David Hollander as Andy Flanagan; Lauri Hendler as Hillary Flanagan; Rob Lowe as Tony Flanagan; Connie Ann Hearn as Jill Stone; and Chuck McCann as next-door neighbor Harold Zimmerman. Margie Gordon and Jane Eisner created the series and were its executive producers. A few episodes were later shown, with Telma Hopkins (replacing Gilford) as Jessie Ashton, and Janet Jackson as her daughter, JoJo.

THE NEW LAND ABC

14 SEPTEMBER 1974–19 OCTOBER 1974 This hour-long family drama, set in Minnesota in 1858, collapsed early in the season under competition from CBS's All in the Family and NBC's Emergency! It featured Scott Thomas as Christian Larsen, the head of a family of Swedish immigrants; Bonnie Bedelia as his wife, Anna Larsen; Todd Lookinland as their son, Tuliff; Debbie Lytton as their daughter, Annaliese; Kurt Russell as Christian's brother, Bo Larsen; Donald Moffat as Lundstrom; Gwen Arner as Molly, Lundstrom's wife; and Lew Frizzell as Murdock. William Blinn was the executive producer and Philip Leacock the producer for Warner Brothers Television.

THE NEW LASSIE SYNDICATED

1989–1991 After a fifteen-year hiatus, television's favorite collie returned to the screen in a series of new adventures. This time Lassie lived in the suburbs with the McCulloch family. The human cast included Will Nipper as Lassie's ten-year-old master, Will; Christopher Stone as his father, Chris; Dee Wallace Stone (Christopher Stone's real-life wife) as his mother, Dee; Wendy Cox as his sister, Megan; and Jon Provost (who, of course, had played Timmy in the old Lassie series) as Uncle Steve.

THE NEW LEAVE IT TO BEAVER DISNEY/WTBS

1985–1986 (DISNEY); 1986–1989 (WTBS) The success of the 1983 TV-movie Still the Beaver led to this revival of the classic family sitcom Leave It to Beaver, which featured several members of the original cast. The new series starred Jerry Mathers as Theodore "Beaver" Cleaver, now divorced with two sons of his own and living (temporarily) at home; Tony Dow as Wally Cleaver, now a successful attorney, married to his high school sweetheart; Barbara Billingsley as their mother, June Cleaver, now a widow; Kipp Marcus as Ward "Kip" Cleaver, Beaver's older son; John Snee as Oliver Cleaver, Beaver's younger son; Janice Kent as Mary Ellen Rogers Cleaver, Wally's wife; Kaleena Kiff as their daughter, Kelly Cleaver; Troy Davidson (1987–1989) as their young son, Kevin Cleaver; Ken Osmond as Beaver's old nemesis, Eddie Haskell, still sleazy, now a contractor; Ellen Maxted as Eddie's wife, Gert; Eric Osmond (Ken Osmond's real-life son) as Eddie's son Freddie Haskell (known as Eddie Jr. during the first season); Christian Osmond (also Ken Osmond's real-life son) as Eddie's son Bomber Haskell; and Frank Bank as Clarence "Lumpy" Rutherford. The series was titled Still the Beaver on The Disney Channel.

Like most sequels and remakes, The New Leave It to Beaver pales in comparison to the original.

THE NEW LORETTA YOUNG SHOW CBS

24 SEPTEMBER 1962–18 MARCH 1963 Loretta Young starred in this continuing comedy-drama as Christine Massey, a recently widowed writer with seven children who got a job with a New York magazine; in the last episode Christine married her editor. Also featured were James Philbrook as Paul Belzer, the editor; Celia Kaye as Marnie, the oldest child; Dack Rambo as Peter; Dirk Rambo as Peter's twin brother, Paul; Beverly Washburn as Vickie; Carol Sydes as Binkie; Sandy Descher as Judy; and Tracy Stratford as Maria, the youngest.

THE NEW MONKEES SYNDICATED

1987 A short-lived, unsuccessful remake of the 1966 series. As before, a nationwide search was undertaken to find the four "New Monkees": Marty Ross, Dino Kovas, Larry Saltis, and Jared Chandler were ultimately selected. The new group lived in a mansion, with a butler named Manford (Gordon Oas-Heim), and ate at a nearby diner, with a waitress named Rita (Bess Motta). Also featured on the series was Helen, a disembodied pair of lips that appeared on video screens throughout the mansion; Lynne Godfrey provided the voice.

THE NEW ODD COUPLE ABC

29 OCTOBER 1982–25 FEBRUARY 1983; 13 MAY 1983–16 JUNE 1983 This half-hour sitcom was, of course, a remake of The Odd Couple, the popular 1970s comedy about two divorced men sharing a New York apartment. This time around, however, the principal players were black: Ron Glass as fashion photographer Felix Unger; Demond Wilson as sportswriter Oscar Madison; and Sheila Anderson and Ronalda Douglas as their neighbors, sisters Cecily and Gwendolyn Pigeon. John Schuck (who is white) was also featured as their friend, police officer Murray Greshler. Unfortunately, though the cast of The New Odd Couple may have been "new," the stories were not: the show's producer conceded in November of 1982 that seven of the series' first thirteen scripts had been recycled from the original Odd Couple.

THE NEW PEOPLE ABC

22 SEPTEMBER 1969–12 JANUARY 1970 This forty-five-minute continuing drama was the companion to The Music Scene, a forty-five-minute variety series that preceded it on Mondays. The New People told the implausible story of a planeload of American young people who crash landed on a remote Pacific island; the island was conveniently outfitted with structures, supplies, and provisions, because it had been designated as a nuclear test site but abandoned before any tests were ever made. The cast included: Peter Ratray as George Potter, the group's unofficial leader; Tiffany Bolling as Susan Bradley; Zooey Hall as Bob Lee; Jill Jaress as Ginny Loomis; David Moses as Gene Washington; Dennis Olivieri as Stanley Gabriel; Clive Clerk as Jack; and Donna Bacalla as Wendy. Though the youngsters were supposedly isolated from the rest of the world, guest stars managed to appear almost every week; one of them was Richard Dreyfuss, who was featured in the 29 September episode. Aaron Spelling and Harold Gast were the producers.

THE NEW PERRY MASON CBS

16 SEPTEMBER 1973–27 JANUARY 1974 An unsuccessful remake of television's most famous courtroom show, The New Perry Mason lasted about one-twentieth as long as the old Perry Mason. The new cast included Monte Markham as Perry Mason; Sharon Acker as his secretary, Della Street; Albert Stratton as investigator Paul Drake; Harry Guardino as prosecutor Hamilton Burger; Dane Clark as Lieutenant Arthur Tragg; and Brett Somers as Perry's receptionist, Gertie. Ernie Frankel and Art Seid, who had both been associated with the old Perry Mason, were the producers of the new version for 20th Century-Fox Television.

THE NEW PHIL SILVERS SHOW CBS

28 SEPTEMBER 1963–27 JUNE 1964 Phil Silvers's "new" show was a lot like his "old" show, You'll Never Get Rich. In this half-hour sitcom he played Harry Grafton, a plant foreman for a large corporation. Always on the lookout for a get-rich-quick scheme, Grafton and his crew of stooges never seemed to find the elusive pot of gold. The cast also included: Stafford Repp as Grafton's boss, Mr. Brink; Jim Shane as Lester; Herbie Faye (who had also played one of the enlistees on You'll Never Get Rich) as Waluska; Steve Mitchell as Starkey; Bob Williams as Bob; Buddy Lester as Nick; Pat Renella as Roxy; and Norm Grabowski as Grabowski. In February of 1964 three new cast members were added as Grafton moved in with his widowed sister: Elena Verdugo as his sister, Audrey; Sandy Descher as her daughter, Susan; and Ronnie Dapo as Andy, Audrey's son.

THE NEW SHMOO NBC

22 SEPTEMBER 1979–1 DECEMBER 1979 Al Capp's amorphous cartoon creation came to Saturday-morning television in this half-hour cartoon series. The Shmoo assisted three teenage journalists who investigated phenomena for Mighty Mysteries Comics. In December 1979 the show became part of the ninety-minute Fred and Barney Meet the Shmoo.

THE NEW SHOW NBC

6 JANUARY 1984–23 MARCH 1984 Lorne Michaels, the first producer of NBC's Saturday Night Live, brought this disappointing comedy-variety show to prime time. Valri Bromfield, Buck Henry, and Dave Thomas were the principal regulars.

THE NEW WKRP IN CINCINNATI — SYNDICATED

1991–1993 The syndicated remake of the 1978–1982 network series WKRP in Cincinnati brought back three of the original cast: Gordon Jump as station manager Arthur Carlson; Frank Bonner as salesman Herb Tarlek; and Richard Sanders as newsman Les Nessman (other original cast members Howard Hesseman and Loni Anderson made guest appearances). Rounding out the cast were Mykelti Williamson (formerly known as Mykel T. Williamson) as program director Donovan Aderhold; Michael Des Barres (1991–1992) and Kathleen Garrett (1991–1992) as morning drive-time deejays Jack Allen and Dana Burns, who were divorced from each other; Hope Alexander-Willis as traffic manager Claire Hartline; Wendy Davis (1991–1992) as receptionist Ronnie Lee; Marla Jeanette Rubinoff (1992–1993) as receptionist Nancy Braithwaite; John Chappell as station engineer Buddy Dornster; Lightfield Lewis as rookie salesman Arthur Carlson, Jr.; Tawny Kitaen as late-night deejay Mona Loveland; and Mark Roberts as Dirk, the security guard.

NEW YORK CONFIDENTIAL — SYNDICATED

1959 Half-hour crime show starring Lee Tracy as crimefighting reporter Lee Cochran.

NEW YORK NEWS — CBS

28 SEPTEMBER 1995–14 DECEMBER 1995 A New York newspaper was the center of this hour drama, which featured Mary Tyler Moore as Louise Felcott, editor-in-chief of the New York Reporter; Gregory Harrison as columnist Jack Reilly; Melina Kanakaredes as reporter Angela Villanova; Joe Morton as managing editor Mitch Cotter; Anthony DeSando as reporter Anthony Amato; Kelli Williams as intern Ellie Molanski; Kevin Chamberlin as Victor the office boy; and Madeline Kahn as gossip columnist Nan Chase.

THE NEW YORK TIMES YOUTH FORUM — DUMONT

14 SEPTEMBER 1952–14 JUNE 1953 This Sunday-evening public affairs program for young people was produced by Al Hollander and moderated by Dorothy Gordon.

NEW YORK UNDERCOVER — FOX

8 SEPTEMBER 1994– Hour crime show set in New York City's Fourth Precinct, with Malik Yoba as Detective J. C. Williams, Michael DeLorenzo as his partner, Detective Eddie Torres, and Patti D'Arbanville-Quinn as the boss, Lieutenant Virginia Cooper. Lauren Velez joined in the fall of 1995 as Detective Nina Moreno. Created by Dick Wolf and Kevin Arkadie, the series was filmed on location.

THE NEW YOU ASKED FOR IT — SYNDICATED

1981–1982 This half-hour series was a remake of the 1950s show You Asked for It, which answered viewers' requests to see the unusual. Rich Little, better known as an impressionist than as an emcee, hosted the new series during its first season; Jack Smith, who had been the second host of the original show, also appeared on the remake to introduce clips from the old show. In the fall of 1982 he succeeded Little as host of the new series. The New You Asked for It also featured a staff of female correspondents, who included Georgette D'Aruba, Adrienne Allyn, Suzanne Childs, Kathy Cronkite (daughter of CBS newsman Walter Cronkite), Alanna Davis, Delaney Delvaney, Leah Erickson, Danielle Folquet, Desiree Goyette, Dale Harimoto, Janet Langhart, Laura Louise, Mattie Majors, and Toni Thomas.

NEW ZOO REVUE SYNDICATED

1972–1975 This half-hour children's show was seen daily in most markets. Created by Barbara Atlas and Douglas Momary (who also appeared as Doug), it introduced viewers to cultural and educational themes principally through musical numbers. Other cast members included Emily Peden as Emily Jo; Yanco Inone as Freddie the Frog; Larri Thomas as Henrietta the Hippo; and former Mouseketeer Sharon Baird as Charlie the Owl. Stephen W. Jahn was the executive producer.

THE NEWCOMERS CBS

12 JULY 1971–6 SEPTEMBER 1971 A summer replacement for The Carol Burnett Show, this lackluster variety hour was hosted by Dave Garroway and featured a group of young professionals: singers David Arlen, Cynthia Clawson, Raul Perez, Gay Perkins, Peggy Sears, and the Californians; comics Joey Garza, Rodney Winfield, and the Good Humor Company.

NEWHART CBS

25 OCTOBER 1982–31 AUGUST 1990 Four years after leaving The Bob Newhart Show, comedian Bob Newhart returned to star in another sitcom. This time he played Dick Loudon, a history buff and the author of several successful "how to" books. He and his wife, Joanna, decided to move to New England; they bought the Stratford Inn in Stratford, Vermont. Also featured were Mary Frann as Dick's wife, Joanna Loudon; Tom Poston as George Utley, the slow-moving, slow-thinking caretaker of the inn; Steven Kampmann (1982–1984) as Kirk Devane, the compulsive liar who ran a cafe-cum-souvenir shop next door; Jennifer Holmes (1982–1983) as Leslie Vanderkellen, a preppy-type who signed on as the maid at the inn; and Julia Duffy (1983–1990) as Stephanie Vanderkellen, Leslie's self-infatuated cousin, who succeeded her as the maid.

Several changes took place in the show's third season (1984–1985): Dick started hosting a talk show on the local television station. Peter Scolari joined the cast as Michael Harris, the trendy young producer of Dick's show, Vermont Today; Michael and Stephanie soon became an item, and were married in November 1987 (their baby, little Stephanie, was born during the show's final season). The Minute Man Cafe changed hands in 1984 also. Its new owners were a bizarre trio of backwoods brothers who had previously appeared only briefly: William Sanderson played Larry, the spokesman of the group; Tony Papenfuss played his brother Darryl, and John Volstad played his other brother Darryl. With such a large cast of regulars, most of the stories soon centered around them; the Stratford Inn seldom seemed to have any guests.

The series' final first-run episode (21 May 1990) yielded several surprises. Alone among the townsfolk, Dick and Joanna refused to sell out to a Japanese developer intent on turning Stratford into a golf course. Five years later the townsfolk returned to Stratford for a reunion; Larry and his brothers had married chatterboxes, and the two Darryls finally uttered their only line of the entire series: "Quiet!" Dick was hit in the head by an errant golf ball and woke up in bed—as Bob Hartley, his character from The Bob Newhart Show. Next to him was his wife Emily Hartley (played by Suzanne Pleshette), also, of course, from the old show—suggesting that the entire Newhart series had simply been a dream of Bob Hartley's.

Newhart was videotaped during its first season and switched to film thereafter. Henry Mancini composed the show's theme. The actual Vermont inn used for the exteriors was The Waybury Inn in East Middlebury.

THE NEWLYWED GAME ABC/SYNDICATED

11 JULY 1966–20 DECEMBER 1974 (ABC); 1977–1980 (SYNDICATED); 13 FEBRUARY 1984–17 FEBRUARY 1984 (ABC); 1985–1990 (SYNDICATED) Bob Eubanks hosted this tasteless but highly successful game show on which four newly married couples compete for prizes. One set of spouses was sent offstage while the remaining set was asked questions and predicted the responses that the offstage spouses would make when asked the same question. Couples whose answers matched won points. The durable series, which ran for eight years in a daytime slot, was also seen in prime time on occasion between 1967 and 1971. The show was created by Chuck Barris, the man responsible for The Dating Game and The Gong Show. Sometimes Eubanks took the show on the road, staging it at shopping malls all around the country. In 1985 the series turned up again, titled The New Newlywed Game. Eubanks continued as host until 1989, when Paul Rodriguez took over. Reviewing the series in 1987, TV Guide dubbed it "the worst piece of sleaze on television today."

THE NEWS AND ITS MEANING CBS
27 AUGUST 1950–24 SEPTEMBER 1950 Five-week, Sunday-night news analysis series hosted by John Daly, who later became head of ABC's news division.

THE NEWS IS THE NEWS NBC
15 JUNE 1983–20 JULY 1983 A feeble attempt at satirizing news shows. Regulars included Michael Davis, Simon Jones, Charlotte Moore, Lynne Thigpen, and Trey Wilson. The half-hour show was broadcast live from New York.

NEWSRADIO NBC
21 MARCH 1995–9 MAY 1995; 3 AUGUST 1995– Half-hour sitcom set at WNYX, an all-news radio station in New York. With Dave Foley as the new news director, Dave Nelson; Phil Hartman as the vain news anchor, Bill McNeal; Stephen Root as station owner Jimmy James; Andy Dick as Matthew, the insecure reporter; Maura Tierney as news writer Lisa Miller; Vicki Lewis as Beth, the secretary; Khandi Alexander as Catherine Duke, Bill's coanchor; and Joe Rogan as Joe, the engineer. Paul Simms created the series.

NEWSWEEK VIEWS THE NEWS DUMONT
7 NOVEMBER 1948–22 MAY 1950 On this prime-time public affairs program, members of the board of editors of Newsweek magazine met to discuss the views and to interview guests. Ernest K. Lindley was the moderator. The show was originally titled Newsweek Analysis.

NEWTON'S APPLE PBS
1983– Principles of science were explained to viewers in this series, produced by KTCA-TV in Minneapolis. The program was first hosted by Ira Flatow, with occasional assistance from his skeleton sidekick, Dead Ernest. David Heil, associate director of The Oregon Museum of Science and Industry, became the host in 1989.

THE NEWZ SYNDICATED
1994–1995 Half-hour daily comedy sketch series, inspired mainly by current events, and performed by Tommy Blaze, Deborah Magdalena, Dan O'Connor, Stan Quash, Brad Sherwood, Nancy Sullivan, Shawn Alex Thompson, and Lou Thornton. Financial difficulties forced the discontinuation of the series early in 1995.

THE NEXT PRESIDENT SYNDICATED
1987–1988 David Frost conducted interviews with the 1988 presidential aspirants on this public affairs series.

THE NEXT STEP BEYOND SYNDICATED
1978 A revival of One Step Beyond, ABC's 1960s anthology series, The Next Step Beyond dwelt on the occult and the supernatural. John Newland returned as host and director, with Collier Young the executive producer, Alan J. Factor producer, and Merwin Gerard writer.

NICHOLAS NICKLEBY SYNDICATED
10 JANUARY 1983–13 JANUARY 1983 The Royal Shakespeare Company's adaptation of Charles Dickens's classic novel was presented on television as a four-part, nine-hour miniseries, produced by the Mobil Showcase Network. The TV version was based directly on the RSC's 1980 stage version, which had been written by David Edgar and directed by Trevor Nunn and John Caird. The RSC's thirty-nine performers played more than 150 roles; as Nicholas, Roger Rees was the only actor to play a single part.

NICHOLS NBC

16 SEPTEMBER 1971–1 AUGUST 1972 Set in Nichols, Arizona, in 1914, this lighthearted western starred James Garner as Nichols, a drifter who returned to his hometown and reluctantly became the sheriff; on the last first-run episode, Nichols was killed, but was replaced by his twin brother. Also featured were Neva Patterson as Ma Ketcham; Margot Kidder as Ruth, the barmaid; John Beck as Ketcham, Ma's son, Ruth's boyfriend; Stuart Margolin as Mitchell, Nichols's deputy; and Paul Hampton as Johnson. Produced by Garner's company, Cherokee Productions, the show was officially titled James Garner as Nichols after October 1971.

THE NICK KENNY SHOW NBC

18 JULY 1951–1 JANUARY 1952 Nick Kenny, radio editor for the New York Mirror, hosted a late-night, fifteen-minute series on which he read poetry, sang a few songs, and interviewed guests.

NIGHT COURT SYNDICATED

1958 Half-hour courtroom drama show, with Jay Jostyn as the presiding judge of a big-city night court session.

NIGHT COURT NBC

4 JANUARY 1984–17 SEPTEMBER 1992 What started out as a Barney Miller–type sitcom set in an urban courtroom, peopled by an endless parade of defendants, litigants, and lawyers, gradually turned into one of TV's bawdiest shows as the stories began to focus on the show's regular characters, most of whom were unmarried. The original cast included Harry Anderson as Judge Harry T. Stone, the young, unorthodox jurist who presided over the night sessions in Manhattan's district court; Karen Austin (spring 1984) as his clerk, Lana Wagner; Paula Kelly (spring 1984) as public defender Liz Williams; John Larroquette as libidinous prosecutor Dan Fielding; Richard Moll as the tall and thick court officer Bull Shannon; and Selma Diamond (1984–1985) as short and acerbic court officer Selma Hacker. In the fall of 1984 Ellen Foley succeeded Kelly as public defender Billie Young (Shelley Hack had originally been hired as the new p.d., but was dropped); Foley in turn was succeeded in 1985 by Markie Post, as public defender Christine Sullivan. Charles Robinson was also added in the fall of 1984, as court clerk Mac Robinson. Selma Diamond died in 1985, and Florence Halop appeared during the 1985–1986 season as Court Officer Florence Kleiner. Halop died in 1986, and Marsha Warfield stepped in as new court officer Roz Russell. Occasionally featured as courtroom regulars were Terry Kiser (1984) as reporter Al Craven; William Utay (1985–1986, 1989–1992) as Phil the derelict; and Bumper Robinson (1985–1986) as Leon the runaway. Rounding out the cast were Mike Finneran as Art, the courthouse's hapless janitor, Denice Kumagai as Quon Le, Mac's wife, John Astin (1990–1992) as Harry's flaky father, Buddy Ryan, and Jolene Lutz (1990–1992) as Lisette Hocheiser, the court reporter. Singer Mel Tormé showed up on a few shows, as himself; in real life he and Harry Anderson were close friends. In February 1990 Christine Sullivan married police officer Tony Giuliano (played by Ray Abruzzo); they later divorced.

NIGHT EDITOR DUMONT

14 MARCH 1954–8 SEPTEMBER 1954 An unusual fifteen-minute show, Night Editor was a series of dramas written, narrated, and starring Hal Burdick. Burdick appeared as the night editor of a newspaper, and began to tell the evening's story; as the tale progressed, Burdick himself then acted out some of the segments as he narrated. Ward Byron produced the show, and Dick Sandwick directed it.

NIGHT GALLERY NBC

16 DECEMBER 1970–14 JANUARY 1973 This anthology series of supernatural tales was introduced in 1970 as one segment of NBC's Four-in-One. In the fall of 1971 it was given its own slot. Rod Serling hosted the show from an art-gallery setting. In the fall of 1972 the show was cut back from sixty to thirty minutes, and Night Gallery vanished in the middle of its third season. Among the many directors who worked on the show was twenty-one-year-old Steven Spielberg, who later directed such colossal films as Jaws and Close Encounters of the Third Kind. Spielberg's first major TV work was directing one of three segments of the "Night Gallery" made-for-TV movie, which aired 8 November 1969.

NIGHT GAMES CBS

14 OCTOBER 1991–12 JUNE 1992 A late-night game show introduced by CBS in 1991 (see also Personals), this one was emceed by Jeff Marder, with help from Luann Lee. A panel of three men and three women evaluated each other in various categories, and the couple with the most points won a date together.

NIGHT HEAT CBS

31 JANUARY 1985–13 SEPTEMBER 1991 The longest-running of CBS's several late-night action series of the late 1980s, Night Heat was an atmospheric crime show, filmed largely on location in Toronto, and, appropriately, largely at night. In its original plans for the late-night slot, CBS had considered following real New York City police officers around (an idea subsequently employed on Fox's Cops), but ultimately agreed to the more traditional fiction format proposed by producers Sonny Grosso (himself a former New York cop) and Larry Jacobson. To help achieve a gritty look, and to keep expenses down, the producers used sixteen-millimeter film and relied heavily on hand-held camera techniques. The series was jointly financed by CBS, the Canadian network CTV, and the Canadian government; CTV aired it in prime time. CBS also gave the series brief exposure in prime time, airing it at 10 P.M. on Tuesdays from 4 August to 8 September 1987. A total of ninety-six episodes were produced.

Night Heat's principal characters were two big-city cops assigned to the Major Case Squad of the Mid-South Precinct, and the journalist who wrote about them in his "Night Heat" column for the city paper. Scott Hylands played veteran detective Kevin O'Brien; Jeff Wincott was his young partner, Detective Frank Giambone; and Allan Royal was the reporter, Tom Kirkwood, who also did the voiceover at the end of each episode. Other regulars included Susan Hogan as Nicole Rimbaud, Kevin's girlfriend; Sean McCann as the boss, Lieutenant Jim Hogan; Wendy Crewson (1985) as prosecutor Dorothy Fredericks; Lynda Mason Green (1985) as Detective Fleece Toland; Louise Vallance (1985–1986) as Detective Stevie Brodie; Deborah Grover as prosecutor Elaine Jeffers; Laura Robinson (1985–1988) as Detective Christine Meadows; Eugene Clark as Detective Colby Burns; Stephen Mendel as Detective Freddie Carson; and Tony Rosato as snitch Whitey Low.

NIGHT MUSIC SYNDICATED

1987–1990 An hour musical series, intended for late-night time slots on Sunday evenings. The emphasis was truly on music, as the series showcased many serious musicians from the worlds of jazz and rock in live performance; some vintage clips were also telecast. The show was originally cohosted by jazz saxophonist David Sanborn and rocker Jools Holland; Sanborn later became the sole host. Lorne Michaels (of Saturday Night Live) was executive producer. The series was officially titled Michelob Presents Sunday Night during its first season and Michelob Presents Night Music thereafter.

THE NIGHT STALKER ABC

13 SEPTEMBER 1974–30 AUGUST 1975 This hour-long fantasy series starred Darren McGavin as Carl Kolchak, a gritty reporter for the Independent News Service who stalked a new and mysterious murderer each week, whether it be Jack the Ripper, a swamp monster, a vampire, a werewolf, or an invisible force. Also featured were Simon Oakland as Kolchak's disbelieving boss, Tony Vincenzo; Jack Grinnage as Ron Updyke, another reporter for I.N.S.; Ruth McDevitt as Emily Cowles, author of the advice-to-the-lovelorn column; John Fiedler as Gordy Spangler; and Carol Ann Susi as Monique Marmelstein. The series was ordered into production after two successful made-for-TV movies, "The Night Stalker" (17 March 1972) and "The Night Strangler" (16 January 1973). Twenty one-hour episodes were filmed; Darren McGavin was executive producer, and Paul Playdon and Cy Chermak the producers.

NIGHT STAND WITH DICK DIETRICK SYNDICATED

1995– TV's sleazy talk shows were long overdue for a spoof, which was accomplished by this weekly series. Timothy Stack played Dick Dietrick, the not-too-bright host of his own talk show, Night Stand with Dick Dietrick. The show's guests were played by actors, as were the audience members who asked questions of them. Each hour show was comprised of two half-hour spoofs.

NIGHTINGALES NBC

21 JANUARY 1989–26 APRIL 1989 An hour medical series from Aaron Spelling and Douglas S. Cramer about five student nurses. With Suzanne Pleshette as Chris Broderick, director of student nursing at Wilshire Community Hospital; Barry Newman as Dr. Garrett Braden, the chief of staff; Susan Walters as Bridget Loring, who entered the program as part of a witness protection program; Kristy Swanson as Rebecca, fresh from Missouri; Chelsea Field as Samantha, a recovering alcoholic; Roxann Biggs as Yolanda Puente; Kim Ulrich as Allyson; and Fran Bennett as Head Nurse Ritt. Gil Gerard appeared occasionally as Chris's ex-husband, Paul Petrillo. The five nursing students—Bridget, Rebecca, Samantha, Yolanda, and Allyson—resided at the Nightingale Residence Hall, where they seemed to do a lot of aerobics and clothing changes. Professional nursing organizations sharply criticized the show for its Charlie's Angels–type excesses. The pilot for the series was a two-hour TV-movie broadcast 27 June 1988.

NIGHTLIFE ABC

8 MARCH 1965–12 NOVEMBER 1965 This late-night talk show was the successor to The Les Crane Show, ABC's first attempt to compete with NBC's Johnny Carson. The show featured a different guest host each week for the first few months, but by late June Les Crane was back in the host's chair, assisted by Nipsey Russell and the Elliott Lawrence Orchestra.

NIGHTMARE CAFE NBC

29 JANUARY 1992; 28 FEBRUARY 1992–3 APRIL 1992 An hour fantasy series, created by Wes Craven and Thomas Braun. Each episode centered on a person who had been selected by a "higher authority" to have the chance to relive a crucial moment in his or her life. The situation was explained to the selectees at the All-Night Cafe, a mysterious bistro whose neon sign was then transformed into the Nightmare Cafe. The regulars included Robert Englund (the star of Craven's numerous Nightmare on Elm Street films) as Blackie, the apparent proprietor of the cafe, and Jack Coleman and Lindsay Frost as Frank Nolan and Fay Fiernovic, the central characters in the premiere telecast who then stayed on at the café.

NIGHTSIDE NBC

3 NOVEMBER 1991– NBC, which had pioneered the concept of the post-midnight newscast in 1982 with NBC News Overnight, revived it nine years later under this title. The program was produced in Charlotte, North Carolina.

NIGHTTALK WITH JANE WHITNEY

See THE JANE WHITNEY SHOW

9 TO 5 ABC/SYNDICATED

25 MARCH 1982–15 APRIL 1982; 28 SEPTEMBER 1982–27 OCTOBER 1983 (ABC); 1986–1988 (SYNDICATED) This half-hour sitcom was based on the 1980 film about three working women trapped in go-nowhere careers at a large conglomerate. It featured Rita Moreno as Violet Newstead, a section supervisor at Consolidated Companies; Valerie Curtin as Judy Bernley, a new employee; Rachel Dennison as Doralee Rose, a curvaceous but crafty secretary (Dennison's more famous sister, Dolly Parton, had played the role in the film); Jeffrey Tambor (spring 1982) and Peter Bonerz (fall 1982–1983) as their boss, chauvinistic Franklin Hart. Supporting players included Suzanne Stone as Roberta; Mary Farrell as Denise, the receptionist; Peggy Pope as Betty; Ann Weldon as Clair; Peter Hobbs as Mr. O'Malley, an executive vice-president; and Herb Edelman (fall 1982–1983) as salesman Harry Pearlman. During the 1982–1983 season 9 to 5 deemphasized the feminist overtones that had been integral to the film, and the series became indistinguishable from other office sitcoms. At the end of the season executive producers Bruce Gilbert and Jane Fonda (who had also made a rare on-camera appearance in one episode as a night watchperson) left the show; they were succeeded by veteran producer James Komack (who also appeared as a high-level executive). Valerie Curtin also left the show, and several new regulars were added: Leah Ayres as new employee Linda Bowman; George Deloy as handsome salesman Michael Henderson; and Tony La Torre as Violet's young son, Tommy. The changes of personnel went in vain, and 9 to 5 was cancelled after just four episodes of the new season. Dolly Parton wrote and sang the show's theme, except during the spring 1982 tryout, when Phoebe Snow sang it.

20th Century-Fox TV produced new episodes for syndication starting in 1986. Set at a new conglomerate, Barkley Foods International, it brought back Valerie Curtin and Rachel Dennison from the old cast. Joining them were Sally Struthers as divorced secretary Marsha MacMurray Shrimpton; Edward Winter as Doralee's boss, Bud Coleman; Peter Evans as Judy's boss, Russ Merman; Dorian Lopinto (1986–1987) as Marsha's first boss, Charmin Cunningham; and Fred Applegate (1987–1988) as Marsha's new boss, E. Nelson Felb.

10 JUNE 1986–30 DECEMBER 1986 Another in NBC's seemingly endless parade of attempts to establish a prime-time newsmagazine series, 1986 was coanchored by Roger Mudd and Connie Chung. Like its predecessors, it failed to catch on.

90 BRISTOL COURT NBC

5 OCTOBER 1964–4 JANUARY 1965 90 Bristol Court was the umbrella title for three half-hour situation comedies, all set at the same apartment complex in Southern California, and all aired back-to-back on Mondays: Karen; Tom, Dick and Mary; and Harris Against the World. Guy Raymond was featured on all three shows as Cliff Murdock, the handyman. Produced by Revue Studios, it is probably not coincidental that the initials of the umbrella series were NBC. See also Karen; Tom, Dick and Mary; and Harris Against the World.

NO HOLDS BARRED CBS

12 SEPTEMBER 1980–3 OCTOBER 1980 Apparently intended as CBS's answer to NBC's Saturday Night Live and ABC's Fridays, No Holds Barred arrived with little fanfare and vanished before many viewers had had a chance to see it. Kelly Monteith hosted the seventy-minute series, which was aired at 11:30 P.M. on Fridays and consisted of comedy, music, and filmed segments of unusual people.

NO SOAP, RADIO ABC

15 APRIL 1982–13 MAY 1982 This offbeat sitcom may have been inspired by Monty Python's Flying Circus—each episode's storyline was periodically interrupted by seemingly irrelevant blackouts. The half-hour series was set at the Hotel Pelican, and the cast included Steve Guttenberg as Roger, the manager; Hillary Bailey as his assistant, Karen (Brianne Leary had played Sharon the assistant in the first episode); Bill Dana as Mr. Plitzky, a guest; Fran Ryan as Mrs. Belmont, another guest; Jerry Maren as Morris, the bellhop; and Stuart Pankin as Tuttle. Edie McClurg and Joe Baker were also featured in various roles.

NO TIME FOR SERGEANTS ABC

14 SEPTEMBER 1964–6 SEPTEMBER 1965 No Time for Sergeants was a half-hour sitcom based on the movie of the same title, which was based on the play of the same title, which was based on the television show of the same title broadcast on The U.S. Steel Hour 15 March 1955 (it starred Andy Griffith, who repeated his role on stage and on film). The television series starred Sammy Jackson as Private Will Stockdale, a southern lad assigned to Andrews Air Force Base. Also featured were Kevin O'Neal as Private Ben Whitledge; Harry Hickox as Sergeant King; Hayden Rorke as Colonel Farnsworth; Paul Smith as Captain Martin; Laurie Sibbald as Milly Anderson, Stockdale's girlfriend; Andy Clyde as Grandpa Jim Anderson, Milly's grandfather; Michael McDonald as Private Langdon; George Murdock as Captain Krupnick; Greg Benedict as Private Blanchard; and Joey Tata as Private Neddick. The Warner Brothers series, as well as the film, the play, and the original telecast, were all based on Mac Hyman's story.

NO WARNING! NBC

6 APRIL 1958–7 SEPTEMBER 1958 No Warning! was the title given to this series of half-hour suspense dramas produced by Al Simon. Simon had produced a similar series the preceding season, entitled Panic!, and nine Panic! episodes were rerun on No Warning! along with fourteen originals. Westbrook Van Voorhis returned as host and narrator.

NOAH'S ARK NBC

18 SEPTEMBER 1956–26 FEBRUARY 1957 Jack Webb produced this half-hour dramatic series about a pair of veterinarians. It featured Paul Burke as young Dr. Noah McCann; Vic Rodman as Dr. Sam Rinehart, Noah's mentor, who was confined to a wheelchair; and May Winn as their receptionist and nurse, Liz Clark. The series was filmed in color.

NOBLE HOUSE (JAMES CLAVELL'S NOBLE HOUSE) NBC

21 FEBRUARY 1988–24 FEBRUARY 1988 This four-part miniseries, adapted from Clavell's novel about the warring Hong Kong business dynasties, was filmed partly on location. Principal players included Pierce Brosnan as Ian Dunross, "tai-pan," or supreme leader, of Struan and Company, a leading trading company; John Rhys-Davies as Quillan Gornt, his chief rival; Ben Masters as corporate raider Linc Bartlett; Deborah Raffin as Casey Tcholok; Julia Nickson as Orlanda Ramos; Khigh Dhiegh as drug lord Four Finger Wu; Tia Carrere as Wu's mistress, Venus Poon; and Gordon Jackson as Superintendent Armstrong.

NOBODY'S PERFECT ABC

26 JUNE 1980–28 AUGUST 1980 Half-hour sitcom starring Ron Moody as Inspector Roger Hart, a bumbling detective from Scotland Yard who was assigned to San Francisco's 22nd Precinct. Also featured were Cassie Yates as Hart's partner, Detective Jennifer Dempsey; Michael Durrell as the commanding officer, Lieutenant De Gennaro; Renny Roker as Ramsey; Tom Williams as Grauer; and Victor Brandt as Jacobi.

THE NOEL EDMONDS SHOW ABC

23 JUNE 1986–27 JULY 1986 In another of ABC's occasional efforts to develop a late-night series to follow Nightline, BBC Television personality Noel Edmonds was given a one-week tryout in an hour talk show format.

NON FICTION TELEVISION PBS

4 APRIL 1980–2 JULY 1980 A thirteen-week series of documentaries produced by independent filmmakers.

NORBY NBC

5 JANUARY 1955–6 APRIL 1955 This half-hour sitcom starred David Wayne as Pearson Norby, vice president of the First National Bank in Pearl River, New York. Also featured were Joan Lorring as his wife, Helen Norby; Susan Hallaran as their daughter, Diane; Evan Elliott as their son, Hank; Paul Ford as the bank president; Ralph Dunn as Mr. Rudge, another vice president; Janice Mars as Wahleen Johnson, the switchboard operator; and Carol Veazie as Maude Endless. Created by David Swift, the series was the first television show sponsored by Eastman Kodak. It was filmed in color, and exteriors were actually shot in Pearl River, New York. The show's time slot (Wednesdays at 7 p.m., a slot which relatively few network affiliates made available for network broadcasts) was probably the chief factor behind its early cancellation.

NORMAL LIFE CBS

21 MARCH 1990–25 APRIL 1990; 30 MAY 1990–18 JULY 1990 Considering the fact that this series was created for Dweezil and Moon Unit Zappa, two of the children of iconoclastic musician Frank Zappa, Normal Life proved to be a disappointingly trite, and mercifully short-lived, sitcom. The cast included Max Gail as the father, Max Harlow; Cindy Williams as the mother, Anne Harlow; Moon Unit Zappa as daughter Tess, twenty-two; Dweezil Zappa as son Jake, nineteen; Josh Williams as son Ben, thirteen; Bess Meyer as Tess's crony, Prima; Adam Jeffries as Ben's buddy, Raffie; and Jim Staahl as the next-door neighbor, Dr. Bob.

NORMAN CORWIN PRESENTS SYNDICATED

1971 Half-hour dramatic anthology series produced and hosted by Norman Corwin, one of radio's most prolific writers and directors.

NORTH AND SOUTH ABC

3 NOVEMBER 1985–10 NOVEMBER 1985 The top-rated miniseries of the season, North and South was a six-part, twelve-hour, $25 million adaptation of John Jakes's novel of the tensions leading up to the Civil War. The story focused on two familes, the Mains of South Carolina and the Hazards of Pennsylvania. Principal players included Patrick Swayze as Orry Main; James Read as George Hazard; Lesley-Anne Down as Madeline; Robert Guillaume as Frederick Douglass; Inga Swenson as Maude Hazard; Jonathan Frakes as Stanley Hazard; David Carradine as Justin LaMotte; Jean Simmons as Clarissa Main; Genie Francis as Brett Main; Terri Garber as Ashton Main; Kirstie Alley as Virgilia; and (in a small role) Elizabeth Taylor as Mme. Conti, a madam. David L. Wolper was executive producer. A sequel aired in the spring of 1986: see below.

NORTH AND SOUTH, BOOK II ABC

4 MAY 1986–11 MAY 1986 The six-part sequel to North and South, based on John Jakes's novel Love and War, was played out largely on the battlefields of the Civil War. Many of the North and South cast were again featured—Patrick Swayze, James Read, Lesley-Anne Down, Terri Garber, Genie Francis, Jean Simmons, and Kirstie Alley—together with others, including Hal Holbrook as Abraham Lincoln, Lloyd Bridges as Jefferson Davis, James Stewart as Miles Colbert, Morgan Fairchild as Burdetta Halloran, and Nancy Marchand as Dorothea Dix.

NORTHERN EXPOSURE CBS

12 July 1990–30 August 1990; 8 April 1991–9 August 1995 Refreshing hour comedy-drama about a young New York City physician who found himself assigned to a tiny, remote village in Alaska. With Rob Morrow (1990–1995) as Dr. Joel Fleischman, the only doctor in the town of Cicely; Janine Turner as bush pilot Maggie O'Connell, Joel's landlady and possible romantic interest; Barry Corbin as former astronaut Maurice Minnifield, Cicely's principal businessman; Darren E. Burrows as Ed Chigliak, a young Native American who was an expert on contemporary pop culture; John Cullum as the mayor and bar owner, Holling Vincoeur; John Corbett as Chris Stevens, deejay on KBHR, Cicely's radio station; Cynthia Geary as Shelly Tambo, Holling's waitress and girlfriend; Elaine Miles as Marilyn Whirlwind, Joel's phlegmatic, self-appointed assistant; and Peg Phillips as Ruth-Anne Miller, proprietor of the general store. Occasionally featured were Adam Arkin as Adam, the fierce individualist who sometimes cooked at Holling's cafe, the Brick; Valerie Mahaffey as his hypochondriac wife, Eve; and Doug Ballard and Don R. McManus as Ron Bance and Erick Hillman, a gay couple who were married in May 1994.

After three years of kindling, the romantic relationship between Fleischman and O'Connell was finally consummated in February 1993. By the fall of 1994 Rob Morrow had announced his intention to leave the series, and did so in February 1995. By that time Paul Provenza had joined the cast as Cicely's new doctor, Phillip Capra, and Teri Polo had been added as his wife, Michelle Capra.

Much of Northern Exposure's charm was due to the fact that it was filmed on location in Washington. Most exterior shots were filmed in the tiny town of Roslyn, which itself soon became a tourist attraction. Joshua Brand and John Falsey, who had created St. Elsewhere, created the series.

NORTHWEST PASSAGE NBC

14 September 1958–8 September 1959 This half-hour adventure series told the story of Rogers' Rangers during the French and Indian War. Set in upstate (or upcolony) New York in 1754, it starred Keith Larsen as Major Robert Rogers; Buddy Ebsen as Sergeant Hunk Marriner; and Don Burnett as Ensign Towne. The show was produced by M-G-M TV.

NOT FOR HIRE SYNDICATED

1959 Set in Hawaii, this half-hour crime show starred Ralph Meeker as Sergeant Steve Dekker, a criminal investigator for the United States Army. Also featured were Norman Alden, Ken Drake, and Herb Ellis. John Florea produced and directed.

NOT FOR PUBLICATION DUMONT

27 April 1951–27 August 1951; 21 December 1951–27 May 1952 William Adler first starred in this dramatic series as Collins, an investigative reporter for the New York Ledger. When the show began in April of 1951, it was a fifteen-minute series, but it returned to the air in December in a half-hour format, with Jerome Cowan as Collins.

NOT FOR WOMEN ONLY SYNDICATED

1971–1979 Half-hour daytime talk show. First hosted by Barbara Walters, the show began as a local show in New York, titled For Women Only. Hugh Downs later became cohost, and in 1976 Polly Bergen and Frank Field took over as cohosts.

NOT JUST NEWS SYNDICATED

1993– Half-hour informational series for children, hosted by Steve Doocy (1993–1994) and Marty Putz (1994– ).

NOT NECESSARILY THE NEWS HBO

8 January 1983–26 August 1990 Like That Was the Week That Was, Not Necessarily the News lampooned current events, often using actual newsreel footage. Among the show's regular "reporters" have been Stuart Pankin, Anne Bloom, Danny Breen, Mitchell Laurance, Lucy Webb, Rich Hall, Audrie Neenan, Tom Parks, and Annabelle Gurwitch. The series was produced by John Moffitt and was inspired by the British series Not the Nine O'Clock News.

NOTHING BUT THE BEST NBC

7 JULY 1953–13 SEPTEMBER 1953 Eddie Albert hosted this half-hour summer variety series.

NOTHING IN COMMON NBC

2 APRIL 1987–3 JUNE 1987 A Chicago ad agency was the setting of this half-hour sitcom, based on the 1986 film that had starred Jackie Gleason and Tom Hanks. In the TV version Todd Waring starred as young David Basner, head of David Basner & Associates; Bill Macy costarred as his happy-go-lucky father, Max. Other regulars included Wendy Kilbourne as researcher Jacqueline North; Elizabeth Bennett as Victoria Upton-Smythe; Mona Lyden as copywriter Norma Starr; Bill Applebaum as copywriter Mark Glick; Billy Wirth as cameraman Joey D.; Patrick Richwood as student gofer Myron Nipper; Allan Kent as Wally; and Julie Paris as Autumn.

NOTHING IS EASY

See TOGETHER WE STAND

NOTRE DAME FOOTBALL ABC

27 SEPTEMBER 1953–29 NOVEMBER 1953 Broadcast Sunday nights, this seventy-five-minute series consisted of films of the previous day's football game between Notre Dame and its opponent. Harry Wismer did the play-by-play.

NOVA PBS

3 MARCH 1974– High-quality series of filmed documentaries on scientific subjects. Produced at WGBH-TV, Boston, the show receives the cooperation of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Most programs are sixty minutes, though some ninety-minute shows have been aired. A small sample of the series' presentations would include: "How to Create a Junk Food" (26 January 1987); "Can We Make a Better Doctor?" (13 December 1988); "Can You Believe TV Ratings?" (18 February 1992); "Sex and the Single Rhino" (29 December 1992); "The Secrets of the Psychics," with James Randi (19 October 1993); "Little Creatures Who Run the World," with Edward O. Wilson (31 January 1995); and "Mystery of the Senses," with Diane Ackerman (19–22 February 1995).

NOW ABC

23 MARCH 1970–14 SEPTEMBER 1970 A half-hour informational series from ABC News. The first three programs, for example, focused on taxes and were cohosted by financial columnist Sylvia Porter and ABC's economics editor, Louis Rukeyser.

NOW NBC

18 AUGUST 1993–7 SEPTEMBER 1994 Prime-time newsmagazine anchored by Tom Brokaw and Katie Couric. Bob Costas also contributed celebrity interviews.

NOW AND THEN CBS

1 AUGUST 1954–5 SEPTEMBER 1954; 16 JANUARY 1955–26 JUNE 1955 Dr. Frank Baxter, professor of English literature at the University of Southern California, hosted this half-hour Sunday afternoon series of lectures on literature. The show was first televised locally in Los Angeles, and at that time USC offered college credit for the televised course. Dr. Baxter later hosted many television documentaries, including the highly acclaimed "Bell Science Series."

NOW IT CAN BE TOLD SYNDICATED

1991–1992 In addition to hosting a popular daytime talk show, Geraldo Rivera anchored a daily half-hour investigative series for one season. Among the reporters on this program was Geraldo's brother, Craig Rivera.

NOW YOU SEE IT CBS

1 APRIL 1974–13 JUNE 1975; 3 APRIL 1989–14 JULY 1989 On this daytime game show contestants tried to find words hidden within a grid of letters. Jack Narz hosted the first version, Chuck Henry the second.

NOWHERE MAN UPN

28 AUGUST 1995– Reminiscent of The Fugitive, this hour series starred Bruce Greenwood as Thomas Veil, who suddenly found his life turned upside down. A photojournalist, Veil slipped out of an exhibition of his work to a restaurant for a quiet dinner with his wife; returning from the restroom, he found his wife gone and their table occupied by another couple. At home, he found his wife was married to another man. Back at the exhibition, he found that one of his photos, "Hidden Agenda," which showed an execution in a foreign country, was also missing. Gradually, Veil became aware that he was a target of a powerful conspiracy and hit the road, trying to uncover the plot while eluding his pursuers.

NUMBER 96 NBC

10 DECEMBER 1980–2 JANUARY 1981 Sex was the main theme of this hour sitcom, set at 96 Pacific Way, a Southern California apartment complex that catered to singles and swingers. The large cast included: James Murtaugh as recently divorced Roger Busky, a new tenant; Barney Martin as retired navy officer Horace Batterson; John Reilly as the manager, Chick Walden, who was also a two-bit filmmaker; Randee Heller as pianist Marion Quintzel; Greg Mullavey as her husband, architect Max Quintzel (the Quintzels were experimenting with an open marriage); Todd Susman as Nathan Sugarman, a cop; Rosina Widdowson-Reynolds as Nathan's wife, Anthea Bryan, who was trying to dump him; Howard McGillin as baseball player Mark Keaton; Sherry Hursey as his naive wife, Jill Keaton; Jill Choder as nurse Sandy Galloway; Betsy Palmer as Sandy's recently widowed mother, Maureen Galloway; Hilarie Thompson as actress Sharon St. Clair; Maria O'Brien as Sharon's roommate, Ginny Ramirez, a Puerto Rican comic; William Bryan Curran as Dr. Robert Leon, a psychologist who hosted a popular radio program and was a transvestite at home; Christine Jones as Lisa Brendon; Charles Bloom as Lyle the maintenance man; Eddie Barth as Nathan's brother, bartender Lou Sugarman; and Ellen Travolta as Rita, Lou's wife. The show was based on the Australian series of the same title, which had created much controversy because of its use of nudity. The tamer American version didn't last long enough to generate controversy.

NUMBER PLEASE ABC

31 JANUARY 1961–29 DECEMBER 1961 Hosted by Bud Collyer, this daytime game show was similar to the word game, Hangman. The show was a Goodson-Todman production.

NURSE CBS

2 APRIL 1981–7 MAY 1981; 11 NOVEMBER 1981–21 MAY 1982 Michael Learned starred in this hour dramatic series as Mary Benjamin, who returned to her former job as a nurse at Grant Memorial Hospital following the death of her husband. Also featured were Robert Reed as Dr. Adam Rose, her friend and colleague; Christopher Marcantel as Mary's son, Chip, who attended Dartmouth; Hattie Winston as Nurse Toni Gillette; Hortensia Colorado as Nurse Betty La Sada; and Bonnie Hellman as Penny, also a nurse. In the fall of 1981 Dennis Boutsikaris joined the cast as Mary's neighbor, Calvo, a lawyer. Filmed on location in New York, the series was based on the made-for-TV movie "Nurse," which aired 9 April 1980.

THE NURSES CBS

27 SEPTEMBER 1962–7 SEPTEMBER 1965 This hour-long medical drama was produced in New York by Herbert Brodkin. It starred Shirl Conway as Nurse Liz Thorpe, a supervising nurse at Alden Hospital; Zina Bethune as Nurse Gail Lucas, new to the job; Edward Binns as Dr. Kiley; and Stephen Brooks as Dr. Lowry. In the fall of 1964 two new male leads were signed to beef up the show, and the show's title was changed to The Doctors and the Nurses. Joining the cast were Michael Tolan as Dr. Alexander Tazinski and Joseph Campanella as Dr. Ted Steffen. Alan Alda made a rare guest appearance on the series ("Many a Sullivan," 17 January 1963), as did Dustin Hoffman ("The Heroine," 4 May 1965). A daytime serial based on the show ran on ABC beginning in 1965 (see below).

THE NURSES ABC

27 SEPTEMBER 1965–31 MARCH 1967 This half-hour daytime serial was based on the prime-time series of the same title. The cast included: Mary Fickett as Nurse Liz Thorpe; Melinda Plank as Nurse Gail Lucas; Carol Gainer as Donna; Patricia Hyland as Brenda; Judson Laire as Jaimie MacLeod; Mimi Turque as Sandy Feigin; Polly Rowles as Mrs. Grossberg; Darryl Wells as Mike; Arthur Franz as Hugh; Nicholas Pryor as Ken; Dick McMurray as Jake; Sally Gracie as Pat; Joan Wetmore as Martha; and Nat Polen as Dr. Crager.

NURSES NBC

14 SEPTEMBER 1991–2 JULY 1994 The Third Floor West nurses' station at Miami's Community Medical Center was the setting for this unimaginative sitcom. The cast included Stephanie Hodge (1991–1993) as acerbic nurse Sandy Miller, who was divorced; Mary Jo Keenen as phobic nurse Julie Milbury, new on the job; Jeff Altman (1991–1992) as nurse Greg Vincent; Arnetia Walker as head nurse Annie Rollin; Ada Maris as nurse Gina Cuevas, who had immigrated from a Latin American country; Kenneth David Gilman as Dr. Hank Kaplan; Carlos LaCamara as orderly Paco Ortiz; Markus Flanagan (1992–1993) as nurse Luke; David Rasche (1992–1994) as Jack Trenton, a convicted white-collar criminal who was performing his community service obligation by volunteering at the hospital; and Loni Anderson (1993–1994) as hospital administrator Casey MacAfee.

THE NUTT HOUSE NBC

20 SEPTEMBER 1989–1 NOVEMBER 1989 Mel Brooks and Alan Spencer created this farcical sitcom, set at a seedy New York Hotel. With Harvey Korman as Reginald Tarkington, manager of the Nutt House; Cloris Leachman (in two roles) as the Teutonic head housekeeper Ms. Frick, and as dotty Mrs. Nutt, the hotel's elderly owner; Mark Blankfield as Freddy, the nearsighted elevator operator; Molly Hagan as Sally Lonnaneck, Mrs. Nutt's secretary; and Brian McNamara as Charles Nutt III, Mrs. Nutt's playboy grandson.

THE O. HENRY PLAYHOUSE SYNDICATED

1957 The works of O. Henry (the pen name of William Sidney Porter) were the subjects of this half-hour dramatic anthology series, hosted by Thomas Mitchell.

O.K. CRACKERBY! ABC

16 SEPTEMBER 1965–6 JANUARY 1966 Created by Cleveland Amory and Abe Burrows, this half-hour sitcom starred Burl Ives as O.K. Crackerby, a folksy Oklahoman who happened to be the richest man in the world. Also featured were Hal Buckley as St. John Quincy, the Harvard-educated tutor to widower Crackerby's children; Joel Davison as O.K.'s son Hobart; Brooke Adams as O.K.'s daughter Cynthia; Brian Corcoran as O. K., Jr.; Laraine Stephens as Susan Wentworth; and Dick Foran as Slim.

O.S.S. ABC

26 SEPTEMBER 1957–17 MARCH 1958 Stories on this half-hour spy series were gleaned from the files of the O.S.S. (Office of Strategic Services), the American intelligence unit active during World War II. Produced in England by former O.S.S. officer William Eliscu, the half-hour series starred Ron Randell as Captain Frank Hawthorn and Lionel Murton as The Chief.

THE OBJECT IS ABC

30 December 1963–27 March 1964 Dick Clark hosted this daytime game show on which a panel of six, including three celebrities and three studio contestants, tried to identify the names of famous personalities from "object" clues.

OCCASIONAL WIFE NBC

13 September 1966–29 August 1967 Half-hour sitcom from Screen Gems about a young bachelor who landed a job with a company that hired only married men; to overcome the obstacle, he arranged with another tenant in his apartment building, a female art student, to pose as his wife when needed. With Michael Callan as Peter Christopher; Patricia Harty as Greta Patterson; Jack Collins as Peter's boss, Mr. Brahms, president of Brahms Baby Food Company; Joan Tompkins as Mrs. Brahms; and Bryan O'Byrne as Man-in-Middle, the unlucky tenant whose apartment was between Peter's seventh-floor place and Greta's ninth-floor pad. Sara Seegar was occasionally featured as Peter's mother, and Vince Scully narrated the episodes. In real life, Callan and Harty fell in love and were married during the show's run. They were subsequently divorced. In 1983 they were recast in an unsuccessful sitcom pilot, "Young Hearts," as parents.

AN OCEAN APART PBS

16 May 1988–27 June 1988 British journalist David Dimbleby examined British-American relations on this seven-part program.

OCEANQUEST NBC

18 August 1985–15 Septmber 1985 Al Giddings produced and directed this unusual five-part documentary series filmed in all the oceans of the world. Giddings and partner Peter Guber chose to present OceanQuest through the eyes of someone who had never dived before; ultimately they selected former Miss Universe Shawn Weatherly. Giddings taught her to dive, and they spent almost a year aboard the Oz, logging nearly 150,000 miles, exploring coral reefs, polar ice caps, shipwrecks, and all kinds of marine life.

THE ODD COUPLE ABC

24 September 1970–4 July 1975 Based on Neil Simon's play, this half-hour sitcom told the story of a fastidious photographer who shared an apartment with a sloppy sportswriter; the two men had been childhood friends and had renewed their acquaintance after their respective divorces. It starred Tony Randall as tidy Felix Unger and Jack Klugman as messy Oscar Madison. The only other regular who remained with the show for its entire run was Al Molinaro as one of their poker-playing pals, Murray Greshler, a New York cop. Others who came and went included Garry Walberg, Ryan MacDonald, and Larry Gelman as poker pals Speed, Roy, and Vinnie; Monica Evans and Carole Shelley as Cecily and Gwen Pigeon, their daffy neighbors for the first half of the first season (Evans and Shelley had also played the roles in the 1968 motion picture); Joan Hotchkis as Oscar's first female friend, Dr. Nancy Cunningham; Elinor Donahue (1972–1975) as Miriam Welby, their neighbor and Felix's female friend; Penny Marshall (1973–1975) as Myrna Turner, Oscar's secretary; Brett Somers (Jack Klugman's real-life wife) as Blanche, Oscar's ex-wife; and Janis Hansen as Gloria, Felix's ex-wife. Garry Marshall and Sheldon Keller were the executive producers of the series for Paramount Television. In his book celebrating The Odd Couple's twenty-fifth anniversary, author Edward Gross notes that the producers of the series had wanted Art Carney and Martin Balsam as the leads, and that ABC had hoped to land Tony Randall and Mickey Rooney. A cartoon version of the show also ran for one season (see The Oddball Couple) and in 1982 the series was remade with black principals (see The New Odd Couple).

Klugman, Randall, Marshall, and Walberg returned to their roles in "The Odd Couple: Together Again" (24 September 1993, CBS), a two-hour telefilm in which Felix moved back in with Oscar, who was recovering from throat cancer surgery (in real life, Klugman had been stricken with throat cancer).

THE ODDBALL COUPLE ABC

6 SEPTEMBER 1975–3 SEPTEMBER 1977 This Saturday-morning cartoon show was inspired by The Odd Couple; its central characters were Spiffy, a neat cat, and Fleabag, a messy dog, who shared an office as reporters. Produced by David H. DePatie and Friz Freleng, the show consisted entirely of reruns during its second season.

ODYSSEY CBS

6 JANUARY 1957–2 JUNE 1957 This half-hour educational series for children was seen Sunday afternoons. Hosted by CBS newsman Charles Collingwood, it was filmed on location throughout the country and was produced in cooperation with local museums and historical societies; the premiere telecast, for example, was based in Virginia City, Nevada, and told the story of the Comstock Lode. Irving Gitlin was the executive producer, and Fred Freed was script editor for most of the show's run.

ODYSSEY PBS

1980–1981 An hour series of anthropological documentaries.

OF ALL THINGS CBS

23 JULY 1956–24 AUGUST 1956 This daytime variety show was a summer replacement for The Garry Moore Show. It was hosted by Faye Emerson and featured singers Ilene Woods and Jack Haskell.

OF LANDS AND SEAS SYNDICATED

1965–1970 Travelogue, hosted by Colonel John D. Craig.

OF MANY THINGS ABC

OFF THE RACK ABC

15 MARCH 1985–26 APRIL 1985; 9 AUGUST 1985–6 SEPTEMBER 1985 Half-hour sitcom set at a garment factory in Los Angeles. With Edward Asner as Sam Waltman, co-owner of H & W Garments; Eileen Brennan as Kate Halloran, who became Sam's new partner after the death of her husband; Pamela Brull as employee Brenda Patagorski; Dennis Haysbert as employee Cletus Maxwell; Sandy Simpson as designer Skip Wagner; Claudia Wells as Kate's daughter, Shannon, and Cory Yothers as Kate's son, Timothy.

OFF TO SEE THE WIZARD ABC

8 SEPTEMBER 1967–20 SEPTEMBER 1968 This prime-time hour was an anthology series of films for children. It was hosted by cartoon characters from The Wizard of Oz. Though the series only lasted a year, ABC revived the concept of a children's anthology show in the 1970s when it introduced The ABC Afterschool Special.

THE OFFICE CBS

11 MARCH 1995–15 APRIL 1995 Trite sitcom set at the main offices of a package design company, with Valerie Harper as administrative assistant Rita Stone; Andrea Abbate as Mae, a temporary worker who was hired full-time; Kevin Conroy as Steve Gilman; Lisa Darr as executive Natalie Stanton; Kristin Dattilo-Hayward as Deborah, a naive MBA candidate working as a secretary; Gary Dourdan as designer Bobby Harold; Dakin Matthews as the boss, Frank Gerard; and Debra Jo Rupp as Beth, the constantly harried secretary who was also juggling motherhood.

OFFICIAL DETECTIVE SYNDICATED

1957 Produced in cooperation with Official Detective magazine, this half-hour crime show was based on the radio series that began in 1946. Everett Sloane hosted the anthology show on television.

OH, BOY! ABC

16 JULY 1959–3 SEPTEMBER 1959 This British pop music show was imported by ABC for a brief summer run. Regularly featured were such early British rockers as Cliff Richard and Marty Wilde, and one of the 1959 guest stars was Tony Sheridan, who subsequently recorded several sides with the Beatles. Tony Hall hosted the series, and music was supplied by the house band, Lord Rockingham's XI, under the direction of Harry Robinson. The half-hour series was produced by Jack Good, who later helped develop ABC's American rock series, Shindig. Apparently, Oh, Boy! was something less than a smash in this country; reviewing it for the New York Herald Tribune, critic Sid Bakal described it as "an appalling piece of trash."

OH, KAY! ABC

24 FEBRUARY 1951–18 AUGUST 1951 This half-hour variety show was broadcast live from Chicago on Saturday mornings. It was hosted by Kay Westfall and featured Jim Dimitri and David LeWinter. Dan Schuffman produced and directed it.

OH MADELINE ABC

27 SEPTEMBER 1983–15 MAY 1984 Madeline Kahn starred in this half-hour domestic sitcom as Madeline Wayne, a trendy housewife who dabbled in one recreational activity after another. Also featured were James Sloyan as her husband, Charlie Wayne, who wrote romance novels under the pseudonym "Crystal Love"; Louis Giambalvo as Charlie's best friend, Robert, a travel agent; Jesse Welles as Madeline's best friend, Doris, Robert's ex-wife; and Francine Tacker as Annie, Charlie's amorous editor. The series was adapted from a British sitcom, Pig in the Middle.

OH! SUSANNA CBS/ABC

29 SEPTEMBER 1956–11 APRIL 1959 (CBS); 1 OCTOBER 1959–24 MARCH 1960 (ABC) Half-hour sitcom starring Gale Storm as Susanna Pomeroy, social director of the S.S. Ocean Queen, a cruise ship. Also featured were ZaSu Pitts as her cohort, Elvira (Nugey) Nugent, the ship's beautician; Roy Roberts as Captain Huxley; James Fairfax as Cedric, the first mate; Ray Montgomery as the ship's doctor, Dr. Jones; and Joe Cranston as the purser. Created by Lee Karson, the series was produced by Hal Roach, Jr. The series was titled Oh! Susanna during its first two seasons on CBS; in the fall of 1958 it was retitled The Gale Storm Show. Ninety-nine episodes were shown on CBS between 1956 and 1959; in the spring of 1959 ABC acquired the rights to the show and began showing reruns in the daytime; an additional twenty-six first-run episodes were telecast in prime time on ABC during the 1959–1960 season.

OH, THOSE BELLS! CBS

8 MARCH 1962–31 MAY 1962 This half-hour sitcom starred the Wiere brothers (Herbert, Harry, and Sylvester), a German-born comedy trio, as Herbert, Harry, and Sylvester Bell, three employees at a Hollywood theatrical supply house. Also featured were Henry Norell as their boss, Mr. Slocum; Carol Byron as Kitty, the secretary; and Reta Shaw as the Bells' landlady. Ben Brady produced the series of thirteen episodes, which were filmed in 1960.

OHARA ABC

17 JANUARY 1987–30 MAY 1987; 3 OCTOBER 1987–6 AUGUST 1988 This Ohara (no first name) was not Irish, but Japanese-American, and was played by Pat Morita. As the series started, Ohara was a Zen-practicing lieutenant in the Los Angeles Police Department who preferred to use intelligence and intuition to solve his cases (ABC's ads called him the "un-cop"). Other regulars in the hour crime show included Richard Yniguez as Detective Jesse Guerrera; Kevin Conroy as Captain Lloyd Hamilton; Madge Sinclair as Gussie Lemmons; Catherine Keener as Lieutenant Cricket Sideris; and Jon Polito (March–May 1987) as Captain Ross. When the series returned in the fall of 1987 Ohara was assigned to a Federal crime task force. All the old regulars had been jettisoned, Rachel Ticotin joined the cast as assistant district attorney Teresa Storm, and Robert Clohessy became Ohara's new partner, Lieutenant George Shaver. Bruce Beatty appeared as Grillo, and Meagen Fay played Roxy. In March of 1988 yet another format was attempted, as Ohara and Shaver left cop work to become private eyes.

O'HARA, UNITED STATES TREASURY CBS
17 SEPTEMBER 1971–8 SEPTEMBER 1972 Jack Webb produced this hour-long crime show, which starred David Janssen as Treasury Agent Jim O'Hara.

OIL PBS
5 OCTOBER 1987–23 NOVEMBER 1987 The world's petroleum industry was the subject of this eight-part documentary series (coincidentally, the original title of Dynasty was to have been Oil).

OKAY MOTHER DUMONT
1 NOVEMBER 1948–6 JULY 1951 One of TV's first daytime shows, Okay Mother was an audience participation and variety show hosted by Dennis James.

THE OLD AMERICAN BARN DANCE DUMONT
5 JULY 1953–13 SEPTEMBER 1953 Bill Bailey hosted this half-hour country-and-western music show. Among the regulars were Pee Wee King and Tennessee Ernie Ford (who was billed merely as Tennessee Ernie).

OLD FASHIONED MEETING ABC
8 OCTOBER 1950–1 APRIL 1951 Half-hour Sunday-night religious series.

THE OLDEST ROOKIE CBS
16 SEPTEMBER 1987–6 JANUARY 1988 Hour police drama, with Paul Sorvino as Ike Porter, fifty, who decided to give up his career as deputy chief of public affairs to become a detective with the force; D. W. Moffett as Ike's young partner, Detective Tony Jonas; Raymond J. Barry as their commanding officer, Lieutenant Marco Zaga; Marshall Bell as Detective Gordon Lane; and Patrick Cronin as Chief Black.

OLDSMOBILE MUSIC THEATRE NBC
26 MARCH 1959–7 MAY 1959 Bill Hayes and Florence Henderson cohosted this live, half-hour anthology series. Most presentations were musicals.

OMNI: THE NEW FRONTIER SYNDICATED
1981 Half-hour magazine show on science and technology, hosted by Peter Ustinov.

OMNIBUS CBS/ABC/NBC
9 NOVEMBER 1952–1 APRIL 1956 (CBS); 7 OCTOBER 1956–31 MARCH 1957 (ABC); 20 OCTOBER 1957–10 MAY 1959 (NBC) Omnibus was the first major television project underwritten by the Ford Foundation, which in turn offered the show to commercial advertisers. During its seven-year run it was carried by each of the three main commercial networks and was usually telecast Sunday afternoons. Hosted by Alistair Cooke, British by birth but American by choice, the aptly titled series presented everything from dramas to musicals to documentaries; each program usually contained several segments. Presentations during the first season included James Agee's

"Mr. Lincoln," a continuing story that starred Royal Dano as Abraham Lincoln; three Maxwell Anderson plays; Chekhov's "The Bear," with June Havoc and Michael Redgrave (4 January); "Die Fledermaus," with Eugene Ormandy conducting the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra (1 February); Agnes DeMille's ballet, "Three Virgins and the Devil" (broadcast 22 March, the title was changed, at network insistence, to "Three Maidens and the Devil"); and Shaw's "Arms and the Man," with Nanette Fabray and Jean-Pierre Aumont (3 May). A small sample of highlights from later seasons would include selections from the Broadway hit "Oklahoma!" by the original cast (4 October 1953); "King Lear," with Orson Welles in his television dramatic debut (18 October 1953); concerts conducted by Leonard Bernstein (frequent throughout the 1954–1955 and 1955–1956 seasons); documentary films from undersea explorer Jacques Cousteau (featured during the 1956–1957 season); "Oedipus Rex," with Christopher Plummer (6 January 1957); "The Empty Chair," with George C. Scott and Peter Ustinov (7 December 1958); and Gilbert and Sullivan's "H.M.S. Pinafore," with Cyril Ritchard (10 May 1959). Omnibus was first produced by Robert Saudek and was later produced by Fred Rickey. A few additional programs were televised on NBC during the 1960–1961 season on an irregular basis. The program was revived in 1980 as a series of irregularly scheduled specials on ABC; Hal Holbrook hosted one such program on 15 June 1980.

ON BROADWAY TONIGHT CBS

8 JULY 1964–16 SEPTEMBER 1964; 1 JANUARY 1965–12 MARCH 1965 Hour-long variety show hosted by Rudy Vallee; promising young professionals were regularly featured. Irving Mansfield produced the series, which was introduced as a summer replacement for The Danny Kaye Show.

ON GUARD ABC

28 APRIL 1952–29 MAY 1954 A series of half-hour documentary films on America's armed forces, On Guard was one of several "filler" shows scheduled by ABC during the 1950s. Few of the network's affiliates bothered to carry such dry programming, opting instead to carry a syndicated or locally produced show during the time slot when series like On Guard were offered.

ON OUR OWN CBS

9 OCTOBER 1977–20 AUGUST 1978 Half-hour sitcom about two young women who shared an apartment and worked at a Manhattan advertising agency. With Lynnie Greene as Maria Teresa Bonino; Bess Armstrong as her co-worker and roommate, Julia Peters; Gretchen Wyler as their boss at Bedford Advertising, Toni McBain; Dixie Carter as copywriter April Baxter; Dan Resin as salesman Craig Boatwright; and John Christopher Jones as producer Eddie Barnes. David Susskind was the executive producer of the series, which was created by Bob Randall and produced by Sam Denoff. On Our Own was the only primetime dramatic series produced in New York during the 1977–1978 season.

ON OUR OWN ABC

13 SEPTEMBER 1994–28 DECEMBER 1994; 3 MARCH 1995–14 APRIL 1995 Half-hour sitcom built around the six real-life siblings of the Smollett family. Set in St. Louis, it told the story of a group of seven orphaned black children who sought to stay together by outwitting the Department of Children's Services. The cast included Ralph Louis Harris as the eldest sibling, restaurant manager Josh Jerrico, who masqueraded whenever necessary as the kids' guardian, Aunt Jelcinda; JoJo Smollett as Jimi Jerrico; Jazz Smollett as Jai Jerrico; Jussie Smollett as Jesse Jerrico; Jurnee Smollett as Jordee Jerrico; Jake Smollett as Joc Jerrico; Jocqui Smollett as baby Jarreau Jerrico; Kimberley Kates as social worker Alana Michaels, who knew of the kids' scam; Roger Aaron Brown as Alana's officious boss, Gordon Ormsby, who was smitten with Jelcinda; and Rae'ven Kelly as Hannah. When the series returned in March 1995, Josh was finally granted custody of the Jerrico brood, and learned that he was the half-brother of the other six. The household gained another member when T'Keyah "Crystal" Keymah joined the cast as Scotti, a contractor who lived in the house while repairing it.

ON PARADE NBC

24 JULY 1964–18 SEPTEMBER 1964 This half-hour variety series, which had no regulars, was produced in Canada by Norman Sawdawie.

ON STAGE SYNDICATED

1970–1972 This Canadian-produced hour-long anthology series was also seen in the United States; some shows were aired on NBC as specials.

ON STAGE AMERICA SYNDICATED

1984 A two-hour syndicated magazine show consisting of celebrity interviews, home visits, and performance clips, reported by Susie Bono, Todd Christensen, Steve Edwards, and Randi Oakes.

ON THE AIR ABC

20 JUNE 1992–4 JULY 1992 Short-lived half-hour sitcom set in 1957 at the Zoblotnick Broadcasting Company in New York, home of a fictitious TV variety program, "The Lester Guy Show," on which everything usually went wrong. With Miguel Ferrer as network president Buddy Budwaller; Ian Buchanan as star Lester Guy; David L. Lander as the director, Valdja Gochktch; Marla Jeanette Rubinoff as Lester's costar, Betty Hudson; Gary Grossman as Lester's second banana, Bert Schein; Nancye Ferguson as Vladja's assistant, Ruth Trueworthy; Mel Johnson, Jr., as Mickey; Marvin Kaplan as the producer, Mr. McGonigle; Kim McGuire as Buddy's assistant, Nicole; and Tracey Walter as Blinky Watts, a technician with a visual disorder. Mark Frost and David Lynch, who had collaborated on Twin Peaks, created the series.

ON THE BOARDWALK ABC

30 MAY 1954–1 AUGUST 1954 Broadcast from Steel Pier in Atlantic City, New Jersey, this talent show was hosted by bandleader Paul Whiteman.

ON THE GO CBS

27 APRIL 1959–8 JULY 1960 Jack Linkletter, son of Art Linkletter, hosted this daytime variety show from locations throughout the country. The videotaped half-hour series was produced by William Kayden.

ON THE MONEY PBS

11 OCTOBER 1984–17 JANUARY 1985 Thirteen-part self-help series on personal finance.

ON THE ROAD WITH CHARLES KURALT CBS

26 JUNE 1983–23 AUGUST 1983 CBS News correspondent Charles Kuralt hosted this delightful series of vignettes from the back roads and small towns of America. Kuralt's travels took him to such places as Marlboro, South Carolina (to tour a tiny bottling plant), Sharon, Pennsylvania (to watch a shoe salesman at work), and Louisburg, North Carolina (to cover a whistlers' convention). Kuralt began his "On the Road" essays on The CBS Evening News in 1967.

ON THE ROCKS ABC

11 SEPTEMBER 1975–17 MAY 1976 Based on a British sitcom entitled Porridge, this half-hour series was set at Alamesa Prison. The show stirred some controversy late in 1975, when the National Association for Justice asked ABC to cancel the series on the grounds that it painted too rosy a picture of prison life. The network refused to cancel the program at that time, and it was later reported that the show was a hit at many real-life prisons. The show starred José Perez as inmate Hector Fuentes; Bobby Sandler as Nicky Palik; Hal Williams as DeMott; Rick Hurst as Cleaver; Jack Grimes as Baxter; Mel Stewart as Mr. Gibson, one of the officers; Tom Poston as Mr. Sullivan, another officer; and Logan Ramsey as The Warden. Created by Dick Clement and Ian La Frenais, the series was produced by John Rich.

ON TRIAL ABC

22 NOVEMBER 1948–1 JULY 1952 On the first of the three series titled On Trial, issues of public importance were formally debated each week.

ON TRIAL NBC

14 SEPTEMBER 1956–13 SEPTEMBER 1957 The second of the three series titled On Trial was an anthology series of courtroom dramas, hosted by (and occasionally starring) Joseph Cotten. In March 1957 the series was retitled The Joseph Cotten Show.

ON TRIAL SYNDICATED

1988 Another of the several "courtroom" shows of the late 1980s. On Trial was more realistic than the others: it presented actual taped excerpts from real trials. Nick Clooney was the host.

ON YOUR ACCOUNT NBC/CBS

8 JUNE 1953–2 JULY 1954 (NBC); 5 JULY 1954–30 MARCH 1956 (CBS) This daytime game show was similar to Strike It Rich and Queen for a Day: Contestants related their hard-luck stories to a panel, which selected the most deserving candidate at the end of the show. The contestants also earned money by answering questions. The half-hour series was hosted by Eddie Albert (1953), Win Elliot (1953–1954), and Dennis James (1954–1956).

ON YOUR MARK ABC

23 SEPTEMBER 1961–30 DECEMBER 1961 This Saturday-morning game show for children was hosted by Sonny Fox, with help from Johnny Olson. Lloyd Gross produced and directed it. Each week a group of nine-to-thirteen-year-olds were quizzed about their future career hopes.

ON YOUR WAY DUMONT/ABC

9 SEPTEMBER 1953–20 JANUARY 1954 (DUMONT); 23 JANUARY 1954–17 APRIL 1954 (ABC) This nighttime game show began as a quiz show and was first hosted by Bud Collyer. The premise of the show was that the contestants were trying to go somewhere; the contestant who answered the most questions correctly won a trip to his or her destination. When the show switched networks in 1954, it also changed formats and hosts: John Reed King and Kathy Godfrey (sister of Arthur Godfrey) cohosted the show on ABC, and the quiz format was scrapped in favor of a talent contest.

ONCE A HERO ABC

19 SEPTEMBER 1987–3 OCTOBER 1987 Only three episodes of this hour comedy-adventure series were shown. Its premise was interesting—a comic book superhero decides to cross the "Forbidden Zone" into the real world after realizing that people weren't reading his comics anymore. Featured were Jeff Lester as Captain Justice (the Crimson Crusader), who learned to his surprise after crossing the zone that he had no superpowers in the real world; Robert Forster as Gumshoe, the private eye who accompanied Justice from the comic book world; Milo O'Shea as cartoonist Abner Bevis, their creator; Caitlin Clarke as nosy reporter Emma Greely; Josh Blake as Emma's young son, Woody; and Dianne Kay as Captain Justice's girlfriend, Rachel Kirk, who also crossed the Forbidden Zone. Dusty Kay created the series.

ONCE UPON A CLASSIC PBS

9 OCTOBER 1976–5 MAY 1979 Half-hour dramatic anthology series for children, which has presented original stories as well as adaptations of classic tales.

ONCE UPON A TUNE DUMONT

6 MARCH 1951–15 MAY 1951 This hour-long series presented original musicals. Bob Loewi was the producer and Sid Frank the writer.

ONE BIG FAMILY SYNDICATED

1986 Half-hour sitcom starring Danny Thomas as Jake Hatton, an ex-vaudevillian who decided to help raise the five children of his late brother and sister-in-law. Also featured were Anthony Starke as the eldest, twenty-three-year-old Don; Kim Gillingham as Don's wife, Jan; Anastasia Fielding as nineteen-year-old Marianne; Michael DeLuise as seventeen-year-old Brian; Alison McMillan as 14-year-old Kate; and Gabriel Damon as eight-year-old Roger.

ONE DAY AT A TIME CBS

16 DECEMBER 1975–2 SEPTEMBER 1984 This half-hour sitcom began as the story of a divorced mother trying to raise her two teenage daughters; as the kids grew up, the storylines broadened. Bonnie Franklin starred as the divorcée, Ann Romano, who, as the series began, had moved with her two daughters into an apartment in Indianapolis. Mackenzie Phillips and Valerie Bertinelli costarred as the daughters, Julie and Barbara Cooper. Julie, the older one, was headstrong and rebellious, while Barbara was generally well-behaved and popular. Pat Harrington also costarred as the building superintendent, macho Dwayne Schneider, who wore his tool belt like a holster and fancied himself an experienced man of the world. Other regulars included: Richard Masur (1975–November 1976) as neighbor David Kane, a lawyer who was Ann's boyfriend (David landed a job in Los Angeles and asked Ann to marry him, but she refused); Mary Louise Wilson (1976–1977) as neighbor Ginny Wrobliki, a brassy cocktail waitress; John Hillerman and Charles Siebert (both of whom appeared occasionally) as Claude Connors and Jerry Davenport, the principals of Connors & Davenport, an ad agency where Ann found a job; John Putch as Bob Morton, Barbara's loyal boyfriend; and Nanette Fabray as Ann's mother, Katherine Romano (Fabray appeared occasionally until 1979, when she became a regular).

In 1979 Julie Cooper met and married Max Horvath (played by Michael Lembeck), a flight attendant (he would later become a writer). A year later Mackenzie Phillips, who played Julie, was dropped from the show because of her cocaine addiction (she kicked the habit and returned to the show in the fall of 1981; on the show, Max and Julie moved away to Houston during Phillips' absence). In 1980 Ann quit her job at Connors & Davenport to open her own agency; she soon found a partner, Nick Handris (played by Ron Rifkin). Glenn Scarpelli also joined the cast in 1980 as Nick's ten-year-old son, Alex. Rifkin left after one season, but Scarpelli stayed until 1983. In the fall of 1981 it was explained that Nick had been killed in an auto accident, as Alex moved in with Ann and Barbara (super Schneider enlarged the apartment by closing off a room from a vacant adjoining apartment). Ann took in a new partner, Francine Webster (played by Shelley Fabares), who had previously been her rival at Connors & Davenport.

Barbara also found a partner in the fall of 1981, when Boyd Gaines joined the show as dental student Mark Royer. He and Barbara were married in 1982 and later shared a house with Max and Julie (who had moved back to Indianapolis) and their baby daughter, Annie (first played by twins J. C. and R. J. Dilley, later by Lauren and Paige Maloney). Meanwhile, Ann Romano fell in love with her son-in-law's father and married him in the spring of 1983; Howard Hesseman played Mark's father, architect Sam Royer. In the fall of 1983 Mackenzie Phillips was again written out of the show for health reasons; on camera, it was explained simply that Julie had walked out on her husband and young daughter. One Day at a Time was created by Whitney Blake (who had been a regular on Hazel) and Allan Manings, and developed by Norman Lear. Jeff Barry and Nancy Barry composed the show's theme.

ONE HAPPY FAMILY NBC
13 JANUARY 1961–15 SEPTEMBER 1961 Half-hour sitcom about three generations living under one roof. With Dick Sargent and Jody Warner as newlyweds Dick and Penny Cooper; Chick Chandler and Elisabeth Fraser as Penny's parents, Barney and Mildred Hogan; and Jack Kirkwood and Cheerio Meredith as Charley and Lovey Hackett, Penny's grandparents.

100 GRAND ABC
15 SEPTEMBER 1963–29 SEPTEMBER 1963 One of the shortest-lived game shows in TV history, 100 Grand was axed after only three airings. Jack Clark hosted the big money, prime-time show, on which an amateur faced a panel of experts and tried to answer questions posed by them.

THE 100 LIVES OF BLACK JACK SAVAGE NBC
31 MARCH 1991–26 MAY 1991 A joint venture of Stephen J. Cannell Productions and Walt Disney Television, this Sunday-night adventure series was set on a Caribbean island. A 300-year-old pirate, having taken a hundred lives, needed to save a hundred lives to escape eternal damnation; he joined forces with a white collar criminal—a financial pirate—who had fled to the island to escape prosecution. With Daniel Hugh-Kelly as the new arrival, Barry Tarberry; Stoney Jackson (premiere telecast only) and Steven Williams as the pirate, Black Jack Savage; Bert Rosario as Governor General Vasquez, dictator of the island, San Pietro; Roma Downey as Danielle St. Clair, a crusader who tried to thwart Vasquez's misrule; and Steve Hytner as Logan "F.X." Murphy, the inventor of a speedboat used by Tarberry and Savage.

THE $128,000 QUESTION SYNDICATED
1976–1978 The $128,000 Question was a remake of the big-money game show of the 1950s, The $64,000 Question, presumably adjusted for inflation. Like the old show, the new version featured contestants who were experts in a particular field of knowledge. Contestants started at the $64 level, and by answering successive questions correctly, could double their money up to $512. The next question was worth $1,000, and the values of the remaining questions again doubled, up to the limit of $128,000. Mike Darrow hosted the show during its first season and was succeeded by Alex Trebek in 1977. Steve Carlin was the executive producer. See also The $64,000 Question.

ONE IN A MILLION ABC
3 APRIL 1967–16 JUNE 1967 Danny O'Neil hosted this short-lived daytime game show on which contestants tried to guess the unusual secrets held in common by a guest panel.

ONE IN A MILLION ABC
8 JANUARY 1980–23 JUNE 1980 Half-hour sitcom about a Los Angeles cabbie who inherited the chairmanship and controlling financial interest in Grayson Enterprises, a huge conglomerate. With Shirley Hemphill as cabbie-cum-chairperson Shirley Simmons; Richard Paul as Mr. Stone, another Grayson executive; Carl Ballantine as Max, proprietor of Shirley's favorite restaurant; Dorothy Fielding as Nancy, Shirley's secretary; Ralph Wilcox as Duke, a neighborhood street vendor; Keene Curtis as Mr.

Cushing, Grayson's vice chairman and Shirley's chief rival; Mel Stewart as Raymond Simmons, Shirley's father; and Ann Weldon as Edna Simmons, Shirley's stepmother. Alan W. Livingston created the show, and Saul Turteltaub and Bernie Orenstein developed it.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE ABC

15 JULY 1968– This daytime serial was created by Agnes Nixon, who served her apprenticeship on Irna Phillips's The Guiding Light and As the World Turns, and who later created All My Children. Set in the suburban town of Llanview, One Life to Live stressed ethnic situations from the beginning— Jews, WASP's, Poles, and blacks are all well represented. One story line was taped on location at New York's Odyssey House, a drug rehabilitation center. Sold by Nixon to ABC, One Life to Live has been produced by Doris Quinlan, Joseph Stuart, Jean Arley, Paul Rauch, Linda Gottlieb, and Susan Bedsow Morgan. The show expanded from thirty to forty-five minutes on 26 July 1976 and expanded again to sixty minutes on 16 January 1978.

The cast has included: Ernest Graves, Shepperd Strudwick, and Tom O'Rourke as widower Victor Lord, a newspaper publisher; Gillian Spencer, Christine Jones, and Erika Slezak as his daughter, Victoria Lord (Viki was a split personality for a while; her alter ego was Niki Smith); Trish Van Devere and Lynn Benesch as his daughter, Meredith Lord, who died after being surprised by a burglar; Lee Patterson as reporter Joe Riley, who married Vicki (they were divorced and remarried); Patricia Rose and Alice Hirson as Eileen Riley Siegel, Joe's sister; Allan Miller as lawyer Dave Siegel, Eileen's husband, who died of a heart attack; Lee Warrick and Leonie Norton as their daughter, Julie Siegel (Eileen and Julie left Llanview for Florida); Bill Fowler, William Cox, and Tom Berenger as Eileen and Dave's son, Timmy, who died in a fall; David Snell and Jack Ryland as Julie's boyfriend, Jack Lawson; Doris Belack, Kathleen Maguire, and Phyllis Behar as Anna Wolek; Antony Ponzini, Jordan Charney, and Michael Ingram as Anna's brother, Vince Wolek; Paul Tulley, James Storm, and Michael Storm (brother of James) as Anna's brother, Dr. Larry Wolek, whose second wife was Meredith Lord; Niki Flacks, Kathryn Breech, and Judith Light as nurse Karen Martin, Larry's first wife (they later remarried); Terry Logan as murder victim Dr. Ted Hale; Joe Gallison as Tom Edwards; Jan Chasmar as Amy, an orphan; Justin McDonough as District Attorney Bill Kimbrough; Donald Moffat, Norman Rose, and James Douglas as Dr. Marcus Polk, who cured Vicki Lord's personality disorder; Ellen Holly as Carla Gray, a light-skinned black who tried to pass for white (calling herself Carla Benari), but who later married a black cop; Lillian Hayman as Sadie Gray, Carla's mother; Thurman Scott and Peter DeAnda as Dr. Pryce Trainor, a black physician who was interested in Carla; Robert Milli and Nat Polen as Dr. James Craig, a white physician who was also interested in Carla, but later married Anna Wolek; Cathy Burns, Amy Levitt, Jane Alice Brandon, Dorrie Kavanaugh, and Jennifer Harmon as Cathy Craig, daughter of James, who became involved with drugs; John Cullum as Artie Duncan, murdered by a drug-crazed Cathy; Bernie Grant as Steve Burke, who married Vicki Lord Riley (Viki thought Joe Riley had been killed in a car crash, but he turned up alive and remarried her); Millee Taggart as Millie Parks; Francesca James as murder victim Marcy Wade; Lon Sutton and Jack Crowder as Lieutenant Jack Neal; Tommy Lee Jones as Dr. Mark Toland, who married Julie Siegel, and was later shot; Marilyn Chris, Lee Lawson, and Marilyn Chris (again) as waitress Wanda Webb, who wed Vince Wolek; Katherine Glass and Brynn Thayer as Jenny Martin, a novitiate nun who left her order to marry Timmy Siegel just before his death; Nancy Pinkerton, Claire Malis, Robin Strasser, and Elaine Princi as Dr. Dorian Cramer, who married Victor Lord; Al Freeman, Jr., and David Pendleton as Lieutenant Ed Hall, who married Carla Gray (Ed later became involved in politics); Laurence Fishburne and Todd Davis as Joshua West, a youngster adopted by Ed and Carla; George Reinholt, Philip MacHale, and Chip Lucia as Victor Lord's long-lost illegitimate son, Tony Harris; Jacquie Courtney as Pat Ashley (Kendall) Brewster, who married Tony Lord; Stephen Austin as Brian Kendall, illegitimate son of Tony and Pat; Neail Holland, Eddie Moran, Tim Waldrip (later known as Timothy Owen), Steven Culp, Ted Demers, Josh Cox, and Michael Palance as young Danny Wolek, son of Larry and Stickney as Jimmy Glover.

Guest stars on One Life have included Dr. Joyce Brothers (as herself), Walter Slezak (as Laszlo Braedeker, godfather of Viki Lord, played by his real-life daughter), John Beradino (repeating his General Hospital role as Dr. Steve Hardy), William Mooney (repeating his All My Children role as lawyer Paul Martin), and Sammy Davis, Jr. (as Chip Warren). Sharp-eyed viewers could also have spotted Donna Rice (former companion of Senator Gary Hart) in 1985, as Jeannie, a friend of Niki Smith's. Former Search for Tomorrow star Mary Stuart also made an appearance on One Life to Live, as the judge presiding over a murder trial in 1988.

The series received mixed reviews for its tendency to use extended fantasy storylines during the late 1980s. Viewers were treated to such unusual happenings as Vicki Lord Buchanan's out-of-body experiences as she lay on an operating table, Clint Buchanan's time travel to the Wild West of 1888, and the discovery of the lost city of Eterna near Llanview.

ONE MAN'S EXPERIENCE DUMONT

6 OCTOBER 1952–10 APRIL 1953 Literary classics—those that depicted the struggles of men—were serialized each week on this fifteen-minute daytime show. When the series began in 1952, it was telecast back to back with a female-oriented series, One Woman's Experience. Early in 1953 the title was changed to One Man's Story, and the series was seen on an alternating basis with One Woman's Story.

ONE MAN'S FAMILY NBC

4 NOVEMBER 1949–21 JUNE 1952; 1 MARCH 1954–1 APRIL 1955 Created by Carleton E. Morse, One Man's Family was one of radio's most popular continuing dramas; its twenty-seven-year run began in 1932. The show twice came to television, but neither version was particularly popular. The first version was a prime-time show; the cast included Bert Lytell as Henry Barbour, head of the clan, a wealthy stockbroker who lived in San Francisco's Sea Cliff area; Marjorie Gateson as his wife, Frances (Fanny) Barbour; Russell Thorsen as Paul, the eldest of their five children, a writer and aviator; Patricia Robbins and Lillian Schaaf as their daughter Hazel; Nancy Franklin and Eva Marie Saint as their daughter Claudia; Billy Idelson and James Lee as their son Clifford, Claudia's twin; Arthur Casell and Robert Wigginton as their son Jack; Walter Brooke as Hazel's husband, Bill Herbert; Susan Shaw as Beth Holly, Paul's female friend; Madeline Belgard as Teddy Lawton, Paul's adopted daughter; Tony Randall as Mac; Nancy Franklin (in her second role) as Ann Waite; Jim Boles as Joe. In the fall of 1951 at least one member of the Barbour clan was shown pregnant; this pregnancy, which predated Lucy Ricardo's on I Love Lucy, was probably the first involving a continuing character on a prime-time television series. The show, which was done live, was also the first NBC series to use rear-screen projection. In the spring of 1954 the show returned to TV as a daily fifteen-minute serial. At that time the cast included Theodore van Eltz as Henry; Mary Adams as Fanny; Linda Leighton as Hazel; Anne Whitfield as Claudia; Martin Dean as Jack; Jack Edwards as Johnny Roberts, Claudia's boyfriend; Lois Hall as Beth Holly; Glen Vernon as Johnny MacPherson; and Emerson Treacy as Dr. Thompson. Curiously, both of the TV versions of One Man's Family started where the radio program had in 1932, and thus were twenty years behind the radio show. Anne Whitfield, for example, appeared on the second TV version as Claudia, but simultaneously played Claudia's daughter, Penelope, on radio.

THE $1,000,000 CHANCE OF A LIFETIME SYNDICATED

1985 Jim Lange hosted this game show on which two couples competed, trying to identify words as the letters appeared one at a time. Couples who won multiple games had a chance at a super jackpot worth up to one millon dollars.

ONE MINUTE PLEASE DUMONT

6 JULY 1954–17 FEBRUARY 1955 John K. M. McCaffery first hosted this prime-time game show, based on a British series, on which celebrity panelists were required to extemporize for sixty seconds on a given subject. Allyn Edwards succeeded McCaffery in November 1954.

ONE OF A KIND CBS

12 JANUARY 1964–29 MARCH 1964 Harry Reasoner hosted this Sunday-afternoon series of twelve filmed documentaries on subjects of general interest.

ONE OF THE BOYS NBC

23 JANUARY 1982–20 MARCH 1982; 6 AUGUST 1982–20 AUGUST 1982 Mickey Rooney starred in this sitcom as 66-year-old Oliver Nugent, who impulsively decided to leave the Bayview Retirement Home and move in with his college-age grandson. Other regulars included Dana Carvey as the grandson, Adam, who attended Sheffield University; Nathan Lane as Jonathan, Adam's roommate; Francine Beers as the landlady, Mrs. Green; and Scatman Crothers as Bernard Soloman, who became Oliver's partner in a song-and-dance act.

ONE OF THE BOYS NBC

15 APRIL 1989–20 MAY 1989 Sitcom about a waitress who decided to work for a construction company, fell in love with the owner and, by the end of the series' brief run, married him. With Maria Conchita Alonso as Maria Navarro; Robert Clohessy as the boss, Mike Lukowski, owner of Lukowski Construction; Michael DeLuise as Mike's son Luke; Billy Morrissette as Mike's son Steve; Justin Whalin as Mike's son Nick; Amy Aquino as Bernice; and Dan Hedaya as Ernie, the foreman.

ONE ON ONE ABC

25 APRIL 1983–28 JULY 1983 Greg Jackson interviewed newsmakers on this late-night series, broadcast after ABC News Nightline. The distinctive feature of the program was that Jackson was seated just off camera, so that the cameras concentrated on the interviewee. Jackson had used the technique previously on his Signature series, which had aired on the short-lived CBS Cable Channel.

ONE ON ONE WITH JOHN TESH NBC

9 JANUARY 1991–12 JUNE 1992 Half-hour daytime interview series hosted by Entertainment Tonight coanchor John Tesh, with correspondents Sandie Newton, Jill Rappaport, and Jennifer Valoppi. Tesh would cohost a similar series a year later: see Leeza.

ONE STEP BEYOND ABC

20 JANUARY 1959–3 OCTOBER 1961 John Newland directed and hosted this anthology series of tales of the occult and supernatural; the stories were said to have been based on true incidents. Sponsored by Alcoa, the series was also titled Alcoa Presents. A total of ninety-four half-hour episodes were filmed, with Collier Young as producer. Merwin Gerard created the series. In 1978 Newland, Young, and Gerard again combined forces to produce a syndicated successor: see The Next Step Beyond.

1,2,3—GO! NBC

8 OCTOBER 1961–27 MAY 1962 This educational series for children was seen early on Sunday evenings. Each week cohosts Jack Lescoulie and ten-year-old Richard Thomas (who would star in The Waltons eleven years later) explored subjects of interest to young people. Jack Kuney produced the half-hour series.

ONE WEST WAIKIKI CBS/SYNDICATED

4 AUGUST 1994–8 SEPTEMBER 1994 (CBS); 1995– (SYNDICATED) Cheryl Ladd starred in this hour crime show as Dr. Dawn "Holli" Holliday. A female Quincy, Holliday was a medical examiner from Los Angeles who had been called in on a case while attending a conference in Hawaii, and decided to stay there. Also featured were Richard Burgi as Lieutenant Mack Wolfe, a cop who was just back from a suspension; Paul Gleason as Captain David Herzog; Elsie Sniffen as Holli's investigator, Nui Shaw; and Ogie Zulueta as Wolfe's partner, Kimo. Glen A. Larson created the series.

ONE WOMAN'S EXPERIENCE DUMONT

6 OCTOBER 1952–3 APRIL 1953 This fifteen-minute daytime show serialized classics from literature that emphasized the stories of women. It was introduced in 1952 together with its counterpart, One Man's Experience; early in 1953 the shows' titles were changed to One Man's Story and One Woman's Story, and the two were seen on an alternating basis.

THE O'NEILLS DUMONT

6 SEPTEMBER 1949–10 JANUARY 1950 A once-a-week serial, The O'Neills was a short-lived TV version of the radio soap opera that ran from 1934 to 1943. It featured Vera Allen as Peggy O'Neill, a widow; Ian Martin as Uncle Bill; Janice Gilbert as Mrs. O'Neill's daughter, Peggy; Michael Lauson as son Danny O'Neill; Ben Fishbein as family friend Morris Levy, a hardware dealer in the town of Royalton; and Celia Budkin as his wife, Trudy Levy.

ONLY ONE EARTH PBS

7 SEPTEMBER 1987–29 NOVEMBER 1987 A series of documentaries on ecology, narrated by Julian Pettifer.

OPEN ALL NIGHT ABC

28 NOVEMBER 1981–9 JANUARY 1982 This sitcom was set at a "364 Store," a convenience store that was open twenty-four hours a day, 364 days a year, and was patronized by an assortment of zany customers. The cast included George Dzundza as Gordon Feester, the harried manager; Susan Tyrrell as his wife, Gretchen Feester; Sam Whipple as Susan's son, Terry; Jay Tarses (who created the series with Tom Patchett) as Steve, a neighborhood cop; Bever-Leigh Banfield as his partner, Edie; and Bubba Smith as Robbin, the store's night manager.

OPEN END

See THE DAVID SUSSKIND SHOW

OPEN HEARING ABC

1 FEBRUARY 1954–1 JULY 1954; 3 FEBRUARY 1957–4 SEPTEMBER 1960 John Secondari was the host and moderator of this half-hour public affairs program; it was seen on Sunday afternoons during most of its run, though it surfaced in prime time during the 1957–1958 season.

OPEN HOUSE FOX

27 AUGUST 1989–21 JULY 1990 This half-hour sitcom, the successor to Duet, was set at the Juan Verde Real Estate office in southern California. Alison LaPlaca and Mary Page Keller repeated their Duet roles as Linda Phillips and Laura Kelly, both of whom were now real estate brokers. Chris Lemmon appeared occasionally as Linda's husband, Richard, but the couple separated in the middle of the season. New cast members included Philip Charles MacKenzie as Ted Nichols, Linda's rival at the agency; Nick Tate as the boss, Roger McSwain; impressionist Danny Gans as Scott Babylon, the many-voiced broker; and Ellen DeGeneres as Margo van Meter, the dotty receptionist.

OPERA CAMEOS DUMONT

8 NOVEMBER 1953–9 JANUARY 1955 Excerpts from operas were presented on this half-hour series. Giovanni Martinelli was the host and narrator of the series, which began as a local show in New York in 1950.

OPERA VS. JAZZ ABC

25 MAY 1953–21 SEPTEMBER 1953 Though billed as a "symposium," this half-hour series featured little in the way of debate or discussion on jazz or classical music, but instead presented selections from the two genres. Nancy Kenyon was the host, or "moderator," of the series, and Alan Dale and Jan Peerce were regularly featured. Fred Heider produced the series, and Charles Dubin directed it.

OPERATION ENTERTAINMENT ABC

5 JANUARY 1968–26 APRIL 1968; 27 SEPTEMBER 1968–31 JANUARY 1969 This hour-long variety show was staged at a different military base each week and was hosted by a guest star. Regulars included Jim Lange, the Operation Entertainment Girls, and the Terry Gibbs Band. Chuck Barris produced the series.

OPERATION INFORMATION DUMONT

17 JULY 1952–18 SEPTEMBER 1952 This public service series sought to inform veterans of their rights. See also Operation Success (1948–1949 version).

OPERATION NEPTUNE NBC

28 JUNE 1953–16 AUGUST 1953 Created by Maurice Brockhausen, this Sunday-evening children's adventure series starred Tod Griffin as Commander Bill Hollister, skipper of an American submarine, who battled deep-sea evildoers. Richard Holland costarred as Dink.

OPERATION PETTICOAT ABC

17 SEPTEMBER 1977–26 OCTOBER 1978 The story of a group of Army nurses stationed aboard a pink submarine during World War II, Operation Petticoat was based on the 1959 film of the same title. During the 1977–1978 season the large cast included: John Astin as Lieutenant Commander Matthew Sherman, skipper of the Sea Tiger; Richard Gilliland as Lieutenant Nick Holden, the crafty supply officer; Yvonne Wilder as Major Barbara Hayward, chief of the nurses; Melinda Naud as Lieutenant Dolores Crandall; Dorrie Thomson as Lieutenant Colfax; Jamie Lee Curtis as Lieutenant Barbara Duran; Bond Gideon as Lieutenant Claire Reid; Richard Brestoff as Yeoman Hunkle; Christopher J. Brown as Ensign Stovall; Kraig Cassity as Seaman Dooley; Wayne Long as Chief Herbert Molumphrey; Richard Marion as Williams; Michael Mazes as Chief Sam Gossett; Jack Murdock as Tostin; Peter Schuck as Seaman Horwich; Raymond Singer as Watson; Jim Varney as Seaman "Doom and Gloom" Broom; and Jesse Dizon as Ramon Galardo. Leonard B. Stern was the executive producer, David J. O'Connell and Si Rose the producers for Universal. When the show returned for its abortive second season, it featured new producers (Jeff Harris and Bernie Kukoff were the new executive producers, Michael Rhodes the new producer) and an almost entirely new cast. Only Melinda Naud, Richard Brestoff, and Jim Varney remained from the first season, and the new faces included: Robert Hogan as the new skipper, Commander Haller; Randolph Mantooth as Lieutenant Bender, the executive officer; Jo Ann Pflug as Lieutenant O'Hara; Hilary Thompson as Lieutenant Wheeler; Warren Berlinger as Stanley Dobritch; Fred Kareman as Doplos; and Scott McGinnis as Dixon.

OPERATION SUCCESS DUMONT

21 SEPTEMBER 1948–19 OCTOBER 1948; 27 JANUARY 1949–16 JUNE 1949 A public service show in the truest sense of the term, Operation Success was produced by the DuMont network in cooperation with the Veterans Administration. Its goal was to find jobs for disabled veterans. Veterans, doctors, training officers, and guidance officers all appeared on the show, and employers were asked to telephone in with job offers. Apparently, Operation Success was a success—late in 1948 a spokesman for the VA noted that, as a result of the first series, requests for disabled veterans' services had "almost doubled."

1955 Quentin Reynolds interviewed successful business executives on this half-hour public affairs program.

THE OPRAH WINFREY SHOW SYNDICATED

8 SEPTEMBER 1986– The first black woman to host a successful daytime talk show, Oprah Winfrey became one of the most popular, and wealthiest, performers of the 1980s. At age nineteen, she had been a news anchor in Nashville. She later cohosted a local talk show in Baltimore, and moved from there to Chicago, where early in 1984 she became host of another local talk show, A.M. Chicago. Within two months her show had overtaken Donahue (which then also originated from Chicago) in the local ratings. In the fall of 1986 her show was syndicated nationally and proved highly popular. In 1988 Winfrey acquired ownership of her show and purchased a production studio in Chicago. In 1989 TV Guide named her the richest woman on television.

Like most of the other daytime talk shows, The Oprah Winfrey Show concentrates on a single topic each day and is taped before a studio audience, which is encouraged to ask questions. In the words of producer Debra DiMaio, the show is "emotionally oriented." Winfrey frequently hugs her guests and has been known to cry with them, too. Winfrey has also bared much of her personal life on the show, admitting on one program that she had been sexually abused as a child, towing a wagon filled with sixty-seven pounds of animal fat (indicating the amount of weight she had lost) on another, and admitting to past drug abuse on a third. Other shows have tackled serious topics; one memorable 1987 show, focusing on racial prejudice, was taped in virtually all-white Forsyth County, Georgia, site of several anti-integration demonstrations.

In addition to her hour show, Winfrey has also actively pursued other projects. She was nominated for an Academy Award for her first motion picture role, in The Color Purple (1985). In 1987 she taped a sitcom pilot, in which she played a talk show host, but shelved the idea. She was the executive producer and star of the two-part TV-movie "The Women of Brewster Place (19–20 March, ABC), which was made into a limited-run series in which she also starred, Brewster Place, in 1990.

The Oprah Winfrey Show maintained its ratings dominance through the mid-1990s, and survived the departure of several longtime staffers, including producer DiMaio, in 1994.

ORAL ROBERTS SYNDICATED

1954–1967; 1969– Television's best-known Pentecostal evangelist and faith healer, Oral Roberts has been on the air almost continously since 1954, when his show was first telecast on sixteen stations. A year later he began broadcasting from a large tent. Roberts shut down his TV operations in 1967, returning to the air two years later with a revamped program, Oral Roberts and You, which originated first from NBC studios in Burbank and later from Roberts's own facilities in Tulsa, Oklahoma. The latter program also featured his son, Richard Roberts. Though Roberts was unaffected by the scandals that ruined fellow televangelists Jim Bakker and Jimmy Swaggart, he managed to raise a few eyebrows in March 1987 with his pronouncement that God intended to call him "back to Heaven" unless his ministry received an urgently needed $8 million in contributions. When the pledges failed to materialize as hoped, Roberts scaled back his demand and managed to remain on Earth.

THE ORCHID AWARD ABC

24 MAY 1953–24 JANUARY 1954 Each week on this fifteen-minute series a celebrity guest was honored. Ronald Reagan hosted the premiere telecast from Hollywood, presenting the "Orchid Award" to Rosemary Clooney. Thereafter the show was broadcast from New York, with Bert Lytell as host, until July, when Donald Woods became the New York host and Ronald Reagan the Los Angeles host. Harold Romm produced the series and Robert Finkel directed it. Variety noted in 1953 that The Orchid Award was the first show under ABC's new corporate structure to have been fully sold to sponsors before its premiere.

THE OREGON TRAIL NBC

21 SEPTEMBER 1977–30 NOVEMBER 1977 Only six episodes of this hour-long western were telecast. Set along the Oregon Trail in 1842, it starred Rod Taylor as widower Evan Thorpe, a member of the wagon party who became the leader in the first episode. Also featured were Andrew Stevens as Andrew, his seventeen-year-old son; Tony Becker as William, his twelve-year-old son; Gina Marie Smika as Rachel, his seven-year-old daughter; Darleen Carr as Margaret Devlin, one of the passengers; and Charles Napier as Luther Sprague, the scout recruited by Thorpe in the first episode. Michael Gleason was the executive producer, Richard Collins the supervising producer, and Carl Vitale the producer for Universal. The pilot for the series was telecast 10 January 1976.

ORIENT EXPRESS SYNDICATED

1953 Most of the stories on this half-hour filmed dramatic anthology series were set in Europe.

THE OSMOND FAMILY SHOW ABC

28 JANUARY 1979–27 MAY 1979 An hour variety show, the successor to Donny and Marie, The Osmond Family Show featured the performing members of the Osmond clan: Donny, Marie, Alan, Wayne, Jay, Merrill, and Jimmy. See also Marie.

THE OSMONDS ABC

9 SEPTEMBER 1972–1 SEPTEMBER 1974 Saturday-morning cartoon show inspired by the real-life singing group, The Osmond Brothers. The animated series told the story of a globe-trotting musical group, who were goodwill ambassadors for the United States. The voices of the several Osmond Brothers—Merrill, Wayne, Alan, Jay, Donny, and Jimmy—were used. Reruns were shown Sunday mornings during the second season.

OSSIE AND RUBY! PBS

1980–1981 Ossie Davis and his wife, Ruby Dee, presented the works of black artists on this half-hour magazine series.

OTHER PEOPLE OTHER PLACES SYNDICATED

1974 Travelogue, hosted by Peter Graves.

THE OTHER SIDE NBC

17 OCTOBER 1994–13 OCTOBER 1995 Hour daytime talk show hosted by psychologist Dr. Will Miller. The programs focused on persons who had had paranormal experiences such as encounters with ghosts or space aliens, and similar phenomena. Miller was dropped as host in mid-May 1995, and reruns were aired until mid-1995, when Dana Fleming was named host.

OTHERWORLD CBS

26 JANUARY 1985–16 MARCH 1985 An interesting sci-fi series, Otherworld told the story of a normal American family who, while touring the Egyptian pyramids, were drawn through a "mysterious vortex" into the "otherworld," a universe of alternate realities in which things were not as they seemed. During their eight-episode journey they searched for a way to return home, but never found it. Featured were Sam Groom as Hal Sterling; Gretchen Corbett as June Sterling; Tony O'Dell as their elder son, Trace; Jonna Lee as their daughter, Gina; Brandon Crane and Chris Hebert as their younger son, Smith; and Jonathan Banks as evil Commander Kroll, who pursued the Sterlings through the otherworld.

OUR AMERICAN HERITAGE NBC

1959–1961 Broadcast as a series of specials, this American historical anthology series was produced by Mildred Freed Alberg in cooperation with American Heritage magazine.

OUR FAMILY HONOR ABC

17 SEPTEMBER 1985–3 JANUARY 1986 Set in New York City, this prime-time serial told the tale, in the words of the series' introductory narration, of "two families on opposite sides of the law, struggling for power and survival." Principal players included Kenneth McMillan as police commissioner Patrick McKay; Georgann Johnson as his wife, Katherine; Eli Wallach as mob boss Vincent Danzig; Barbara Stuart as his wife, Marianne; Tom Mason as Patrick's son, Frank, a cop who had a vendetta with the Danzigs, believing them responsible for his brother's death; Daphne Ashbrook as Frank's niece, Liz, also a cop; Michael Woods as Vincent's good son, lawyer Jerry Cole, who had a romance with Liz; Michael Madsen as Vincent's bad son, mobster Augie Danzig; Sheree J. North as Augie's wife, Rita; and Ron Karabatsos as the Danzigs' assistant, George Bennett.

OUR FIVE DAUGHTERS NBC

2 JANUARY 1962–28 SEPTEMBER 1962 This short-lived daytime serial centered on the lives of the five girls in the Lee family. Featured were Esther Ralston as Helen Lee, their mother; Michael Keene as Jim Lee, their father; Patricia Allison as daughter Barbara; Iris Joyce as daughter Marjorie; Nuella Dierking as daughter Jane; Wynne Miller as daughter Mary; Jacquie Courtney as daughter Ann; and Robert W. Stewart as Uncle Charlie.

OUR GOODLY HERITAGE CBS

16 NOVEMBER 1952–26 JANUARY 1958 Williams Rush Baer of New York University hosted this Sunday-morning Bible study show.

OUR HOUSE NBC

11 SEPTEMBER 1986–26 JUNE 1988 NBC had reasonable success in the Sunday "family viewing hour" (7 P.M.) with this wholesome drama about a widow and her three children who moved from Fort Wayne, Indiana, to California to live with her curmudgeonly father-in-law. With Wilford Brimley as Gus Witherspoon; Deidre Hall as Jessie Witherspoon; Shannen Doherty as fifteen-year-old Kris; Chad Allen as twelve-year-old David; Keri Houlihan as eight-year-old Molly; and Gerald S. O'Loughlin as Gus's equally curmudgeonly pal, Joe Kaplan.

OUR MAN HIGGINS ABC

3 OCTOBER 1962–11 SEPTEMBER 1963 Half-hour sitcom about a British butler inherited by the American branch of the MacRobert clan. With Stanley Holloway as Higgins; Frank Maxwell as Duncan MacRobert; Audrey Totter as his wife, Alice MacRobert; Rickey Kelman as their son, Tommy; K. C. Butts as their son, Dinghy; and Regina Groves as their daughter, Joannie.

OUR MISS BROOKS CBS

3 OCTOBER 1952–21 SEPTEMBER 1956 Our Miss Brooks, a situation comedy about a high school English teacher, began on radio in 1948; when it moved to television in 1952, most of the radio cast came with it: Eve Arden as Connie Brooks, Madison High's favorite educator; Gale Gordon as blustery Osgood Conklin, the principal; Richard Crenna as high-voiced Walter Denton, the student who usually drove Miss Brooks to school; Gloria McMillan as Walter's girlfriend, Harriet Conklin, the principal's daughter; and Jane Morgan as Miss Brooks's landlady, Mrs. Margaret Davis. Robert Rockwell, the only regular who had not been one of the original radio cast, was seen as biology teacher Philip Boynton, Miss Brooks's shy and elusive quarry. In the fall of 1955 the show's format changed slightly—Madison High was torn down to make room for a new highway, and Miss Brooks and Mr. Conklin found jobs at a private elementary school (on the radio version of the show, everyone remained at Madison High through the season). Eve Arden, Gale Gordon, and Jane Morgan remained from the old cast, and several newcomers were added: Nana Bryant as Mrs. Nestor, owner of Mrs. Nestor's School; Bob Sweeney as Oliver Munsey, Mrs. Nestor's brother; Ricky Vera as Benny Romero, a troublesome ten-year-old. Gene Barry was seen during the first half of the 1955–1956 season as Gene Talbot, the physical education teacher, one of Miss Brooks's romantic interests, but he was replaced in midseason when Robert Rockwell returned as Mr. Boynton. William Ching also appeared that season as athletic director Clint Albright, another romantic interest. In midseason, Isabel Randolph, as Mrs. Nestor's sister-in-law, also named Mrs. Nestor, succeeded Nana Bryant and took over as owner of the school. The half-hour series was produced by Larry Berns and directed by Al Lewis. In a 1992 interview with a Toronto newspaper, Eve Arden, herself only a high school graduate, reminisced about the inspiration for her role: "I wasn't as smart as Connie Brooks to be a teacher. I played Connie as I remembered my third grade teacher, Miss Waterman."

OUR PLACE CBS

2 JULY 1967–3 SEPTEMBER 1967 A summer replacement for The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour, Our Place was actually hosted by Rowlf the Muppet, one of puppeteer Jim Henson's first creations (Rowlf had previously been featured on The Jimmy Dean Show). The comedy duo of Jack Burns and Avery Schreiber provided human company for Rowlf, and the Doodletown Pipers were also featured. Bill Angelos and Buz Kohan wrote and produced the hour series.

OUR PRIVATE WORLD CBS

5 MAY 1965–10 SEPTEMBER 1965 To compete with ABC's popular prime-time soap opera Peyton Place, CBS attempted a spinoff from its popular daytime serial, As the World Turns. Our Private World was seen on Wednesday and Friday nights. As the show opened, Lisa Hughes (played by Eileen Fulton for several years on As the World Turns) moved to Chicago after a divorce. Other members of the evening cast included Sandra Smith as Sandy, who was facing a trial for murder as the series closed; Julienne Marie as Eve; Robert Drivas as Brad, Eve's boyfriend; Geraldine Fitzgerald as Helen; Pamela Murphy as Franny; Sam Groom as Tom; David O'Brien as Dr. Tony Larson; Nicolas Coster as John; Ken Tobey as Dick; Cathy Dunn as Pat; and Michael Strong as Sergeant Clark.

OUR SECRET WEAPON: THE TRUTH DUMONT

22 OCTOBER 1950–17 APRIL 1951 Half-hour panel discussion show which focused on exposing Communist propaganda. The discussions were usually moderated by Ralph De Toledano and Leo Cherne.

OUR TIME NBC

27 JULY 1985–7 SEPTEMBER 1985 Lots of baby-boom nostalgia was crammed into this half-hour variety show, hosted by perky Karen Valentine, and featuring vintage film and video clips as well as present-day guest appearances by stars of yesterday and today. Guests on the premiere included Frankie Avalon, Rick Nelson and the Jordanaires, Paul Revere and the Raiders, Adam West, Ed Begley, Jr., Jay North, Edd Byrnes, Joe Penny, Richard Kline, Morgan Brittany, William Christopher, Telma Hopkins, and Stanley and Barry Livingston.

OUR TIMES WITH BILL MOYERS CBS

26 JUNE 1983–23 AUGUST 1983 Bill Moyers hosted this wide-ranging half-hour documentary series. Among the topics covered were the anti-nuclear debate, unemployment, marriage, and the production of a Chinese version of Arthur Miller's play Death of a Salesman.

OUR WORLD ABC

25 SEPTEMBER 1986–3 SEPTEMBER1987 ABC developed this low-rated but critically acclaimed documentary hour to go up against NBC's The Cosby Show on Thursdays. Despite its low ratings, Our World made programming sense for the network, because it was relatively inexpensive to produce. Each week cohosts Linda Ellerbee and Ray Gandolf looked back at a recent time in history—a single event, a weekend, or an entire year—using film and video clips, music, and guest appearances by the then newsmakers.

OUT ALL NIGHT NBC

19 September 1992–12 February 1993; 25 June 1993–9 July 1993 Half-hour sitcom starring pop/soul singer Patti LaBelle as pop/soul singer Chelsea Paige, who owned a Los Angeles nightspot, Club Chelsea. With Morris Chestnut as Jeff Carswell, a graduate of NYU who was hired by Chelsea as a manager trainee and given an apartment in a building owned by her; Vivica A. Fox as Chelsea's daughter, Charisse, a fashion stylist; Duane Martin as Jeff's friend and roommate, Vidal Thomas; Simon O'Brien as their Scottish neighbor, Angus McEwen; and Tahj Mowry as Shavon, a youngster to whom Vidal served as a Big Brother. The nightclub setting enabled various real-life musical acts to appear on the program.

OUT OF THE BLUE ABC

9 September 1979–21 October 1979 Half-hour sitcom about a probationary angel who was sent to Earth to help out a family of five orphaned kids in Chicago. With Jimmy Brogan as Random, the angel who lived in a vacant room in the household and found a job as a high-school science teacher; Dixie Carter as Marion McLemore, the aunt of the five orphans who was taking care of them; Tammy Lauren as orphan Stacey Richards; Jason Keller as Jason Richards; Shane Keller (twin brother of Jason Keller) as Shane Richards; and Eileen Heckart as The Boss Angel, Random's supervisor. Thomas L. Miller and Robert L. Boyett created the series, which perished after a few weeks along with A New Kind of Family. Austin Kalish and Irma Kalish were the executive producers.

OUT OF THE FIERY FURNACE PBS

5 October 1986–16 November 1986 Only on PBS could one find a series such as this one—a seven-part look at metallurgy.

OUT THERE CBS

28 October 1951–13 January 1952 One of TV's first science fiction anthology series, Out There was also one of the first shows to mix filmed special effects with live action. The half-hour series, seen Sunday evenings, was produced by John Haggodd; Donald Davis was executive producer.

THE OUTCASTS ABC

23 September 1968–15 September 1969 Hour-long western about two bounty hunters, one black and one white, who joined forces after the Civil War. With Don Murray as Earl Corey, a former slaveowner; Otis Young as Jemal David, a former slave. Hugh Benson was the executive producer of the series, and Jon Epstein the producer for Screen Gems.

OUTDOORS WITH KEN CALLAWAY SYNDICATED
1975 Half-hour series for hunters and fishermen, hosted by Ken Callaway.

THE OUTER LIMITS ABC/SHO
16 SEPTEMBER 1963–16 JANUARY 1965 (ABC); 26 MARCH 1995– (SHO) Leslie Stevens was the creator and executive producer of this hour-long science fiction anthology series. Most of the forty-nine filmed episodes involved contact with extraterrestial life forms. Joseph Stefano produced the show during the first season and Ben Brady during the second. Vic Perrin provided the famous voiceovers for the introduction and conclusion of the show: "There is nothing wrong with your television set. . . ." A new series of 44 episodes was produced for the Showtime cable network in 1995.

THE OUTLAWS NBC
29 SEPTEMBER 1960–13 SEPTEMBER 1962 Set in Stillwater, Oklahoma Territory, this hour-long western starred Barton MacLane as Marshal Frank Caine. Also featured were Don Collier as Deputy Will Foreman; Jock Gaynor as Deputy Heck Martin; Bruce Yarnell (1961–1962) as Deputy Chalk Breeson; Judy Lewis (daughter of Loretta Young) (1961–1962) as Connie, Will's girlfriend; and Slim Pickens (1961–1962) as Slim.

OUTLAWS CBS
28 DECEMBER 1986–30 MAY 1987 The second western with this title had a more unusual premise: it started out in 1899, with a sheriff pursuing a gang of four outlaws. The five were caught in a strange electrical storm and were transported ahead in time, to the Houston of 1986, where they bought a ranch and opened the Double Eagle Detective Agency using the loot from the 1899 robbery. Featured were Rod Taylor as Sheriff Jonathan Grail; William Lucking as Harland Pike; Richard Roundtree as Isaiah McAdame; Charles Napier as Wolf Lucas; Patrick Houser as Harland's younger brother, Billy Pike; and Christine Belford as Maggie Randall, a modern-day deputy sheriff and neighbor.

OUTLOOK NBC
1 APRIL 1956–19 OCTOBER 1958 Half-hour news analysis show, hosted by Chet Huntley. In the fall of 1958 the series, which was seen on Sunday afternoons or evenings, was retitled Chet Huntley Reporting (see also that title).

OUTRAGEOUS OPINIONS SYNDICATED
1967 Half-hour talk show hosted by Helen Gurley Brown, editor of Cosmopolitan magazine.

OUTSIDE THE U.S.A. ABC
1 SEPTEMBER 1955–3 JUNE 1956 Travelogue, hosted by Quincy Howe.

THE OUTSIDER NBC
18 SEPTEMBER 1968–3 SEPTEMBER 1969 Hour-long crime show starring Darren McGavin as David Ross, an unarmed private detective recently released from prison (he'd killed a man, but it wasn't his fault). Roy Huggins was executive producer of the series.

THE OUTSIDERS FOX
25 MARCH 1990–26 AUGUST 1990 Francis Ford Coppola and Fred Ross were the executive producers of this hour dramatic series intended as a sequel to Coppola's 1983 film of the same name, which was based on S. E. Hinton's novel. Set in Oklahoma in 1966, its central characters were three orphaned brothers, living under the custody of the oldest boy. Featured were Jay R. Ferguson as the youngest brother

(and narrator), fifteen-year-old Pony Boy Curtis, who attended Walker Ridge High School where he and his "greaser" buddies battled the preppy "socs;" Rodney Harvey as the middle brother, Soda Pop Curtis; Boyd Kestner as the oldest brother, Darrel Curtis, a roofer; David Arquette as Two Bit; Harold P. Pruett as Steve; Scott Coffee as Randy; Robert Rusler as Tim Shepard; Kim Walker as Cherry; and Heather McComb as Scout.

OVER EASY PBS

1977–1983 Produced under a grant from the United States Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Over Easy was a daily, half-hour public affairs program for older Americans. Hugh Downs was the original host of the series. He was joined in 1980 by Frank Blair (the two had previously worked together on the Today show). Mary Martin and Jim Hartz (another former Today regular) took over as cohosts in 1981.

OVER MY DEAD BODY CBS

26 OCTOBER 1990–21 DECEMBER 1990; 6 JUNE 1991–20 JUNE 1991 Light hour crime show about a former Scotland Yard inspector who became a mystery writer and settled in San Francisco, where he reluctantly teamed up with an obituary writer to solve crimes. With Edward Woodward as the writer, Maxwell Beckett (Over My Dead Body was the title of one of his novels); Jessica Lundy as Nikki Page, obit writer for the San Francisco Union; Gregory Itzin as Cosby, Nikki's co-worker and would-be boyfriend; and Jill Tracy as Nikki's assistant, Wendy. William Link and David Chisholm created the series.

OVERLAND TRAIL NBC

7 FEBRUARY 1960–11 SEPTEMBER 1960 Hour-long western starring William Bendix as Fred Kelly, superintendent of the Overland Stage Company, and Doug McClure as "Flip" Flippen, his sidekick. The series should not be confused with ABC's 1960 effort, Stagecoach West.

OVERSEAS PRESS CLUB CBS

2 OCTOBER 1949–25 JUNE 1950 This Sunday-afternoon public affairs program featured panel discussions by members of the Overseas Press Club of America.

OVERTIME . . . WITH PAT O'BRIEN CBS

OWEN MARSHALL: COUNSELOR AT LAW ABC

16 SEPTEMBER 1971–24 AUGUST 1974 This hour-long dramatic show starred Arthur Hill as Owen Marshall, a widowed attorney who practiced in Santa Barbara. Also featured were Lee Majors (1971–1973) as his associate, Jess Brandon; Joan Darling as his secretary, Frieda Krause; Christine Matchett as his twelve-year-old daughter, Melissa; Reni Santoni (fall 1973–January 1974) as his new associate, Danny Paterno; and David Soul (January 1974–August 1974) as his newest associate, Ted Warrick. David Victor was executive producer for Universal Television.

OWL/TV PBS

3 NOVEMBER 1985–5 JANUARY 1986; 19 OCTOBER 1986–4 JANUARY 1987 A science show for kids, starring Anais Granofsky, Robin Sandler, and Nigmendra Narain as "The Mighty Mites," a trio of youngsters who could shrink to microscopic size to explore things.

OZARK JUBILEE ABC

22 JANUARY 1955–21 NOVEMBER 1961 Red Foley hosted this country and western music show, which originated from Springfield, Missouri, for most of its run. Among the many regulars over the years were Smiley Burnette, Bobby Lord, Wanda Jackson, and Brenda Lee (who was only ten years old when she became a regular in 1956), Webb Pierce, Suzi Arden, Uncle Cyp and Aunt Sap Brasfield, The Tall Timber Trio, and The Promenaders. Hank Garland composed the show's theme song, "Sugarfoot Rag." The show was titled Country Music Jubilee during the 1957–1958 season, and Jubilee U.S.A. thereafter; in the fall of 1959 it was reduced from one hour to thirty minutes. The show left ABC's regular schedule in the spring of 1960, but returned later as a replacement series.

OZMOE ABC

6 MARCH 1951–12 APRIL 1951 Principal characters on this twice-weekly puppet show included a monkey named Ozmoe, a leprechaun named Rhoderick Dhon't, a mermaid known as Misty Waters, Poe the Crow, Sam the Clam, Throckmorton the sea serpent, and Horatio, a caterpillar. The several puppets were made of latex and were operated by gears; they were created by Henry Banks, who produced the show, and Skip Weshner, who wrote it.

OZZIE AND HARRIET ABC

3 OCTOBER 1952–3 SEPTEMBER 1966 Television's longest-running situation comedy was a family affair—Ozzie Nelson created it, directed it, wrote it (together with his brother Don Nelson, Bill Davenport, and Ben Gershman), and starred in it with his wife and two sons. Nelson had graduated from Rutgers with a law degree, but his first love was music; he led a popular dance band in the early 1930s, and in 1935 he married Harriet Hilliard, the band's singer. Harriet Hilliard, born Peggy Lou Snyder, had grown up in show business. In 1944 they introduced a radio sitcom, The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet, in which they played themselves. On the show, and in real life, they had two young sons, David and Ricky (born Eric), but the boys' parts were played by child actors during the show's first five seasons; in February 1949 David and Ricky began playing themselves. The four Nelsons also starred in a 1950 film, Here Come the Nelsons. The radio show lasted until 1954.

The television series was also officially titled The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet, but the title seems a misnomer. It is hard to imagine a series less adventuresome than Ozzie and Harriet—Ozzie seemed to spend all his time at home or in his yard (he was never at work and his occupation on the show—if he had one—was never revealed, much less the subject of an episode), and Harriet could usually be found in the kitchen. The Nelsons' TV home—a two-story Colonial at 822 Sycamore Road in the town of Hillsdale—was an exact replica of their real home in Hollywood. The show's real drawing cards were the boys, especially Ricky, who was able to capitalize on weekly television exposure to become one of rock-and-roll's biggest stars. Rick (as he preferred to be called in his teens) first sang on 10 April 1957, in an episode titled "Rick the Drummer." He performed Fats Domino's "I'm Walkin'," which became his first record for the Verve label. Rick's singing career really took off in the fall of 1957, when "Be-Bop Baby," his first record on the Imperial label, topped the million mark. Thereafter he performed regularly on Ozzie and Harriet; his backup musicians included guitarist James Burton, pianist Ray Johnson, bassists James Kirkland and Joe Osborne, and drummer Richie Frost.

Of course, not all of the action centered around young Rick. A small host of friends and neighbors was around throughout the years to give Ozzie an occasional hand, whether it involved planning a fishing trip or mowing the lawn. The supporting cast included: Don DeFore (1952–1956) as "Thorny" Thornberry; Parley Baer as Herb Darby; Lyle Talbot as Joe Randolph; Mary Jane Croft as Joe's wife, Clara Randolph; and Frank Cady as Doc Williams. Sons David and Rick also acquired a number of friends, particularly after they started attending college in the late 1950s (on the show, both David and Rick became lawyers). Among them were: Skip Young as Wally Plumstead (Young's real name was Ronald Plumstead); Charlene Salerno as Wally's girlfriend, Ginger; Connie Harper (who later married Don Nelson) as David and Rick's secretary, Miss Edwards; Sean Morgan as Sean (he also played a friend named Bruce); Greg Dawson as Greg; Karl George (known earlier as Karl Kindberg) as Dink; Jack Wagner as Jack; James Stacy as Fred; Kent McWhirter as Kent (McWhirter was later known as Kent McCord when he starred on Adam-12); Tracy Stratford as Betty; Ivan Bonar as Dean Hopkins, the college dean; and Melinda Plowman as Melinda. Finally, David and Rick's real-life wives also joined the cast. June Blair, who married David in 1961, joined the cast that year (though she played David's girlfriend for one season), and Rick's wife, Kris (Harmon) Nelson, joined in 1963.

After thirteen seasons in black and white, Ozzie and Harriet was filmed in color for the 1965–1966 season. It left the air in 1966 after a fourteen-year, 435-episode TV run; the Nelsons made few television appearances after that, until 1973 when Ozzie and Harriet starred in a syndicated sitcom, Ozzie's Girls (see below). David, who had long been interested in behind-the-scenes work, produced the show. Rick continued his musical career, and in 1972 released a bittersweet song, "Garden Party," in which he expressed a desire not to be trapped forever in the past; he also made a few guest appearances in dramatic series such as Owen Marshall: Counselor at Law and McCloud. He died in a plane crash 31 December 1985.

OZZIE'S GIRLS SYNDICATED

1973 On this limp sequel to Ozzie and Harriet, the elder Nelsons decided to rent out the boys' old room to two college girls. Ozzie and Harriet Nelson played themselves, and Susan Sennett and Brenda Sykes played the two coeds, Susie Hamilton and Brenda MacKenzie (Brenda was known as Jennifer for some reason in the first episodes). David Nelson produced the half-hour series.

PBL NET

5 NOVEMBER 1967–25 MAY 1969 An ambitious Sunday-evening magazine series, PBL stood for "Public Broadcasting Laboratory," and was chiefly funded by the Ford Foundation. Edward F. Morgan was the chief correspondent for the series, which was scheduled biweekly during the 1967–1968 season and weekly during the 1968–1969 season; most shows were two hours long.

PBS LATENIGHT PBS

1982–1984 Dennis Wholey hosted this late-evening interview program, broadcast live from the studios of WTVS in Detroit.

P.D.Q. SYNDICATED

1965–1969 On this game show two two-member teams competed; one member of the team was placed in an isolation booth and tried to identify a word or phrase as his partner placed letters from the word or phrase on a rack. The show was hosted by Dennis James and later by Bill Cullen. A network version of the show appeared in 1973: see Baffle.

P.M. EAST—P.M. WEST SYNDICATED

1961–1962 This ninety-minute nightly talk show was videotaped in New York and San Francisco. The first hour, from New York, was cohosted by Mike Wallace and Joyce Davidson, and the last half hour, from San Francisco, was emceed by Terrence O'Flaherty.

P.M. MAGAZINE SYNDICATED

1978–1990 This half-hour weeknight magazine show was designed for the "access" period—the half-hour slot (7:30 to 8:00 P.M. in the East) preceding the networks' prime-time offerings. The program originated in 1976 at KPIX, the Group W (Westinghouse) outlet in San Francisco; it was subsequently carried by all Group W stations, and was then syndicated nationally (the Group W stations used the title Evening Magazine rather than P.M. Magazine). The series was produced cooperatively; each station supplied its own host or cohosts, but obtained most (if not all) of the features from a central pool. The Group W stations each produced five features a week for the central pool, while other stations were required to produce only one story a week. After Group W ceased supplying the central pool in 1990, most stations abandoned the concept; the last station to do so was KYW in Philadelphia, which ceased its version in September 1992. Perhaps the best-known personality on the series was the gregarious Chef Tell, whose full name is Friedemann Tell Erhardt.

P.M. PLAYHOUSE
See THE PHILIP MORRIS PLAYHOUSE

P.O.V. PBS
9 JULY 1988– A wide-ranging series of independently produced documentaries was presented on this summer series. "P.O.V." stands for "point of view"; according to executive producer Marc N. Weiss, his was "the only documentary series on television that admits that it has a point of view." The works selected for broadcast were not commissioned, but rather were selected in a competition. A small sampling of the fare included "Who Killed Vincent Chin?" an examination of a homicide; "Through the Wire," a report on a maximum security prison unit for female offenders; "Tongues Untied," a look at black gay life; and "Rate It 'X'," a study of pornography. Other presentations were less controversial, such as a behind-the-scenes look at Jeopardy's "Tournament of Champions," or "On Ice," a short film about cryogenics.

P.S. I. LUV U CBS
15 SEPTEMBER 1991–2 JANUARY 1992 A light adventure hour about a New York cop and his informant who, posing as a married couple, escaped to Palm Springs and went to work for P.S.I.—Palm Security Investigations. With Greg Evigan as the cop, Joey Paciorek, now known as Cody Powell; Connie Sellecca as the informant, Wanda Talbert, now known as Danielle Powell; and Earl Holliman as the boss, Matthew Durning. P. S. I.'s telephone number was 774–5888 (PSI–LUVU).

THE P.T.L. CLUB SYNDICATED
1976–1987 "P.T.L." stood for "Praise the Lord"and for "People That Love," according to its founder, Jim Bakker, who would become television's most infamous evangelist. A minister of the Pentecostal Assemblies of God church, Bakker had dropped out of Bible school to marry Tamara (Tammy) Faye LaValley. Together they traveled through the South for several years as itinerant evangelists before landing a children's religious program in 1964 on a UHF station in Portsmouth, Virginia; there Jim served as the show's host and Tammy as the puppeteer. Their little show caught the attention of the station's owner, Pat Robertson, who asked them to join his fledgling religious broadcasting service, the Christian Broadcasting Network. In 1966 they began hosting the first version of The 700 Club, a late-night religious talk show on which Jim interviewed guests and Tammy sang. The Bakkers left CBN in 1972 (Roberstson took over The 700 Club). In 1975 they relocated in Charlotte, North Carolina, and set up The P.T.L. Club a year later.

The Bakkers again adopted a talk-show format; Jim eschewed sermonizing for guest interviews and chats with Tammy (Bakker stated in 1979 that "my specific calling from God is to be a television talk-show host"). Indeed, if there was any true theological message to the show (other than Jim's usual end-of-show benediction, "God loves you, He really, really does"), it was that it was all right to be prosperous. The P.T.L. Network (as the Bakkers referred to their operation) soon became one of the nation's three richest TV ministries (together with those of Jimmy Swaggart and Pat Robertson). By 1984 revenues had reached $66 million a year.

The Bakkers took the prosperity message to heart. Jim's basic annual salary of $250,000 did not include the bonuses, houses, and cars that he regularly awarded himself. Tammy, whose facial makeup became more bizarre over the years, went on innumerable shopping binges, especially for clothes. The two once chartered a jet, at a cost of $100,000, simply to fly their clothes from North Carolina to California. Tammy also bought gifts for her husband, of course; she announced on the air in 1987 that her birthday present to Jim would be a pair of giraffes.

Jim Bakker also went ahead with his grandiose plan to construct Heritage USA, a religious-based theme park near Charlotte. To help finance it, he offered "lifetime partnerships" on the air; a contribution of $1000 or more would entitle the donor to three nights' annual accommodation at the park forever. Bakker sold more than 100,000 such partnerships.

In 1986 Bakker's chief evangelical rival, Jimmy Swaggart, began publicly criticizing The P.T.L. Club for its excesses and for its promotion of material values. Fearful that Swaggart might make public the news of his sexual liaison with P.T.L. secretary Jessica Hahn, and that Swaggart might try to take over the P.T.L. organization, Jim Bakker abruptly resigned from his ministry in March 1987. He appointed a fundamentalist Baptist televangelist, Jerry Falwell, to run P.T.L. News of the Hahn affair (and of subsequent payments to her of "hush money") soon became public anyway. Falwell immediately audited the P.T.L. books and discovered massive irregularities, which he promptly publicized, together with reports of other sexual activity of Jim Bakker's. Accused of bilking his followers of some $158 million, Bakker was convicted in federal court in October 1989 of twenty-four counts of fraud and conspiracy, mainly in connection with the sale of "lifetime partnerships." Originally sentenced to forty-five years in prison, he was released in 1994. Tammy had previously divorced him.

PABST BLUE RIBBON BOUTS CBS

28 OCTOBER 1948–25 MAY 1955 CBS's weekly boxing series was seen on Wednesday nights and was sponsored by Pabst Breweries for most of its run. Russ Hodges was the ringside announcer for several seasons, and Bill Nimmo was the commercial spokesman.

PACIFIC STATION NBC

15 SEPTEMBER 1991–26 OCTOBER 1991; 20 DECEMBER 1991–3 JANUARY 1992 Half-hour sitcom set at the Venice, California, police station. With Robert Guillaume as Detective Bob Ballard; Richard Libertini as his first partner, Detective Richard Capparelli, a touchy-feely guy; Joel Murray as Captain Kenny Epstein; Ron Leibman as sex-obsessed Detective Al Burkhardt; John Hancock as Deputy Commissioner Hank Bishop, a compulsive eater; and Megan Gallagher (October 1991–1992) as Bob's new partner, Detective Sandy Calloway.

THE PACKARD SHOWROOM ABC

PAC-MAN ABC

25 SEPTEMBER 1982–SEPTEMBER 1984

THE PAC-MAN/LITTLE RASCALS/RICHIE RICH SHOW ABC

5 SEPTEMBER 1982–3 SEPTEMBER 1983 Pac-Man, the omnivorous little hero of the popular video arcade game, came to Saturday-morning TV as the star of not one, but two, cartoon shows, broadcast back to back. Pac-Man was a half-hour series featuring Pac-Man, his wife (Ms. Pac-Man), and their child (Pac-Baby). The Pac-Man/Little Rascals/Richie Rich Show, which preceded Pac-Man, was an hour program containing three separate cartoon segments: "Pac-Man," "The Little Rascals" (based on the theatrical shorts produced by Hal Roach in the 1930s), and "Richie Rich" (the world's wealthiest youngster, who had been introduced in 1980 on The Richie Rich/Scooby Doo Show). After one season, the trio separated: Pac-Man continued as a half-hour series, and The Little Rascals/Richie Rich Show carried on in a half-hour format. The voice of Pac-Man was provided by Marty Ingels.

PADDY THE PELICAN ABC

11 SEPTEMBER 1950–13 OCTOBER 1950 Broadcast from Chicago on weekday afternoons, this fifteen-minute children's show starred a pelican named Paddy, who appeared both in animated form and as a puppet. Mary Frances Desmond was also featured as Pam.

PALACE GUARD CBS

18 OCTOBER 1991–1 NOVEMBER 1991 Short-lived hour adventure series about a former thief who was hired as special head of security of the Palace Hotels, the chain which he used to rob. With D. W. Moffett as the ex-thief, Tommy Logan; Marcy Walker as his boss, Christy Cooper, a former actress who was head of publicity and public relations; Tony LoBianco as Arturo Taft, the founder and president (Tommy, who had been raised in an orphanage, was Arturo's illegitimate son, although Arturo did not reveal it to him); and Noelle Parker as Melissa Taft, Arturo's estranged daughter (and Tommy's half-sister).

THE PALLISERS PBS

31 JANUARY 1977–27 JUNE 1977 A twenty-two-part adaptation of six novels by Anthony Trollope, The Pallisers concerned a wealthy English family living in the Victorian era. Principal players included: Susan Hampshire as Lady Glencora Palliser; Philip Latham as her husband, Plantagenet Palliser, M.P.; Barry Justice as Burgo Fitzgerald, for whom Glencora developed a penchant; Donal McCann as Phineas Finn, an ambitious Irish M.P.; Roland Culver as The Duke of Omnium; Caroline Mortimer as Alice Vavasor; Gary Watson as George Vavasor; Anna Massey as Lady Laura Standish; Fabia Drake as Countess Midlothian; and Rachel Herbert as Lady Dumbello. The series was jointly produced by the BBC and Time-Life Television; Sir John Gielgud introduced the episodes.

PALMERSTOWN U.S.A. CBS

10 MARCH 1980–1 MAY 1980; 17 MARCH 1981–9 JUNE 1981 This hour dramatic series was set in 1934 in a small Southern town. It was created by author Alex Haley (who drew on his own childhood in Henning, Tennessee) and developed by producer Norman Lear. The central characters were two young boys—one black, one white—who were best friends. The cast included Jermain H. Johnson as Booker T. Freeman; Brian G. Wilson as David Hall; Bill Duke as Booker's father, Luther Freeman, a blacksmith; Jonelle Allen as Booker's mother, Bessie Freeman; Star-Shemah Bobatoon as Booker's sister, Diana; Beeson Carroll as David's father, W. D. Hall, a grocer; Janice St. John as David's mother, Coralee Hall; and Michael Fox as David's brother, Willie-Joe (Fox would soon become better known as Michael J. Fox of Family Ties). When the series returned in the spring of 1981 it was titled Palmerstown.

THE PAMELA MASON SHOW SYNDICATED

1965 Talk show hosted by Pamela Mason, former wife of James Mason.

PANDAMONIUM CBS

PANTOMIME QUIZ (STUMP THE STARS) CBS/NBC/DUMONT/ABC/SYNDICATED

4 OCTOBER 1949–20 AUGUST 1951 (CBS); 2 JANUARY 1952–26 MARCH 1952 (NBC); 4 JULY 1952–28 AUGUST 1953 (CBS); 20 OCTOBER 1953–13 APRIL 1954 (DUMONT); 9 JULY 1954–27 AUGUST 1954 (CBS); 22 JANUARY 1955–6 MARCH 1955 (ABC); 8 JULY 1955–6 SEPTEMBER 1957 (CBS); 8 APRIL 1958–9 OCTOBER 1959 (ABC); 17 SEPTEMBER 1962–16 SEPTEMBER 1963 (CBS); 1968–1970 (SYNDICATED) One of television's most durable prime-time game shows, Pantomime Quiz began as a local show in Los Angeles in 1948 and won an Emmy that season (a prehistoric version of the show was briefly telecast there in 1939). A year later the series went nationwide. The format was simple: two teams, each with four celebrities, played charades. One member of the team acted out the charade (all of which were suggested by home viewers) and the other three teammates were required to guess it within two minutes; the team with the lower total elapsed time was the winner. Mike Stokey produced and hosted the half-hour show, which was often scheduled as a midseason or summer replacement throughout the 1950s. In 1958 the celebrity teams consisted of Howard Morris, Carol Burnett, Milt Kamen, and a guest versus Stubby Kaye, Denise Darcel, Tom Poston, and a guest. A daytime version of the show, also hosted by Stokey, ran from 11 May to 9 October 1959. In 1962 the show returned, after a three-year absence, in the same format but with a new title: Stump the Stars. It also featured—briefly—a new host: Pat Harrington, Jr., who emceed for thirteen weeks, after which Mike Stokey returned. Regular panelists at that time included Sebastian Cabot, Robert Clary, Hans Conried, Beverly Garland, Stubby Kaye, Ruta Lee, Richard Long, Ross Martin, and Tommy Noonan. On the syndicated version, also titled Stump the Stars, regulars included Sebastian Cabot, Roger C. Carmel, Beverly Garland, Stubby Kaye, Deanna Lund, Ross Martin, and Dick Patterson.

THE PAPER CHASE — CBS/SHOWTIME

19 SEPTEMBER 1978–17 JULY 1979 (CBS); 15 APRIL 1983–9 AUGUST 1986 (SHOWTIME) Hour dramatic series based on John Jay Osborn, Jr.'s novel (which was made into a movie in 1973), The Paper Chase was highly acclaimed but little watched. Set at a prestigious but unnamed Eastern law school, it starred John Houseman (repeating his film role) as the awesomely autocratic Professor Charles W. Kingsfield, Jr., who strove to make his students think like lawyers in his contracts class, and James Stephens as James T. Hart, a first-year student from the Midwest who strove to learn all he could from the course. Hart's classmates were played by Tom Fitzsimmons as Franklin Ford, son of a prominent lawyer; Robert Ginty as Thomas Anderson; James Keane as Willis Bell; Jonathan Segal (to January 1979) as Jonathan Brooks, who left school after a cheating incident; and Francine Tacker as Elizabeth Logan. Deka Beaudine was also featured in the first episode (and credited for many weeks) as Asheley, Brooks's wife. Occasionally featured were Betty Harford as Mrs. Nottingham, Kingsfield's officious secretary, and Charles Hallahan as Ernie, proprietor of the pizza joint where Hart worked part time. The series was developed for television by James Bridges; Robert C. Thompson was the executive producer for 20th Century-Fox TV. In 1983 The Paper Chase became network TV's first dramatic series to move to cable, as the Showtime cable network introduced new episodes; titled The Paper Chase: The Second Year, the new programs featured Houseman, Stephens, Keane, and Fitzsimmons from the old crew, and Jane Kaczmarek as Hart's girlfriend, first-year student Connie Lehman. The Paper Chase: The Third Year got underway in May 1985, adding Lainie Kazan as new student Rose Samuels and Claire Kirkconnel as Rita Harriman. The last of the thirty-six new Showtime episodes, "The Graduation," aired 9 August 1986, a scant eight years after the eager students had begun their studies on CBS.

PAPER DOLLS — ABC

23 SEPTEMBER 1984–25 DECEMBER 1984 Derived from the 1982 TV-movie, this hour prime-time serial was set amidst the modeling business in New York City. The large cast included Lloyd Bridges as tycoon Grant Harper; Morgan Fairchild as bitchy Racine, owner of a modeling agency; Nicollette Sheridan as sixteen-year-old Taryn Blake, top model; Terry Farrell as new teen model Laurie Caswell; Jennifer Warren as Laurie's mother, Dinah Caswell; Mimi Rogers as Grant's daughter, Blair Fenton, also a model; Richard Beymer as Blair's husband, David Fenton, sportswear executive; Dack Rambo as Wesley Harper, Grant's son, head of a cosmetics company; Brenda Vaccaro as Taryn's mother, Julia Blake; and Anne Schedeen as assistant district attorney Sara Frank.

PAPER MOON — ABC

12 SEPTEMBER 1974–2 JANUARY 1975 Based on Peter Bogdanovich's 1973 film, this half-hour sitcom starred Chris Connelly as Moze Pray, an itinerant con artist who worked the Midwest during the 1930s, and Jodie Foster as Addie Pray, an eleven-year-old waif who, convinced that Moze was her father, teamed up with him. Anthony Wilson was the executive producer and Robert Stambler the producer for Paramount Television.

PARADISE (GUNS OF PARADISE) CBS

27 OCTOBER 1988–1 SEPTEMBER 1990; 4 JANUARY 1991–14 JUNE 1991 The first TV western to be renewed for a second season since the demise of Gunsmoke, Paradise starred Lee Horsley as Ethan Allen Cord, a former gunslinger living in the mining town of Paradise, California, who inherited four young children from his deceased sister (who had mistakenly believed that her brother was a storekeeper). Also featured were Jenny Beck as the oldest kid, Claire Carroll, thirteen; Matthew Newmark as Joseph, eleven; Brian Lando as Benjamin, eight; Michael Patrick Carter as George, five; Sigrid Thornton as the British owner of the local bank, Amelia Lawson, who took a liking to Cord and his brood; Dehl Berti as John Taylor, Ethan's Native American friend; Mack Dryden (1988–1990) as Scotty; and Benjamin Lum (1988–1990) as Mr. Lee. The series paid homage to the westerns of TV's bygone days: Hugh O'Brian and Gene Barry reprised their roles as Wyatt Earp and Bat Masterson in a two-part episode at the start of the second season, and The Rifleman's Chuck Connors and Johnny Crawford were reunited (in different roles) in a 1990 episode. The series was not on CBS's fall 1990 schedule, but reappeared in midseason with a new title, Guns of Paradise, and with Cord serving as the town's new marshal. John Terlesky joined the cast as Dakota, Cord's gambler pal.

PARADISE BAY NBC

27 SEPTEMBER 1965–1 JULY 1966 Set in Paradise Bay, California, this half-hour daytime serial featured Keith Andes as Jeff Morgan, manager of a radio station; Marion Ross as Mary Morgan, his wife; Heather North as their daughter, Kitty; Walter Brooke as newspaper editor Walter Montgomery; Paulle Clark as Charlotte Baxter; Dennis Cole as Duke Spalding; and Steven Mines as Fred.

PARADISE ISLAND SYNDICATED

1949 Starring Danny O'Neil and Anne Sterling, this fifteen-minute variety show was filmed at Churubusco Studios in Mexico City by Jerry Fairbanks Productions; the series, which featured the music of Everett Hoagland and his orchestra, was produced in Mexico to reduce costs and to circumvent regulations imposed on domestic productions by the American Federation of Musicians.

THE PARENT GAME SYNDICATED

1972 Clark Race hosted this game show on which three married couples were asked questions about child behavior and tried to select the response that a child psychologist had determined was the correct one.

THE PARENT 'HOOD WB

18 JANUARY 1995– One of the first series offered by the new Warner Bros. network, this was a sitcom about a black family. With Robert Townsend as Robert Peterson, a college professor; Suzzanne Douglas as his wife Jerri Peterson, a law student; Kenny Blank as older son Michael; Reagan Gomez-Preston as older daughter Zaria; Curtis Williams as younger son Nicholas; Ashli Adams as younger daughter CeCe; Derek Sawyer (premiere telecast only) and Bobby McGee as neighbor Derek; and Carol Woods as Mrs. Wilcox.

PARENTHOOD NBC

20 AUGUST 1990–16 DECEMBER 1990 Half-hour sitcom based on the 1989 movie about the trials and tribulations of contemporary family life. With Ed Begley, Jr., as Gil Buckman; Jayne Atkinson as his wife, Karen; Max Elliott Slade as their angst-ridden ten-year-old, Kevin; Thora as their eight-year-old daughter, Taylor; Zachary LaVoy as their anxiety-producing four-year-old, Justin; Maryedith Burrell as Gil's divorced sister, Helen; Leonardo DiCaprio as her thirteen-year-old son, Garry; Bess

Meyer as her teenage daughter, Julie; David Arquette as Julie's new husband, Tod Hawks, a housepainter; Susan Norman as Gil's other sister, Susan Buckman-Merrick; Ken Ober as her husband, Nathan Merrick; Ivyann Schwan as their four-year-old daugher, Patty, whom Nathan is trying to nurture into a genius; William Windom as Gil's father, Frank; Sheila MacRae as Gil's mother, Marilyn; and Mary Jackson as Marilyn's mother, Great Grandma Greenwell. Three of the children—Slade, LaVoy, and Schwan—had also appeared in the film. A lone first-run episode was televised 11 August 1991.

PARIS CBS

29 SEPTEMBER 1979–15 JANUARY 1980 Hour crime show starring James Earl Jones as Los Angeles police detective, Captain Woodrow "Woody" Paris, with Lee Chamberlin as his wife, Barbara, a nurse; Hank Garrett as Deputy Chief Jerome Bench; Cecilia Hart as Sergeant Stacy Erickson; Jake Mitchell as Charlie Bogart; Frank Ramirez as Ernesto; and Michael Warren as Willie Miller. Steven Bochco created the series and was the executive producer for MTM Enterprises.

PARIS CAVALCADE OF FASHIONS NBC

11 NOVEMBER 1948–6 JANUARY 1949 One of TV's first fashion series, this fifteen-minute show was hosted first by Faye Emerson, later by Julie Gibson.

PARIS PRECINCT SYNDICATED

1955 Filmed in Paris, this half-hour crime show was based on the files of Sûreté, the French national police agency. Featured were Louis Jourdan as Inspector Beaumont and Claude Dauphin as Inspector Bolbec.

PARIS 7000 ABC

22 JANUARY 1970–4 JUNE 1970 When The Survivors, ABC's ambitious and costly attempt to serialize a novel, failed in midseason, George Hamilton, who had starred in The Survivors, was inserted into a new, hastily concocted format. On Paris 7000 Hamilton played Jack Brennan, an employee of the United States Department of State assigned to the American consulate in Paris. Also featured were Jacques Aubuchon as Jules Maurois, head of Sûreté, the French national police agency, and Gene Raymond as Robert Stevens, Brennan's occasional sidekick.

PARK PLACE CBS

9 APRIL 1981–30 APRIL 1981 This half-hour sitcom was reminiscent of Barney Miller. It was set at the Legal Assistance Bureau in downtown Manhattan, where the pace was hectic and the clientele bizarre. Featured were Harold Gould as David Ross, the director; David Clennon as lawyer Jeff O'Neill; Don Calfa as lawyer Howie Beech, who was perpetually waiting for the "big case"; Cal Gibson as receptionist Ernie Rice; Alice Drummond as Frances Heine, the devoutly religious secretary; Lionel Smith as wheelchair-using Mac MacRae; Mary Elaine Monti as lawyer Jo Keene; and James Widdoes as lawyer Brad Lincoln.

PARKER LEWIS CAN'T LOSE FOX

2 SEPTEMBER 1990–27 SEPTEMBER 1992; 21 MARCH 1993–22 AUGUST 1993 Half-hour sitcom which, like NBC's Ferris Bueller, chronicled the exploits of a well-connected student at suburban Santo Domingo High School. Featured were Corin Nemec as Parker Lewis; William Jayne as his "best bud," Mikey Randall; Troy Slaten as Parker's nerdy freshman sycophant, Jerry Steiner; Maia Brewton as Parker's kid sister, Shelly; Melanie Chartoff as the principal, Ms. Grace Musso; Abraham Benrubi as the big dumb jock, Larry Kubiac; Taj Johnson as Ms. Musso's student protege, Frank Lemmer; Timothy Stack as Parker's father, Marty Lewis; Anne Bloom (1990–1991) and Mary Ellen Trainor (1991–1993) as Parker's mother, Judy Lewis; Paul Johansson (1991–1993) as Nick Comstock, proprietor of the Atlas Diner; Harold Pruett (1991–1993) as Brad; and John Pinette (1991–1993) as Coach Kohler. When the show returned to Fox's schedule in 1993 its title was shortened to Parker Lewis.

PAROLE SYNDICATED

1958 Actual parole hearings, filmed at American prisons, were presented on this half-hour documentary series, produced and directed by Fred Becker.

THE PARTNERS NBC

18 SEPTEMBER 1971–8 JANUARY 1972 Slated opposite CBS's All in the Family, this half-hour sitcom about two wacky detectives was canceled in midseason (a few reruns were shown during the summer of 1972). It starred Don Adams as Detective Sergeant Lenny Crooke; Rupert Crosse as his black partner, Detective Sergeant George Robinson; John Doucette as their commanding officer, Captain Andrews; and Dick Van Patten as Sergeant Higgenbottom.

PARTNERS FOX

11 SEPTEMBER 1995– Half-hour sitcom about a pair of San Francisco architects, one of whom becomes engaged to be married. With Jon Cryer as Bob; Tate Donovan as his best friend, Owen; Maria Pitillo as Alicia, Owen's fiancee; and Catherine Lloyd Burns as Heather Pond, Bob and Owen's office person.

PARTNERS IN CRIME NBC

22 SEPTEMBER 1984–29 DECEMBER 1984 A lighthearted crime show about a private eye (Raymond Dashiell Caulfield) who died, leaving his San Francisco mansion and his detective agency to his two ex-wives. With Lynda Carter as freelance photographer Carole Stanwyck and Loni Anderson as bass violinist Sydney Kovack, the two exes; Walter Olkewicz as Harmon Shane, their assistant; Leo Rossi as Lieutenant Vronsky of the San Francisco P. D.; and Eileen Heckart as Raymond's mother, Jeanine, who owned a mystery bookstore.

THE PARTRIDGE FAMILY ABC

25 SEPTEMBER 1970–31 AUGUST 1974 Popular with younger viewers, The Partridge Family was a half-hour sitcom about a fatherless family of six who decided to become a rock-and-roll band. Featured were Shirley Jones as Shirley Partridge; David Cassidy as Keith; Susan Dey as Laurie; Danny Bonaduce as Danny; Jeremy Gelbwaks (1970–1971) and Brian Forster (1971–1974) as Chris; Suzanne Crough as Tracy; and Dave Madden as their manager, Reuben Kincaid. In the fall of 1973 the show was moved from its Friday slot to Saturdays, opposite All in the Family and Emergency!, where its ratings sagged quickly. Two youngsters were added to the cast that season: Ricky Segall as Ricky Stevens, the little boy who lived next door; Alan Bursky as Alan, Reuben's nephew. The Partridge Family helped establish David Cassidy (stepson of Shirley Jones) as a teen idol, and millions of Partridge Family records were sold. On record, however, only the voices of Jones and Cassidy from the TV cast were used, with the rest of the vocals supplied by studio musicians. Bob Claver was executive producer of the series. Ninety-six episodes were made. See also Partridge Family: 2200 A.D.

PARTRIDGE FAMILY: 2200 A.D. CBS

7 SEPTEMBER 1974–8 MARCH 1975 A cartoon sequel to The Partridge Family, this Saturday-morning show found the rock-and-rolling Partridges in space. The voices of Susan Dey, Danny Bonaduce, Brian Forster, Suzanne Crough, and Dave Madden from the prime-time show were used. Iwao Takamoto was the producer for Hanna-Barbera Productions.

THE PARTY MACHINE WITH NIA PEEPLES SYNDICATED

1991 Half-hour late-night music and dance program, hosted by Nia Peeples.

PARTY OF FIVE FOX

12 SEPTEMBER 1994–15 MARCH 1995; 7 JUNE 1995– Hour dramatic series about a family of five children trying to cope after the death of their parents in an auto accident six months earlier. With Matthew Fox as eldest son Charlie Salinger, 24, who tended bar at Salinger's, the restaurant owned by his late father; Scott Wolf as second son Bailey, 16; Neve Campbell as daughter Julia, 15, a high school student; Lacey Chabert as daughter Claudia, 11, an accomplished violinist; Brandon and Taylor Porter as infant son Owen; Paula Devicq as Kirsten Bennett, a graduate student in child psychology who was hired as the nanny; Jennifer Blanc as Kate, Bailey's girlfriend; Megan Ward as Jill; Mitchell Anderson as Ross, Claudia's violin teacher; Michael Shulman as Artie; Michael Goorjian as Justin, Julia's boyfriend; and Tom Mason as Joe, the restaurant manager. Christopher Keyser and Amy Lippman created the series, which, despite low ratings in its first season was renewed.

PARTY TIME AT CLUB ROMA NBC

14 OCTOBER 1950–6 JANUARY 1951 A Saturday-night audience-participation show, this series was hosted by Ben Alexander (who later costarred with Jack Webb on Dragnet). It started out as a quiz and stunt show before shifting formats to a talent contest.

PASS THE BUCK CBS

3 APRIL 1978–30 JUNE 1978 Bill Cullen hosted this daytime game show on which four contestants competed. During the first round each contestant was required to supply an answer to a general question (e.g., name a word that rhymes with "blink"), and contestants who failed to make a timely response were exiled to the "bullpen" until only one contestant remained. The survivor then played a second round, alone, in which the top prize was $5,000. The executive producer of the short-lived series was Bob Stewart.

PASSPORT TO DANGER SYNDICATED

1954–1955 Half-hour adventure series starring Cesar Romero as Steve McQuinn, a diplomatic courier. Hal Roach, Jr., produced the show.

PASSWORD CBS/SYNDICATED/ABC/NBC

2 OCTOBER 1961–15 SEPTEMBER 1967 (CBS); 1967–1969 (SYNDICATED); 5 APRIL 1971–27 JUNE 1975 (ABC); 8 JANUARY 1979–26 MARCH 1982 (NBC); 24 SEPTEMBER 1984–24 MARCH 1989 (NBC) A durable game show, Password was long hosted by Allen Ludden and has appeared in several different formats. Originally the game was played by two two-member teams; one member of each team was shown the "password," and sought to have her or his partner guess the password by providing one-word clues. If the password was guessed after the first clue, the successful team was awarded ten points; if the word was guessed after two clues, the team was given nine points, and so on. The first team to score twenty-five points won the game and proceeded to the "lightning round," where a player won $50 for each of five words that she or he could identify within sixty seconds. A Mark Goodson-Bill Todman Production, Password enjoyed a six-year daytime run on CBS, and was seen in prime time as well, usually surfacing as a midseason replacement. Late in 1974, during Password's daytime run on ABC, the show was retitled Password Allstars and featured six celebrities instead of the celebrity-and-contestant pairs previously used. In January of 1979 the series appeared on NBC's daytime schedule; titled Password Plus, it again featured two celebrity-and-contestant teams. The teams no longer played for points, however; players won money not by guessing the passwords, but rather by guessing a second word or phrase suggested by each series of passwords. Allen Ludden hosted Password Plus until October 1980, when he was sidelined by a heart attack (he died in 1981). Tom Kennedy succeeded him as host. In 1984 the series returned to NBC's daytime schedule, titled Super Password, hosted by Bert Convy, and substantially identical in format to Password Plus. One unlucky contestant was arrested after winning $58,600, having been spotted by a home viewer as a fugitive in an insurance fraud case.

THE PASTOR SYNDICATED

1955 This religious anthology series was hosted by Dr. Robert E. Goodrich, Jr., of the First Methodist Church in Dallas. Each show was a drama depicting the life of a minister.

THE PAT BOONE SHOW ABC/NBC/SYNDICATED

3 OCTOBER 1957–23 JUNE 1960 (ABC); 17 OCTOBER 1966–30 JUNE 1967 (NBC); 1969 (SYNDICATED) Pat Boone, the cleancut singer who became a regular on Arthur Godfrey's Talent Scouts in 1954, hosted three shows of his own. The first, on ABC, was a prime-time half-hour variety series and featured the McGuire Sisters and the Mort Lindsey Orchestra. The second was a daytime half-hour variety and talk show on NBC and featured the Paul Smith Orchestra. The third, a ninety-minute talk show, was titled Pat Boone in Hollywood.

PAT PAULSEN'S HALF A COMEDY HOUR ABC

22 JANUARY 1970–16 APRIL 1970 Pat Paulsen, the deadpan comedian who had been featured on The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour, hosted his own half-hour comedy series, which also featured Pepe Brown, Bob Einstein, Sherry Miles, Vanetta Rogers, George Spell, and the Denny Vaughn Orchestra. Former vice president Hubert Humphrey guested on the premiere.

THE PAT SAJAK SHOW CBS

9 JANUARY 1989–13 APRIL 1990 Seventeen years after The Merv Griffin Show left CBS, the network decided to give the late-night talk show format another try. Pat Sajak, who had hosted the higly successful game show Wheel of Fortune (also a Merv Griffin production) for seven years, was selected. The show bore deep resemblances to The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson—a similar set, an opening monologue, a sidekick (Dan Miller) and a bandleader (Tom Scott)—but never seriously threatened the ratings of the Carson show. Moreover, competition from a new syndicated talk show—The Arsenio Hall Show—siphoned away younger viewers. The Pat Sajak Show began as a ninety-minute effort. It was cut back to an hour on 30 October 1989. A new set was introduced early in 1990, together with the use of guest hosts on Fridays, but all to no avail. After a fifteen-month run it was canceled.

THE PATRICE MUNSEL SHOW ABC

18 OCTOBER 1957–13 JUNE 1958 Opera star Patrice Munsel turned to popular music in her half-hour variety show. Also featured were the Martin Quartet and the Charles Sanford Orchestra. Munsel's husband, Bob Schuler, was the executive producer, and the show's theme, "Breezy and Easy," was composed by Hugh Martin.

THE PATRICIA BOWMAN SHOW CBS

11 AUGUST 1951–3 NOVEMBER 1951 Fifteen-minute Saturday-evening variety show hosted by dancer Patricia Bowman.

PATROL CAR SYNDICATED

See FABIAN OF SCOTLAND YARD.

THE PATTI PAGE SHOW SYNDICATED/NBC/ABC

1955–1956 (SYNDICATED); 16 JUNE 1956–7 JULY 1956 (NBC); 24 SEPTEMBER 1958–16 MARCH 1959 (ABC) Patti Page, born Clara Ann Fowler, began making records in 1948 and became one of the biggest pop singers of the 1950s. She hosted several television series during that decade, beginning in 1952 with The Scott Music Hall (see that title). In 1955 she began a fifteen-minute musical series, which was widely syndicated, featuring the Page Five Singers and the Jack Rael Orchestra (Rael was her longtime musical director). In the summer of 1956 she hosted a four-week summer replacement for The Perry Como Show; the hour series, broadcast in color, featured the Jack Rael Orchestra and the Spellbinders. During the 1957–1958 season she hosted The Big Record, a series designed to compete with Your Hit Parade (see also those titles). In the fall of 1958 she hosted a half-hour variety series, also known as The Oldsmobile Show, which featured Rocky Cole, The Jerry Packer Singers, and the Vic Schoen Orchestra. The latter series was produced by Ted Mills.

THE PATTY DUKE SHOW ABC

18 SEPTEMBER 1963–31 AUGUST 1966 When Patty Duke was given her own series in 1963 at the age of seventeen, she was the youngest person in television history to have a prime-time series named after herself. Before that, however, she had had considerable experience in both television (as a guest star and as a regular, on Kitty Foyle) and on stage (most notably in The Miracle Worker on Broadway). In the series she played identical cousins, Patty and Cathy Lane; Patty was a typically outgoing American teenager, and Cathy, who was living with Patty's family while her father was overseas, was a reserved and artistic English lass. Both attended Brooklyn Heights High School. Also featured were William Schallert as Patty's father, Martin Lane, a magazine editor; Jean Byron as Patty's mother, Natalie Lane; Paul O'Keefe as Patty's younger brother, Ross; and Eddie Applegate as Richard Harrison, Patty's boyfriend. Occasionally seen were John McGiver (1963–1964) as Martin's boss, J. R. Castle; Kitty Sullivan as Patty's archrival, Sue Ellen Turner; Skip Hinnant as Ted, Cathy's sometime boyfriend; Alberta Grant as Maggie; Robyn Miller as Roz; and Kelly Wood as Gloria.

THE PAUL ARNOLD SHOW CBS

24 OCTOBER 1949–23 JUNE 1950 This fifteen-minute musical series, hosted by singer Paul Arnold, was seen several nights a week before CBS's evening newscast.

THE PAUL DIXON SHOW ABC/DUMONT/SYNDICATED

8 AUGUST 1951–24 SEPTEMBER 1952 (ABC); 29 SEPTEMBER 1952–8 APRIL 1955 (DUMONT); 1973 (SYNDICATED) Paul Dixon, a popular television personality in Cincinnati, hosted four nationally distributed programs. The first two were on ABC: a prime time variety hour and, briefly in 1952, a daytime half-hour. On both, Dixon and Dotty Mack pantomimed routines to popular recordings (Dotty Mack later did the same thing on her own ABC series). Other regulars included Wanda Lewis and Len Goorian. Jack Taylor produced the series, and Lee Hornback directed it. In the fall of 1952 Dixon hosted a daytime series on the DuMont network, which became one of that network's longest-running daytime shows; it again featured Wanda Lewis and Dotty Mack and was produced by Dick Perry. After a long absence from national television, Dixon returned in 1973 as host of a half-hour variety show that also featured Coleen Sharp and Bonnie Lou.

THE PAUL HARTMAN SHOW

See PRIDE OF THE FAMILY

THE PAUL LYNDE SHOW ABC

13 SEPTEMBER 1972–8 SEPTEMBER 1973 Half-hour sitcom starring Paul Lynde as high-strung lawyer Paul Simms, with Elizabeth Allen as his wife, Martha Simms; Jane Actman as their daughter, Barbara; John Calvin as Barbara's husband, Howie Dickerson, an obnoxious genius who was unemployed and lived with the elder Simmses; Pamelyn Ferdin as Sally, Paul and Martha's younger daughter; Herb Voland as T. J. McNish, Paul's law partner; James Gregory as T. R. Scott, another law partner; and Allison McKay as Alice, Paul's secretary. William Asher was executive producer of the series.

THE PAUL WHITEMAN REVUE ABC

6 NOVEMBER 1949–30 MARCH 1952 Bandleader Paul Whiteman hosted this half-hour musical variety show for three seasons; Linda Romay and Joe Young were also on hand. While Whiteman vacationed during the summer of 1951, Earl Wrightson and Maureen Cannon filled in (the series was then titled Paul Whiteman's Goodyear Summertime Revue). Whiteman also hosted several other series: see America's Greatest Bands, On the Boardwalk, and TV Teen Club.

PAUL WINCHELL AND JERRY MAHONEY NBC/ABC/SYNDICATED

18 SEPTEMBER 1950–23 MAY 1954; 20 NOVEMBER 1954–25 FEBRUARY 1956 (NBC); 29 SEPTEMBER 1957–2 APRIL 1961 (ABC); 1965 (SYNDICATED) Ventriloquist Paul Winchell constructed his most famous dummy, Jerry Mahoney, when he was a teenager. The two appeared on radio, first on Major Bowes' Original Amateur Hour, and later on their own short-lived series in 1943. Winchell and Mahoney began appearing regularly on TV as early as 1947, and in 1948 Winchell cohosted a prime-time series known as The Bigelow Show (see also that title) with mentalist Dunninger (the two had previously worked together on stage). In the fall of 1950 Winchell and Mahoney were given their own prime-time series, which ran for four years on NBC. For the first two seasons the show was titled The Speidel Show and was essentially a comedy-variety series that also featured Knucklehead Smiff (a dim-witted dummy created by Winchell), Dorothy Claire, Hilda Vaughn, and Jimmy Blaine. Other segments were also incorporated, including dramatic scenes and a quiz. Titled "What's My Name?" and hosted by Ted Brown, the latter segment required contestants to try to identify a famous person from clues suggested by Winchell and his crew. "What's My Name?" was also featured during the series' fourth season, when the show shifted to a Sunday-evening time slot. In the fall of 1954 Winchell and Mahoney moved from prime time to Saturday mornings on NBC, where their half-hour show featured a live audience and Mary Ellen Terry; occasionally seen in 1956 was a young comedienne named Carol Burnett, in her earliest TV appearances. In the fall of 1956 Winchell and company moved to ABC, where they hosted Circus Time for one season (see also that title), before beginning The Paul Winchell Show in the fall of 1957; The Paul Winchell Show was aimed principally at younger viewers and was usually seen Sunday afternoons. It featured Frank Fontaine and the Milton DeLugg Orchestra. After that show left the air in 1961, Winchell was seen less frequently on TV, though he did host a Saturday-morning cartoon show in 1963 (see Cartoonies), an hour syndicated show in 1965 titled Winchell and Mahoney Time, and a children's game show in 1972 (see Runaround). Winchell had studied medicine intermittently, and in 1962 he developed a blood storage system and followed that a year later with an artificial heart; since that time Winchell's primary interest has been medical technology rather than show business.

THE PAULA POUNDSTONE SHOW ABC

30 OCTOBER 1993–6 NOVEMBER 1993 One of the biggest flops of the 1993–1994 season, this was a free-form variety hour, hosted by standup comic Paula Poundstone. It combined musical performances, comedy sketches, and offbeat interviews (for example, a panel of economists was quizzed while riding in teacups at an amusement park). Nils Lofgren served as music director of the ill-fated program, which was axed after two telecasts.

PAULINE FREDERICK'S GUEST BOOK ABC

15 AUGUST 1948–30 MARCH 1949 A fifteen-minute interview series hosted by Pauline Frederick, who later became the United Nations correspondent for NBC News.

PAY CARDS SYNDICATED

1968 On this game show, hosted by Art James, three players attempted to build poker hands by acquiring cards from a twenty-card board.

A PEACEABLE KINGDOM CBS

20 SEPTEMBER 1989–15 NOVEMBER 1989 The Los Angeles Zoo was the setting of this hour dramatic series, one of the early fatalities of the 1989–1990 season. With Lindsay Wagner as Rebecca Cafferty, managing director; Michael Manasseri as her teenage son, Dean; Melissa Clatyon as her twelve-year-old daughter, Courtney; Victor DiMattia as her six-year-old son, Sam; Tom Wopat as her brother, Dr. Jed McFadden, a zoo veterinarian; David Renan as Ridge, the groundskeeper; and David Ackroyd as the pompous research director, Dr. Bart Langley.

THE PEARL BAILEY SHOW ABC

23 JANUARY 1971–8 MAY 1971 ABC had high hopes for this hour-long variety show, hosted by the incomparable Pearl Bailey, but even against unimpressive competition the show failed to catch on. Taped at the Hollywood Palace, the show was produced by Bob Finkel and featured the Allan Davies Singers, the Robert Sidney Dancers, and the orchestra of Louis Bellson (Bailey's husband).

PEBBLES AND BAMM BAMM CBS

11 SEPTEMBER 1971–4 SEPTEMBER 1976 Spun off from The Flintstones, Pebbles and Bamm Bamm was seen as a separate series during the 1971–1972 season and again from 1974 to 1976; from 1972 to 1974 it was part of The Flintstones Comedy Hour. The title characters and their cohorts attended Bedrock High School. Sally Struthers and Mickey Stevens supplied the voice of Pebbles, while Jay North supplied that of Bamm Bamm. See also The Flintstones.

PECK'S BAD GIRL CBS

5 MAY 1959–4 AUGUST 1959 Patty McCormack, who had made a big splash in The Bad Seed on stage and on film, played a mischievous twelve-year-old named Torey Peck in this half-hour sitcom. Also featured were Wendell Corey as her father, attorney Steven Peck; Marsha Hunt as her mother, Jennifer Peck; Roy Ferrell as her little brother, Roger; and Reba Waters as her friend, Francesca. Norman Felton was the executive producer of the series and Stanley Rubin the producer. The show was rerun on CBS during the summer of 1960.

THE PEE WEE KING SHOW ABC

23 MAY 1955–5 SEPTEMBER 1955 Regulars on this Cincinnati-based half-hour country-and-western music show included Pee Wee King, Redd Stewart, Little Eller Long, Neal Burris, Bonnie Sloan, Mitchell Torok, and Lulabelle and Scotty.

PEE-WEE'S PLAYHOUSE CBS

13 SEPTEMBER 1986–27 JULY 1991 This surreal live-action Saturday-morning kids' show quickly achieved cult status. Pee-wee Herman, the high-voiced, bow-tied character created by actor Paul Reubens, presided over a playhouse peopled by talking furniture, puppets, and a robot. The program combined live action, special effects, celebrity visits, and the occasional vintage cartoon. Assisting Pee-wee were Lynne Stewart as Miss Yvonne, Johann Carlo as Dixie, Gilbert Lewis and William Marshall as King Cartoon; Gregory Harrison as Conky the Robot, S. Epatha Merkerson as Reba, John Paragon as Jambi (the disembodied genie head), Shawn Weiss as Elvis, Diane Yang as Cher, Natasha Lyonne as Opal. Wayne White, George Michael McGrath, Larry Fishburne, Suzanne Kent, Alison Mork, and Ric Heitzman were also seen and/or heard. Following Reubens's arrest for indecent exposure at a Florida adult cinema, CBS hastily yanked the series.

PENNY TO A MILLION ABC

4 MAY 1955–19 OCTOBER 1955 Bill Goodwin hosted this prime-time game show, which featured two teams of five; any panelist who answered a question incorrectly was eliminated, until only one panelist from each side remained. Those two players then had the chance to go for the show's top prize of $10,000 (a million cents). Herb Wolf produced the show.

PENTAGON DUMONT

6 MAY 1951–24 NOVEMBER 1952 The progress of the Korean War was the principal subject of discussion on this half-hour public affairs show, DuMont's counterpart of NBC's Battle Report.

PENTAGON U.S.A. CBS

6 AUGUST 1953–1 OCTOBER 1953 A half-hour crime show depicting the exploits of the officers of the Criminal Investigation Division of the United States Army, starring Addison Richards, and later, Robert Pastene (as The Colonel). The series was to have been titled Corridor D. Pentagon; that title was changed to Pentagon Confidential, which was in turn changed to Pentagon U.S.A. just before the show premiered. William Dozier was the executive producer, Alex March the producer.

PENTHOUSE PARTY ABC

15 SEPTEMBER 1950–8 JUNE 1951 Betty Furness hosted this half-hour variety show, which also featured Don Cherry.

PENTHOUSE PLAYERS ABC

20 MARCH 1949–23 OCTOBER 1949 Half-hour Sunday-night dramatic anthology series.

PEOPLE NBC

21 AUGUST 1955–9 OCTOBER 1955 Morgan Beatty narrated this Sunday-afternoon series of live and filmed human interest segments.

PEOPLE CBS

18 SEPTEMBER 1978–11 NOVEMBER 1978 A half-hour magazine series, based on People magazine. The segments, almost all of which were three minutes or less, included peeks at celebrities and a few human interest features. Phyllis George, Miss America of 1971, was the host; some interviews were handled by correspondent Mark Shaw. David Susskind was executive producer for Time-Life TV.

PEOPLE ARE FUNNY NBC

19 SEPTEMBER 1954–2 APRIL 1961; 24 MARCH 1984–21 JULY 1984 Art Linkletter first hosted this half-hour show, which combined stunts and audience participation features. A regular feature for several seasons was a Univac computer, which tried to match eligible young men and women. Reruns were shown after 1958. Flip Wilson hosted the short-lived 1984 revival.

PEOPLE DO THE CRAZIEST THINGS ABC

20 SEPTEMBER 1984–11 OCTOBER 1984; 31 MAY 1985–2 AUGUST 1985 Bert Convy hosted this Candid Camera clone, on which people were the unsuspecting victims of various stunts. It was the lowest-rated show of the 1984–1985 prime-time season, ranking 97th.

THE PEOPLE NEXT DOOR CBS

18 SEPTEMBER 1989–16 OCTOBER 1989 Only four episodes of this fantasy sitcom were shown. It starred Jeffrey Jones as widower Walter Kellogg, a cartoonist (creator of the strip "The People Next Door") who could imagine things into existence. Walter's young son Matthew (played by Chance Quinn) and daughter Aurora (Jaclyn Bernstein) were used to seeing figments of his imagination, but Walter's new wife, psychotherapist Abigail MacIntyre (Mary Gross) was not. Also featured were Christina Pickles as Abigail's sister, Cissy, a beautician, and Leslie Jordan as Truman Fipps, the mailman in Covington, Ohio, where Walter and the kids had relocated upon Walter's remarriage. Among the real-life celebrities who strolled in to appear as themselves were Dick Clark, Dr. Joyce Brothers, Henny Youngman, and Casey Kasem. Wes Craven (director of the film A Nightmare on Elm Street) was cocreator of the series.

PEOPLE WILL TALK NBC

1 JULY 1963–27 DECEMBER 1963 The format of this daytime game show, hosted by Dennis James, was not unlike that of The Celebrity Game—contestants tried to predict how members of a studio audience panel would respond to yes-or-no questions. The show was a Merrill Heatter-Bob Quigley Production.

THE PEOPLE'S CHOICE NBC

6 OCTOBER 1955–25 SEPTEMBER 1958 Jackie Cooper starred in this half-hour sitcom as Socrates (Sock) Miller, a government naturalist who became a city councillor in New City, Oklahoma, and sold houses in a real estate development there. Also featured were Pat Breslin as Amanda (Mandy) Peoples, Sock's girlfriend (and later his wife); Paul Maxey as New City's mayor and Mandy's corpulent father, John Peoples; Margaret Irving as Sock's Aunt Gus; Leonid Kinskey as Pierre, an artist pal of Sock's; and Dick Wesson (1957–1958) as Rollo, another friend of Sock's. The "gimmick" on the show was a talking basset hound named Cleo, who made droll comments (with the help of Mary Jane Croft, who provided the voice) from time to time during each episode.

THE PEOPLE'S COURT SYNDICATED

1981–1993 On this unusual half-hour series, real-life small claims cases were litigated by the actual plaintiffs and defendants before a real judge (Joseph A. Wapner, a retired judge of the California Superior Court). The parties who appeared on the program agreed to be bound by Wapner's rulings; a successful plaintiff could recover up to $1,500 (with the defendant receiving $25), and a successful defendant would split $500 with the plaintiff. The show's production staff looked for offbeat cases, such as a complaint involving a strip-teaser who failed to disrobe completely, or one involving a babysitter who wasn't paid. Doug Llewelyn hosted the show, and interviewed the litigants after the verdicts were announced; Rusty Burrell served as the bailiff. In later years the series went on the road occasionally, broadcasting from cities all over the country.

PEOPLE'S PLATFORM CBS

17 AUGUST 1948–18 AUGUST 1950 Charles Collingwood was the moderator of this early public affairs program. The show, which originated on radio in 1938, featured a panel of experts discussing a topical subject.

PEPSI-COLA PLAYHOUSE ABC

2 OCTOBER 1953–26 JUNE 1955 This half-hour dramatic anthology series was filmed at Revue Studios. Arlene Dahl was the first host of the series; she was succeeded by Anita Colby and later by Polly Bergen. Robert G. Walker was the director.

THE PERFECT MATCH SYNDICATED

1967 Dick Enberg hosted this game show, which was similar in format to The Dating Game: three women and three men participated, and a computer had previously matched up the three couples. Those who chose their computer-assigned matches won a cash prize.

A PERFECT SCORE CBS

19 JUNE 1992–18 SEPTEMBER 1992 Jeff Marder hosted this late-late-night game show which combined The Dating Game with Love Connection. Each program introduced a single contestant and three of his or her best friends; the three friends then interviewed a group of three potential dates, and selected one for the contestant. In a follow-up segment, taped after the date, the participants revealed how the date had gone.

PERFECT STRANGERS ABC

25 MARCH 1986–29 APRIL 1986; 6 AUGUST 1986–11 SEPTEMBER 1992; 9 JULY 1993–6 AUGUST 1993 In this "buddy" sitcom a European shepherd came to America to live with his cousin in Chicago. It starred Mark Linn-Baker as Larry Appleton, the level-headed American cousin, and Bronson Pinchot as Balki Bartokomous, the naive immigrant from Mypos who was amazed and sometimes bewildered by American life and language. When the series began, Larry was working at the Ritz Discount Store, but in the fall of 1987 he and Balki got jobs at the Chicago Chronicle—Larry a reporter, Balki in the mailroom. Other regulars included Ernie Sabella (1986–1987) as Larry's boss at the store, Donald "Twinkie" Twinkacetti; Belita Moreno (1986–

1987) as his wife, Edwina; Lise Cutter (1986) as neighbor Susan Campbell; Melanie Wilson (fall 1986–1993) and Rebeca Arthur (1986–1993) as new neighbors Jennifer Lyon and Mary Anne (originally they were aerobics instructors, but later they became flight attendants); Sam Anderson (1987–1993) as Mr. Gorpley, Balki's boss at the mailroom; Belita Moreno (1987–1993, in her second role on the series) as Lydia Markham, the advice columnist; and JoMarie Payton-France (1987–1989) as Harriette Winslow, the Chronicle's elevator operator. In the fall of 1989 Payton-France departed for her own series: see Family Matters. Alisan Porter came aboard for the 1990–1991 season as Larry and Balki's seven-year-old neighbor, Tess Holland. In the fall of 1991 Larry and Jennifer were married and moved into a house, where Balki and Mary Anne joined them. Perfect Strangers did not appear on ABC's 1992 fall schedule; the last batch of new episodes was aired during the summer of 1993. By that time, Balki and Mary Anne were also married, and both wives were pregnant. Larry and Jennifer's baby was born on the final program.

THE PERILS OF PENELOPE PITSTOP CBS

13 SEPTEMBER 1969–5 SEPTEMBER 1971 A female auto racer named Penelope Pitstop was the central character in this Saturday-morning cartoon show from Hanna-Barbera Productions. The series was spun off from a 1968 CBS cartoon show, Wacky Races.

THE PERRY COMO SHOW NBC/CBS
(THE CHESTERFIELD SUPPER CLUB) (THE KRAFT MUSIC HALL)

24 DECEMBER 1948–4 JUNE 1950 (NBC); 2 OCTOBER 1950–24 JUNE 1955 (CBS); 17 SEPTEMBER 1955–12 JUNE 1963 (NBC) Perry Como was a barber before he began singing professionally in 1933. In 1944, the year his first record was released, he appeared on radio in The Chesterfield Supper Club; when that show came to television late in 1948, Como came with it and has remained on television for more than four decades. The Chesterfield Supper Club, which also featured the Mitchell Ayres Orchestra and the Fontane Sisters, was originally seen on Friday nights but soon shifted to a half-hour slot on Sundays, opposite Ed Sullivan's Toast of the Town. In the fall of 1950 Como shifted to CBS, where he hosted his own show for the next five seasons; the fifteen-minute program was seen Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays following the network news. Also featured were the Mitchell Ayres Orchestra and the Fontane Sisters, together with announcer Frank Gallop. In the fall of 1955 Como returned to NBC, where he hosted a weekly hour show for the next eight years; from 1955 to 1959 it was seen Saturdays and was titled The Perry Como Show. From 1959 to 1963 it was seen Wednesdays and was titled The Kraft Music Hall (The Kraft Music Hall had previously been hosted by Milton Berle, and the series returned in 1967; see also that title). The Mitchell Ayres Orchestra and Frank Gallop were again featured, along with the Ray Charles Singers and the Louis DaPron Dancers (later, the Peter Gennaro Dancers). The Como Music Hall Players included Don Adams, Kaye Ballard, Jack Duffy, Paul Lynde, and Sandy Stewart. Como's theme song, "Dream Along with Me," was composed by Carl Sigman. For several seasons the show was produced by Bob Finkel, directed by Grey Lockwood, with Goodman Ace as head writer. Though he has not hosted a weekly series since 1963, Como has regularly appeared in specials since then.

PERRY MASON CBS

21 SEPTEMBER 1957–4 SEPTEMBER 1966 Perry Mason, one of fiction's most successful criminal lawyers, was created by Erle Stanley Gardner (who was himself an attorney) in 1933. Though the character was featured in dozens of novels, several films, a radio serial that ran for twelve years, and two television series, Raymond Burr's portrayal of the Los Angeles lawyer in the nine-year run of the first Perry Mason TV series overshadows all the others.

After the radio series left the air in 1955, Gardner formed a partnership— Paisano Productions—with his agent, Cornwall Jackson; Jackson's wife, Gail Patrick Jackson, a former actress who had attended law school, was hired as executive producer, and Ben Brady, who was also an attorney, was hired as producer. Though Gardner did no writing for the show, he exercised script approval and helped insure that the quality of the show met his expectations.

Several actors were considered for the leading role before Raymond Burr was chosen. Among the also-rans were William Hopper, Richard Carlson, Fred MacMurray, and Efrem Zimbalist, Jr. Burr, who had starred in the movie Godzilla and had played heavies in several other films, originally tested for the role of prosecuting attorney Hamilton Burger. Burr's Mason was an aggressive advocate blessed with superb powers of deductive reasoning. Usually it took no more than a quick pause and a short breath for Burr's Mason to piece together an intricate sequence of events from a few sketchy facts. Typically, Mason's clients found themselves linked by a chain of circumstantial evidence to a murder ("But, Mr. Mason, he was dead when I got there!"). Some hapless clients were even convinced that they had, in fact, committed the crime; all, however, were grateful for Mason's uncanny ability to secure an in-court confession (usually on the witness stand, but occasionally from the spectators' area) from the real culprit.

Perry Mason first cracked Nielsen's Top Twenty series in its second season, when it ranked nineteenth. It climbed as high as fifth in 1961–1962 before the ratings began to taper off. The demands on Raymond Burr were so great that, by the series's third season, it was impossible for him to memorize all of his lines. Instead, he regularly read his lines off a TelePrompTer located just off-camera. As veteran character actor Dabbs Greer (who appeared in eight episodes) recalled in a 1994 interview, "If you were playing a scene with Ray, he was looking over your shoulder at the TelePrompTer, or he was looking at the floor. You got no eye contact. You learned not to play to him, but to play either just off the TelePrompTer or off of his face, because it would distract you if you saw his eyes reading. But he was a master [of the technique]; I've never seen anybody master it as well."

Not all of the credit for the series' success belongs to Burr; a popular and talented supporting cast was an integral part of the show. Though four other regulars were featured in most episodes, only two of them were featured continuously through the nine-year run: Barbara Hale as Della Street, Mason's cool and efficient private secretary, and William Hopper (son of Hollywood columnist Hedda Hopper) as private detective Paul Drake, Mason's tireless investigator. William Talman, as prosecutor Hamilton Burger, was Mason's usual courtroom foe, but was not featured continuously: Talman had been arrested at a wild Hollywood party early in 1960 and was seen only occasionally during the 1960–1961 season. Mason also handled cases outside the Los Angeles area from time to time, which, of course, pitted him against other prosecutors; all of them, however, were as unsuccessful as Burger in obtaining convictions against Mason's clients. Rounding out the long-term supporting cast was veteran character actor Raymond Collins, who played Lieutenant Arthur Tragg, the grim homicide officer from the Los Angeles Police Department from 1957 to 1964; Collins died in 1965. A few other players were also featured occasionally: Wesley Lau (1961–1965) as Lieutenant Anderson, a colleague of Tragg's; Richard Anderson (1965–1966) as Lieutenant Steve Drumm, Tragg's successor; Lee Miller (1965–1966) as Lieutenant Brice; Carl Held (1961–1962) as David Gideon, an associate of Paul Drake's; and Connie Cezon as the rarely seen Gertie, Mason's switchboard operator and receptionist. Even Burr himself was not featured in every show; during a three-week period early in 1963, when Burr was recuperating from minor surgery, Bette Davis, Hugh O'Brian, and Walter Pidgeon filled in for him as "guest attorneys." Mike Connors also filled in for Burr, as attorney Joe Kelly, on 5 November 1964.

Almost all of the episodes followed the same format. Most featured alliterative titles (such as the premiere, "The Case of the Restless Redhead"; "The Case of the Treacherous Toupee," with Robert Redford, 17 September 1960; and "The Case of the Bountiful Beauty," with Ryan O'Neal, 6 February 1964). The action was usually confined to the first thirty minutes (the identity of the killer was never divulged to the viewers), and the courtroom segment comprised the second half hour. Strictly speaking, few of the courtroom proceedings were actually trials. Most were styled as "evidentiary hearings"; by using that technique, the producers saved the expense of hiring twelve extras to play jurors. Though Mason seemed to elicit a confession from the guilty party week after week, it is probably not accurate to say that he won every case; in at least one episode, "The Case of the Deadly Verdict," telecast during the fall of 1963, a jury returned a guilty verdict.

Approximately 271 hour episodes were produced between 1957 and 1966. On the last first-run episode, "The Case of the Final Fade-Out" (telecast 22 May 1966), Mason's creator, Erle Stanley Gardner, appeared as the judge. The Perry Mason theme music, one of TV's best remembered signatures, was composed by Fred Steiner. Reruns of the series were widely syndicated after 1966, and by 1973 CBS was interested in reviving the series. The new version, titled The New Perry Mason, was gone in fourteen weeks (see also that title).

Burr revived the character in a two-hour TV-movie, "Perry Mason Returns," broadcast on NBC 1 December 1985. Mason left the appellate bench to defend Della Street, who had been framed for a murder she hadn't committed. Joining Burr were Barbara Hale, William Katt (Hale's real-life son, who played Paul Drake, Jr.) and Richard Anderson (who had played a cop during Perry Mason's final season, but who played the murderer here). The film was the second-highest-rated TV-movie of the season and was the springboard for Burr's continued appearances as Mason in three or four such films during each successive season. Burr died in 1993. The last of his Perry Mason TV-movies, "The Case of the Killer Kiss," was broadcast 29 November 1993. The Perry Mason title continued to be used for various NBC mystery movies (such as "A Perry Mason Mystery: The Case of the Grimacing Governor," 9 November 1994); although the Mason character did not appear, some scenes were shot at his office, and references were made to his working on other cases.

PERRY PRESENTS NBC

13 JUNE 1959–5 SEPTEMBER 1959 A summer replacement for The Perry Como Show, this hour-long musical show was broadcast in color and was hosted by singers Tony Bennett, Teresa Brewer, and Jaye P. Morgan. Other regulars included the Four Lads, the Modernaires, the Louis DaPron Dancers, and the Mitchell Ayres Orchestra.

PERSON TO PERSON CBS

2 OCTOBER 1953–23 SEPTEMBER 1960; 23 JUNE 1961–15 SEPTEMBER 1961 Person to Person, a prime-time interview show, made effective use of television's technological advances. Thanks to coast-to-coast coaxial cable, celebrities and newsmakers could be interviewed—live—almost anywhere in North America. Each week on Person to Person two interviews were conducted; the interviewees were usually seen in their homes, while the host (Edward R. Murrow from 1953 to 1959, then Charles Collingwood) remained in a studio in New York, watching the guests on a monitor. On the 1953 premiere Murrow first "visited" Leopold Stokowski and Gloria Vanderbilt, and then dropped in on Brooklyn Dodgers' catcher Roy Campanella. Among the most famous of those interviewed was Marilyn Monroe, whose television appearances were indeed infrequent; Monroe was interviewed at the home of friends in Connecticut on 8 April 1955. For most of its run Person to Person was produced by Edward R. Murrow, Jesse Zousmer, and John Aaron.

PERSONAL & CONFIDENTIAL NBC

1 AUGUST 1983–5 AUGUST 1983 Steve Edwards and Christine Belford cohosted this daytime hour magazine series, which was given a one-week tryout in the summer of 1983.

PERSONAL APPEARANCE THEATER ABC

27 OCTOBER 1951–23 MAY 1952 Half-hour dramatic anthology series.

PERSONALITIES SYNDICATED

3 SEPTEMBER 1990–25 OCTOBER 1991 Half-hour daily informational series, consisting mainly of interviews with celebrities and newsmakers, hosted first by Charlie Rose. Bill Sternoff succeeded Rose in October 1990, and Janet Zappala became his cohost. In July the show was retitled E.D.J. (for Entertainment Daily Journal), and was hosted by Zappala and Jim Moret.

PERSONALITY NBC

30 JULY 1967–26 SEPTEMBER 1969 A panel of three celebrities was featured on this daytime game show hosted by Larry Blyden. The game was played in three rounds, during which the celebs tried to determine (a) how the other two celebs responded to various personal and topical questions, (b) how members of the public had predicted that the celebrity himself or herself would answer, and (c) how another celebrity (who appeared in a prerecorded sequence) responded to each of three questions. Bob Stewart created and produced the series.

PERSONALITY PUZZLE ABC

19 MARCH 1953–25 JUNE 1953 A biweekly prime-time game show, Personality Puzzle was similar to What's My Line? A celebrity panel tried to guess the identity of a guest celebrity from articles of the guest's clothing or from other props associated with the person. Robert Alda was the host.

PERSONALS CBS

16 SEPTEMBER 1991–23 DECEMBER 1992 CBS inaugurated its late-late-night game show sequence (see also Night Games) with this program. Hosted by Michael Berger, it was taped in the lounge of the Sheraton Los Angeles Airport Hotel, at which a contestant met three potential dates (who were selected by the show's staff from ads and videos solicited by the show), and won a date with the person who best guessed how the contestant had answered certain questions. Home viewers could also leave messages for contestants by calling a special 900 number.

PERSPECTIVE ABC

6 NOVEMBER 1952–6 APRIL 1953 Produced by the ABC Public Affairs Department in cooperation with the New York Bar Association, this prime-time public affairs program had no moderator. Featured on the premiere were Lester B. Pearson and Dean Rusk (then president of the Rockefeller Foundation). The half-hour series was directed by Edward Nugent.

THE PERSUADERS ABC

18 SEPTEMBER 1971–14 JUNE 1972 This hour-long adventure series, produced in Europe by England's Associated Television Corporation (ATV), starred Tony Curtis and Roger Moore as two wealthy playboys, Danny Wilde and Lord Brett Sinclair. According to the story line, they were sent to investigate various matters at the behest of Judge Fulton, a retired jurist (played by Laurence Naismith). The show's Saturday-night slot probably helped to keep the ratings down, and it vanished after only one season. Robert S. Baker was the creator and producer for ATV.

THE PET SET SYNDICATED

1971 Betty White hosted this half-hour series on which celebrities dropped by with their pets.

THE PET SHOP DUMONT

1 DECEMBER 1951–14 MARCH 1953 Gail Compton hosted this prime-time series on pets and pet care, with help from his eight-year-old daughter, Gay.

PETE AND GLADYS CBS

19 SEPTEMBER 1960–10 SEPTEMBER 1962 Parke Levy was the executive producer of this half-hour sitcom, a spinoff from December Bride. It starred Harry Morgan as wisecracking insurance agent Pete Porter and Cara Williams as his daffy wife, Gladys Porter; Morgan had played Pete on December Bride but his wife Gladys had never been seen on that series. Also featured were Verna Felton, who repeated her December Bride role as Hilda Crocker; Alvy Moore as Howie, Pete and Gladys's friend and neighbor; Barbara Stuart as Howie's wife, Alice; Peter Leeds as neighbor George Colton; Shirley Mitchell as his wife, Janet; Ernest Truex as Pop, Gladys's father; Barry Kelley as Pete's boss, Mr. Slocum; Helen Kleeb and Lurene Tuttle as his wife, Mrs. Slocum; Gale Gordon (1961–1962) as Pete's Uncle Paul; Joe Mantell (1961–1962) as neighbor Ernie Briggs; and Mina Kolb (1961–1962) as his wife, Peggy.

PETE KELLY'S BLUES NBC

31 MARCH 1959–4 SEPTEMBER 1959 A half-hour crime show set in Kansas City during the 1920s, starring William Reynolds as Pete Kelly, a cornetist and bandleader at a local speakeasy who also found time to help people in distress. Also featured were Fred Eisley (later known as Anthony Eisley) as Johnny Cassiano, a tough Kansas City cop; Connee Boswell as Savannah Brown, singer at the club; and Phil Gordon as George Lupo, owner of the club. Jack Webb, who had starred in the 1951 radio series and the 1955 film on which the TV series was based, produced and directed the show. Webb was himself a jazz fan and employed an eight-piece band, headed by Dick Cathcart, to provide the music for the series.

PETER GUNN NBC/ABC

22 SEPTEMBER 1958–26 SEPTEMBER 1960 (NBC); 3 OCTOBER 1960–25 SEPTEMBER 1961 (ABC) This half-hour crime show is probably best remembered for its driving jazz theme, composed by Henry Mancini. It starred Craig Stevens as Peter Gunn, a smooth private eye who sported a brush cut and hung out at a nightspot known as Mother's. Also featured were Herschel Bernardi as Lieutenant Jacoby; Lola Albright as Gunn's romantic interest, Edie Hart, the singer at Mother's; and Hope Emerson (1958–1959) and Minerva Urecal (1959–1960) as Mother, the clubowner. For its third season, Peter Gunn moved to ABC; Edie finally opened her own nightspot, Edie's, and two new regulars were added: James Lamphier as Leslie, the maitre d'; and Bill Chadney as Emmett. Blake Edwards produced the series. Edwards also wrote and directed a TV-movie, "Peter Gunn," starring Peter Strauss and Peter Jurasik, which was broadcast on ABC 23 April 1989.

THE PETER LIND HAYES SHOW NBC/ABC

23 NOVEMBER 1950–29 MARCH 1951 (NBC); 13 OCTOBER 1958–10 APRIL 1959 (ABC) Peter Lind Hayes, together with his wife, Mary Healy, hosted two variety shows. The first was a prime-time show, seen Thursday nights during the 1950–1951 season. The second was a half-hour daytime series that also featured Anita Bryant, Don Cherry, and the Four Voices. Hayes and Healy later costarred in a situation comedy: see Peter Loves Mary.

PETER LOVES MARY NBC

12 OCTOBER 1960–31 MAY 1961 This half-hour sitcom starred Peter Lind Hayes and Mary Healy (who were married in real life) as Peter and Mary Lindsey, a showbiz couple living in suburban Oakdell, Connecticut. Also featured were Merry Martin as their daughter, Leslie; Gil Smith as their son, Steve; and Bea Benaderet as their housekeeper, Wilma.

THE PETER MARSHALL VARIETY SHOW SYNDICATED

1976 Peter Marshall, better known as host of Hollywood Squares, also hosted his own ninety-minute variety series, which also featured Rod Gist and Denny Evans and Chapter 5. David Salzman was the executive producer of the show, which was distributed by Westinghouse Broadcasting.

PETER PAN & THE PIRATES FOX

8 SEPTEMBER 1990–11 SEPTEMBER 1992 James M. Barrie's characters came to television in animated form in this half-hour series, which had a special premiere on Fox's Saturday morning lineup and moved to a daytime spot a week later.

THE PETER POTAMUS SHOW SYNDICATED/ABC

1964–1965 (SYNDICATED); 2 JANUARY 1966–24 JANUARY 1967 (ABC) The star of this cartoon series was Peter Potamus, a purple hippo who traveled through history in a giant balloon, accompanied by his trusty ape, So So. Other segments included "Breezly and Sneezly," the adventures of a polar bear and a seal, and "Yippee, Yappee and Yahooey," a trio of canine musketeers. After a year and a half in syndication, the series was picked up by ABC for its Sunday-morning cartoon schedule.

PETER THE GREAT NBC
2 FEBRUARY 1986–5 FEBRUARY 1986 The life of Russian tsar Peter I was dramatized in this four-part, eight-hour, $26 million miniseries, filmed largely in the Soviet Union. With Jan Niklas and Maximilian Schell as Peter; Vanessa Redgrave as his half-sister Sophia; Omar Sharif as Prince Romodanovsky; Helmut Griem as Alexander Menshikov; Boris Plotnikov as Peter's son, Alexis; and Hanna Schygulla as Empress Catherine. Laurence Olivier and Trevor Howard appeared in small roles as England's King William and Sir Isaac Newton, although there is no historical evidence that Peter ever met either of them.

PETROCELLI NBC
11 SEPTEMBER 1974–3 MARCH 1976 This hour-long crime show starred Barry Newman as Anthony Petrocelli, a criminal lawyer who gave up his big-city practice to settle in the southwestern town of San Remo. Susan Howard costarred as his wife, Maggie Petrocelli, and Albert Salmi was seen as his right-hand man, Pete Ritter. Thomas L. Miller and Edward K. Milkis were the executive producers of the show, which was filmed in Tucson, Arizona.

PETTICOAT JUNCTION CBS
24 SEPTEMBER 1963–12 SEPTEMBER 1970 CBS introduced this rural sitcom one year after The Beverly Hillbillies, which had been the number one show of the 1962–1963 season; Petticoat Junction proved to be the most popular new show of the 1963–1964 season, ranking fourth that year. Though its ratings declined sharply after the first year, the show enjoyed a seven-year run and was one of CBS's mainstays during the decade. Paul Henning, who had created The Beverly Hillbillies, was also the creator and executive producer of Petticoat Junction; the half-hour series was produced by Dick Wesson. The large cast included: Bea Benaderet (1963–1968) as Kate Bradley, the widowed owner of the Shady Rest Hotel in Hooterville, terminus of the Cannonball, an ancient steam train; Edgar Buchanan as Joseph P. (Uncle Joe) Carson, the uncle of Kate's three eligible daughters; Linda Kaye as daughter Betty Jo (Kaye, the boss's daughter, was also known as Linda Kaye Henning later in the series); Pat Woodell (1963–1965) and Lori Saunders (1965–1970) as daughter Bobbie Jo; Jeannine Riley (1963–1965), Gunilla Hutton (1965–1966), and Meredith MacRae (1966–1970) as daughter Billie Jo; Charles Lane as Homer Bedloe, the railroad man who schemed to scrap the Cannonball; Smiley Burnette as engineer Charley Pratt; Rufe Davis as engineer Floyd Smoot; Byron Foulger as engineer Wendell Gibbs; Regis Toomey as Doc Stuart; Mike Minor (1966–1970) as Steve Elliott, Betty Jo's boyfriend and eventual husband; Elvia Allman (1966–1970) as Selma Plout, the woman who hoped to wrest Steve Elliott away from Betty Jo for her own daughter; Lynette Winter (1966–1970) as Selma's daughter, Henrietta Plout; June Lockhart (1968–1970) as Dr. Janet Craig, a physician (in essence, Lockhart replaced Bea Benaderet, who had died in 1968); and Jonathan Daly (1969–1970) as game warden Orrin Pike, Bobbie Jo's boyfriend. Other regulars included members of the cast of Green Acres, another Paul Henning series which was also set in Hooterville (see also that title).

PEYTON PLACE ABC
15 SEPTEMBER 1964–2 JUNE 1969 Peyton Place was television's first prime-time serial since its earliest days and was the first successful prime-time soap opera in the medium's history. Based on Grace Metalious's enormously popular novel, which had been made into a movie in 1957, it premiered in 1964 amid much fanfare. It was telecast twice a week during the 1964–1965 season, and both segments cracked Nielsen's Top Twenty that year; as the 1965–1966 season began, telecasts were pushed up to three times weekly, but the show's ratings had already begun to fade.

The show was reduced to twice a week thereafter and lasted three more seasons. The basic theme of the show involved sexual goings-on in the lives of the residents of Peyton Place, a small New England town. The huge cast included: Mia Farrow as Allison MacKenzie; Ryan O'Neal as Rodney Harrington; Dorothy Malone as Constance MacKenzie Carson; Tim O'Connor as Elliott Carson; Frank Ferguson as Eli Carson; Steven Oliver as Lee Webber; Chris Connelly as Norman Harrington; Pat Morrow as Rita Jacks; Barbara Parkins as Betty Anderson; John Kerr as Fowler; George Macready as Martin Peyton; Ruth Warrick as Hannah Cord; James Douglas as Steven Cord; Leigh Taylor-Young as Rachel Welles; Lana Wood as Sandy Webber; Ed Nelson as Dr. Michael Rossi; Dan Duryea as Eddie; Gena Rowlands as Adrienne; Paul Langton as Leslie Harrington; Joyce Jillson as Jill; Warner Anderson as Matthew Swain; Heather Angel as Mrs. Dowell; Ruby Dee as Alma Miles; Lee Grant as Stella; Diana Hyland as Susan Winter; Kent Smith as Dr. Morton; and Mariette Hartley as Clair. Paul Monash produced the series for 20th Century-Fox Television. In 1972 a daytime version was introduced: see Return to Peyton Place.

Members of the cast were reunited for two made-for-TV movie sequels. The first, "Murder in Peyton Place" (NBC, 3 October 1977), investigated the deaths of Rodney Harrington and Alison MacKenzie, and featured Christopher Connelly, Dorothy Malone, Ed Nelson, Tim O'Connor, and Joyce Jillson. The second, "Peyton Place: The Next Generation" (NBC, 13 May 1985), featured Connelly, Malone, Nelson, O'Connor, Barbara Parkins, Pat Morrow, Evelyn Scott, Ruth Warrick, and James Douglas.

PHENOM ABC

14 SEPTEMBER 1993–31 AUGUST 1994 Half-hour sitcom about a "phenom," a fifteen-year-old tennis champ, and her home life. With Angela Goethals as the phenom, Angela Doolan; Judith Light as her divorced mother, Dianne Doolan, a shorthand reporter; Todd Louiso as Angela's brother, Brian; Ashley Johnson as Angela's sister, Mary Margaret; Jennifer Lien as Brian's girlfriend, Roanne; Gina Hecht as Dianne's boss, Lori; and William Devane as Angela's new coach, Lou Del La Rosa, who tried to ingratiate himself with Dianne.

PHIL DONAHUE EXAMINES THE HUMAN ANIMAL NBC

11 AUGUST 1986–15 AUGUST 1986 Phil Donahue hosted this week-long prime-time documentary series, which examined various aspects of the human condition: love and sexuality, heredity and environment, war and violence, men and women, and family and survival.

THE PHIL DONAHUE SHOW SYNDICATED

1970–1996 Phil Donahue began hosting a local talk show in Dayton, Ohio, in 1967; by 1970 it was syndicated nationally, and the number of stations carrying the show increased steadily through the 1970s. By 1977 Donahue had shifted his base of operations to Chicago and the show became known simply as Donahue. His hour-long show is usually devoted to a single topic and features an active studio audience, skillfully worked by Donahue. In January 1985 the show again moved its base of operations, this time to New York. Shortly after the move a team of pranksters victimized Donahue by staging a mass fainting in the studio audience during the taping of one show. Later in 1985 Donahue orchestrated a "Citizens Summit" program, on which studio audiences in the U. S. and the U. S. S. R. were able to quiz each other. Early in 1987 he taped a week's worth of shows in the Soviet Union. Not all of his programs have been as noble, however: for one 1988 program, focusing on men who liked to wear women's clothing, Donahue wore a skirt, and on another 1988 show, on male baldness, he sported a flesh-colored skullcap. During the summer of 1992 some programs were produced even while the host was on vacation. Donahue pre-taped the introductions and other inserts, but unseen production staffers held the microphones used by the studio audience to ask questions of the guests.

By the early 1990s Donahue's ratings had been eclipsed by The Oprah Winfrey Show; other daytime talkers also made a dent in viewership. Donahue tried to one-up his competitors in May 1994 by bidding to televise the execution of condemned

North Carolina murderer David Lawson; his request was turned down by the authorities. A sample of topics covered during April and May 1995 disclosed the following: "Country Music Female Impersonators," "Husbands Learn How to Become Exotic Dancers," "Multiple Personalities," "Penthouse Pets," and "Teen Prostitutes." Ratings continued to decline in 1995, as the show was no longer carried in New York City, the nation's largest TV market and the site of the show's taping. Early in 1996, Donahue announced that he would cease production of the program.

THE PHIL SILVERS SHOW
See THE ARROW SHOW; THE NEW PHIL SILVERS SHOW

THE PHIL SILVERS SHOW CBS
20 SEPTEMBER 1955–11 SEPTEMBER 1959 One of the favorite sitcoms of the 1950s, The Phil Silvers Show was created by Nat Hiken and starred Phil Silvers as Master Sergeant Ernie Bilko, a conniving con man with a heart of gold, whose unceasing efforts to raise money almost never paid off. The half-hour series was originally titled You'll Never Get Rich, but after a few weeks became The Phil Silvers Show; in syndication, the reruns were titled Sergeant Bilko. The show was set at Fort Baxter, located near Roseville, Kansas. Over the years a large number of regulars appeared, but the long-term supporting cast included: Harvey Lembeck and Allan Melvin as Bilko's two main henchmen, Corporal Rocco Barbella and Corporal Henshaw; Paul Ford as Bilko's short-tempered commanding officer, Colonel John Hall; Elisabeth Fraser as Bilko's occasional girlfriend, Sergeant Joan Hogan; Maurice Gosfield as Private Duane Doberman, the fattest and most hapless member of Bilko's motley platoon; Herbie Faye as Private Sam Fender; Billy Sands as Private Dino Paparelli; Mickey Freeman as Private Zimmerman; Hope Sansberry as the colonel's wife, Nell Hall, an easy mark for Bilko's flattery; Joe E. Ross as Sergeant Rupert Ridzik; Jimmy Little as Sergeant Francis Grover (also known, inexplicably, as Steve Grover); Beatrice Pons as Ridzik's nagging wife, Emma Ridzik; and Nicholas Saunders as Colonel Hall's adjutant, Captain Barker. Others who came and went included Tige Andrews as Private Gander; P. Jay Sidney as Private Palmer; Walter Cartier as Private Dillingham; Jack Healy as Private Mullen; Bernie Fein as Private Gomez; Maurice Brenner as Private Fleishman; Terry Carter as Private Sugarman; Ned Glass as Sergeant Andy Pendleton; and Gary Clarke as Sergeant Stanley Zewicki. The Phil Silvers Show was one of the few shows of the 1950s to feature black performers—Bilko's platoon almost always included at least one black. Among those who made guest appearances on the show were Fred Gwynne ("The Eating Contest," 15 November 1955), Dody Goodman ("The Rich Kid," 27 December 1955), Margaret Hamilton ("The Merry Widow," 17 September 1957), Dick Van Dyke ("Bilko's Cousin," 28 January 1958), Alan Alda (in his first major TV role, "Bilko, the Art Lover," 7 March 1958), and Dick Cavett, in an uncredited appearance as an extra sometime in 1959. For its final season Bilko and all of his cohorts moved from Fort Baxter to Camp Fremont in California. Bilko had discovered a map of an abandoned gold mine, located within Camp Fremont, and persuaded Colonel Hall and his command to relocate. Sharp-eyed viewers may have noticed other, more subtle, changes during the show's run; for example, when Schick became a sponsor, the platoon members ceased shaving by razors and lather and switched to electric shavers (which, not coincidentally, Schick manufactured). Likewise, the men no longer lit their cigarettes with matches, but began using lighters (also manufactured by Schick). Two of the show's regulars, Joe E. Ross and Beatrice Pons, later appeared on Nat Hiken's next show, Car 54, Where Are You?

PHILCO TELEVISION PLAYHOUSE NBC
3 OCTOBER 1948–2 OCTOBER 1955 One of the best known of the several dramatic anthology series that comprised television's so-called "Golden Age," Philco Television Playhouse was produced by Fred Coe, who was twenty-nine when the series began in 1948. Like the other dramatic shows, Philco was a training ground for young writers and directors as well as for performers. Philco held down a Sunday slot for its entire seven-year run; from 1951 to 1955 it shared sponsorship with Goodyear on a biweekly basis (both shows were produced by Coe). A representative selection of offerings illustrates the variety of material presented on Philco: "Dinner at Eight," with Peggy Wood, Dennis King, Mary Boland, and Vicki Cummings (3 October 1948); "The Late Christopher Bean," with Lillian Gish (in her TV debut, 6 February 1949); "The Story of Mary Surratt," with Dorothy Gish (in her TV debut, 13 February 1949); "Ann Rutledge," with Grace Kelly (12 February 1950); "Nocturne," with Cloris Leachman (2 April 1950); "Leaf Out of a Book," with Grace Kelly (31 December 1950); "No Medals on Pop," with Brandon DeWilde (in his first major TV role, 11 March 1951); "The Basket Weaver," with Walter Matthau (in his first major TV role, 20 April 1952); "A Little Something in Reserve," with Tony Randall (10 May 1953); "The Way of the Eagle," with Grace Kelly (in her last dramatic appearance on TV, 7 June 1953); "Statute of Limitations," with Barbara Baxley and Martin Balsam (in his first major TV role, 21 February 1954); "The Dancers," with Joanne Woodward (7 March 1954); "Run Like a Thief," with James Dean, Kurt Kasznar, Gusti Huber, and Barbara O'Neill (5 September 1954); Robert Alan Aurthur's "Shadow of the Champ," with Eli Wallach, Jack Warden, and Lee Grant (20 March 1955); and Robert Alan Aurthur's "A Man Is Ten Feet Tall," with Sidney Poitier (in a rare television appearance, 2 October 1955). See also Goodyear Playhouse.

PHILIP MARLOWE ABC

29 SEPTEMBER 1959–29 MARCH 1960 Raymond Chandler's fictional sleuth, Philip Marlowe, was played by Philip Carey on this half-hour crime show. The character reappeared in 1983 in a five-part miniseries on the HBO cable network, Philip Marlowe—Private Eye. Powers Boothe played the title role. Six new episodes were shown on HBO in 1986.

THE PHILIP MORRIS PLAYHOUSE CBS

8 OCTOBER 1953–4 MARCH 1954 This half-hour filmed dramatic anthology series was hastily ordered by sponsor Philip Morris after its first offering in that time slot, Pentagon Confidential, was blasted by the critics. Kent Smith hosted the series, which was also known as P.M. Playhouse.

THE PHOENIX ABC

26 MARCH 1982–16 APRIL 1982 Judson Scott starred in this hour fantasy series as Bennu, a mysterious being from another world who had been sent to Earth centuries previously; released from his sarcophagus, he searched (in the words of the show's promotional announcements) "for the one woman who can save him and the Earth." Also featured were Richard Lynch as Preminger, a government agent who pursued Bennu, believing him to be an ancient astronaut, and E. G. Marshall as Dr. Frazier, a research scientist. Introduced in the spring of 1982, the four-week series was rerun that summer.

PHOTOCRIME ABC

21 SEPTEMBER 1949–28 DECEMBER 1949 Inspector Cobb (played by Chuck Webster) was the chief character on this half-hour Wednesday-night crime show.

PHYL AND MIKHY CBS

26 MAY 1980–30 JUNE 1980 Half-hour sitcom about an American runner and the Russian athlete who defected to marry her. With Murphy Cross as Phyllis Wilson, a track star at Pacific Western University; Rick Lohman as Soviet decathloner Mikhail Orlov; Larry Haines as Phyllis's father, Max Wilson, the college track coach, with whom Phyl and Mikhy lived; Michael Pataki as Vladimir Jimenko, a Soviet consular official; and Jack Dodson as Truck Morley, head of the college's alumni association.

PHYLLIS CBS

8 SEPTEMBER 1975–30 AUGUST 1977 In this spinoff from The Mary Tyler Moore Show, Cloris Leachman starred as Phyllis Lindstrom; as her own series began, Phyllis had just been widowed and had left Minneapolis with her daughter for San Francisco, where she moved in with her late husband's mother and her second husband. The original cast also included Jane Rose as Phyllis's mother-in-law, Audrey Dexter; Henry Jones as Audrey's husband, Judge Jonathan Dexter; Lisa Gerritsen as Phyllis's teenage daughter, Bess; Barbara Colby (who was found murdered after three episodes had been filmed) and Liz Torres as Julie Erskine, the owner of a photography studio where Phyllis found work as a secretary; and Richard Schaal as Leo Heatherton, a photographer who worked at the studio. Judith Lowry became a regular during the first season as Jonathan's crusty and outspoken eighty-seven-year-old mother, Sally (Mother) Dexter. Liz Torres and Richard Schaal left the cast after one season, as Phyllis got a new job as a secretary at the San Francisco Board of Supervisors. Joining the cast were Carmine Caridi as supervisor Dan Valenti; John Lawlor as supervisor Leonard Marsh; and Garn Stephens as fellow secretary Harriet Hastings. In the fall of 1976 Mother Dexter married eighty-nine-year-old Arthur Lanson, played by Burt Mustin (Judith Lowry, who played Mother Dexter, had died two weeks before the episode was telecast). In the spring of 1977 Phyllis's daughter Bess married Dan Valenti's nephew, Mark (played by Craig Wasson). Ed. Weinberger and Stan Daniels were the executive producers of the half-hour series for MTM Enterprises.

PICCADILLY CIRCUS PBS

19 JANUARY 1976–11 SEPTEMBER 1977 Telecast monthly, Piccadilly Circus was the umbrella title for a potpourri of programs from Great Britain: dramas, comedies, and documentaries were all presented. The series was funded by a grant from Mobil Oil.

PICCADILLY PALACE ABC

20 MAY 1967–9 SEPTEMBER 1967 A summer replacement for The Hollywood Palace, this hour-long variety series was taped at London's Piccadilly Palace and hosted by Millicent Martin. Other regulars included comics Eric Morecambe and Ernie Wise, The Paddy Stone Dancers, and The Michael Sammes Singers. Colin Clews produced the series and directed it with Philip Casson.

PICK AND PAT ABC

20 JANUARY 1949–17 MARCH 1949 This short-lived variety hour was no doubt the only TV series that regularly featured minstrel acts. Guest minstrels joined regulars Pick and Pat each week; also on hand were comedian and host Jack Carter and singer Mary Small. Ed Wolfe produced the show and Fred Carr directed it. By the end of the show's run, Jack Carter had begun hosting his own variety show: see Jack Carter and Company.

PICKET FENCES CBS

18 SEPTEMBER 1992– David E. Kelley was the executive producer, and frequent writer, of this hour dramatic series set in Rome, Wisconsin. The small Midwestern town was anything but placid, serving as a backdrop for such issues as euthanasia, bigamy, religious expression, forced school busing, and plain old murder. The cast included Tom Skerritt as Sheriff Jimmy Brock; Kathy Baker as his wife, Dr. Jill Brock; Holly Marie Combs as Jimmy's teenage daughter, Kimberly; Justin Shenkarow as Jimmy and Jill's elder son, Matthew; Adam Wylie as their younger son, Zack; Costas Mandylor as Deputy Kenny Latkos; Lauren Holly as Deputy Maxine Stewart; Fyvush Finkel as lawyer Douglas Wambaugh, indefatigable advocate of unpopular causes; Ray Walston as wise Judge Henry Bone; Zelda Rubinstein (1992–1994) as police dispatcher Ginny Weedon; Kelly Connell as medical examiner Carter Pike; Dabbs Greer as Reverend Henry Novotny; Michael Keenan (1992–fall 1993) as Mayor Bill Pugen, who died by spontaneous combustion; Leigh Taylor-Young (1993– ) as Mayor Rachel Harris; and Don Cheadle (1993– ) as district attorney John Littleton; Amy Aquino (1995– ) as Dr. Joey Diamond; and Marlee Matlin (1995– ) as Rome's new mayor, Laurie Bey.

PICTURE THIS CBS

25 JUNE 1963–17 SEPTEMBER 1963 This prime-time game show, a summer replacement for The Jack Benny Program, was hosted by Jerry Van Dyke. It featured two teams, each consisting of a celebrity and a contestant; one member of the team tried to get the other to identify a secret phrase by suggesting that his or her teammate draw clues.

PIG STY UPN

23 JANUARY 1995–24 JULY 1995 Five guys shared a Manhattan apartment on this half-hour sitcom, one of the first offerings of the United Paramount Network. With David Arnott as ad executive Cal Evans; Matt Borlenghi as Johnny, a young attorney; Timothy Fall as P. J.; Brian McNamara as Randy, a writer and bartender; Sean O'Bryan as Joe "Iowa" Dantley, a doctor doing his residency at a New York hospital; and Liz Vassey as the attractive building manager, Tess Galloway, an aspiring actress.

PIGGSBURG PIGS! FOX

15 SEPTEMBER 1990–31 AUGUST 1991 This animated series was set in Piggsburg, a city populated by porkers, located just behind the world's largest pig farm. The Bacon Brothers—Bo, Portley, and Pighead—did battle with Rembrandt Proupork.

PINK LADY NBC

1 MARCH 1980–11 APRIL 1980 Hour variety series starring Japan's popular rock-and-roll duo Pink Lady—Mitsuyo (Mie) Nemoto and Keko (Kei) Masuda—and American comedian Jeff Altman. The series lasted only a few weeks, in part, no doubt, because neither Mie nor Kei spoke English.

THE PINK PANTHER AND SONS NBC/ABC

15 SEPTEMBER 1984–7 SEPTEMBER 1985 (NBC); 1 MARCH 1986–6 SEPTEMBER 1986 (ABC) A somewhat more mature Pink Panther returned to Saturday morning television in this new cartoon series. Here, he had to keep an eye on his two mischievous sons, Pinky and Panky.

THE PINK PANTHER SHOW NBC/ABC/SYNDICATED

6 SEPTEMBER 1969–2 SEPTEMBER 1978 (NBC); 9 SEPTEMBER 1978–1 SEPTEMBER 1979 (ABC); 1993–1994 (SYNDICATED) Created for the title sequences of the 1964 film "The Pink Panther," the suave but silent pink feline began to appear in his own theatrical cartoons later that year. In 1969 he came to television in what would become one of NBC's longest-running Saturday-morning series. The first incarnation, The Pink Panther Show, ran for two seasons and was hosted by comedian Lenny Schultz and the Paul and Mary Ritts Puppets. The Pink Panther appeared in his own cartoons; a second animated segment starred The Inspector, a bumbling detective inspired by Peter Sellers's character in the Pink Panther films. In 1971 the live action segments were jettisoned, and the show was titled The New Pink Panther Show. Other cartoon segments included "The Ant and the Aardvark" (the voice of the aardvark was provided by Jackie Mason). In the fall of 1976 the show was expanded to ninety minutes and was retitled The Pink Panther Laugh & 1/2 Hour & 1/2 Show. Two new cartoons were added: "The Texas Toads" and "Misterjaws." After one season in that format, it reverted back to thirty minutes in 1977 under the title The Think Pink Panther Show. In 1978, after nine years on NBC, the show shifted to ABC, and was known as The All-New Pink Panther Show. The second cartoon component of that program was Crazylegs Crane, a wacky bird. The title character returned to television in 1984 (see The Pink Panther and Sons). In the fall of 1993 new episodes were produced for first-run syndication. In the latter cartoons the title character finally had a voice; it was supplied by Matt Frewer.

PINKY & THE BRAIN WB

Daytime: 9 SEPTEMBER 1995– Prime time: 10 SEPTEMBER 1995– The title characters of this half-hour cartoon series were two laboratory mice who plotted—always unsuccessfully—to take over the world. The pair originally appeared on Animaniacs. The series was seen on Saturday mornings and in prime time on Sundays.

THE PINKY LEE SHOW NBC

19 APRIL 1950–9 NOVEMBER 1950; 4 JANUARY 1954–11 MAY 1956 Though he is best remembered as the host of a daily children's show, Pinky Lee's first TV series was a prime-time variety show telecast in 1950. A year later he cohosted Those Two, a fifteen-minute musical variety series that lasted a year and a half. His most successful show began early in 1954, and, in most areas, was broadcast immediately preceding Howdy Doody (during the 1955–1956 season it was also seen Saturday mornings). On the half-hour show Lee, in hat and checkered coat, sang, danced, and told stories. Also featured were Roberta Shore, Mel Koontz, Barbara Luke, Jimmy Brown, and Jane Howard. After the show left the air in 1956, Lee was rarely seen on national television, though he hosted local shows in Los Angeles in 1964 and 1966.

PIP THE PIPER ABC/NBC

25 DECEMBER 1960–28 MAY 1961 (ABC); 24 JUNE 1961–22 SEPTEMBER 1962 (NBC) This children's fantasy series was set in Pipertown, a city in the clouds where musical instruments grew on trees. Featured were Jack Spear as Pip the Piper; Phyllis Spear as Miss Merry Note; and Lucian Kaminsky as The Leader (and other roles). The show was seen first on Saturdays and later on Sundays during its ABC run and exclusively on Saturdays during its NBC run.

PIRATES OF DARK WATER ABC

7 SEPTEMBER 1991–5 SEPTEMBER 1992 Saturday-morning cartoon show about the efforts of a young man named Ren to save his home planet, Mer, from the evil Dark Water force.

PISTOLS 'N' PETTICOATS CBS

17 SEPTEMBER 1966–26 AUGUST 1967 One of the first CBS shows regularly broadcast in color, Pistols 'n' Petticoats was a half-hour comedy western. Set in Wretched, Colorado, it featured Ann Sheridan as gun-toting widow Henrietta Hanks; Ruth McDevitt as gun-toting Grandma Hanks, her mother; Douglas V. Fowley as Andrew (Grandpa) Hanks, her father; Carole Wells as Henrietta's daughter, Lucy Hanks; and Gary Vinson as Wretched's bumbling sheriff, Harold Sikes. Occasionally featured were Robert Lowery as land baron Buss Courtney; Lon Chaney, Jr., as Chief Eagle Shadow; Marc Cavell as Gray Hawk; Alex Henteloff as Little Bear; and Bowser, the Hanks' pet wolf. Joe Connelly produced the series.

PLACE THE FACE NBC/CBS

2 JULY 1953–20 AUGUST 1953 (NBC); 27 AUGUST 1953–26 AUGUST 1954 (CBS); 25 SEPTEMBER 1954–25 DECEMBER 1954 (NBC); 28 JUNE 1955–13 SEPTEMBER 1955 (NBC) On this prime-time game show contestants tried to identify persons from their past who were brought to the studio and seated opposite them. Jack Smith was the first host of the series and was succeeded by Bill Cullen, who went on to emcee many more game shows.

PLACES, PLEASE CBS

5 JULY 1948–25 FEBRUARY 1949 Barry Wood produced and hosted this early-evening talent show, which was broadcast two or three times a week. When Wood left in February of 1949, the show was retitled Manhattan Showcase (see also that title).

THE PLAINCLOTHESMAN DUMONT

12 OCTOBER 1949–12 SEPTEMBER 1954 One of the longer-running shows on the DuMont network, The Plainclothesman was a half-hour crime show that starred Ken Lynch as The Lieutenant; Lynch's face was not seen on camera, as the show employed the subjective camera technique. Jack Orrison was also featured (and was seen as well) as Sergeant Brady, as was Helen Gillette as Annie the waitress, and Betty Beuhler as Dottie. The viewer-as-character technique was employed again in 1992. See Likely Suspects.

PLANET EARTH PBS

22 JANUARY 1986–5 MARCH 1986 A seven-part study of the Earth and its geology, oceanography, and climate, narrated by Richard Kiley.

PLANET OF THE APES CBS

13 SEPTEMBER 1974–27 DECEMBER 1974 Based on the movie of the same title, this hour-long sci-fi series chronicled the adventures of two American astronauts who stumbled into a time warp and were hurtled 2,000 years into the future, where they found the Earth ruled by English-speaking apes, who treated the planet's humans as chattel. With Ron Harper as astronaut Alan Virdon; James Naughton as astronaut Pete Burke; Roddy McDowall as Galen, an inquisitive ape who befriended the visitors; Booth Colman as Zaius, leader of the apes; and Mark Lenard as Urko, Zaius's right-hand simian. Herbert Hirschman was the executive producer, and Stan Hough the producer for 20th Century-Fox Television. See also Return to the Planet of the Apes.

THE PLASTICMAN COMEDY/ADVENTURE SHOW ABC/CBS

15 SEPTEMBER 1979–5 SEPTEMBER 1981 (ABC); 12 NOVEMBER 1983–4 FEBRUARY 1984 (CBS) Segments on this two-hour Saturday-morning cartoon show included "Plasticman," the adventures of the "superfantastic highly elastic" superhero and his pals Penny and Hulahula; "Mighty Man and Yukk," the adventures of the world's smallest superhero and the world's ugliest dog; "Rickety Rocket," a talking spaceship and four teenage detectives; and "Fangface and Fangpuss" (Fangface had been a separate series during the 1978–1979 season). The series was trimmed to ninety minutes in the middle of the 1979–1980 season, dropping the "Rickety Rocket" segment. In the fall of 1980 it was cut to thirty minutes and retitled The Plasticman-Baby Plas Super Comedy. By this time, Plasticman had married Penny and they had had a child, Baby Plas, who was every bit as elastic as his dad.

PLATYPUS MAN UPN

23 JANUARY 1995–24 JULY 1995 Another in the wave of sitcoms starring standup comics, this one starred Richard Jeni as single guy Richard Jeni, the host of a TV cooking show. Joining him were Ron Orbach as his pal Lou Golembiewski; Denise Miller as his pal Paige McAlistair; and David Dundara as his dumb brother, Tommy, who owned a bar where the other three frequently hung out. Jeni, who had starred in a January 1993 HBO comedy special also titled "Platypus Man," explained the relevance of the title to TV Guide: the platypus, an egg-laying mammal, "lives alone, is short-legged, and tries to mate frequently but can't."

THE PLAY OF THE WEEK SYNDICATED

1959–1961 The Play of the Week was a New York-based dramatic anthology series that relied heavily on talent from Broadway. Among the presentations were: Graham Greene's "The Power and the Glory," John Steinbeck's "Burning Bright," Jean Anouilh's "The Waltz of the Toreadors," "Black Monday," with Robert Redford, Eugene O'Neill's "The Iceman Cometh" (also with Redford), and "The Closing Door," with George Segal (in one of his earliest television appearances). Underwritten by Standard Oil of New Jersey, the series' executive producer was David Susskind.

PLAY THE PERCENTAGES SYNDICATED

1980 Geoff Edwards hosted this game show, on which two married couples competed. Each couple tried to predict what percentage of persons previously surveyed had provided the correct answer to a given question. The couple with the more accurate prediction won points, and could win additional points by providing the correct answer to the question. The first couple to score 300 points won the game and a chance at the bonus round for a possible jackpot of $25,000 or more. The half-hour show was a Jack Barry & Dan Enright Production.

PLAY YOUR HUNCH CBS/ABC/NBC

30 JUNE 1958–2 JANUARY 1959 (CBS); 5 JANUARY 1959–8 MAY 1959 (ABC); 7 DECEMBER 1959–26 SEPTEMBER 1963 (NBC) One of the few game shows to have been aired by all three networks, Play Your Hunch was somewhat similar to To Tell the Truth: contestants tried to guess which of three objects or situations (labeled X, Y, and Z) was the real one. The show was seen during the daytime on all three networks and was also seen at night in 1960 and 1962 on NBC. It was hosted by Richard Hayes, Gene Rayburn, Merv Griffin, and Robert Q. Lewis. Among the contestants was a young actor named Robert Redford, who appeared in 1959.

PLAYBOY AFTER DARK SYNDICATED

1969 The second of the two variety shows hosted by Hugh Hefner, publisher of Playboy magazine, Playboy After Dark was set at a party—Hefner contrived to bump into his guests and always managed to persuade them to sing a number or tell a few jokes. The Checkmates and several Playboy Bunnies were regularly featured. See also Playboy's Penthouse.

PLAYBOY'S PENTHOUSE SYNDICATED

1959–1960 Hugh Hefner, publisher of Playboy magazine, tried his hand at hosting a variety show in 1959 (ten years before Penthouse magazine first appeared on the newsstand). Taped at WBKB-TV in Chicago, it was set at a party. Ten years later Hefner again tried a TV show: see Playboy After Dark.

PLAYHOUSE 90 CBS

4 OCTOBER 1956–18 MAY 1960 Generally regarded as the most ambitious of television's dramatic anthology series, Playhouse 90 presented a ninety-minute drama each week during its first three seasons. It was broadcast as a series of specials during the 1959–1960 season, and reruns were aired in 1961. More than one hundred plays were presented, many of them live, including some of TV's best-known original works, such as "Requiem for a Heavyweight" and "The Miracle Worker." With Martin Manulis as its first producer, Playhouse 90 premiered in 1956 with a Rod Serling screenplay, "Forbidden Area," featuring Charlton Heston, Tab Hunter, Diana Lynn, Vincent Price, and Jackie Coogan. The following week it presented the widely acclaimed "Requiem for a Heavyweight"; written by Serling and directed by Ralph Nelson, it starred Jack Palance as Mountain McClintock, a broken-down boxer, Keenan Wynn (as his manager), Kim Hunter, and Ed Wynn. "Requiem" won an Emmy for best single program of the season, and Palance also won an Emmy for his performance (Playhouse 90 itself also won, as best new series). Several more top-notch plays were broadcast that season, including: "Eloise," with Evelyn Rudie, Ethel Barrymore, Louis Jourdan, and Kay Thompson (22 November); "So Soon to Die," with Richard Basehart (in his first dramatic role on TV, 17 January); "The Miracle Worker," with Patty McCormack, Teresa Wright, and Burl Ives (written by William Gibson, directed by Arthur Penn, and televised 7 February, it subsequently ran on Broadway, and a filmed version was made in 1962); "Charley's Aunt," with Jeanette MacDonald (in a rare television appearance) and Art Carney (28 March); "Three Men on a Horse," with Carol Channing (in a rare TV dramatic appearance) and Johnny Carson (in his first TV dramatic role, 18 April); "Child of Trouble," with Lillian Roth (in a rare TV appearance, 2 May); "Without Incident," with Errol Flynn (also making a rare appearance, 6 June). The quality of the presentations remained high through the rest of Playhouse 90's run. A representative sampling would include the following from the 1957–1958 season: "The Dark Side of the Earth," with Earl Holliman, Kim Hunter, and Dean Jagger (19 September); "The 80 Yard Run," with Paul Newman (in his last TV dramatic role) and Joanne Woodward (16 January); "No Time at All," with Jack Haley (13 February); "The Male Animal," with Andy Griffith (13 March). From the 1958–1959 season: "The Days of Wine and Roses," with Charles Bickford, Piper Laurie, and Cliff Robertson (2 October); Joseph Conrad's "Heart of Darkness," with Oscar Homolka and Eartha Kitt (6 November); "Face of a Hero," with Jack Lemmon (in his last TV dramatic role until 1976; 1 January); "Child of Our Time," with Maximilian Schell and Bobby Crawford, Jr. (5 February); Ernest Hemingway's "For Whom the Bell Tolls," with Jason Robards, Jr., Maria Schell, Nehemiah Persoff, Maureen Stapleton, Steven Hill, and Eli Wallach (adapted by A. E. Hotchner and directed by John Frankenheimer, it was broadcast in two parts on 12 March and 19 March); Abby Mann's "Judgment at Nuremburg," with Claude Rains, Melvyn Douglas, and Maximilian Schell (16 April). From the 1959–1960 season: "Misalliance," with Claire Bloom (29 October); "Alas, Babylon," with Dana Andrews, Don Murray, Kim Hunter, Barbara Rush, and Burt Reynolds (David Shaw adapted it from Pat Frank's novel, and Robert Stevens directed; it was aired 3 April); "Journey to the Day," with Mike Nichols (22 April); "In the Presence of Mine Enemies," with Charles Laughton, Arthur Kennedy, and Robert Redford (18 May).

THE PLAY'S THE THING CBS

17 MARCH 1950–30 JUNE 1950 This Friday-night dramatic anthology hour replaced another anthology series, Theatre Hour.

PLAYWRIGHTS '56 NBC

4 OCTOBER 1955–19 JUNE 1956 Fred Coe produced this dramatic anthology hour, which shared a slot on Tuesdays with Armstrong Circle Theater; it was also known as The Playwright Hour. Presentations included: "The Battler," with Phyllis Kirk and Paul Newman (18 October); "Lost," with Steven Hill (17 January); and "Flight," with Kim Stanley (28 February).

PLEASE DON'T EAT THE DAISIES NBC

14 SEPTEMBER 1965–2 SEPTEMBER 1967 Based on Jean Kerr's book (which was made into a movie in 1960, starring Doris Day), this half-hour sitcom was set in the town of Ridgemont. It featured Patricia Crowley as freelance writer Joan Nash, suburban wife and mother of four boys; Mark Miller as her husband, Jim Nash, a professor at Ridgemont College; Kim Tyler as their son Kyle; Brian Nash as their son Joel; Jeff and Joe Fithian as their twin sons Trevor and Tracy; Harry Hickox (1965–1966) and King Donovan (1966–1967) as neighbor Herb Thornton, a lawyer; Shirley Mitchell as his wife, Marge Thornton; Bill Quinn (1966–1967) as Dean Carter; Melinda Plowman as Jim's secretary, Terry; and Lord Nelson as the Nash family sheepdog, Ladadog. Paul West produced the series for M-G-M.

PLEASE STAND BY SYNDICATED

1978 Half-hour sitcom about an oil executive who quit his job to run a small television station in the boondocks. With Richard Schaal as Frank Lambert; Elinor Donahue as his wife, Carol Lambert; Bryan Scott as their son, Rocky; Marcie Barkin as Vicki James; Stephen Michael Schwartz as David; and Darian Mathias as Susan. Bob Banner and Ed Warren were the executive producers.

THE PLUCKY DUCK SHOW FOX

19 SEPTEMBER 1992–7 NOVEMBER 1992 Introduced on the syndicated cartoon series Tiny Toon Adventures, Plucky Duck starred in his own Saturday-morning cartoon show for eight weeks in the fall of 1992. On 14 November 1992 Fox retitled the series Tiny Toon Adventures.

PLYMOUTH PLAYHOUSE

See ABC ALBUM

POINTMAN SYNDICATED

1995 Light hour adventure series starring Jack Scalia as Connie Harper, a onetime Wall Street wheeler-dealer who'd been sent to prison on trumped-up charges. Upon his release Connie took over a beachfront restaurant and provided assistance to those who sought his help. The show was filmed on location in Jacksonville, Florida.

POLE POSITION CBS

15 SEPTEMBER 1984–30 AUGUST 1986 Saturday-morning cartoon series based on the popular video game. The principal characters were Wheels and Roadie, two specially equipped "vehicles of justice."

POLICE CALL SYNDICATED

1955 An undistinguished anthology series of twenty-six half-hour crime shows, Police Call was distributed by MCA-TV.

POLICE SQUAD! ABC

4 MARCH 1982–25 MARCH 1982; 1 JULY 1982–2 SEPTEMBER 1982 TV's innumerable police dramas were satirized on this half-hour comedy series, which focused on the Police Squad, an elite unit of a big-city police force. Featured were Leslie Nielsen as Frank Drebin, whose rank varied from Sergeant to Lieutenant; Alan North as his boss, Captain Ed Hocken; Ed Williams as Ted Olson, the demented lab man; Peter Lupus as Norberg; and William Duell as Johnny, the omniscient shoeshine boy. One reason for the show's cancellation, according to ABC programming executive Tony Thomopolous, was that the program required "too much attention" from the viewer; presumably, he was referring to the abundance of sight gags in the series, such as the recurring one in which the title of the episode as announced by the narrator was different from that shown on the screen. Nielsen went on to star in the highly popular "Naked Gun" film comedies based on the series. CBS aired the TV show reruns during the summer of 1991.

POLICE STORY CBS

4 APRIL 1952–26 SEPTEMBER 1952 This early police anthology series, which premiered more than twenty years before Joseph Wambaugh's Police Story (see below), was a half-hour show that dramatized incidents taken from police files throughout the nation. Norman Rose narrated the series, Jerome Robinson produced it, and David Rich directed.

POLICE STORY NBC/ABC

2 OCTOBER 1973–23 AUGUST 1977 (NBC); 29 OCTOBER 1988–3 DECEMBER 1988 (ABC) One of the few successful anthology series of the 1970s, Police Story was created by Joseph Wambaugh, a Los Angeles police officer who wrote such police novels as The New Centurions and Black Marble. As production consultant for the series, Wambaugh tried to insure that it depicted police life more realistically than most other crime shows. Stanley Kallis was the first executive producer of the series and was succeeded in 1976 by David Gerber; Christopher Morgan was the producer until 1975, when he was succeeded by Liam O'Brien and Carl Pingitore. The pilots for two other police shows were televised on Police Story: Joe Forrester and Police Woman. Though Police Story ceased to be seen as a weekly series in the summer of 1977, a few new episodes were shown as specials during the 1977–1978 season. A handful of newly produced episodes, based on stories from the original series, ran on ABC during the fall of 1988 to fill a programming gap caused by the writers' strike.

POLICE SURGEON SYNDICATED

1972–1973 On this half-hour crime show, Sam Groom again played Dr. Simon Locke; Groom had played the part a season earlier on Doctor Simon Locke, in which the title character was a small-town physician. In this series Locke had become a surgeon with the medical unit of a big-city police department. Also featured was Larry D. Mann as Lieutenant Jack Gordon. Wilton Schiller was the executive producer, and Chester Krumholz the producer of the series, which was filmed in Toronto.

POLICE WOMAN NBC

13 SEPTEMBER 1974–30 AUGUST 1978 This hour-long crime show starred Angie Dickinson as Sergeant Pepper Anderson, an attractive divorcée who was an undercover officer for the criminal conspiracy division of the Los Angeles Police Department. Also featured were Earl Holliman as her frequent companion (both on and off duty), Sergeant Bill Crowley; Charles Dierkop as Detective Pete Royster; and Ed Bernard as Detective Joe Styles. David Gerber was the executive producer and Douglas Benton was the producer. The pilot for the series, entitled "The Gamble," was televised on Police Story on 26 March 1974; it featured Dickinson as Lisa Beaumont and Bert Convy as Crowley, with Dierkop and Bernard in their later roles.

POLITICALLY INCORRECT COM

25 JULY 1993– Comedian Bill Maher hosted this half-hour panel discussion show, which took a humorous look at politics and the news. Each program usually featured four guests, chosen from the worlds of show business and politics. The series premiered as a weekly program; it moved to late night on weeknights in January 1994, and to weeknight prime time in October 1994.

POLITICS ON TRIAL ABC

11 SEPTEMBER 1952–30 OCTOBER 1952 Issues relating to the 1952 presidential campaign were debated in a mock courtroom setting by opposing sides on this half-hour prime-time show.

POLKA-GO-ROUND ABC

23 JUNE 1958–28 SEPTEMBER 1959 ABC's second attempt at a polka series (the first was It's Polka Time) was hosted by Bob Lewandowski and broadcast from Chicago. Other regulars included Carolyn DeZurik (who had also been featured on It's Polka Time), Lou Prohut, Georgia Drake, Tom Fouts and the Singing Waiters, the Polka Rounders, and the Chaine Dancers. The show was seen Monday nights in both hour and half-hour versions.

THE POLLY BERGEN SHOW NBC

21 SEPTEMBER 1957–31 MAY 1958 Polly Bergen hosted her own variety series for one season; the half-hour show alternated biweekly with Club Oasis and featured the orchestra of Luther Henderson, Jr., and the Peter Gennaro Dancers. The show's theme song, "The Party's Over," was composed by Jule Styne.

PONDEROSA

See BONANZA

POND'S THEATER ABC

13 JANUARY 1955–7 JULY 1955 Pond's Theater was the new title for the Thursday-night dramatic anthology series sponsored by Kraft Foods from October 1953 to 6 January 1955 (Kraft continued to sponsor Kraft Television Theatre on NBC, however). Sidney Poitier played his first major dramatic role on television in one episode of Pond's Theater, "The Fascinating Stranger," broadcast 23 June; Booth Tarkington's story was adapted by Elizabeth Hart. Paul Lammers produced and directed the hour series.

PONY EXPRESS SYNDICATED

1959 Half-hour western with Grant Sullivan as Brett Clark, roving investigator for the Pony Express; Bill Cord as Tom Clyde; and Don Dorell as Donovan. See also The Young Riders.

POP! GOES THE COUNTRY SYNDICATED

1974–1983 Ralph Emery was the first host, Tom T. Hall the second, of this half-hour country-and-western music show. Bill Graham was the executive producer and J. Reginald Dunlap the producer.

THE POP 'N' ROCKER GAME SYNDICATED

1983 Jon "Bowzer" Bauman, formerly of Sha Na Na, hosted this half-hour game show, which combined a quiz on modern music with guest appearances by rock-and-roll acts.

THE POPCORN KID CBS

23 MARCH 1987–24 APRIL 1987 A little-heralded sitcom about four Kansas City teens who worked at the concession stand at the Majestic Cinema. With Bruce Norris as Scott Creasman; Faith Ford as his unrequited romantic interest, Lynn Holly Brickhouse; Jeffrey Joseph as Willie Dawson; Penelope Ann Miller as Gwen Stottlemeyer; Raye Birk as Leonard Brown, theater manager; and John Christopher Jones as the projectionist, Marlin Bond.

POPEYE SYNDICATED

THE ALL-NEW POPEYE HOUR CBS

9 SEPTEMBER 1978–10 SEPTEMBER 1983 Popeye, the spinach-eating sailor created by Max Fleischer in the 1930s, starred in more than 250 cartoons made for theatrical release; in most of them he tangled with the villain Bluto to save his girlfriend Olive Oyl. Between 1961 and 1963 an additional 200 cartoons were produced, in many of which Popeye faced a villain named Brutus, who closely resembled Bluto. The cartoons were shown individually by some stations, as part of a local cartoon show, or were strung together to comprise a full half-hour. In the fall of 1978 Popeye came to network television for the first time in The All-New Popeye Hour. The latter series originally included such segments as "The Adventures of Popeye," "Popeye's Treasure Hunt," and "Dinky Dog," the adventures of an oversized puppy. In 1979 "Popeye's Sports Parade" was added. In 1981 the show was trimmed from sixty to thirty minutes, and new segments were introduced, in which Popeye was a caveman and Olive an army private.

POPEYE AND SON CBS

19 SEPTEMBER 1987–3 SEPTEMBER 1988 In this updated Saturday-morning cartoon series, Popeye and Olive Oyl had finally tied the knot, and were the proud parents of a nine-year-old son, Popeye Jr., who hated spinach. Popeye's nemesis, Bluto, and his wife, Lizzie, also had a son, Tank.

POPI CBS

20 JANUARY 1976–24 AUGUST 1976 This half-hour sitcom about a Puerto Rican widower and his two sons was a midseason replacement for Joe and Sons, a half-hour sitcom about an Italian widower and his two sons. Popi featured Hector Elizondo as Abraham (Popi) Rodriguez, a widowed handyman who lived in New York with his two boys; Anthony Perez as Junior, the older son; Dennis Vasquez as Luis, the younger son; Edith Diaz as Lupe, their neighbor; and Lou Criscuolo as Mr. Maggio. Created by Tina Pine and Lester Pine, the series was based on the 1969 film of the same title; the pilot was shown on CBS 2 May 1975. Herbert B. Leonard was the executive producer, and Don Van Atta was the producer.

THE POPSICLE PARADE OF STARS CBS

15 MAY 1950–17 JULY 1950 This fifteen-minute Monday-evening variety show was hosted by a different guest star each week. Among the headliners were Paul Winchell (22 May), Arthur Godfrey (29 May), Martha Raye (3 July), and Groucho Marx (17 July).

THE PORKY PIG SHOW ABC

20 SEPTEMBER 1964–2 SEPTEMBER 1967 Porky Pig, Warner Brothers' stuttering swine, had his own weekend cartoon show for two seasons. The half-hour series also featured other Warner Brothers cartoons, such as "Bugs Bunny," "Daffy Duck," and "Sylvester and Tweety."

THE PORTER WAGONER SHOW SYNDICATED

1960–1979 One of TV's longest-running country-and-western music shows, this half-hour show was hosted by singer Porter Wagoner for almost two decades. Bill Graham was the executive producer and J. Reginald Dunlap the producer.

PORTIA FACES LIFE CBS

5 APRIL 1954–1 JULY 1955 Portia Faces Life began on radio in 1940 and came to television fourteen years later. The fifteen-minute daily serial starred Frances Reid and Fran Carlon as Portia Blake Manning, a successful attorney. Also featured were Karl Swenson and Donald Woods as her husband, Walter Manning; Charles Taylor as their son, Dick; Ginger MacManus and Renne Jarrett as their daughter, Shirley; and Patrick O'Neal as Portia's brother, Carl. The serial was also seen under the title The Inner Flame.

PORTRAIT CBS

9 AUGUST 1963–13 SEPTEMBER 1963 CBS newsman Charles Collingwood interviewed celebrities and newsmakers on this Friday-night half-hour series, which replaced Eyewitness. Peter Sellers was the guest on the premiere.

PORTRAIT OF A LEGEND SYNDICATED

1981 James Darren hosted this biographical series, on which stars from the music business were profiled.

POUND PUPPIES ABC

13 SEPTEMBER 1986–3 SEPTEMBER 1988 Saturday-morning cartoon series whose main characters, the wrinkled Pound Puppies, were inspired by the popular line of stuffed toys. Here, the Pound Puppies lived at the pound, but could get out through a secret tunnel. Assisted by their human friend Holly, they tried to outwit Holly's evil guardian, Katrina Stoneheart, and her spoiled daughter, Brattina. During its second season the show was titled All New Pound Puppies.

THE POWER OF WOMEN DUMONT

1 JULY 1952–11 NOVEMBER 1952 Half-hour public affairs discussion program for women, moderated first by Vivien Kellems, later by Mrs. John G. Lee.

THE POWERS OF MATTHEW STAR NBC

17 SEPTEMBER 1982–11 SEPTEMBER 1983 Peter Barton starred in this hour sci-fi series as Matthew Star, a youth who fled his native planet, Quadris, as it was being conquered, and came to Earth; equipped with nascent powers of telekinesis and ESP, he tried to fit in as a high school student. Louis Gossett, Jr., costarred as Walt Shepherd, Matthew's guardian and mentor, who signed on as a science teacher at Crestridge. Amy Steel was also featured as Matthew's classmate, Pam Elliot. In midseason the series underwent a change of producers and of format—Matthew and Walter left school (and Steele left the cast) and were recruited by the U.S. government. James Karen was added as Wymore, the government agent who gave them their assignments. Matthew also found himself endowed with even greater powers, such as astral projection. The series was originally scheduled for the fall of 1981 (and was to have been shown under the title The Powers of Daniel Star), but production was halted after Barton was badly burned when he fell on a magnesium flare during shooting (Gossett was also injured in the accident).

THE POWERS THAT BE NBC

7 MARCH 1992–18 APRIL 1992; 22 AUGUST 1992–5 SEPTEMBER 1992; 7 NOVEMBER 1992–2 JANUARY 1993; 5 JUNE 1993–19 JUNE 1993 Half-hour sitcom, created by Marta Kauffman and David Crane and produced by Norman Lear, about a dimwitted United States senator. With John Forsythe as amiable but empty-headed Senator William Powers; Holland Taylor as his wife, Margaret; Eve Gordon as his mistress and chief administrative assistant, Jordan Miller; Peter MacNicol as his press secretary, Bradley Grist; Valerie Mahaffey as Powers's neurotic daughter, Caitlyn; David Hyde Pierce as her depressed husband, Congressman Theodore Van Horn; Joseph Gordon-Levitt as their son, Pierce; Elizabeth Berridge as the Powers's hapless maid, Charlotte; and Robin Bartlett as Sophia Lipkin, who claimed to be Powers's illegitimate daughter.

THE PRACTICE NBC

30 JANUARY 1976–26 JANUARY 1977 Half-hour sitcom starring Danny Thomas as Dr. Jules Bedford, a crusty but compassionate physician practicing on New York's West Side. PRESIDENTIAL TIMBER CBS

4 APRIL 1952–27 JUNE 1952 On this Friday-night public affairs program, air time was made available to any announced candidate for the Presidency. Robert Trout moderated the series, which was produced by David Zellman and directed by Don Hewitt (who later became the executive producer of CBS's 60 Minutes).

PRESS CONFERENCE ABC/NBC

2 FEBRUARY 1955–11 SEPTEMBER 1955 (ABC); 4 JULY 1956–26 SEPTEMBER 1956 (NBC); 28 OCTOBER 1956–15 JULY 1957 (ABC) The 1955 version of this public affairs program presented filmed coverage of President Eisenhower's news conferences. The 1956 and 1957 versions were panel shows on which guest journalists grilled newsmakers. Martha Rountree, who had previously produced NBC's Meet the Press, was the moderator of the latter versions.

PRESS CORRESPONDENTS PANEL CBS

10 APRIL 1949–22 MAY 1949 Current events were discussed by groups of journalists on this half-hour Sunday-evening program.

PRESS YOUR LUCK CBS

19 SEPTEMBER 1983–26 SEPTEMBER 1986 Peter Tomarken hosted this daytime game show, on which three players competed by answering questions correctly. Each correct answer earned the player a "spin" on the game board; each spin could prove to be worth cash, or could turn up a "whammy," in which case the player lost all of his or her accumulated earnings. In June 1984 a contestant pressed his luck to win $110,237 in cash and trips, a TV game show record for single-sitting earnings. After carefully analyzing videotapes of the program, Paul Michael Larson determined that the whammies appeared in predictable patterns. Following his remarkable feat (which was aired in two parts), the producers randomized the game board sequence.

THE PRESTON EPISODES FOX

9 SEPTEMBER 1995–28 OCTOBER 1995 Half-hour sitcom starring David Alan Grier as David Preston, a newly divorced English professor who quit his academic post to become a writer; he landed a job writing for "Stuff," a New York gossip magazine which consisted mainly of photos. Also featured were Judith Scott as coworker Kelly Freeman; Tommy Hinkley as Preston's strange neighbor, Derek; Matthew Walker as Adam Green, head of personnel; Brent Hinkley as coworker Harlow; and Clive Revill as Larry Dunhill, the editor. Deborah Lacey appeared occasionally as Mary Ann, Preston's ex.

PREVIEW CBS

7 MARCH 1949–5 SEPTEMBER 1949 Preview was a Monday-night potpourri of features, hosted by the husband-and-wife team of Tex McCrary and Jinx Falkenburg.

PREVIEW—THE BEST OF THE NEW SYNDICATED

1990 Half-hour daily magazine show, hosted by Chuck Henry. Regular contributors included Robin Leach (on living), Marilyn McCoo (music), Paula McClure (television), Bobbie Brown (fashion), Dana Hersey (films), and Rona Elliot (celebrity news). The series was abruptly canceled after thirteen weeks.

THE PRICE IS RIGHT NBC/ABC/SYNDICATED/CBS

26 NOVEMBER 1956–6 SEPTEMBER 1963 (NBC); 9 SEPTEMBER 1963–3 SEPTEMBER 1965 (ABC); 1972–1974 (SYNDICATED); 4 SEPTEMBER 1972– (CBS); 1985 (SYNDICATED); 1994 (SYNDICATED) More merchandise has been given away on this game show than on any other show. The series, a Mark Goodson-Bill Todman production, has been seen in several different formats, on network and in syndication, in prime time and in the daytime. In the fall of 1956 the show began a nine-year daytime run, with Bill Cullen as host. The format was fairly rigid then; each day four contestants were featured, all seated behind "tote" machines (manufactured by the American Totalizator Corporation). After being shown an item of merchandise, the contestants bid on it, and the prize was awarded to the contestant who had bid the highest without going over the manufacturer's suggested list price. For most items, each contestant's bid had to be higher than the previous contestant's, and the players were constantly exhorted from the studio audience to stop bidding, or "freeze." Occasionally, an item would be a "one-bid" item, in which the contestants could bid just once, and, in some cases, each successive bid had to be a certain dollar amount higher than the preceding bid. The show ran for seven years on NBC and was also seen during prime time from 1957 to 1963; in the fall of 1963 it moved to ABC, where it ran for two more years in a daytime slot and was also seen briefly in prime time. Announcer Don Pardo was also on hand to introduce the host and to describe the wares. After a seven-year hiatus two versions of the show resurfaced in 1972; both were known briefly as The New Price Is Right. A syndicated version, hosted by Dennis James, was seen in prime time in most markets; the network version, broadcast daily, is hosted by Bob Barker, and in November 1975 it became the first regularly scheduled daytime game show to expand to an hour. On both of the latter versions the format was less rigid; several different price-guessing games were employed, rather than the single form of bidding formerly used. Although most of the show's contestants were ordinary citizens, a few famous or later-to-be-famous people have appeared; among them was Vanna White, who was a contestant in 1980. Within two years she was a fixture on another popular game show, Wheel of Fortune.

As the daytime Price Is Right rolled through the 1980s and into 1990, it became television's longest-running daily game show, eclipsing Truth or Consequences (which, coincidentally, Bob Barker had also hosted for much of its 1956–1974 run). Barker also became one of TV's first game show hosts to let his hair turn naturally gray-white; the decision was approved by the network in 1987 and met with the overwhelming approval of the home audiences. Johnny ("Come on down!") Olson was the series' announcer until his death in 1985; Rod Roddy succeeded him. The show has employed a number of models to show off the merchandise, but three of the longest-serving were Holly Hallstrom, Dian Parkinson, and Janice Pennington. After leaving the show, Parkinson filed suit against Bob Barker, alleging sexual harassment; the case was dropped in 1995.

A prime-time version of The Price Is Right, also hosted by Barker, turned up briefly on CBS between 14 August and 18 September 1986, and a new syndicated version, with Tom Kennedy as emcee, was produced in 1985. Another syndicated version was produced briefly in 1994. Hosted by Doug Davidson, the half-hour daily show featured models Ferrari Ferris, Julie Cialini, and Lisa Stahl.

PRIDE & JOY NBC

21 MARCH 1995–2 MAY 1995; 20 JUNE 1995–11 JULY 1995 Half-hour sitcom about two young families who were neighbors in a New York apartment building. With Julie Warner as Amy Sherman, new mother; Caroline Rhea as her friend, Carol Green, a mother of two (Carol and Amy also worked together at an ad agency); Craig Bierko as Amy's husband, Greg, a freelance writer; Jeremy Piven as Carol's husband, Nathan, an unemployed stockbroker; and Natasha Pavlovic as Katya, the Shermans's nanny.

PRIDE OF PLACE PBS

24 MARCH 1986–12 MAY 1986 An eight-part look at American architecture, with host Robert A. M. Stern.

PRIDE OF THE FAMILY ABC

2 OCTOBER 1953–24 SEPTEMBER 1954 Half-hour sitcom starring Paul Hartman as Albie Morrison, head of the advertising department of the local paper. With Fay Wray as his wife, Catherine Morrison; Natalie Wood as their teenage daughter, Ann; and Bobby Hyatt as their son, Junior. Bob Finkel directed the series for Revue Productions.

PRIME TIME PETS CBS

9 JULY 1990–31 AUGUST 1990 This half-hour summer show was an animal version of America's Funniest Home Videos, relying heavily on footage from viewers of pets doing tricks. Wil Shriner hosted the show, which, like America's Funniest, employed a living room set and a studio audience; Shriner also supplied supposedly witty commentary as the home videos rolled. Also featured was Dorothy Lucey as the show's roving reporter.

PRIME TIME SUNDAY (PRIME TIME SATURDAY) NBC

24 JUNE 1979–5 JULY 1980 A weekly magazine series, Prime Time Sunday was the successor to Weekend. Tom Snyder, host of NBC's Tomorrow, was the host of the hour show, which was broadcast live with taped segments. Jack Perkins was a regular contributor. Paul Friedman had left his job as executive producer of the Today show to head up the production team for Prime Time Sunday. In December 1979 the show moved to Saturday and was suitably retitled.

PRIMETIME LIVE ABC

3 AUGUST 1989– A live hour weekly newsmagazine coanchored by ABC's former White House reporter Sam Donaldson and Diane Sawyer, newly arrived from CBS. As originally conceived, the program would originate from New York with a studio audience, would rely little on previously taped pieces, and would emphasize its "liveness" by featuring live reports from ABC correspondents and unscripted dialogue between Sawyer and Donaldson. The premiere program featured three live interviews. The studio audience was quickly dropped, however, and the show began to rely more heavily on previously taped investigative reports and interviews. On 21 September 1989 Donaldson and Sawyer hosted a live visit with President and Mrs. Bush at the White House. The hoped-for chemistry between the two anchors never materialized; by mid-1990 Donaldson had relocated to Washington, and he and Sawyer no longer appeared together in the studio. Regular correspondents have included Chris Wallace, Sylvia Chase, John Quinones, Judd Rose, and Jay Schadler. By early 1994 Diane Sawyer was appearing on two other ABC newsmagazine programs as well: see Day One and Turning Point. PrimeTime Live scored big ratings for its program of 14 June 1995, when Diane Sawyer conducted a live interview with reclusive pop star Michael Jackson and his wife, Lisa Marie Presley.

PRIMUS SYNDICATED

1971 Essentially an updated version of Sea Hunt, Primus starred Robert Brown as oceanographer Carter Primus, with Will Kuluva as his assistant, Charlie Kingman, and Eva Renzi as assistant Toni Hyden. Primus and his cohorts floated about in such craft as Big Kate, a sort of underwater robot, and Pegasus, a smaller craft used for underwater photography.

PRINCE PLANET SYNDICATED

1966 Another of the several Japanese-produced cartoon series of the late 1960s, Prince Planet was a young lad from another galaxy who came to Earth to fight wrongdoers.

PRINCESSES CBS

27 SEPTEMBER 1991–25 OCTOBER 1991 Half-hour sitcom about three young women sharing a rent-free Manhattan penthouse. With Julie Hagerty as Tracy Dillon, who taught English to adults; Fran Drescher as Melissa Kirshner, who worked at a department store; and Twiggy Lawson as Georgy Delarue, a real princess (of Scilly), who had been Melissa's college roommate. The apartment had been given to Tracy as a wedding gift by a friend of Tracy's fiance, and Tracy stayed on even after the wedding plans fell through; the same friend had also promised the place to Georgy. Princesses was placed on hiatus after Hagerty quit the show in October 1991, but it never returned to the air.

PRINCETON '55 NBC

2 JANUARY 1955–27 MARCH 1955 This Sunday-afternoon public affairs program was produced at Princeton University; it began as a local show the previous year (when it was titled Princeton '54), before going network in January. The 1955 premiere show was titled "Communists and Who They Are," while Robert Frost was featured the following week, on "Enjoyment of Poetry." Steve Krantz was the executive producer, and Harry Olesker was the producer.

THE PRISONER CBS

1 JUNE 1968–21 SEPTEMBER 1968; 29 MAY 1969–11 SEPTEMBER 1969 Regarded by many buffs as the finest dramatic series ever broadcast, The Prisoner was certainly one of the most imaginative and enigmatic shows in TV history. The hour series was the brainchild of Patrick McGoohan, who was its star and executive producer, as well as the writer and director of several episodes. As The Prisoner unfolded, McGoohan, who had previously played John Drake on Secret Agent, found himself living in a mysterious, self-contained cosmopolitan community known simply as "the village." Most of the village's inhabitants were known merely by numbers—McGoohan was Number 6, and in the opening episode he met Number 2, who explained to him that he had been transported to the village because the information stored in his head had made him too valuable "outside" (McGoohan denied that his character was John Drake, though it appeared from the opening sequence that Number 6 was a secret agent who, for one reason or another, had left the intelligence service). Thus Number 6 gradually realized that he was a prisoner, though his prison was an idyllic place with plenty of green fields and parks, recreational activities, and even a butler (the mute manservant was played by Angelo Muscat). Nevertheless, Number 6 was determined to preserve his individuality, and through most of the seventeen episodes, he either tried to escape from the village or to learn the identity of Number 1, the person assumed to run the village. His attempts to escape were always thwarted by large white balloonlike spheres, known as "rovers." In the final episode, "Fall Out" (written by McGoohan), Number 6 ultimately earned the right not to be called by a number and learned that he had been Number 1; as the episode closed, he was seen driving away from the village toward London. In real life, "the village," where almost all of the action took place, was a resort in North Wales called the Hotel Portmeirion, designed by Sir Clough Williams-Ellis.

PRISONER: CELL BLOCK H SYNDICATED

1980 Imported from Australia, this half-hour serial was set at a women's prison, which housed a motley crew of murderers, drug dealers, thieves, and terrorists. The cast included: Patsy King as the warden (or "governor"), Erica Davidson; Gerard Maguire as Jim Fletcher, the deputy governor; Fiona Spence as sadistic guard Vera Bennett; Val Lehman as inmate boss "Queen Bea" Smith, serving a life sentence for killing her husband; Carol Burns as lesbian inmate Franky Doyle; Kerry Armstrong as new arrival Lynn Warner; Pieta Tommano as Lynn's former lover, Karen Travers; Mary Ward as Mum Brooks; Monica Maughan as Pat O'Connell; and Barry Quin as Greg Miller, the prison doctor. The series was an instant hit in Australia, where it premiered in February of 1979; it was introduced in Los Angeles in August of that year and proved popular there, thus paving the way for national syndication. However, because of its graphic violence, most American stations scheduled the series late at night, and the show did not attract large audiences.

PRIVATE BENJAMIN CBS

6 APRIL 1981–27 APRIL 1981; 12 OCTOBER 1981–10 JANUARY 1983; 9 MAY 1983–5 SEPTEMBER 1983 This half-hour sitcom, about a spoiled young woman who enlisted in "Today's Army," was based on the hit movie. The series featured Lorna Patterson as Private Judy Benjamin, who gamely struggled through basic training at Fort Bradley; Eileen Brennan as her frustrated commanding officer, Captain Doreen Lewis; Hal Williams as the drill instructor, Sergeant Ted Ross; Joyce Little as Private White; Joan Roberts as Private Glass; Lisa Raggio as Private Maria Gianelli; and Ann Ryerson as gung-ho Private Carol Winter (Brennan and Williams had also appeared in the movie). The show's spring 1981 tryout was a ratings smash; Private Benjamin ranked fifth in the 1980–1981 seasonal Nielsens, and the network quickly renewed the series. When it returned to the air in the fall of 1981, Little and Roberts had left the cast, and Private Benjamin found herself with three new platoon mates: Lucy Webb as naive Private Lou Ann Hubble; Francesca Roberts as Private Dorsey; and Damita Jo Freeman as Private Jackie Simms. Benjamin and her cohorts eventually completed basic training, and Captain Lewis won her coveted promotion to the position of Inspector General; unfortunately, Private Benjamin was assigned to be her administrative assistant. In the fall of 1982 Captain Lewis became the post's public affairs officer, and Benjamin continued to be her assistant. Webb and Francesca Roberts were dropped, and Wendie Jo Sperber joined the cast as Private Stacy Kouchalakas. Robert Mandan, who had appeared occasionally as post commander Colonel Fielding, also became a regular. Polly Holliday was featured in the final episodes as Major Allen—Holliday had been signed to fill in for Eileen Brennan, who had been seriously injured in an automobile accident.

PRIVATE EYE NBC

13 SEPTEMBER 1987–8 JANUARY 1988 Anthony Yerkovich, who created Miami Vice in 1984, paid homage to the 1950s in this hour crime show. Set in Los Angeles in the mid-1950s, against a backdrop of muscle cars and nascent rock and roll, it starred Michael Woods as Jack Cleary, an ex-cop who took over his murdered brother's private detective business. Other regulars were Josh Brolin as greaser Johnny Betts, who sometimes helped Cleary; Bill Sadler as Lieutenant Charlie Fontana, Cleary's ex-partner; and Lisa Jane Persky as Dottie, Cleary's secretary. NBC announced in October that the series would be "lightened," i.e., that subsequent episodes would contain more humor and less violence. However, ratings did not improve, and the series was dropped in midseason.

PRIVATE SECRETARY CBS/NBC

1 FEBRUARY 1953–10 SEPTEMBER 1957 (CBS); 20 JUNE 1953–5 SEPTEMBER 1953 (NBC); 26 JUNE 1954–4 SEPTEMBER 1954 (NBC) Half-hour sitcom starring Ann Sothern as brassy Susie MacNamara, a private secretary. With Don Porter as her boss, theatrical agent Peter Sands; Ann Tyrrell as Susie's confidante, switchboard operator Violet Praskins; Jesse White as rival agent Cagey Calhoun; and Joan Banks as Susie's friend Sylvia. In the later seasons Louis Nye and Ken Berry appeared as Delbert and Woody. Jack Chertok produced the series and Christian Nyby directed it. On CBS Private Secretary alternated biweekly with The Jack Benny Program; during the summers of 1953 and 1954 NBC carried reruns of Private Secretary as a replacement for Your Hit Parade. The series was syndicated under the title Susie.

PRIZE PARTY CBS

6 DECEMBER 1948–17 JUNE 1949 Bill Slater hosted this Friday-night game show on which the contestants performed stunts. Its full title was The Messing Prize Party, as its sponsor was Messing Bakeries.

PRIZE PERFORMANCE CBS

3 JULY 1950–12 SEPTEMBER 1950 This summer replacement show was a talent showcase for aspiring young performers. Arlene Francis was the host, and Cedric Adams and Peter Donald were regular panelists.

PRO BOWLERS' TOUR ABC

6 JANUARY 1962– Long-running sports show, usually seen Saturday afternoons; each week a bowling tournament was telecast live. Chris Schenkel, the anchor, has been assisted by Jack Buck (1962–1964), Billy Welu (1964–1974) and Nelson Burton, Jr. (1975– ).

PRO FOOTBALL HIGHLIGHTS ABC/DUMONT

15 SEPTEMBER 1950–8 DECEMBER 1950 (ABC); 24 SEPTEMBER 1952–17 DECEMBER 1952; 1 OCTOBER 1953–17 DECEMBER 1953 (DUMONT) Half-hour wrap-up of pro football news. Because the show was broadcast from New York, much of the show centered around the local eleven, the New York Giants. Joe Hasel hosted the show in 1950, and was succeeded by Steve Owen (the Giants' coach) in 1952 and 1953.

PROBE ABC

7 MARCH 1988–29 JUNE 1988 Hour crime show, filmed in Phoenix, starring Parker Stevenson as genius Austin James, who worked for a think-tank and solved crimes in his spare time using the latest in computers and technology, and Ashley Crow as his assistant, Mickey Castle. Writer Isaac Asimov created the series with Michael Wagner.

PRODUCERS' SHOWCASE NBC

18 OCTOBER 1954–24 JUNE 1957 One of the most costly of the several high-quality dramatic anthology series, Producers' Showcase, under the supervision of Fred Coe, was seen approximately once a month. Some of television's most notable single programs were presented on the highly acclaimed series. Among them were: "Tonight at 8:30," with Trevor Howard and Ginger Rogers (both making their TV dramatic debuts, 18 October 1954); "State of the Union," with Nina Foch, Joseph Cotten, and Margaret Sullavan (directed by Arthur Penn, it was aired 15 November 1954); the extraordinarily popular telecast of "Peter Pan," with Mary Martin and Cyril Ritchard (directed by Jerome Robbins, it was first aired 7 March 1955, and was restaged 9 January 1956); Sidney Kingsley's "Darkness at Noon," with Joseph Wiseman, Lee J. Cobb, Nehemiah Persoff, and Ruth Roman (directed by Delbert Mann, it was broadcast 2 May 1955); Robert Sherwood's "The Petrified Forest," with Humphrey Bogart (in his only dramatic appearance on television, recreating the role of Duke Mantee, which he had played on stage and on film), Henry Fonda, Lauren Bacall, Jack Klugman, and Richard Jaeckel (30 May 1955); a musical version of Thornton Wilder's "Our Town," with Paul Newman and Frank Sinatra (19 September 1955); "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," with Katharine Cornell (in her TV debut), Anthony Quayle, and Nancy Coleman (2 April 1956); Sidney Howard's "Dodsworth," with Fredric March, Florence Eldridge, and Claire Trevor (30 April 1956); "The Lord Don't Play Favorites," with Louis Armstrong, Buster Keaton, Kay Starr, and Dick Haymes (17 September 1956); "Jack and the Beanstalk," with Joel Grey, Celeste Holm, Cyril Ritchard, and Peggy King (12 November 1956); Anatole Litvak's "Mayerling," with Audrey Hepburn, Mel Ferrer, Raymond Massey, Diana Wynyard, Judith Evelyn, Basil Sydney, Nehemiah Persoff, Lorne Greene, Nancy Marchand, Monique Van Vooren, Sorrell Booke, and Suzy Parker (4 February 1957); "The Great Sebastians," starring Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in their television debut (1 April 1957). Producers' Showcase almost succeeded in landing Marilyn Monroe, who, had she taken the part, would have made her TV dramatic debut in "Lysistrata" sometime in 1956; after much consideration, she turned down the offer and never appeared in a dramatic role on television.

PRODUCTION FOR FREEDOM ABC

22 JUNE 1952–21 SEPTEMBER 1952 Sunday-night series of films about American industry. See also Enterprise U.S.A.; Industry on Parade.

PROFESSIONAL FATHER CBS

8 JANUARY 1955–2 JULY 1955 Half-hour sitcom starring Steve Dunne as Dr. Tom Wilson, a child psychologist who has trouble raising his own kids at home; Barbara Billingsley as his wife, Helen Wilson; Ted Marc as their son, Twig; Beverly Washburn as their daughter, Kit; Phyllis Coates as their neighbor, Madge; Joseph Kearns as Madge's husband, Fred; Ann O'Neal as the Wilsons' housekeeper, Nana; and Arthur Q. Bryan as Mr. Boggs, the neighborhood handyman. Harry Kronman produced the series, and Sherman Marks directed it.

PROFILES IN COURAGE NBC

8 NOVEMBER 1964–9 MAY 1965 An anthology series based on John F. Kennedy's 1956 book about American political leaders who faced difficult decisions. Robert Saudek was executive producer of the half-hour series, and Theodore H. Sorensen and Allan Nevins served as special consultants.

PROGRAM PLAYHOUSE DUMONT

22 JUNE 1949–14 SEPTEMBER 1949 James L. Caddigan produced this live half-hour anthology series. The premiere telecast, "The Timid Soul," was based on H. T. Webster's comic strip and starred Ernest Truex as Caspar Milquetoast.

PROJECT U.F.O. NBC

19 FEBRUARY 1978–4 JANUARY 1979 On this hour-long science fiction series a team of Air Force investigators tracked down reports of sightings of unidentified flying objects and of contact with alien beings. Featured were William Jordan as Major Jake Gatlin; Caskey Swaim as Staff Sergeant Harry Fitz; and Aldine King as Libby. Jack Webb, the executive producer and narrator of the series, obtained information from the United States government on nearly 13,000 sightings of unidentified flying objects, some of which were used as the bases for the episodes. William T. Coleman, who headed an Air Force investigation project in the early 1960s, was the producer. In the fall of 1978 Edward Winter joined the cast as Captain Ben Ryan, replacing William Jordan.

PROS & CONS ABC

26 SEPTEMBER 1991–2 JANUARY 1992 This light crime show was the successor to the 1990–1991 series Gabriel's Fire, which had starred James Earl Jones. Jones continued to play Gabriel Bird, but the character had moved from Chicago to Los Angeles, where he teamed up with a local private detective. Richard Crenna costarred as Bird's new partner, Mitch O'Hannon, and Madge Sinclair continued her role from Gabriel's Fire as "Empress" Josephine Austin, who became Bird's wife in October. Like most efforts to retool TV series after launching, this one proved unsuccessful.

PROSTARS NBC

14 SEPTEMBER 1991–25 JUNE 1992 Three top professional athletes — hockey player Wayne Gretzky, basketball player Michael Jordan, and baseball/football player Bo Jackson—joined forces on this Saturday morning cartoon series. The three stars were usually accompanied by a female character named Denise. The animated segments were introduced by live–action clips of Gretzky, Jordan, and Jackson.

THE PROTECTORS SYNDICATED

1972–1974 Filmed in Europe, this widely syndicated half-hour adventure series followed the activities of the Protectors, an elite crew of private eyes. Featured were Robert Vaughn as Harry Rule; Nyree Dawn Porter as Contessa Caroline di Contini; and Tony Anholt as Paul Buchet.

PRUDENTIAL FAMILY THEATER CBS

10 OCTOBER 1950–27 MARCH 1951 This hour-long dramatic anthology series was seen on Tuesday nights, opposite Milton Berle's The Texaco Star Theater, where it alternated biweekly with Sure As Fate. Presentations included: "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," with Helen Hayes and Bethel Leslie (5 December); "Over 21," with Ruth Gordon (19 December); "Burlesque," with Bert Lahr (2 January); "Berkeley Square," with Richard Greene and Grace Kelly (13 February); and "Ruggles of Red Gap," with Cyril Ritchard, Glenda Farrell, and Walter Abel (27 February).

THE PRUITTS OF SOUTHAMPTON ABC

6 SEPTEMBER 1966–1 SEPTEMBER 1967 Phyllis Diller's attempt at a situation comedy was unsuccessful. She starred as Phyllis Pruitt, a Long Island socialite who had to make a rapid transition from luxury to poverty when she learned she owed millions in back taxes. Also featured were Reginald Gardiner as eighty-one-year-old Uncle Ned; Grady Sutton as Sturgis, the butler; Pam Freeman as her daughter, Stephanie; Lisa Loring as her daughter, Suzy; and Richard Deacon as Mr. Baldwin, the Internal Revenue Service agent. In midseason the format was changed slightly, and the show was retitled; on 13 January The Phyllis Diller Show premiered, and the Pruitts' mansion was now a boardinghouse. Added to the cast were three new regulars: John Astin as Rudy Pruitt; Marty Ingels as Norman Krump; and Gypsy Rose Lee as Regina. David Levy was the executive producer of the series for Filmways.

PRYOR'S PLACE CBS

22 SEPTEMBER 1984–15 JUNE 1985 Inventive funnyman Richard Pryor brought his considerable talents to Saturday-morning television in this live-action series produced by Sid and Marty Krofft. The setting was an urban neighborhood, with Pryor reminiscing about his childhood to a group of local kids; he then played various characters in the ensuing stories. Also appearing were Akili Prince as Little Richie, the childhood Pryor; Cliffy Magee as Wally; Danny Nucci as Freddy; Tony Cox as Allen; Keland Love as Meatrack; and (in various capacities) the Krofft Puppets. Ray Parker, Jr., sang the series' theme.

THE PSYCHIATRIST NBC

3 FEBRUARY 1971–1 SEPTEMBER 1971 The concluding segment of NBC's Fourin-One, The Psychiatrist starred Roy Thinnes as Dr. James Whitman, a Los Angeles analyst, and Luther Adler as his colleague, Dr. Bernard Altman.

PUBLIC DEFENDER CBS

11 MARCH 1954–23 JUNE 1955 This half-hour crime show starred Reed Hadley (formerly the star of Racket Squad) as public defender Bart Matthews.

PUBLIC PROSECUTOR SYNDICATED/DUMONT

1947–1948 (SYNDICATED); 6 SEPTEMBER 1951–28 FEBRUARY 1952 (DUMONT) The first filmed series made especially for television, Public Prosecutor was a series of twenty-six 17½-minute mysteries starring John Howard as a prosecuting attorney, Stephen Allen, with Anne Gwynne as his secretary, Patricia Kelly, and Walter Sande as a police lieutenant. When the DuMont network obtained the series in 1951, it turned the program into a panel show in order to fill a thirty-minute time slot. Each week three guest panelists—mystery buffs or amateur sleuths—watched an episode (along with the home audience), which was halted just before the climax; each panelist then tried to guess the identity of the guilty party. Warren Hull served as the host of the DuMont version of the show. Other local stations which bought Public Prosecutor rarely bothered to employ a panel or a host, preferring instead to pad the rest of the half-hour slot with extra commercials. Public Prosecutor was produced by Jerry Fairbanks for Jerry Fairbanks Productions.

PUD'S PRIZE PARTY ABC

21 JUNE 1952–13 DECEMBER 1952 Fifteen-minute, Saturday-morning, audience participation show for kids. Broadcast from Philadelphia, it was hosted by Todd Russell.

PULITZER PRIZE PLAYHOUSE ABC

6 OCTOBER 1950–29 JUNE 1951; 2 JANUARY 1952–4 JUNE 1952 Presentations on this hour-long dramatic anthology series were adapted from Pulitzer Prize-winning stories. Included were: Emlyn Williams's "The Late Christopher Bean," with Helen Hayes (in her TV debut) and Charles Dingle (27 October 1950); "The Magnificent Ambersons" (based on the novel by Booth Tarkington), with Ruth Hussey (3 November 1950); Sidney Howard's "The Silver Cord," with Joanne Dru and Dame Judith Anderson (26 January 1951); and "The Happy Journey," with Jack Lemmon (4 May 1951).

PULSE OF THE CITY DUMONT

15 SEPTEMBER 1953–9 MARCH 1954 Fifteen-minute dramatic anthology series.

PUNKY BREWSTER NBC/SYNDICATED

16 SEPTEMBER 1984–7 SEPTEMBER 1986 (NBC); 1987–1988 (SYNDICATED) The title character of this half-hour sitcom, aired on NBC during the Sunday "family viewing hour" (7–8 P.M.), was a seven-year-old girl whose father had walked out and whose mother abandoned her in Chicago; the little girl found shelter in a vacant apartment, and was soon discovered by the building manager, who arranged to be her guardian. Featured were Soleil Moon Frye (sister of child actor Meeno Peluce) as Punky Brewster; George Gaynes as building manager Henry Warnimont, a photographer; Susie Garrett as Mrs. Betty Johnson, a neighbor; Cherie Johnson as her granddaughter, Cherie; Eddie Deezen as Eddie, the building handyman; Dody Goodman (1984–1985) as Punky's teacher, Mrs. Morton; T. K. Carter (1985–1986) as Punky's teacher, Mr. Fulton; Ami Foster as classmate Margaux Kramer; and Casey Ellison as Punky's pal Allen Anderson. The name Punky Brewster was supplied by NBC Entertainment executive Brandon Tartikoff, who had known a real Punky Brewster when he attended The Lawrenceville School in New Jersey; the real Punky Brewster was tracked down for the series and received a royalty for the use of her name. The TV Punky kept Tartikoff's name alive: her dog was named Brandon. After two seasons on the network, more first-run episodes were produced for syndication in the fall of 1987, to be added to the reruns. In the fall of 1985 NBC introduced a cartoon version of the show on Saturday mornings: see It's Punky Brewster.

A PUP NAMED SCOOBY DOO ABC

10 SEPTEMBER 1988–31 AUGUST 1991 Saturday-morning cartoon series depicting the early years of that durable canine sleuth, Scooby Doo, and his cohorts Shaggy, Daphne, Freddie, and Velma. Two earlier animated series—The Flintstone Kids and Muppet Babies—had utilized the same idea.

THE PUPPY'S FURTHER ADVENTURES ABC/CBS

10 SEPTEMBER 1983–10 NOVEMBER 1984 (ABC); 13 SEPTEMBER 1986–8 NOVEMBER 1986 (CBS) Petey the Puppy, a lost dog searching for his family, was the main character on this Saturday-morning cartoon series. Petey had been introduced during the 1981–1982 season on The ABC Weekend Special and was a featured segment on Scooby & Scrappy Doo/The Puppy's New Adventures during the 1982–1983 season. The series was retitled The Puppy's Great Adventures in the fall of 1984.

PURSUIT CBS

22 OCTOBER 1958–14 JANUARY 1959 This hour-long anthology series of thrillers should not be confused with any of the other similarly titled suspense anthologies of the period, such as Climax, Moment of Fear, Panic!, and Suspicion.

PURSUIT OF HAPPINESS ABC

30 OCTOBER 1987–8 JANUARY 1988 Half-hour sitcom set at a Philadelphia college campus. With Paul Provenza as history teacher David Hanley, who had just returned to academia after spending several years traveling around the country; Brian Keith as Professor Roland Duncan, Hanley's mentor, who turned out to be far more jaded and worldy than Hanley had imagined him to be; Judie Aronson as Sara, Duncan's daughter; Wendel Meldrum as Professor Margaret Callahan, an Egyptologist; and Wesley Thompson as Vernon Morris, Hanley's old college roommate. Also making frequent cameo appearances were Los Angeles Laker Magic Johnson (as himself) and Kevin Scannell as Thomas Jefferson, both of whom popped onscreen from time to time to advise Hanley. The series was a replacement for Max Headroom.

THE PURSUIT OF HAPPINESS NBC

19 SEPTEMBER 1995–7 NOVEMBER 1995 Half-hour sitcom with Tom Amandes as Chicago lawyer Steve Rutledge; Melinda McGraw as his wife, Macenzie (Mac) Rutledge; Brad Garrett as his best friend and law partner, Alex Chosik, who announced he was gay in the premiere episode; Maxine Stuart as Gram, Steve's grandmother, who lived in a nursing home; Meredith Scott Lynn as Jean, Steve and Alex's secretary; and Larry Miller as Mac's obnoxious brother, Larry.

PUTTIN' ON THE HITS SYNDICATED

1985 Contestants lip-synched to rock records, and were judged on their performances, on this game show hosted by Allen Fawcett.

THE PUZZLE PLACE PBS

16 JANUARY 1995– Half-hour weekday series for children, designed to teach respect for others, and hosted by a multicultural Muppet sextet: Ben, Leon, Julie, Skye, Jody, and Kiki.

Q. E. D. ABC

3 APRIL 1951–25 SEPTEMBER 1951 Fred Uttal hosted this prime-time game show on which a celebrity panel tried to solve mystery stories submitted by home viewers.

Q. E. D. CBS

23 MARCH 1982–27 APRIL 1982 Set in 1912, this hour adventure series starred Sam Waterston as Quentin Everhart Deverill, a brash young science professor who left the Harvard faculty for England, where he dabbled in sleuthing. Also on hand were A. C. Weary as Charlie Andrews, an American reporter; Sarah Berger as Betsy Stevens, Q.E.D.'s first client; Julian Glover as Q.E.D.'s nemesis, Dr. Stefan Kilkiss, a mad scientist; George Innes as Phipps; and Caroline Langrishe as Jenny.

QUADRANGLE CBS

14 MARCH 1949–22 APRIL 1949 Ralph Levy produced and directed this fifteen-minute talent show, which was set at a campus drugstore.

QUANTUM LEAP NBC

26 MARCH 1989–15 AUGUST 1993 Hour fantasy series, starring Scott Bakula as Sam Beckett, the unfortunate subject of a time-travel experiment gone awry; unable to return to the present, Beckett could travel backward about thirty years, assuming the identities of other people, young or old, male or female. Dean Stockwell costarred as Beckett's holographic advisor known first as The Observer, and later as just Al, who was visible only to Sam. Al provided Sam with some details of his new identities and gave him guidance on the people around him whose lives could be affected by his presence; Al never seemed to be able to give Sam all the information he needed, however, forcing Sam to improvise his way through each new identity.

QUARK NBC

24 FEBRUARY 1978–14 APRIL 1978 This half-hour science fiction comedy show starred Richard Benjamin as Adam Quark, commander of a garbage scow for the United Galaxy Sanitation Patrol. The cast also included: Timothy Thomerson as Gene Jean, his androgynous assistant; Richard Kelton as Ficus, a boring but talkative plant; twins Tricia and Cyb Barnstable as Betty I and Betty II (Betty II was cloned from Betty I); Conrad Janis as Otto Palindrome, Quark's boss back at Perma One, the space center; Alan Caillou as The Head, Palindrome's boss; and Bobby Porter as Andy, the cowardly robot aboard Quark's ship. David Gerber was the executive producer for Columbia Pictures TV, with Mace Neufeld the coexecutive producer and Bruce Johnson the producer.

THE QUEEN AND I CBS

16 JANUARY 1969–1 MAY 1969 Situation comedy set aboard the Amsterdam Queen, an ocean liner that had seen better days. Featured were Larry Storch as opportunistic Mr. Duffy, the first mate; Billy DeWolfe as First Officer Nelson; Carl Ballantine as Seaman Becker; Pat Morita as Barney Cook; Dave Willock as Ozzie; Barbara Stuart as Wilma; Dave Morick as Max Kowalski; Liam Dunn as Captain Washburn; and Reginald Owen as the ship's owner, Commodore Dodds.

QUEEN FOR A DAY NBC/ABC/SYNDICATED

3 JANUARY 1956–2 SEPTEMBER 1960 (NBC); 28 SEPTEMBER 1960–2 OCTOBER 1964 (ABC); 1970 (SYNDICATED) Possibly the most maudlin game show ever broadcast, Queen for a Day awarded merchandise prizes to the contestant who could evoke the most sympathy from the studio audience. The show began on radio in 1945 (as Queen for Today), and when Jack Bailey became its host later that year, the show settled into a format that changed little over the next nineteen years. Each day four or five women were chosen from the studio audience to appear on stage; one by one each contestant then stated what she most needed and why she needed it. At the end of the show the studio audience then voted, by its applause, who should become that day's "queen." The winner was crowned and throned and given her desired prize, as well as other merchandise. Though not all of the contestants told sob stories (one contestant merely wanted to trade places with emcee Jack Bailey for a day, and another wanted her nails filed by Bailey), a tear-jerking narrative was most likely to reap lots of applause. Queen for a Day came to daytime TV in 1956 and soon became the top-rated daytime show; in July of 1956 it was expanded from a half hour to forty-five minutes (in 1958 it reverted to a half hour). The show was based in Hollywood, though Bailey also took the show on the road from time to time; Jeanne Cagney was also featured as the show's fashion commentator. In 1970 the series was revived briefly for syndication with Dick Curtis as host.

THE QUEST NBC

22 SEPTEMBER 1976–29 DECEMBER 1976 One of the few westerns introduced during the 1970s, The Quest starred Kurt Russell and Tim Matheson as brothers Morgan and Quentin Beaudine; the two had been separated at an early age—Morgan had been captured by Indians and raised by the Cheyennes, while Quentin was raised by an aunt and attended medical school. Finally reunited, they joined forces to search for their younger sister, who they believed was still a captive of the Cheyennes. Unfortunately, the series never really got off the ground, for it was scheduled opposite Charlie's Angels and vanished in midseason. Tracy Keenan Wynn created the series; David Gerber was the executive producer and Mark Rodgers and James H. Brown the producers. The pilot for the series, titled "Quest," was aired 13 May 1976.

THE QUEST ABC

22 OCTOBER 1982–19 NOVEMBER 1982 One of the early fatalities of the 1982–1983 season, this hour adventure show was apparently inspired by the film Raiders of the Lost Ark. It told the tale of four Americans, each of whom was a possible heir to the throne of a European kingdom, and all of whom were dispatched on a quest—a series of adventures to determine which of the four was the most worthy person to inherit the kingdom. Featured were Perry King as Dan Underwood, a photojournalist; Ray Vitte as Cody Johnson, a con artist; Karen Austin as Carrie, an assistant shoe buyer for a department store; Noah Beery, Jr., as Art, a retired cop; Ralph Michael as Charles Phillipe, the present King of Glendora; John Rhys Davies as Sir Edward, the king's aide; and Michael Billington as the exiled Count Louis Dardinay, who plotted to thwart the Americans' efforts.

QUEST FOR ADVENTURE ABC

22 JULY 1957–2 SEPTEMBER 1957 A summer series of assorted human interest and informational films.

QUEST FOR THE KILLERS PBS

8 SEPTEMBER 1985–7 OCTOBER 1985 The careers of physicians, epidemiologists, and scientists who have battled to eradicate communicable diseases were profiled on this five-part documentary series, based on the book by June Goodfield.

QUICK AS A FLASH ABC

12 MARCH 1953–25 FEBRUARY 1954 Bobby Sherwood hosted this prime-time game show. A panel of two men faced a panel of two women; the object of the game was to guess a phrase or personality suggested by a specially prepared film clip. Charles B. Moss and Dick Lewis were the producers. The radio version of the series, which used a different format, ran from 1944 to 1951.

QUICK ON THE DRAW DUMONT

8 JANUARY 1952–9 DECEMBER 1952 On this prime-time game show contestants tried to guess phrases suggested by drawings. Robin Chandler hosted the series and Bob Dunn did the sketching. Quick on the Draw should not be confused with other cartoon-oriented game shows of TV's early days, such as Draw Me a Laugh and Draw to Win. The show premiered locally in New York on 27 May 1950.

QUICKDRAW McGRAW SYNDICATED

1959–1962 Segments featured on this widely syndicated Hanna-Barbera cartoon series included "Quickdraw McGraw," the adventures of a bumbling equine marshal; "Snooper and Blabb," a cat-and-mouse detective duo, and "Augie Doggie and Doggie Daddy," father-and-son canines. The series was rerun on CBS's Saturday-morning schedule from 1963 to 1966.

QUINCY, M.E. NBC

3 OCTOBER 1976–5 SEPTEMBER 1983 Quincy, M.E., a medically oriented crime show, began as one segment of The NBC Sunday Mystery Movie and became a weekly series early in 1977. Jack Klugman starred as Dr. Quincy, a medical examiner for the Los Angeles County Coroner's Office. Quincy's intense curiosity about his cases often led him to discount his initial impressions. After ordering additional tests and doing some independent investigative work, he was able to shed new light on matters. Featured were John S. Ragin as Dr. Robert J. Asten, the coroner; Garry Walberg as Lieutenant Frank Monahan, police liaison; Robert Ito as Sam Fujiyama, one of Quincy's assistants; Val Bisoglio as Danny Tovo, another assistant; Joseph Roman as Sergeant Brill; and Lynnette Mettey (1976–1977) as Quincy's female companion, Lee Potter. Glen Larson, the executive producer, created the series with Robert F. O'Neill, the supervising producer. Late in 1977 Jack Klugman caused a minor stir among television writers when he complained publicly of the dearth of high-quality scripts (Klugman himself had done some writing for TV, which included at least one episode of Kraft Television Theatre). During the show's latter years, Quincy became involved with a number of issues, such as illiteracy, that had little to do with forensic medicine; every program seemed designed to give Quincy the opportunity to crusade against some societal evil. For the series's final season, Quincy found a new romantic interest. Anita Gillette joined the cast as Dr. W. Emily Hanover, a psychiatrist; she and Quincy were married on 23 February 1983 (Gillette had played Quincy's first wife in a 1979 flashback episode). Though Quincy's first name was never divulged on the show, a closeup of his business card in one episode revealed that his first initial was "R."

THE QUIZ KIDS NBC/CBS

6 JULY 1949–2 NOVEMBER 1951 (NBC); 7 JULY 1952–18 AUGUST 1952 (NBC); 17 JANUARY 1953–8 NOVEMBER 1953 (CBS); 12 JANUARY 1956–27 SEPTEMBER 1956 (CBS) The Quiz Kids began on radio in 1940 and ran for thirteen years. Originating from Chicago, it featured a panel of five child prodigies who fielded questions submitted by viewers; the ages of the panelists usually ranged from six to sixteen, and three or four youngsters generally stayed on the show for weeks or months (the fifth seat was occupied by a guest child). Joe Kelly, who hosted the radio version, was also the first host on television; he was succeeded by Clifton Fadiman. Packaged by Lou Cowan, the prime-time game show was produced by Rachael Stevenson.

THE QUIZ KIDS CHALLENGE SYNDICATED

1990–1991 Jonathan Prince hosted this daily game show on which teams of three youngsters faced a squad of three adults, competing for cash by answering questions in various categories.

QUIZZING THE NEWS ABC

11 AUGUST 1948–5 MARCH 1949 One of ABC's first network programs, Quizzing the News was a prime-time game show on which a celebrity panel tried to guess a topical news story from cartoons. Allen Prescott was the host and Robert Brenner the producer.

RACHEL GUNN, R. N. FOX

28 JUNE 1992–4 SEPTEMBER 1992 Half-hour sitcom set at a Nebraska hospital. With Christine Ebersole as acid-tongued head nurse Rachel Gunn; Kevin Conroy as Dr. David Dunkel, a newly divorced numbskull who rented out half of Rachel's duplex; Megan Mullally as nurse Becky Jo; Bryan Brightcloud as nurse Zac, a Native American; Lois Foraker as Jeanette, a dietician with a fondness for snacks; Dan Tullis, Jr., as orderly Dane Grey; and Kathleen Mitchell as Sister Joan, a nun who volunteered at the hospital. Katherine Green created the series.

RACKET SQUAD SYNDICATED/CBS

1950 (SYNDICATED); 7 JUNE 1951–28 SEPTEMBER 1953 (CBS) One of television's first classic crime shows, Racket Squad starred Reed Hadley as Captain John Braddock, tireless investigator for San Francisco's Racket Squad, who tracked down a wide variety of flimflammers and con artists. The half-hour show was produced by Hal Roach, Jr., and Carroll Case and directed by Jim Tinling.

RAFFERTY CBS

5 SEPTEMBER 1977–28 NOVEMBER 1977 One of the early casualties of the 1977–1978 season, Rafferty was an hour-long medical drama starring Patrick McGoohan as flinty Dr. Sidney Rafferty, a general practitioner with a gift for diagnosis. Also featured were Millie Slavin as Vera Wales, his receptionist; John Getz as Dr. Daniel Gentry, his young associate. Created by James Lee, the show was produced by Norman S. Powell and Robert Van Scoyk; Jerry Thorpe was executive producer.

RAGS TO RICHES NBC
9 MARCH 1987–15 JANUARY 1988; 3 JULY 1988–11 SEPTEMBER 1988 An unusual comedy-drama with music, Rags to Riches was set in 1961. It told the tale of a swinging millionaire who, eager to impress a client, took in a group of orphaned girls. The cast included Joseph Bologna as wealthy Nick Foley; Kimiko Gelman as Rose, the Asian girl; Tisha Campbell as Marva, the black girl; Bridget Michele as Diane, the blonde girl; Blanca DeGarr as Patti, the tomboy; Heidi Zeigler as Mickey, the little one; and Douglas Seale as Nick's British butler, John Clapper. Most episodes featured elaborate musical numbers, with contemporary lyrics added to classic sixties rock melodies.

RAISING MIRANDA CBS
5 NOVEMBER 1988–31 DECEMBER 1988 Racine, Wisconsin, was the scene of this domestic sitcom. With James Naughton as contractor Donald Marshak, whose wife had walked out after attending a self-improvement class, leaving him to care for their teenage daughter; Royana Black as the daughter, Miranda Marshak; Steve Vinovich and Miriam Flynn as neighbors Bob and Joan Hoodenpyle; Bryan Cranston as unemployed Uncle Russell; and Amy Lynne as Marcine, Miranda's best friend. Curiously, CBS had introduced another sitcom, First Impressions, earlier in the fall on the same evening (Saturday), with an almost identical format.

RAMAR OF THE JUNGLE SYNDICATED
1952–1953 Jon Hall starred in this widely syndicated children's adventure series as Dr. Tom Reynolds, a physician and scientist who worked in the "jungles" of Kenya and India, where he was known to the local folk as "Ramar." Also featured were Ray Montgomery as his colleague, Professor Howard Ogden; James Fairfax; and M'Lisa McClure. Victor Millan appeared as Zahir, Ramar's guide while in India. Harry S. Rothschild and Leon Fromkess produced the series.

RAMBO SYNDICATED
1986 Half-hour cartoon series based on the character created by Sylvester Stallone in the 1982 movie First Blood and two sequels.

THE RAMONA STORIES PBS
10 SEPTEMBER 1988–21 JANUARY 1989 Half-hour comedy-drama series for children, based on the popular books by Beverly Cleary about an eight-year-old girl and her family. With Sarah Polley as Ramona Quimby; Lori Chodos as her older sister, Beatrice ("Beezus"); Barry Flatman as their father, Bob; and Lynda Mason Green as their mother, Dory.

RANCH PARTY SYNDICATED
1958 Regulars on this half-hour country-and-western music series included host Tex Ritter, Bonnie Guitar, Johnny Cash, Tex Williams, Bobby Helms, Ray Price, and Smiley Burnette.

THE RANGE RIDER SYNDICATED
1951–1953 Aimed principally at children, this half-hour western starred Jock Mahoney as The Range Rider, a wandering good guy, and Dick Jones as his youthful sidekick, Dick West. The series was produced by Louis Gray for Gene Autry's Flying A Productions.

RANGO ABC
13 JANUARY 1967–1 SEPTEMBER 1967 Comedy-western with Tim Conway as Rango, an inept Texas Ranger; Norman Alden as Captain Horton, his commanding officer; and Guy Marks as Pink Cloud, his Indian scout.

THE RANSOM SHERMAN SHOW NBC

3 JULY 1950–25 AUGUST 1950 A summer replacement for Kukla, Fran and Ollie, this half-hour musical variety show was hosted by Ransom Sherman and featured singers Nancy Wright and Johnny Bradford.

THE RAT PATROL ABC

12 SEPTEMBER 1966–16 SEPTEMBER 1968 One of the several World War II dramas of the 1960s, The Rat Patrol lasted two seasons. Created by Tom Gries, the series was based on the exploits of a British armored car outfit known as the Long Range Desert Group, which harassed Rommel's Afrika Korps during the war. On television, the unit became an American squad, featuring Christopher George as Sergeant Sam Troy; Gary Raymond as Sergeant Jack Moffitt; Lawrence Casey as Private Mark Hitchcock; Justin Tarr as Private Tully Pettigrew; and Hans Gudegast as Captain Hans Dietrich of the Afrika Korps (Gudegast later changed his name to Eric Braeden). The first few episodes were filmed in Spain; despite production difficulties, the show was one of the more popular new series of the 1966–1967 season and was renewed. Stanley Shpetner was the first producer of the half-hour series but was replaced by Lee Rich.

RAVEN CBS

24 JUNE 1992–3 OCTOBER 1992; 2 JANUARY 1993–17 APRIL 1993 Hour adventure series about a former ninja fighter who teamed up with a former special forces agent. With Jeffrey Meek as Jonathon Raven, a westerner who had grown up in Japan and was now being chased by the Black Dragons while he searched for his missing son; Lee Majors as Herman "Ski" Jablonski, who had served with Raven in the U. S. Army Special Forces and who was now a private eye; and Andy Bumatai as their assistant, B. K.

RAWHIDE CBS

9 JANUARY 1959–4 JANUARY 1966 Rawhide, like Wagon Train, was a western on the move; Rawhide's passengers, however, were cattle, as the theme of the show was the long drive from North Texas to Sedalia, Kansas. Featured on the hour show were: Eric Fleming (1959–1965) as Gil Favor, the trail boss; Clint Eastwood as Rowdy Yates, the ramrod (Eastwood, one of the few regulars to remain with the show for its entire run, became the trail boss in the fall of 1965 when Fleming left the show); Jim Murdock (1959–1965) as Mushy; Paul Brinegar as Wishbone, the cook; Steve Raines as Quince; Rocky Shahan (1959–1965) as Joe Scarlett; Sheb Wooley (1961–1965) as scout Pete Nolan; Robert Cabal (1962–1965) as Hey Soos (pronounced and spelled "Hey Soos," the character's Spanish name was undoubtedly Jesus); John Ireland (1965–1966) as Jed Colby; David Watson (1965–1966) as Ian Cabot; Raymond St. Jacques (1965–1966) as Simon Blake (St. Jacques thereby became the first black actor to be regularly featured on a western series). Rawhide's producers and executive producers seemed to change even more often than the cast. The succession of executives included Charles Marquis Warren, who created the series, and was succeeded in 1961 by Endre Bohem; Bohem was replaced a year later by Vincent Fennelly, who was subsequently replaced by Bernard Kowalski and Bruce Geller. Endre Bohem then returned, only to be succeeded by Ben Brady.

THE RAY ANTHONY SHOW SYNDICATED/ABC

1956 (SYNDICATED); 12 OCTOBER 1956–3 MAY 1957 (ABC); 1969 (SYNDICATED) Bandleader Ray Anthony formed his own group in the mid-1940s and made records throughout the 1950s. His first television program was a summer replacement for The Perry Como Show: see TV's Top Tunes. In 1956 he hosted his own syndicated series, which was later picked up by ABC; it featured the Four Freshmen, Don Durant, Med Flory, and football coach Frank Leahy. Anthony's then wife, actress Mamie Van Doren, also appeared occasionally. In 1969 he hosted a second musical variety series, also titled The Ray Anthony Show. It featured singer Vikki Carr.

THE RAY BRADBURY THEATER HBO/USA

1985–1987 (HBO); 17 OCTOBER 1987–11 SEPTEMBER 1992 (USA) Half-hour sci-fi anthology series, hosted by science fiction writer Ray Bradbury. Many of the episodes were adaptations of Bradbury stories.

THE RAY BOLGER SHOW ABC

8 OCTOBER 1953–10 JUNE 1955 The Ray Bolger Show, which was originally entitled Where's Raymond, was a situation comedy with plenty of song and dance thrown in; this format enabled Ray Bolger to play himself—Bolger starred as Ray Wallace, a Broadway star living in suburbia. The 1953–1954 cast included Richard Erdman as Pete Morrisey, his landlord, along with Allyn Joslyn, Claire Dubrey, Frances Karath, and Betty Lynn. The 1954–1955 cast included Richard Erdman and several new faces: Marjie Millar as Susan, an aspiring writer from Iowa who became Ray's girlfriend; Charles Cantor as Ray's pal Artie Herman; Christine Nelson as Katy Jones; Sylvia Lewis; and Maureen Stephenson. Jerry Bresler produced the series, and Marc Daniels directed it.

THE RAY MILLAND SHOW CBS

17 SEPTEMBER 1953–30 SEPTEMBER 1955 This half-hour sitcom premiered in the fall of 1953 under the title Meet Mr. McNutley; it starred Ray Milland as Ray McNutley, eccentric professor at Lynnhaven, a women's college, and Phyllis Avery as Peggy McNutley, his down-to-earth wife. Also featured were Minerva Urecal as Dean Bradley, Lynnhaven's formidable head; Gordon Jones as Pete Thompson; and Jacqueline DeWitt as Pete's wife, Ruth Thompson. After a summer hiatus, the show returned with a slightly changed format and a new title: The Ray Milland Show. Milland now played Ray McNulty, a somewhat less eccentric professor who taught at Comstock College (the show was subtitled Meet Mr. McNulty). Phyllis Avery was again featured as his wife, Peggy McNulty, but her character became more wacky to counterbalance Ray's shift in character. Lloyd Corrigan rounded out the cast as Dean Dodsworth, Comstock's head. A total of eighty half-hours were filmed for Revue Studios; Joe Connelly and Bob Mosher wrote and produced the series.

THE RAY STEVENS SHOW NBC

20 JUNE 1970–8 AUGUST 1970 A summer replacement for The Andy Williams Show, this hour-long musical variety series was taped in Toronto and hosted by Ray Stevens, who during the 1960s, had recorded several popular novelty records, such as "Ahab the Arab," "Harry the Hairy Ape," and "Gitarzan." Also on hand were British pop star Lulu, American singer Cass Elliott (formerly of The Mamas and the Papas), Steve Martin, Billy Van, Dick Curtis, Carol Robinson, and Solari & Carr.

REACH FOR THE STARS NBC

2 JANUARY 1967–31 MARCH 1967 Bill Mazer hosted this short-lived daytime game show, on which contestants were required to answer questions and to perform stunts.

READING OUT LOUD SYNDICATED

1960 Famous people read literature to children on this Westinghouse series.

READING RAINBOW PBS

1983– LeVar Burton hosted this half-hour educational series, which was designed to encourage children to read more. The show consisted of stories adapted from books written for children, book reports (delivered by youngsters), and filmed inserts.

READING ROOM CBS

22 SEPTEMBER 1962–16 MARCH 1963 Saturday-afternoon educational show for children, on which a panel of youngsters each week discussed a book with its author. Ned Hoopes was the host and moderator.

THE REAL GHOSTBUSTERS ABC

SLIMER! AND THE REAL GHOSTBUSTERS ABC

10 SEPTEMBER 1988–5 SEPTEMBER 1992 A popular Saturday-morning cartoon show from Columbia Pictures, based on the characters from the blockbuster 1984 film, Ghostbusters. The main characters—Peter, Ray, Egon, and Winston—and their ectoplasmic pet, Slimer, did battle against all sorts of mysterious apparitions. After two seasons in a half-hour format, the show expanded to a full hour and Slimer sometimes starred in separate stories. In 1991 the show reverted to a half-hour format. The series should not be confused with another 1986 cartoon series titled Ghostbusters (see also that title).

REAL LIFE WITH JANE PAULEY NBC

17 JULY 1990–4 SEPTEMBER 1990; 6 JANUARY 1991–1 NOVEMBER 1991 Seven months after leaving the Today show, Jane Pauley hosted her first regular series of prime-time programs. The limited run summer series focused on American lifestyles. In addition to Pauley, contributors included Boyd Matson (who filed reports from the road), Marjorie Margolis, Keith Morrison, Ann Rubenstein, and Bill Schechner. The series was seen in an hour format during its summer 1990 tryout. When it returned to NBC's schedule in 1991, it was broadcast in a half-hour format most weeks; approximately once a month it expanded to an hour, filling the half-hour usually occupied by Exposé, NBC's new news program.

THE REAL McCOYS ABC/CBS

3 OCTOBER 1957–20 SEPTEMBER 1962 (ABC); 30 SEPTEMBER 1962–22 SEPTEMBER 1963 (CBS) The Real McCoys was TV's first successful rural sitcom, antedating The Andy Griffith Show and The Beverly Hillbillies by several seasons; during its five seasons on ABC it was one of the network's most popular programs, ranking as high as fifth in the Nielsen seasonal averages for the 1960–1961 season. Featured were: Walter Brennan as Grandpa Amos McCoy, the head of the family, all of whom lived in rural northern California; Richard Crenna as his grandson, Luke McCoy; Kathy Nolan (1957–1962) as Luke's wife, Kate (called "Sugar Babe" by Luke); Michael Winkelman as Little Luke McCoy, an orphaned grandson of Amos; Lydia Reed as Hassie, Little Luke's older sister; Tony Martinez as Pepino Garcia, the McCoys' hired hand; Andy Clyde as George MacMichael, Amos's sometime friend and occasional enemy; and Madge Blake as Flora MacMichael, George's sister. Kathy Nolan left the series at the end of the 1961–1962 season. The Real McCoys moved from ABC to CBS for the following season, during which Luke McCoy was a widower. Janet DeGore joined the cast in January 1963 as the McCoys' neighbor, a young widow named Louise Howard, and Butch Patrick appeared as her son, Greg. Joan Blondell joined a month later as Louise's aunt, Winifred Jordan, who tried to match Luke up with Louise. Irving Pincus was the executive producer of the series, and Danny Arnold was the producer.

REAL PEOPLE NBC

18 APRIL 1979–23 MAY 1979; 25 JULY 1979–4 JULY 1984 Introduced as a short-flight series in the spring of 1979, Real People earned a place on NBC's fall schedule. The hour show was part live and part videotape and emphasized light features on noncelebrities. The original hosts included Fred Willard, Sarah Purcell, John Barbour, Skip Stephenson, and Bill Rafferty. In the fall of 1979 the group included Purcell, Barbour, Stephenson, Rafferty, and Byron Allen. Byron Allen ceased appearing as a regular from 1981 to 1983 though he was featured as an occasional correspondent. John Barbour left the show in the spring of 1982. Fred Willard returned for the 1981–1982 and 1982–1983 seasons. Newcomer Peter Billingsley was added in the fall of 1981, Kerry Millerick in the fall of 1982, and David Ruprecht in the fall of 1983. George Schlatter was the executive producer. Purcell and Willard cohosted "Real People Reunion" (1 October 1991, NBC), a one-hour combination of highlights and new features.

REAL STORIES OF THE HIGHWAY PATROL SYNDICATED

1993– Not to be confused with Highway Patrol, the fictional syndicated staple of 1950s television, this half-hour daily series was a reality-based program depicting the work of highway patrol officers. Hosted by California Highway Commissioner Maury Hannigan, the series used videotapes of actual incidents as well as re-enactments.

THE REAL WORLD MTV

21 MAY 1992– An unusual reality series reminiscent of PBS's An American Family, The Real World took a group of seven young adults, gave them a place to live, videotaped their interactions, and televised the edited results in thirteen-week segments. Each season focused on a new group (selected from among thousands of hopefuls), housed in a new city. The 1992 crew lived in a Manhattan loft, and the seven residents were known only by their first names: Julie, 19, a dancer; Eric, 20, a model; Kevin, 25, a writer; Rebecca, 24, a singer; Norman, 24, an artist; Andre, 21, a rocker; and Heather, 21, a rapper. Eric remained at MTV that fall. Now using his full name—Eric Nies—he hosted a dance series, The Grind.

The Real World of 1993 housed its group at the beach in Venice, California: Beth S., an actress; Dominic, from Ireland; Irene, a deputy marshal; Jon, a virgin from Kentucky; Tami, a singer; Aaron, a surfer; and Dave, a comic who was ejected from the house (and the series) after pulling a blanket off a half-naked Tami. After Dave's departure Glen moved in, as did Beth A.

The 1994 edition of the series placed its unusually diverse septet in San Francisco: Cory Murphy, Judd Winick, Mohammed Bilal, Pam Ling, Pedro Zamora, David Rainey (better known as Puck), and Rachel Campos. The hygienically challenged Puck, who worked as a bicycle messenger, so alienated his housemates that they voted to eject him after a few weeks. He was replaced by Joanna Rhodes, who had formerly lived in England. Zamora, who had revealed to the others that he was HIV-positive, died of AIDS in November 1994, a few days after the last telecast of that season's programs.

The 1995 edition brought an international group together in a large house in London: Kat, a nineteen-year-old American fencer; Jay, a playwright, also a nineteen-year-old American; Mike, a twenty-one-year-old American who liked to race autos; Sharon, a twenty-year-old English singer and songwriter; Neil, a twenty-four-year-old English rocker; Jacinda, a twenty-two-year-old Australian model; and Lars, a twenty-four-year-old German, an aspiring deejay.

The series was created by Mary-Ellis Bunim and Jon Murray.

REALITIES PBS

5 OCTOBER 1970–20 SEPTEMBER 1971 Umbrella title for a series of independently produced documentaries.

REALLY WILD ANIMALS CBS

16 SEPTEMBER 1995– Half-hour Saturday series of wildlife films, produced by National Geographic. The show was hosted and narrated by an animated globe named Spin, whose voice was supplied by Dudley Moore.

REASONABLE DOUBTS NBC

26 SEPTEMBER 1991–31 JULY 1993 Marlee Matlin made history as the first deaf performer to star in a television series. She played Tess Kaufman, a Chicago assistant district attorney. Mark Harmon costarred as Detective Richard "Dicky" Cobb, who was her investigator and (because he knew American Sign Language) translator. Also featured were Nancy Everhard as Dicky's girlfriend, Kay Lockman; William Converse-Roberts as Tess's boss, division chief Arthur Gold; Tim Grimm (1991–1992) as Tess's estranged husband, Bruce; Kay Lenz (1992–1993) as attorney Maggie Zombro; Vanessa Angel (1992–1993) as Officer Peggy Eliot; and Jim Pirri (1992–1993) as Tess's boyfriend, Asher. Robert Singer created the series.

THE REASONER REPORT ABC

24 FEBRUARY 1973–28 JUNE 1975 ABC newsman Harry Reasoner hosted this news analysis and commentary program, seen on weekends. Albert T. Primo was executive producer for ABC News.

THE REBEL ABC

4 OCTOBER 1959–17 SEPTEMBER 1961 This half-hour western was billed as more cerebral than most, but whether it really was more intellectual was a matter of opinion. Nick Adams starred as Johnny Yuma, a former Confederate soldier who "roamed through the West," presumably searching for an inner peace. The Rebel's familiar theme song was sung by Johnny Cash. The show was produced by Goodson-Todman Productions (one of the few nongame shows produced by that outfit) in association with Celestial Productions and Fen-Ker-Ada Productions.

REBOOT ABC

10 SEPTEMBER 1994– Innovative Saturday morning cartoon series which utilized computer-generated animation techniques. The series was set inside a computer, where the hero, Bob, and his pals Enzo and Dot, battled the evil virus MegaByte and his sidekicks Hack and Slash. The series expanded from thirty to sixty minutes for a few weeks during the summer of 1995.

REBOP PBS

1976–1979 A half-hour series aimed at preteenagers, Rebop consisted mainly of filmed segments about children of many different cultural and ethnic backgrounds. Topper Carew was executive producer for WGBH-TV, Boston. LeVar Burton, star of Roots, became the host in the fall of 1978.

REBOUND ABC/DUMONT

8 FEBRUARY 1952–30 MAY 1952 (ABC); 5 DECEMBER 1952–16 JANUARY 1953 (DUMONT) An undistinguished half-hour dramatic anthology series. Lee Marvin played his first major TV dramatic role on one episode, "The Mine," aired 29 February.

THE REBUS GAME ABC

29 MARCH 1965–24 SEPTEMBER 1965 Jack Linkletter hosted this daytime game show, which featured two two-member teams. The object of the game was for one player to guess a word or phrase from drawings sketched by his or her partner.

REBUTTAL CBS

12 JUNE 1960–4 SEPTEMBER 1960 Sunday-afternoon series of debates between teams from colleges and universities, moderated by Jack Kennedy.

RED BARBER'S CLUB HOUSE CBS

2 JULY 1949–18 FEBRUARY 1950; 12 SEPTEMBER 1953–12 DECEMBER 1953 This Saturday-evening sports show was hosted by veteran sportscaster Red Barber; produced by John Peyser and John Derr, the show was simulcast on radio in 1950. The 1953 show, titled Peak of the Sports News, was seen Saturday evenings.

THE RED BUTTONS SHOW CBS/NBC

14 OCTOBER 1952–14 JUNE 1954 (CBS); 1 OCTOBER 1954–27 MAY 1955 (NBC) Though it is scarcely recalled today, The Red Buttons Show was hailed almost universally as the most promising new show of the 1952–1953 season (Buttons even appeared on the cover of Time magazine that season). But by the end of its second season, after several changes in format and writers, the show's popularity had sagged considerably, and it was dropped by CBS. NBC picked up the show for the 1954–1955 season (where it was slated on Friday nights, with The Jack Carson Show occupying the slot approximately every fourth week), but it did even less well. Buttons had had considerable experience as a burlesque comedian, and his show began as a comedy-variety show; it was introduced by his familiar theme song, "The Ho Ho Song." The half-hour series was produced by Jess Kimmell and directed by Peter Kass. Other regulars included Dorothy Joliffe (who often played his wife in sketches), Joe Silver, Jeanne Carson, Sara Seegar, Jimmy Little, Ralph Stanley, Sammy Birch, and the Elliott Lawrence Orchestra. By the end of the 1953–1954 season, however, the show had become a situation comedy and remained a sitcom when it switched networks that fall. In the new format Buttons played himself, a television comedian, and Phyllis Kirk played his wife; Paul Lynde, a newcomer to TV, was also featured as a network vice president. After the demise of his series, Buttons continued to appear in dramatic roles on television and on film, winning an Academy Award in 1957 for his performance in Sayonara. Buttons later starred in a 1966 sitcom: see The Double Life of Henry Phyfe.

THE RED HAND GANG NBC

10 SEPTEMBER 1977–21 JANUARY 1978 Five juvenile detectives were the central characters in this live-action Saturday-morning show. Featured were Matthew Laborteaux as Frankie; J. R. Miller as J. R.; Jolie Newman as Joanne; James Bond as Doc; and Johnny Brogna as Li'l Bill.

THE RED ROWE SHOW CBS

16 NOVEMBER 1959–8 JULY 1960 Red Rowe hosted a daytime variety series of little note, which featured Bill Cunningham and Peggy Taylor.

RED SHOE DIARIES SHO

27 JUNE 1992– Erotic tales, many directed by Zalman King, were the grist of this occasionally scheduled anthology series. The series was preceded by a made-for-TV movie of the same title, which aired on Showtime 16 May 1992.

THE RED SKELTON SHOW NBC/CBS

30 SEPTEMBER 1951–21 JUNE 1953 (NBC); 22 SEPTEMBER 1953–23 JUNE 1970 (CBS); 14 SEPTEMBER 1970–29 AUGUST 1971 (NBC) One of television's most popular comedians, Red Skelton hosted his own series for twenty years, seventeen of them on CBS. Active in show business from boyhood, Skelton had extensive experience in vaudeville before he began his own radio series in 1941. On that show, which lasted until 1953, Skelton developed most of the characters that he would later bring to television—Junior (the Mean Widdle Kid), Freddie the Freeloader, Clem Kadiddlehopper, George Appleby, Sheriff Deadeye, Willy Lump Lump, Cauliflower McPugg, Cookie the Sailor, San Fernando Red, Bolivar Shagnasty, and others. As Skelton's real comedic talents were in the realm of pantomime, pratfalls, and sight gags, his television series proved to be even more popular than the radio show had been—unlike many other radio comedians, Skelton was able to bring something more to television than his voice. Skelton's first NBC series, which he produced with Freeman Keyes, was a half-hour program seen on Sunday evenings; it also featured Lucy Knoch, and ranked fourth overall that year, just behind I Love Lucy. In the fall of 1953 Skelton moved to a Tuesday-night slot on CBS, where he remained until 1970. The CBS show, which expanded to an hour in the fall of 1962, cracked Nielsen's Top Twenty in its third season and remained there until its cancellation (The Red Skelton Hour ranked seventh in its final year on CBS, but, because of rising production costs, had become only marginally profitable to the network). One of Skelton's writers in the early seasons on CBS was Johnny Carson; Carson unexpectedly got a big break one day in 1954, when he was summoned on a few hours' notice to fill in for Skelton, who had knocked himself unconscious during rehearsal. Carson, whose previous on-camera experience had been limited to a local show and a summertime game show, performed admirably and was given his own show by CBS in 1955. Skelton, an inveterate ad-libber, delighted in breaking up his guest stars, and very few comedy sketches appeared to have been performed precisely as written. Musical groups were also featured on the series; the Rolling Stones made one of their earliest American television appearances on 22 September 1964. Skelton's final series, on NBC, was a half-hour comedy-variety show with a large cast of regulars, including Jan Arvan, Elsie Baker, Jackson Bostwick, Yvonne Ewald, Chanin Hale, Dorothy Love, John Magruder, Ida Mae McKenzie, Janos Prohaska, Peggy Rea, Mike Wagner, and the Burgundy Street Singers. The David Rose Orchestra was long associated with Skelton's shows. Vice President Spiro Agnew appeared on the 1970 premiere of the series.

THE REDD FOXX COMEDY HOUR ABC

15 SEPTEMBER 1977–26 JANUARY 1978 Redd Foxx left Sanford and Son to star in his own hour comedy-variety show. The series had a few bright moments but was generally uneven and was dropped in midseason. Regulars included Slappy White, Damita Jo, LaWanda Page, Hal Smith, Billy Barty, Bill Saluga (as Raymond J. Johnson), and "Iron Jaw" Wilson. Redd Foxx was the executive producer, Allan Blye and Bob Einstein the producers.

THE REDD FOXX SHOW ABC

18 JANUARY 1986–19 APRIL 1986 This half-hour sitcom changed formats slightly during its twelve-episode run. It starred Redd Foxx as Al Hughes, who ran a coffee shop/newsstand in New York City. (Foxx, who chose characters' names from his own past in his TV series, selected the name of an uncle this time.) Originally, Hughes was a widower who agreed to become a foster parent to a teenaged white girl. Pamela Segall played his ward, Toni Rutledge. After a few weeks, however, Hughes suddenly acquired an ex-wife, and his foster daughter was dropped from the cast. (ABC claimed that research studies showed that Foxx's fans "preferred him grumpier"). Beverly Todd joined the cast in March as Felicia, Al's ex, as did Sinbad as Al's son, Byron. Other regulars were Rosana DeSoto as waitress Diana Olmos; Barry Van Dyke as Sergeant Dwight Stryker, a cop; Nathaniel Taylor and Teddy Wilson as Jim-Jam; and Ursaline Bryant as Darice.

REDIGO

See EMPIRE

THE REEL GAME ABC

18 JANUARY 1971–3 MAY 1971 Jack Barry hosted this prime-time game show on which three contestants competed. The questions concerned famous people and events, and the answers were "verified" by showing newsreel or other documentary film footage.

REGGIE ABC

2 AUGUST 1983–1 SEPTEMBER 1983 This half-hour sitcom was based on a British series, The Fall and Rise of Reginald Perrin. The American version starred Richard Mulligan as Reggie Potter, an advertising executive at a dessert company who tried to cope with middle age. Other regulars included Barbara Barrie as his patient wife, Elizabeth; Timothy Busfield as their son, Mark, an aspiring actor; Dianne Kay as their daughter, Linda; Timothy Stack as Linda's boring husband, Tom; Jean Smart as Reggie's secretary, Joan; and Chip Zien as Reggie's high-powered young boss, C. J. The show made frequent use of intercuts in which Reggie acted out his fantasies.

THE REGIS PHILBIN SHOW SYNDICATED

1964–1965 Regis Philbin succeeded Steve Allen as host of Westinghouse's syndicated ninety-minute talk show. Philbin had earlier hosted Philbin's People, a talk show telecast in New York and Los Angeles, and later became Joey Bishop's sidekick on The Joey Bishop Show.

THE REGIS PHILBIN SHOW NBC

30 NOVEMBER 1981–9 APRIL 1982 Half-hour daytime talk show, hosted by Regis Philbin; Philbin was joined by a celebrity cohost each week until late fall, when Mary Hart became the permanent cohost.

REGIS PHILBIN'S LIFESTYLES LIFETIME

1982–1988 Weekday talk show hosted by Regis Philbin. Known in its early years as Health Styles, it featured segments on health, fitness, and cooking.

THE RELUCTANT DRAGON AND MR. TOAD ABC

12 SEPTEMBER 1970–17 SEPTEMBER 1972 Weekend cartoon series based loosely on The Wind in the Willows. The Reluctant Dragon was named Tobias and was featured in one segment, while Mr. Toad was the main character in his own segment. Both creatures were originally featured in stories by Kenneth Grahame.

REMEMBER THIS DATE NBC

14 NOVEMBER 1950–28 JUNE 1951 Bill Stern hosted this audience participation game show, which was seen Tuesday and Thursday afternoons.

REMINGTON STEELE NBC

1 OCTOBER 1982–2 AUGUST 1986; 5 JANUARY 1987–9 MARCH 1987 Stephanie Zimbalist (daughter of Efrem Zimbalist, Jr.) starred in this hour crime show as Laura Holt, a private detective who had attracted very little business operating under her own name; things began to improve after she set up an agency under the name Remington Steele (Holt was always able to convince clients that the fictitious Steele was out of the office or on assignment). Shortly thereafter, a mysterious man showed up, claiming to be the real Remington Steele, and the two joined forces. Pierce Brosnan costarred as the debonair Steele. Also featured during the first season were James Read as Holt's assistant, Murphy Michaels, and Janet DeMay as the secretary, Bernice Fox. Read and DeMay were dropped in 1983, and Doris Roberts joined the cast as Mildred Krebs, an IRS agent who was trailing Steele but who later decided to work for Steele and Holt. Meanwhile, over the course of the series' run, Holt and Steele found themselves attracted to each other and gradually fell in love. Holt married Steele at the end of the 1985–1986 season in order to keep him from being deported, and the two finally consummated their relationship during the show's all too brief final season, which consisted of only five telecasts: two two-hour movies, a third movie shown in two weekly installments, and a rerun.

REMOTE CONTROL MTV/SYNDICATED

7 DECEMBER 1987–2 MARCH 1990 (MTV); 1989–1990 (SYNDICATED) An irreverent game show, Remote Control started on MTV before being offered in national syndication. It was a quiz show for the young; almost all of the questions were about television and pop music. Ken Ober was the host, Colin Quinn his not-so-genial sidekick; Marisol Massey (1987–1988), Kari Wuhrer, and Steve Trecasse also helped out. The show's set was the basement of Ober's parents' house at 72 Whooping Cough Lane in suburbia. Each day three contestants competed, securely strapped into naugahyde chairs with bowls of popcorn in front of them. Losers were unceremoniously whisked offstage while still in their chairs.

THE REN & STIMPY SHOW NICK

11 AUGUST 1991– Ostensibly intended for children, this cartoon series soon found its audience among young adults. The title characters were a chihuahua named Ren and a cat named Stimpy, whose interest in matters crude and scatological was rivaled only by that of Beavis and Butt-head. John Kricfalusi created the series and served as its first producer; he was demoted to creative consultant in 1992 because of delays in the production of new episodes.

RENDEZVOUS ABC

13 FEBRUARY 1952–5 MARCH 1952 Ilona Massey starred in this half-hour adventure series as the owner of a nightclub in Nazi-occupied Paris during World War II.

RENDEZVOUS SYNDICATED

1958 Charles Drake hosted this half-hour dramatic anthology series.

RENDEZVOUS WITH MUSIC NBC

11 JULY 1950–8 AUGUST 1950 Half-hour musical series featuring Carol Reed, Don Gallagher, and the Tony DeSimone Trio. See also Melody, Harmony & Rhythm.

RENEGADE SYNDICATED

1992– This hour adventure series from Stephen J. Cannell Productions starred Lorenzo Lamas as Reno Raines, a police officer who was framed for murder after uncovering corruption in the force; now on the run, he helped out people in distress while trying to clear his name and nail his framers. Also featured were Branscombe Richmond as Bobby Sixkiller and Kathleen Kinmont as Bobby's stepsister, Cheyenne Phillips, who had been dispatched to kill Raines but eventually joined forces with him. Stephen J. Cannell appeared occasionally as Lieutenant Donald "Dutch" Dickerson, the bad cop who was trying to catch Raines. Lorenzo Lamas was married to costar Kathleen Kinmont when production began in 1992; they continued to work together even after their marriage ended.

THE RENEGADES ABC

4 MARCH 1983–8 APRIL 1983 Based on a 1982 made-for-TV movie, this hour crime show was reminiscent of The Mod Squad. Here, the members of a youth gang agreed to become "special deputies" to assist the Los Angeles Police. With Patrick Swayze as Bandit; Randy Brooks as Eagle; Paul Mones as J.T.; Tracy Scoggins as Tracy; Robert Thaler as Dancer; Brian Tochi as Dragon; Fausto Bara as Gaucho; Kurtwood Smith as Captain Sheridan; and James Luisi as their liaison, Lieutenant Marciano. The Renegades was the lowest-rated prime-time dramatic series of the 1982–1983 season; only NBC's newsmagazine show, Monitor, finished lower.

REPORT CARD FOR PARENTS DUMONT

1 DECEMBER 1952–2 FEBRUARY 1953 Half-hour prime-time discussion show on child behavior and education.

REPORT TO MURPHY CBS

5 APRIL 1982–31 MAY 1982 Half-hour sitcom starring Michael Keaton as Eddie Murphy, an idealistic young parole officer working in a large city. Joining him were Olivia Cole as his supervisor, Blanche; Donna Ponterotto as Lucy; Donnelly Rhodes as Charlie; and Peter Jurasik as Vernon Culley, an officer from the Internal Affairs Department who usually hassled Murphy.

THE REPORTER CBS

25 SEPTEMBER 1964–18 DECEMBER 1964 The New York Globe was the setting for this hour-long dramatic series. Featured were Harry Guardino as reporter Danny Taylor; Gary Merrill as city editor Lou Sheldon; George O'Hanlon as Danny's pal, cabbie Artie Burns; and Remo Pisani as bartender Ike Dawson. Created by Jerome Weidman, the series was developed by Keefe Brasselle.

THE REPORTERS FOX

30 JULY 1988–31 MARCH 1990 Hour newsmagazine show, featuring investigative reports and "dramatic recreations" of events. The original reporters were Rafael Abramovitz, Krista Bradford, Steve Dunleavy, and Steve Dunlop; Abramovitz and Dunlop were succeeded by Jim Paymar and Steve Wilson; Kristin Altman and Bob Drury were later added. Celebrity guest reporters were also featured during the second season.

RESCUE 8 SYNDICATED

1958 This half-hour series about a pair of rescue workers was the antecedent of NBC's Emergency! It starred Jim Davis as Wes Cameron and Lang Jeffries as Skip Johnson.

RESCUE 911 CBS

5 SEPTEMBER 1989–13 SEPTEMBER 1995; 1 FEBRUARY 1996– An hour "actuality" series, hosted by William Shatner, which employed newsreel footage, interviews, and dramatic recreations of all kinds of rescue situations involving firefighters, paramedics, police officers, and ordinary citizens. Relatively inexpensive to produce and surprisingly durable, Rescue 911 was especially popular with children; some of the young viewers were able to apply what they learned to rescue family members from life-threatening situations.

THE RESTLESS GUN NBC

23 SEPTEMBER 1957–14 SEPTEMBER 1959 This half-hour western from Revue Studios starred John Payne as Vint Bonner, a Civil War veteran who roamed the West. Dan Blocker, who later starred in Bonanza, made his first TV appearance in a 1957 episode, "The Child" (23 December), and James Coburn played his first major role in a 1958 show, "Take Me Home" (29 December). Bonner's mount, Scar, was played by a horse named John Henry.

RETURN TO PEYTON PLACE NBC

3 APRIL 1972–4 JANUARY 1974 This half-hour daytime serial picked up where Peyton Place, ABC's prime-time soap opera, had left off three years earlier. Though Peyton Place had been popular with viewers, Return to Peyton Place never really caught on; one reason for its lack of success may have been that viewers had identified too strongly with the stars of Peyton Place (such as Mia Farrow, Ryan O'Neal, and Ed Nelson), none of whom appeared on the daytime sequel. Principal players on the daytime version included: Kathy Glass as Allison MacKenzie; Bettye Ackerman and Susan Brown as her mother, Constance MacKenzie Carson; Warren Stevens as Elliot Carson, her husband; Guy Stockwell as Dr. Michael Rossi; Joe Gallison as Steven Cord; Mary K. Wells as Hannah Cord; Lawrence Casey and Yale Summers as Rodney Harrington; Ron Russell as Norman Harrington; Patricia Morrow as Rita Jacks Harrington; Julie Parrish and Lynn Loring as Betty Anderson Harrington; Evelyn Scott as Ada Jacks; John Levin as young Matthew Carson; John Hoyt as Martin Peyton; Frank Ferguson as Eli Carson; Dino Fantini as Gino Panzini; and Ben Andrews as Benny Tate.

RETURN TO THE PLANET OF THE APES NBC

6 SEPTEMBER 1975–4 SEPTEMBER 1976 This Saturday-morning cartoon show was based on the Planet of the Apes films and television series. David H. DePatie and Friz Freleng were the producers.

REVIVAL OF AMERICA CRUSADE SYNDICATED

1975–1979 Half-hour religious show, with evangelist and faith healer LeRoy Jenkins. Jenkins, who once described himself as "the nation's most controversial evangelist," had previously conducted services in Columbus, Ohio, calling his congregation "The Church of What's Happening Now." Comedian Flip Wilson, who created a Reverend Leroy character in his 1970 variety show, used the same name for his congregation.

THE REVLON REVUE CBS

28 JANUARY 1960–16 JUNE 1960 The Revlon Revue was the scaled-down successor to The Big Party, CBS's lavish ninety-minute variety series that was dropped in midseason. The Revlon Revue was an hour show and had no regulars; Mickey Rooney, Dick Shawn, Patachou, Joey Forman, and Bob Crewe appeared on the premiere, and Maurice Chevalier was the guest star on the second show. The last several shows were titled The Revlon Spring Music Festival. Abe Burrows was the executive producer.

REX HUMBARD SYNDICATED

1952–1983 One of America's best known evangelists, Rex Humbard began his television broadcasts in Akron in 1952; by the early 1970s his program was seen on approximately 350 stations. In later years the show was titled The Rex Humbard World Outreach Ministry and was taped at the Cathedral of Tomorrow in Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio. Regulars included the Rex Humbard Family Singers, with Maude Aimee Humbard (Rex's wife) and Elizabeth Humbard (his daughter) featured as soloists. The show's executive producer was Rex Humbard, Jr.

RHODA
CBS

9 september 1974–9 december 1978 Valerie Harper starred in this spinoff from The Mary Tyler Moore Show as Rhoda Morgenstern. On her own show, Rhoda returned to her native New York from Minneapolis, got a job, and finally found a fella. David Groh costarred as her new boyfriend, Joe Gerard, owner of the New York Wrecking Company, a demolition outfit; Joe had previously been married and was the father of a ten-year-old son. Rhoda and Joe were married in the series' eighth episode and lived in the same apartment building as Rhoda's younger sister, Brenda (played by Julie Kavner), a bank teller. Also featured during the first season were Nancy Walker as Rhoda's meddlesome mother, Ida Morgenstern; Harold Gould as Rhoda's father, Martin Morgenstern; Lorenzo Music (Rhoda's coproducer) as the heard-but-not seen Carlton the Doorman. Rhoda and Joe stayed married through the series' second season, as a few new regulars began to be seen: Richard Masur as Brenda's sometime boyfriend, Nick Lobo, a thick-headed accordionist; Wes Stern as Brenda's friend Lenny Fiedler; Barbara Sharma as Rhoda's high school classmate Myrna Morgenstein, who became Rhoda's employee in her freelance window-dressing business; and Scoey Mitchlll as Joe's employee, Justin Culp. By the beginning of the third season, however, it was decided that Rhoda and Joe should separate, and early in the fall of 1976 the two agreed to a trial separation. Joe moved out, and Rhoda moved to a smaller apartment in the same building; Nancy Walker (who was then starring in her own series, The Nancy Walker Show) and Harold Gould were gone from the series (it was explained that Rhoda's folks had decided to take a motor trip around the country), and Masur, Stern, Sharma, and Mitchlll were no longer seen as regulars. More new faces were added, however: Ron Silver as Gary Levy, an aggressive young schlep who ran a boutique and who agreed to swap apartments with Rhoda; Anne Meara as Rhoda's friend, Sally Gallagher, an airline stewardess; Michael DeLano as Johnny Venture, a minimally talented but very macho lounge singer newly arrived from Las Vegas, who fell for Rhoda. More changes took place at the outset of the fourth season, as Rhoda and Joe were finally divorced. David Groh, who had appeared infrequently during the 1976–1977 season, was dropped entirely; Nancy Walker returned after a season's absence; Rhoda got a new job, with a theatrical costume supply house; and three new players were added, joining Harper, Kavner, Music, Silver, and DeLano: Kenneth McMillan as Rhoda's gruff boss, Jack Doyle; Rafael Campos as Doyle's other employee, Ramón Diaz; and Ray Buktenica as Brenda's boyfriend, Benny Goodwin. DeLano, Silver and Campos left the show at the end of the 1977–1978 season, and, as the 1978–1979 season began, Rhoda's mother, Ida Morgenstern, was suddenly single: her husband had left her. Nancy Lane also joined the cast in the fall of 1978 as Tina Molinari, Jack Doyle's third employee. James L. Brooks and Allan Burns were the executive producers of Rhoda from 1974 until 1978, when Charlotte Brown became the new executive producer for MTM Enterprises.

RHYME AND REASON

7 july 1975–9 july 1976 Hosted by Bob Eubanks, this daytime game show was essentially a poetic version of The Match Game—two contestants tried to guess which word would be rhymed to an open-ended couplet by the panel of six celebrities. Steven Friedman was the executive producer for W. T. Naud Productions, Inc.

RHYTHM & BLUES

24 september 1992–22 october 1992; 12 february 1993 Half-hour sitcom set at a black radio station in Detroit. With Roger Kabler as Bobby Soul, a white deejay mistakenly hired by the station; Anna Maria Horsford as Veronica Washington, the widowed owner of WBLZ; Ron Glass as Don Philips; Troy Curvey, Jr., as deejay "Love Man"; Vanessa Bell Calloway as program director Colette Hawkins; Christopher Babers as Earl; and Miguel A. Nunez, Jr., as deejay "Jammin'."

RHYTHM RODEO
DUMONT

30 july 1950–31 december 1950 Half-hour musical series, hosted by Art Jarrett.

THE RICH LITTLE SHOW NBC

2 FEBRUARY 1976–19 JULY 1976 Impressionist Rich Little hosted his own hour-long comedy-variety series. Other regulars included Charlotte Rae, R. G. Brown, Julie McWhirter, Joe Baker, and Mel Bishop. Jerry Goldstein was executive producer for Little's production company, Dudley Enterprises (Dudley, Little's English sheepdog, appeared at the show's conclusion).

RICH MAN, POOR MAN ABC

1 FEBRUARY 1976–15 MARCH 1976; 21 SEPTEMBER 1976–8 MARCH 1977 Rich Man, Poor Man was introduced early in 1976 as a twelve-hour serialization of Irwin Shaw's novel, which chronicled the lives of the Jordache family from 1945 to 1965. The series was a smash hit, ranking third in the seasonal Nielsens and reaping twenty-three Emmy nominations. In the fall of 1976 ABC introduced Rich Man, Poor Man—Book II, a twenty-one-part continuation of the Shaw novel (Shaw himself had virtually nothing to do with Book II), which fared less well. The cast of Book I (as the original twelve-hour adaptation came to be called when it was rerun in May and June of 1977) included: Peter Strauss as Rudy Jordache; Nick Nolte as Tom Jordache, his brother; Edward Asner as Axel Jordache, their father; Dorothy McGuire as Mary Jordache, their mother; Susan Blakely as Julie Prescott; Bill Bixby as Willie Abbott; Robert Reed as Teddy Boylan; Ray Milland as Duncan Calderwood; Kim Darby as Virginia Calderwood; Talia Shire as Teresa Santoro; Lawrence Pressman as Bill Benton; and Kay Lenz as Kate. The cast of Book II included only a few of the principals from Book I—Peter Strauss as Rudy, Kay Lenz as Kate, and (in the first episode only) Susan Blakely as Julie. The remainder of the Book II cast included: Gregg Henry as Wesley Jordache, Tom's son; James Carroll Jordan as Billy Abbott, Julie's son; Susan Sullivan as Maggie Porter; William Smith as Anthony Falconetti; Dimitra Arliss as Marie Falconetti; Sorrell Booke as Phil Greeneberg; Peter Haskell as Charles Estep; Laraine Stephens as Claire Estep; Penny Peyser as Ramona Scott; John Anderson as Scotty; Peter Donat as Arthur Raymond; Cassie Yates as Annie Adams; Barry Sullivan as Senator Paxton; G. D. Spradlin as Senator Dillon; and Philip Abbott as John Franklin. Harve Bennett was the executive producer and Jon Epstein the producer of Book I; Michael Gleason was executive producer and Epstein the producer of Book II. Both books were produced for Universal Television. In sum, the phenomenal success of Book I led to a boom in the programming of serialized novels and other stories on prime-time network television.

RICHARD BEY SYNDICATED

1995– Hour daytime talk show, hosted by Richard Bey.

THE RICHARD BOONE SHOW NBC

24 SEPTEMBER 1963–15 SEPTEMBER 1964 This hour program was a television rarity—a dramatic anthology series with an in-house repertory company. Richard Boone, formerly of Have Gun Will Travel, was both host and performer. The rest of the company included Robert Blake, Lloyd Bochner, Laura Devon, June Harding, Bethel Leslie, Harry Morgan, Jeanette Nolan, Ford Rainey, Warren Stevens, and Guy Stockwell. The show was a Goodson-Todman Production in association with Classic Films and NBC.

RICHARD DIAMOND, PRIVATE DETECTIVE CBS/NBC

1 JULY 1957–30 SEPTEMBER 1957; 2 JANUARY 1958–25 SEPTEMBER 1958; 15 FEBRUARY 1959–20 SEPTEMBER 1959 (CBS); 5 OCTOBER 1959–6 SEPTEMBER 1960 (NBC) Richard Diamond, Private Detective was first a radio series; introduced in 1949, it starred Dick Powell. The TV version, which bore little resemblance to the radio show, was produced by Four Star Films and starred unsmiling David Janssen as Richard Diamond. Originally, Diamond worked in New York, and Regis Toomey costarred as Lieutenant McGough. When the series returned to the air in February, 1959, however, Diamond had relocated to Los Angeles, where he became one of TV's first characters to have a car phone, which he used to check in with Sam, the woman who ran his answering service. Sam's face never appeared on camera, but her legs were displayed prominently. Joining the cast were Barbara Bain (in her first major TV role) as Diamond's girlfriend, Karen Wells (Bain was featured only in the first few 1959 episodes); Mary Tyler Moore (then billed as Mary Moore) as Sam (Roxanne Brooks took over the role in May 1959); and Russ Conway as Lieutenant Pete Kile. The half-hour series was first introduced as a summer replacement for December Bride; in 1958 it returned as a midseason replacement for Harbourmaster, and in 1959 it took over the slot formerly occupied by The $64,000 Challenge. In syndication the show was titled Call Mr. D.

THE RICHARD HARKNESS SHOW NBC

7 JANUARY 1948–5 JANUARY 1949 Richard Harkness interviewed newsmakers on this fifteen-minute public affairs series.

THE RICHARD PRYOR SHOW NBC

13 SEPTEMBER 1977–20 OCTOBER 1977 The Richard Pryor Show, which could have been one of the brightest spots of the 1977–1978 season, never really got off the ground for a number of reasons. It starred Richard Pryor, a gifted actor and an inventive but unorthodox comedian; Pryor's humor was unmistakably aimed at adult audiences, yet the show was broadcast during the so-called family hour (8 p.m. to 9 p.m. on the East Coast). Even worse, NBC scheduled it opposite ABC's Happy Days and Laverne and Shirley, two of the top-rated shows of the previous season. Finally, Pryor became involved with the network in a dispute involving censorship; a sequence showing Pryor apparently nude and emasculated (he was wearing a body stocking), while explaining that he had relinquished nothing to get his own series, was ordered deleted by the network. Pryor himself decided to halt production of the series shortly after the incident, and only five shows (including a rerun of his spring 1977 special) were broadcast. Other regulars on the short-lived series included Allegra Allison, Sandra Bernhard, Victor Delapp, Argus Hamilton, Jimmy Martinez, Paul Mooney, Tim Reid, Marsha Warfield, Robin Williams, and "Detroit" John Witherspoon. Burt Sugarman was the executive producer and Rocco Urbisci and John Moffitt the producers.

THE RICHARD SIMMONS SHOW SYNDICATED

1980–1984 Peripatetic Richard Simmons hosted this popular half-hour physical fitness series, aimed principally at women. Simmons, who himself slimmed down from 268 to 137 pounds, led his studio audience through exercises and introduced recipes for nutritious dishes. Before getting his own show in 1980, Simmons had appeared as himself on General Hospital, where he ran an exercise salon.

THE RICHARD WILLIS SHOW NBC

8 OCTOBER 1951–15 FEBRUARY 1957 Makeup artist Richard Willis dispensed advice on beauty and grooming to women on this daytime series, which was originally titled Here's Looking at You.

RICHIE BROCKELMAN, PRIVATE EYE NBC

17 MARCH 1978–14 APRIL 1978 This hour-long crime show was a five-week replacement for The Rockford Files. Featured were Dennis Dugan as Richie Brockelman, a private eye in his early twenties; Robert Hogan as Sergeant Ted Coppersmith, his police contact; Barbara Bosson as Sharon Deterson, Brockelman's female friend and assistant. The character was first introduced in a 1976 made-for-TV movie, "Richie Brockelman: The Missing 24 Hours," and was again introduced on an episode of The Rockford Files broadcast 10 March 1978. Stephen J. Cannell and Steven Bochco created the series and were its executive producers; Peter S. Fischer was the producer. Reruns were shown during the summer of 1978.

THE RICHIE RICH/SCOOBY-DOO SHOW ABC/CBS

8 NOVEMBER 1980–18 SEPTEMBER 1982 (ABC); 11 JANUARY 1986–30 AUGUST 1986 (CBS); 15 NOVEMBER 1986–27 DECEMBER 1986 (CBS) The "Scooby-Doo" cartoon series, which began on TV in 1969, alternated with "Richie Rich" cartoons in this hour Saturday-morning series. Based on the comic book character, Richie Rich was the world's wealthiest youngster; assisted by his pals, Gloria and Freckles, his dog Dollar, his butler Cadbury, and his robot maid Irona, Richie roamed the world on various adventures. In 1982 Richie and Scooby-Doo split up, each remaining on ABC's Saturday lineup (see The Pac-Man/Little Rascals/Richie Rich Show; Scooby & Scrappy Doo/The Puppy's New Adventures). Richie Rich reruns later surfaced on CBS's Saturday morning lineup.

RICKI LAKE SYNDICATED

1993– Hour daytime talk show hosted by Ricki Lake. Lake had been an unknown until 1988, when the overweight teenager was discovered by film director John Waters and cast in the movie Hairspray. Later she was a regular for one season on China Beach. By the time she began hosting her talk show she had lost 125 pounds. The program quickly became popular with young adult females. Typical discussion topics (as telecast during April and May 1995) included "Mothers and Daughters Who Fight," "Jilted People," "Promiscuous Teens," "Sexy-Man Search," and "Upsets Over Mothers' Boyfriends."

RIDERS IN THE SKY CBS

14 SEPTEMBER 1991–5 SEPTEMBER 1992 Saturday-morning kids' show set at the Harmony Ranch, where three live-action characters—Woody Paul, Ranger Doug, and Too Slim—introduced animated segments, puppets, and clay animation sequences. Paul Chrisman played Paul, Douglas Green was Doug, and Fred LaBour was Too Slim.

RIDDLE ME THIS CBS

5 DECEMBER 1948–13 MARCH 1949 Conrad Nagel hosted this Sunday-night game show, the subject of which was riddles. Celebrity panelists included John Daly and Ilka Chase. See also Celebrity Time.

THE RIFLEMAN ABC

30 SEPTEMBER 1958–1 JULY 1963 Chuck Connors starred in this half-hour western as Lucas McCain, a widower trying to raise his young son on a ranch outside North Fork, New Mexico; unfortunately, McCain had little time to concentrate on ranching, as he was constantly called on to use his prowess with a .44 Winchester rifle to rid North Fork of assorted undesirables. Also featured were Johnny Crawford as his son, Mark; Paul Fix as North Fork's ineffective marshal, Micah Torrance; Bill Quinn as Sweeney, the bartender; Hope Summers as storekeeper Hattie Denton; Joan Taylor as Millie Scott, proprietor of the general store; and Pat Blair (1962–1963) as Lou Mallory, the hotelkeeper. The Rifleman was the most popular new series of the 1958–1959 season, ranking fourth overall in the seasonal Nielsens; though it lasted four more years, it never equalled the success of the first season. With its dark lighting and somber musical underscore, The Rifleman seems, in retrospect, more grim than most of the other westerns of the time; star Chuck Connors maintained, however, that it was a wholesome family drama in which violence was kept to a minimum. Arthur Gardner, Arnold Laven, and Jules Levy produced the show's 168 episodes for Four Star Films. Chuck Connors and Johnny Crawford were reunited in 1990 in an episode of Paradise, another TV western.

THE RIGHTEOUS APPLES PBS

1981 Half-hour comedy-drama about three inner-city youngsters who started a rock band. With Kutee as Gloretta; Mykel T. Williamson as Big Neck; and Joey Camen as D.C.

RIKER CBS

14 MARCH 1981–11 APRIL 1981 Josh Taylor starred as Frank Riker in this hour crime show. Riker, a cop who was implicated in a departmental scandal, was convinced by Deputy Attorney General Bryce Landis (played by Michael Shannon) to resign from the force rather than prove his innocence, and to work for the D.A. as an undercover agent. The series was CBS's lowest-rated show of the 1980–1981 season, ranking 95th out of 97 programs.

RIN TIN TIN ABC

15 OCTOBER 1954–28 AUGUST 1959 "Rin Tin Tin," TV's best-known German shepherd, was the star of this half-hour western. The dog and his young master, a boy named Rusty, were the only survivors of an Indian raid on a wagon train and were taken in by the members of the 101st Cavalry. The humans in the cast included: Lee Aaker as Rusty, who was commissioned a corporal in the first episode (Rin Tin Tin was made a private); Jim L. Brown as Lieutenant Ripley (Rip) Masters; Joe Sawyer as Sergeant Biff O'Hara; and Rand Brooks as Corporal Boone. Herbert B. Leonard produced the series, and William Beaudine directed it; the 164 episodes were filmed at Crash Corrigan's movie ranch in California. The original Rin Tin Tin was a veteran of the German Army in World War I and had starred in several silent films during the 1920s; Rin Tin Tin had also been a radio series (once in 1930 and again in 1955). The TV Rin Tin Tin was owned by Lee Duncan. The dog reappeared thirty years later in a more modern format: see below.

RIN TIN TIN K-9 COP FAM

17 SEPTEMBER 1988–19 SEPTEMBER 1993 On this series the brave German shepherd no longer served in the nineteenth-century cavalry, but in a twentieth-century police department. The human cast included Jesse Collins as Officer Hank Katts, Rinty's master; Sharon Acker as Alice; Ken Pogue as Captain Cullen Murdoch; and Andrew Bednarski as Stevie Katts, son of Hank's late brother, whom Hank was raising. The half-hour series was produced in Canada and was televised there beginning in 1987, under the title Katts and Dog.

THE RING OF TRUTH PBS

20 OCTOBER 1987–24 NOVEMBER 1987 Tools were the subject of this six-part documentary series, hosted by Philip Morrison of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

RIPCORD SYNDICATED

1962 The central characters in this half-hour adventure series were a pair of parachutists who operated Ripcord, Inc., a skydiving school. Larry Pennell and Ken Curtis starred as partners Ted McKeever and Jim Buckley. Maurice Unger and Leon Benson produced the series for United Artists.

RIPLEY'S BELIEVE IT OR NOT ABC

26 SEPTEMBER 1982–4 SEPTEMBER 1986 "Ripley's Believe It or Not," the popular comic strip created by Robert L. Ripley, was the basis of this hour "reality show." Each week various amazing but true stories, or incredible but true facts, were depicted, usually on film. Jack Palance hosted the show; his first cohost, Catherine Shirriff, was succeeded early in 1983 by Holly Palance, who (in a less than amazing coincidence) happened to be Jack's daughter. Marie Osmond was Jack Palance's cohost for the show's fourth, and final, season. Ripley's Believe It or Not is the second television series taken from the comic strip; Ripley himself had hosted the first version, Believe It or Not, in 1949 (see also that title).

RIPTIDE NBC

3 JANUARY 1984–18 APRIL 1986 An hour crime show about two private eyes and their pal, a computer whiz, who operated out of a boat docked at a Southern California harbor. With Perry King as Cody Allen; Joe Penny as his partner, Nick Ryder; Thom Bray as Murray "Boz" Bozinsky, the klutzy computer and electronics genius; Jack Ging (1984–1985) as Lieutenant Ted Quinlan, the cop who had little tolerance for any of them; Gianni Russo as Straightaway, a local restaurateur; Anne Francis (1984) as Mama Jo, skipper of a charter boat with an all-female crew; Ken Orlandt as Kirk "The Dool" Dooley, their part-time assistant; and June Chadwick (1985–1986) as Lieutenant Joanna Parisi. The series was a Stephen J. Cannell Production.

RITUALS SYNDICATED

1984–1985 Half-hour syndicated soap opera, taped in Hollywood, and set in fictional Wingfield, Virginia, a college town near Washington, D.C. With Christine Jones as Christine Robertson, dean of women at Haddon Hall; Monte Markham as her husband, Carter Robertson, a former executive of Chapin Industries; George Lazenby as playwright Logan Williams; Philece Sampler as Lacey Jarrett, dorm proctor; Kin Shriner as her beau, art teacher Mike Gallagher; Andrea Moar as Julia Chapin Field; Dennis Patrick as Patrick Chapin; Jo Ann Pflug and Tina Louise as Taylor Chapin Field von Platen; Claire Yarlett and Mary Beth Evans as Dakota Lane; Gina Gallego as Diandra Santiago; Patti Davis (daughter of Ronald Reagan) and Janice Heiden as Marissa Mallory. Jorn Winther was the producer, Gene Palumbo the head writer.

RIVERBOAT NBC

13 SEPTEMBER 1959–16 JANUARY 1961 This hour-long adventure series starred Darren McGavin as Grey Holden, captain of the Enterprise, a riverboat which plied the Mississippi River during the 1840s. Also on board were Burt Reynolds (1959–1960, in his first continuing role) as pilot Ben Frazer; Noah Beery (1960–1961) as pilot Bill Blake; Dick Wessel as Carney; Jack Lambert as Joshua; Mike McGreevey as Chip; John Mitchum as Pickalong; and Bart Patton as Terry. A total of forty-four episodes were produced.

THE ROAD SYNDICATED

1994 Hour variety series which followed country and western acts as they traveled across America. There was no regular host.

THE ROAD HOME CBS

5 MARCH 1994–16 APRIL 1994 Hour dramatic series about a family who took a vacation trip to visit the folks in North Carolina and decided to stay there. With Karen Allen as Alison Matson; Terence Knox as her husband, Jack Matson; Ed Flanders as her father, Walter Babineaux; Frances Sternhagen as her mother, Charlotte Babineaux; Jessica Bowman as Alison and Jack's teen daughter, Darcy; Cecilley Carroll as their younger daughter, Jinx; Christopher Masterson as their older son, Sawyer; Gregg Perrelli as their younger son, Calvin; Alex McArthur as Alison's brother, Dickie; and Bobby Fain as teenage neighbor Arthur Dumas, who took a liking to Darcy. John Tinker and Bruce Paltrow created the series.

ROAD OF LIFE CBS

13 DECEMBER 1954–1 JULY 1955 One of radio's most popular serials, Road of Life was created by Irna Phillips in 1937 and lasted until 1959; the television version was far less successful. It starred Don MacLaughlin as Dr. Jim Brent, a surgeon. Also featured in the TV cast were Barbara Becker as Sybill Fuller; Virginia Dwyer as Jocelyn Brent; Harry Holcombe as Malcolm Overton; Charles Dingle as Conrad Overton; Elizabeth Lawrence as Francie Brent; Bill Lipton as John Brent; John Larkin as Frank Dana; and Dorothy Sands as Aunt Reggie. Nelson Case was the narrator, and John Egan was the producer.

THE ROAD RUNNER SHOW CBS/ABC

10 SEPTEMBER 1966–7 SEPTEMBER 1968 (CBS); 11 SEPTEMBER 1971–2 SEPTEMBER 1972 (ABC) The Road Runner, the resourceful bird who constantly outwitted his pursuer, Wile E. Coyote, had his own Saturday-morning cartoon show for three seasons. At other times he has shared a show with Bugs Bunny, which has usually been titled The Bugs Bunny/Road Runner Hour. See also Bugs Bunny.

THE ROAD TO LOS ANGELES SYNDICATED

1982–1984 The aspirations of American amateur athletes, all hoping to compete in the 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles, were chronicled in this half-hour series.

ROAD TO REALITY ABC

17 OCTOBER 1960–31 MARCH 1961 A therapy group was the setting of this half-hour daytime serial, ABC's first, which starred John Beal as psychoanalyst Dr. Lewis.

THE ROAD WEST NBC

12 SEPTEMBER 1966–28 AUGUST 1967 An undistinguished hour-long western from Universal Television, The Road West was the story of a pioneer family who settled in Kansas. Featured were Barry Sullivan as Ben Pride; Kathryn Hays as Elizabeth Pride, his wife; Andrew Prine as their son, Tim; Brenda Scott as their daughter, Midge (Prine and Scott had been married in 1965 but were divorced when production of the series began); Kelly Corcoran as their son, Kip; Glenn Corbett as Chance Reynolds, Elizabeth's brother; and Charles Seel as Tom (Grandpa) Pride, Ben's father.

ROALD DAHL'S TALES OF THE UNEXPECTED SYNDICATED

1979–1981 Most of the presentations on this British-produced anthology series were written by Roald Dahl. In 1981 the program was retitled Tales of the Unexpected (however, the series should not be confused with the 1977 NBC series of the same title), and John Houseman became the host.

ROAR OF THE RAILS CBS

26 OCTOBER 1948–14 DECEMBER 1948; 24 OCTOBER 1949–12 DECEMBER 1949 A fifteen-minute series on railroading, sponsored by the A. C. Gilbert Company. See also Tales of the Red Caboose.

THE ROARING TWENTIES ABC

15 OCTOBER 1960–21 SEPTEMBER 1962 Set in New York during the 1920s, this hour-long adventure series tried to capitalize on the success of The Untouchables, which was also set in the Prohibition era. The Roaring Twenties, however, was considerably less violent and considerably less popular. Featured were Dorothy Provine as Pinky Pinkham, singer at the Charleston Club; Donald May as Pat Garrison, reporter for the New York Record; Rex Reason as Scott Norris, also a Record reporter; John Dehner as reporter Duke Williams; Mike Road as Lieutenant Joe Switoski, New York cop; Gary Vinson as Chris Higby, the Record's copy-boy; and James Flavin as Howard.

THE ROBBINS NEST ABC

29 SEPTEMBER 1950–22 DECEMBER 1950 Fifteen-minute Friday-night variety show, hosted by Fred Robbins.

THE ROBERT GUILLAUME SHOW ABC

5 APRIL 1989–9 AUGUST 1989 Half-hour sitcom starring Robert Guillaume as Edward Sawyer, a divorced marriage counselor; Hank Rolike as his father, Henry Sawyer; Kelsey Scott as his daughter, Pamela; Marc Joseph as his son, William; and Wendy Phillips as Ann Sheer, Sawyer's secretary, with whom Edward had a romantic (and interracial) relationship.

ROBERT HERRIDGE THEATRE SYNDICATED

1961 This half-hour dramatic anthology series was seen on many educational stations.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY PRESENTS NBC

30 JANUARY 1950–24 JUNE 1957 Another of television's high-quality dramatic anthology series, this hour show was produced and hosted by actor Robert Montgomery, who occasionally starred in the presentations. A sampling of the shows broadcast would include: "Victoria Regina," with Helen Hayes (30 January 1950); "Arrowsmith," with Van Heflin (9 October 1950); "The Philadelphia Story," with Barbara Bel Geddes (4 December 1950); "Rise Up and Walk," with Kim Hunter (4 February 1952); "Penny," with Joanne Woodward (in her first major TV role, 9 June 1952);

"Dinah, Kip, and Mr. Barlow," with Jack Lemmon (23 February 1953); "Harvest," with Ed Begley, Dorothy Gish, Vaughn Taylor, and James Dean (23 November 1953); "Wages of Fear," with Louis Jourdan (3 May 1954); "The Great Gatsby," with Phyllis Kirk, John Newland, and Gena Rowlands (11 April 1955); "Soldier from the Wars Returning," with James Cagney (in the first of his few television appearances, 10 September 1956); "Return Visit," with Peter Falk (in his first major TV role, 13 May 1957). In its first seasons Robert Montgomery Presents was also known as Lucky Strike Theater. During the summer months between seasons, Montgomery introduced a repertory company, whose productions were presented under titles such as Montgomery's Summer Stock or The Robert Montgomery Summer Theater. A regular performer in these companies was Montgomery's daughter, Elizabeth Montgomery, who had made her TV debut in a 1951 episode of Robert Montgomery Presents, "Top Secret" (broadcast 3 December). In the summer of 1954 the company consisted of Elizabeth Montgomery, Jan Miner (better known in later years as Madge, the manicurist in Palmolive commercials), John Newland, Anne Seymour, Cliff Robertson, and Vaughn Taylor. In the summer of 1956 the group included Elizabeth Montgomery, John Gibson, Tom Middleton, and Mary K. Wells. Robert Montgomery became a media consultant for President Eisenhower during the 1950s and in 1969 became president of the Lincoln Center Repertory Theater.

THE ROBERT Q. LEWIS SHOW CBS

16 JULY 1950–7 JANUARY 1951; 16 OCTOBER 1950–19 JANUARY 1951; 11 JANUARY 1954–25 MAY 1956 Robert Q. Lewis, frequently seen during the 1950s as a game-show host and substitute emcee, hosted a prime-time show and two daytime variety series of his own. The prime-time show was a fifteen-minute interview program seen Sundays. The first daytime series, titled Robert Q's Matinee, was a forty-five-minute daily show that ran only fourteen weeks. The second, titled The Robert Q. Lewis Show, was much more successful, lasting more than two years. Among the many regulars on the half-hour show were Jaye P. Morgan, Jan Arden, Betty Clooney, Jane Wilson, Lois Hunt and Earl Wrightson, Merv Griffin, Julann Wright (who later married Griffin), The Chordettes, dancer-choreographer Don Liberto, and announcer Lee Vines.

THE ROBERT RIPLEY SHOW

ROBERT TAYLOR'S DETECTIVES

See THE DETECTIVES

THE ROBERTA QUINLAN SHOW NBC

3 MAY 1949–23 NOVEMBER 1951 Singer Roberta Quinlan hosted her own fifteen-minute musical series of two and a half years; it was seen two or three nights a week before the evening news. In 1949 her show, telecast Tuesdays and Thursdays, was actually part of The Mohawk Showroom—singer Morton Downey hosted the series on the other three weeknights.

ROBIN HOOD CBS

26 SEPTEMBER 1955–22 SEPTEMBER 1958 Officially titled The Adventures of Robin Hood, this British import told the story of the legendary twelfth-century hero who, together with his band of men, stole from the rich and gave to the poor; on TV most of Robin's exploits involved attempts to oust Prince John, the hated ruler of Nottingham. The half-hour series starred Richard Greene as Robin Hood and featured Alexander Gauge as Friar Tuck; Archie Duncan and Rufus Cruikshank as Little John; Bernadette O'Farrell (1955–1957) and Patricia Driscoll (1957–1958) as Maid Marian, Robin's apparent romantic interest; Paul Eddington and John Dearth as Will Scarlett; Alan Wheatley as the hapless Sheriff of Nottingham; and Donald Pleasence as Prince John. In 1967 an updated cartoon version appeared: see Rocket Robin Hood. In 1975 a prime-time sitcom also appeared: see When Things Were Rotten.

ROBIN OF SHERWOOD SHOWTIME

17 DECEMBER 1984–19 JANUARY 1985; 23 NOVEMBER 1985–22 MARCH 1986 A remake of the Robin Hood legend, this one starred Michael Praed (1984–1985) as the first Robin Hood, who was killed off, and Jason Connery (1985–1986) as Robert of Nottingham, who became the new Robin Hood. Also on hand were Nickolas Grace was the Sheriff of Nottingham; Philip David as King John; and Judi Trott as Maid Marian. The series premiered with a made-for-TV movie, Robin Hood: The Swords of Wayland.

ROBIN'S HOODS SYNDICATED

1994 Hour adventure series starring Linda Purl as Brett Robin. A former prosecutor, Robin took over the ownership of her late husband's nightclub, Robin's Nest, and tried to find his killer. Assisting her were five parolees who had been hired by the husband to work at the club. Also featured were David Gail as Eddie Bartlett; Julie McCullough as Stacey Wright; Jennifer Campbell as Anastasia (Annie) Beckett; Mayte Vilan as Maria Alvarez; and Claire Yarlett as MacKenzie (Mac) Magnuson.

ROBOCOP SYNDICATED

1994–1995 Hour crime show set in the "near future" and based on the 1987 movie. The TV version starred Richard Eden as Alex Murphy, a slain police officer whose human remains had been implanted in a super-high-tech cyborg body known as RoboCop; he patrolled Delta City, a dangerous metropolis adjacent to Old Detroit. Also featured were Yvette Nipar as his human partner, Lisa Madigan; Blu Mankuma as the boss, Sergeant Stan Parks; Andrea Roth as Diana Powers, a secretary whose brain had been stolen by a mad scientist and who now "existed" inside a mainframe computer, from which she assisted RoboCop; David Gardner as The Chairman, head of the evil conglomerate Omni Consumer Products; Sarah Campbell as Gadget, a young orphan; Dan Duran and Erica Ehm as Bo Harlan and Rocky Crenshaw, co-anchors of a three-minute news program, "Media Break"; Jennifer Griffin as Nancy Murphy, who believed that her husband (Alex) was dead; Peter Costigan as Jimmy, Nancy and Alex's thirteen-year-old; Cliff DeYoung as the mad scientist, Dr. Cray Z. Mallardo; John Rubinstein as Chip Chaykin; and James Kidnie as villain Pudface Morgan, who had been disfigured by toxic waste.

ROC FOX

24 AUGUST 1991–30 AUGUST 1994 Half-hour sitcom, set in Baltimore, about a black garbage collector and his family. With Charles S. Dutton as Roc Emerson; Ella Joyce as his wife, Eleanor, a nurse; Rocky Carroll as his live-in brother, Joey, an unemployed musician; and Carl Gordon as his father, Andrew "Pop" Emerson. During its second season Roc was broadcast live, becoming the first sitcom to do so since 1959. For the series' third season two new regulars were added: Alexis Fields as Sheila Hendricks, the young daughter of a friend of Roc's who had been imprisoned; and Jamie Foxx as George, a not-too-bright regular at Roc's favorite bar. Also featured was Clifton Powell as Andre, a local drug dealer. Roc and Eleanor had a baby, Marcus, during the show's final season.

ROCK & ROLL PBS

24 SEPTEMBER 1995–28 SEPTEMBER 1995 Five-night, ten-hour survey of rock and roll music, narrated by Liev Schreiber.

THE ROCKFORD FILES NBC

13 SEPTEMBER 1974–25 JULY 1980 James Garner starred in this hour-long crime show as Jim Rockford, a private eye recently released from prison (for a crime he never committed) who lived in a trailer in Malibu. Also featured were Noah Beery as Joe Rockford, his semiretired father; Joe Santos as Sergeant Dennis Becker of the Los Angeles Police; Gretchen Corbett (1974–1978) as defense attorney Beth Davenport; and Stuart Margolin as Angel Martin. Bo Hopkins was featured during the 1978–1979 season as disbarred attorney John Cooper. Created by Roy Huggins and Stephen J. Cannell, the series' executive producer was Meta Rosenberg. Garner, Margolin and Santos were reunited for a two-hour sequel, "The Rockford Files: I Still Love L.A." (27 November 1994, CBS).

ROCKSCHOOL PBS

1985 An eight-part instructional series on the fundamentals of rock-and-roll music, hosted by musician Herbie Hancock.

ROCKWORLD SYNDICATED

1980 Another of the many series featuring performances by rock-and-roll acts.

ROCKY AND HIS FRIENDS ABC

19 NOVEMBER 1959–23 SEPTEMBER 1961 Jay Ward created this popular cartoon series, whose stars were a flying squirrel, Rocky (short for Rocket J. Squirrel) and a dim-witted moose, Bullwinkle. The two battled Mr. Big and his henchpeople, Boris Badenov and Natasha, in a series of adventures. Other segments on the half-hour series included "Fractured Fairy Tales," narrated by Edward Everett Horton, "Bullwinkle's Corner," a poetry segment, and the adventures of Sherman and Mr. Peabody, a boy and a pedantic dog who traveled through time via Peabody's invention, the Wayback Machine. Ward's show attracted a cult following, as had his earlier cartoon series, Crusader Rabbit (which also featured a diminutive hero and a not-too-bright sidekick). Ward later created George of the Jungle for Saturday morning consumption. See also The Bullwinkle Show. On 17 April 1992 the Showtime cable network aired a live-action film, "Boris and Natasha," starring Dave Thomas and Sally Kellerman, with a cameo appearance by June Foray, who had supplied the voice of Rocky. The movie had been made for theatrical release, but never made it to the big screen. Rocky and Bullwinkle were seen again in 1993, in a series of commercials for Taco Bell.

ROCKY JONES, SPACE RANGER SYNDICATED

1954 One of the few "space shows" of the 1950s to be produced on film, rather than live, Rocky Jones, Space Ranger was created and produced by Roland Reed. The cast included Richard Crane as Rocky Jones, who commanded a spaceship, the Orbit Jet, for the Space Rangers, who worked for the United Worlds; Sally Mansfield as Vena Ray, his navigator; Scotty Becket (early episodes) as Winky; James Lydon as Biffen Cardoza, a ranger from the planet Herculon; Maurice Cass (early episodes) as Professor Newton; Robert Lyden as Bobby, Newton's young ward, who traveled with the crew; Reginald Sheffield (later episodes) as Professor Mayberry; Charles Meredith as Secretary Drake, head of the Space Rangers; and Ann Robinson as Julianadra, ruler of Herculon. Thirty-nine episodes were made; almost all of the stories were in three parts.

ROCKY KING, DETECTIVE DUMONT

14 JANUARY 1950–26 DECEMBER 1954 This early crime show starred Roscoe Karns as Rocky King, a hardworking New York City police inspector; Earl Hammond (1950–1953) as Sergeant Lane; and Todd Karns (Roscoe's son, 1953–1954) as Detective Hart. Rocky's wife, Mabel, was also a regular, though she was never seen. Grace Carney provided her voice. The half-hour series was produced by Lawrence Menkin and Charles Spear and was originally titled Rocky King, Inside Detective.

ROD BROWN OF THE ROCKET RANGERS CBS

10 APRIL 1953–29 MAY 1954 This Saturday-morning space opera was notable mainly because it starred Cliff Robertson (in one of his earliest television roles) as Rod Brown, a member of the Rocket Rangers, one of the several interplanetary defense organizations featured on shows of the genre. Also featured were John Boruff as Commander Swift, Bruce Hall as Ranger Frank Boyle, and Jack Weston as Ranger Wilbur "Wormsey" Wormser. Rod and his twenty-second-century colleagues were stationed at Omega Base and traveled through space aboard the Beta. William Dozier produced the half-hour series; he and Robertson would later be reunited on Dozier's 1966 series Batman, when Robertson appeared as guest villain Shame.

THE ROGER MILLER SHOW NBC

12 SEPTEMBER 1966–26 DECEMBER 1966 Country and western singer Roger Miller ("King of the Road," "Chug-a-Lug," etc.) hosted his own half-hour musical variety series; music was provided by the Eddie Karam Orchestra.

ROGER RAMJET SYNDICATED

1965 Cartoon series about a research scientist (Roger Ramjet), who developed a "proton pill" that endowed him with great strength for limited periods of time.

ROGGIN'S HEROES SYNDICATED

1991– Half-hour roundup of video clips of unusual moments in sports—professional and amateur—many of which were submitted by viewers. Los Angeles sportscaster Fred Roggin hosted.

THE ROGUES NBC

13 SEPTEMBER 1964–5 SEPTEMBER 1965 The central characters in this light adventure hour were a family of fair-minded felons whose specialty was swindling swindlers and conning con artists. The concept had been used before on television, in Colonel Humphrey Flack, and was later employed on such series as Switch and The Feather and Father Gang. The Rogues was a product of Four Star Television and featured David Niven as Alexander (Alec) Fleming; Charles Boyer as Marcel St. Clair, Alec's French cousin; Gig Young as Tony Fleming, Alec's American cousin; Gladys Cooper as Auntie Margaret, Alec's aunt; and Robert Coote as Timmy Fleming, an English cousin. John Williams was occasionally seen as Inspector Briscoe of Scotland Yard.

ROLL OUT! CBS

5 OCTOBER 1973–4 JANUARY 1974 Roll Out! was a short-lived service sitcom about a predominantly black supply outfit (the 5050th) headquartered in France during World War II. The cast included: Stu Gilliam as Corporal Sweet Williams; Hilly Hicks as Private Jed Brooks; Val Bisoglio as Captain Rocco Calvelli; Ed Begley, Jr., as Lieutenant Robert Chapman; Mel Stewart as Sergeant B. J. Bryant; Penny Santon as Madame Delacourt, a restaurateur; Garrett Morris (later to join NBC's Saturday Night Live) as Wheels; Darrow Igus as Jersey; Rod Gist as Phone Booth; and Theodore Wilson as High Strung.

ROLLERGAMES SYNDICATED

1989–1990 An updated version of the perennial low-budget TV staple of yesteryear, Roller Derby. For the new series, six new teams were concocted—Violators, Maniacs, Rockets, Bad Attitude, Hot Flash, and T-Birds—as well as a new obstacle, the Alligator Pit.

ROLLERGIRLS NBC

24 APRIL 1978–10 MAY 1978 Created by James Komack, this half-hour sitcom, four episodes of which were shown, dwelt on a women's roller skating team, the Pittsburgh Pitts. Featured were Rhonda Bates as Mongo Sue Lampert; Candy Ann Brown as J. B. Johnson; Marcy Hanson as Honey Bee Novak; Marilyn Tokuda as Pipeline Akira; Terry Kiser as their hustling manager, Don Mitchell; and James Murtaugh as the team's radio announcer, Howie.

ROLLIN' ON THE RIVER SYNDICATED

1971–1973 This half-hour musical variety series was hosted by singer Kenny Rogers and his group, the First Edition. In the fall of 1972 the show's title was changed to Rollin' with Kenny Rogers and the First Edition; both versions of the show were set aboard a riverboat.

ROLONDA SYNDICATED

1994– Hour daytime talk show hosted by Rolonda Watts. Before hosting her own program, Watts had been a weekend news anchor in New York and a reporter on Inside Edition.

ROMAN HOLIDAYS NBC

9 SEPTEMBER 1972–1 SEPTEMBER 1973 This Hanna-Barbera cartoon show was set about halfway between two of Hanna-Barbera's best known shows, The Flintstones (set in the Stone Age) and The Jetsons (set in the twenty-first century); Roman Holidays was set in first-century Rome, and its central characters were the Holiday family—father Gus, mother Laurie, daughter Precocia, son Happius, and pet lion Brutus—who frequently battled their landlord, Mr. Evictus.

ROMANCE CBS

3 NOVEMBER 1949–12 JANUARY 1950 Also known as Theater of Romance, this half-hour anthology series of romantic stories alternated on Thursday nights with Inside U.S.A., replacing Sugar Hill Times, a short-lived all-black variety show. Robert Stevens produced and directed.

ROMANCE THEATRE SYNDICATED

1982 Half-hour anthology series of romantic stories, hosted by Louis Jourdan. Each story was in five parts and was written by a member of the Romance Writers of America Guild.

ROMPER ROOM SYNDICATED

1954–1994 Like Bozo the Clown, Romper Room was really a franchised children's program, rather than a syndicated one: local stations were free to use their hosts. The idea was developed by Bert Claster and his wife, Nancy, who originated the show in Baltimore in 1953. As the show grew more popular, the Clasters offered to train the local Romper Room teachers. By the late 1950s more than 100 stations aired the show, most of which employed their own teachers. The program consisted of songs, games, and educational activities for young viewers. The teacher had a studio audience of children to work with, but could also hold up her "Magic Mirror" and pretend to see kids watching the show from home. In 1977 Variety noted that Romper Room was televised in forty-six American markets, twenty-nine of which used Chicago's Miss Sally as host; in real life Miss Sally was Sally Claster Gelbard, the daughter of Bert and Nancy Claster.

THE RON REAGAN SHOW SYNDICATED

1991 Presidential son Ron Reagan hosted this hour talk show, which focused on a single topic each night. Introduced in August 1991, the series was placed on hiatus after thirteen weeks. In 1992 Reagan hosted a series of documentaries on the E! cable network, and in 1993 he became a correspondent on the Fox series The Front Page.

THE ROOKIES ABC

11 SEPTEMBER 1972–29 JUNE 1976 Straightforward crime show about three young police recruits. Featured were Gerald S. O'Loughlin as Lieutenant Ed Ryker, the commanding officer; Michael Ontkean (1972–1974) as Willie Gillis; Georg Stanford Brown as Terry Webster; Sam Melville as Mike Danko; Kate Jackson as nurse Jill Danko, Mike's wife; and Bruce Fairbairn (1974–1976) as Chris Owens. The executive producers of the hour series were Aaron Spelling and Leonard Goldberg; Spelling and Goldberg had previously produced a successful crime show about three young plainclothes officers, The Mod Squad, and later produced a very successful crime show about three female private eyes, Charlie's Angels. The pilot for the series was telecast 7 March 1972.

ROOM FOR ONE MORE ABC

27 JANUARY 1962–22 SEPTEMBER 1962 Half-hour sitcom about a family with four children—two natural and two foster. With Andrew Duggan as George Rose; Peggy McCay as his wife, Anna Rose; Anna Capri as daughter Mary, age sixteen; Timothy Rooney as son Jeff, age fourteen; Carol Nicholson as daughter Laurie, age ten; Ronnie Dapo as son Flip, age nine; Jack Albertson as neighbor Walter Burton; and Maxine Stuart as his wife, Ruth Burton. Ed Jurist produced the series.

ROOM FOR ROMANCE CBS

27 JULY 1990–24 AUGUST 1990 An unusual anthology series which explored the love lives of the residents of a Manhattan apartment building. Two or three stories were threaded together each week. The regulars were Dom Irrera as concierge Roman Carciofi (who sometimes commented on the proceedings to the camera), Rebecca Harrell as ten-year-old tenant Caroline Gidot, and Sumant as Vikram Seth, the doorman. Don Novello succeeded Irrera as Aldo the concierge. Robin Green created the series.

ROOM FOR TWO ABC

24 MARCH 1992–29 APRIL 1992; 3 SEPTEMBER 1992–17 DECEMBER 1992; 8 JUNE 1993–6 JULY 1993 Half-hour sitcom about a widow from Ohio who visited her daughter in New York and became a regular on "Wake Up, New York," a local TV talk show produced by the latter. The cast included Linda Lavin as the widow, Edie Kurland, who also moved in with her daughter; Patricia Heaton as the daughter, Jill Kurland; Peter Michael Goetz as mail-order catalog salesman Ken Kazurinsky, their neighbor; John Putch as Jill's boyfriend, Matt; Jeff Yagher as Keith; Bess Meyer as Diahnn; and Ron Rifkin (1993) as Edie's new boyfriend, Jack.

ROOM 222 ABC

17 SEPTEMBER 1969–11 JANUARY 1974 Room 222 was a half-hour comedy-drama set at Walt Whitman High School, an integrated school in Los Angeles (exteriors for the series were actually shot at Los Angeles High). The cast included: Lloyd Haynes (who had been a production assistant for the Heatter-Quigley game shows before landing acting jobs) as Pete Dixon, black American history teacher; Karen Valentine as chipper Alice Johnson, a student teacher in the English department; Michael Constantine as Seymour Kaufman, Walt Whitman's good-natured principal; and Denise Nicholas as Liz McIntyre, a black guidance counselor, and Dixon's female friend. Regular students included: Howard Rice as Richie Lane; Ta-Tanisha (1969–1972) as Pam; Heshimu as Jason Allen; Judy Strangis as Helen Loomis; David Joliffe as Bernie; Carol Green as Kim; and Ty Henderson as Cleon. James L. Brooks created the series, which was produced and directed by Gene Reynolds.

ROOMIES NBC

19 MARCH 1987–15 MAY 1987 Half-hour sitcom about two unlikely roommates matched up at Saginaw University: a forty-two-year-old ex-Marine and a fourteen-year-old child prodigy. With Burt Young as the ex-Marine, Nick Chase; Corey Haim as the prodigy, Matthew Wiggins; Jane Daly as Ms. Adler, the dorm mother; Sean Gregory Sullivan as Carl; and Joshua Nelson as Sheldon. Reruns popped up on NBC's Saturday morning schedule during the summer of 1991.

ROOTIE KAZOOTIE NBC/ABC

9 DECEMBER 1950–1 NOVEMBER 1952 (NBC); 22 DECEMBER 1952–7 MAY 1954 (ABC) Todd Russell hosted this half-hour children's show, set at the Rootie Kazootie Club. The show featured puppets (such as Rootie Kazootie, Gala Poochie, Polka Dottie, El Squeako, and Poison Zoomack), along with games and prizes for the studio audience. John Vee was also featured on the series, and the puppets were handled by Paul Ashley and Frank Milano. The show was seen Saturdays over NBC, and weekday evenings over ABC; the latter version was written and produced by Steve Carlin.

ROOTS ABC

23 JANUARY 1977–30 JANUARY 1977 One of the most remarkable achievements in television history, Roots was a twelve-hour adaptation, telecast on eight consecutive nights, of Alex Haley's moving story about his search for his African ancestors. Roots was the highest-rated series of all time—all eight telecasts ranked among the thirteen highest-rated single programs of all time, and the final segment topped all shows with a 51.1 rating and a 71 share. The A. C. Nielsen Company estimated that some 130 million viewers watched at least part of Roots. The adaptation of Haley's story was simple and straightforward—it began with the capture of Kunta Kinte in West Africa by slave traders and ended a century and a half later in Tennessee. Principal players in the large cast included: LeVar Burton (a college student appearing in his first television role) as Kunta Kinte; John Amos as Toby, as Kunta Kinte came to be called in later life; Louis Gossett, Jr., as Fiddler; Leslie Uggams as Kizzy; Ben Vereen as Chicken George; Cicely Tyson as Binta; Edward Asner as Captain Davies; Ralph Waite as Slater; Lorne Greene as John Reynolds; Lynda Day George as Mrs. Reynolds; Robert Reed as William Reynolds; Chuck Connors as Tom Moore; John Schuck as Ordell; George Hamilton as Stephen Bennett; Lloyd Bridges as Evan Brent; Scatman Crothers as Mingo; Lillian Randolph as Sister Sara; Richard Roundtree as Sam Bennett; Georg Stanford Brown as Tom; and Hilly Hicks as Lewis. David L. Wolper was the executive producer of Roots, which was nominated for some three dozen Emmys. Stan Margulies was the producer; Marvin Chomsky, John Erman, David Greene, and Gilbert Moses directed it. William Blinn was the script supervisor, and Alex Haley served as consultant. Series stars Gossett and Burton reprised their roles in a two-hour TV-movie, "Roots: The Gift," televised 11 December 1988 on ABC.

ROOTS: THE NEXT GENERATIONS ABC

18 FEBRUARY 1979–25 FEBRUARY 1979 A seven-night, twelve-hour, $18-million-sequel to Roots, Roots: The Next Generations (commonly known as Roots II) chronicled the saga of author Alex Haley's ancestors from 1882 to 1967. Although Roots II did not utterly dominate the ratings as had Roots I, the miniseries proved highly popular—the seven telecasts all ranked within the week's top eleven programs. Principal players included: Avon Long as Chicken George Moore (Ben Vereen had played the role in Roots I); Georg Stanford Brown as Tom Harvey (repeating his Roots I role); Lynne Moody as his wife, Irene Harvey (also repeating from Roots I); Henry Fonda as Colonel Warner, the local political boss; Richard Thomas as his son, Jim Warner, who was disowned when he married a black woman; Marc Singer as Andy Warner, who succeeded his father as the political boss; Olivia de Havilland as Mrs. Warner, the Colonel's wife; Paul Koslo as Earl Crowther, Andy's hatchet man; Bever-Leigh Banfield and Beah Richards as Cynthia Harvey, daughter of Tom and Irene; Stan Shaw as Will Palmer, who married Cynthia (Will and Cynthia were Alex Haley's grandparents); Harry Morgan as Bob Campbell, Will's employer; Irene Cara as Bertha Palmer, daughter of Will and Cynthia; Dorian Harewood as Simon Haley, who married Bertha; Ruby Dee as Queen Haley, Simon's mother; Paul Winfield as Dr. Huguley, dean of the college where Simon Haley landed a teaching job; Christoff St. John, Damon Evans, and James Earl Jones as Alex Haley, son of Simon and Bertha; Debbie Allen as Nan, Haley's wife; Al Freeman, Jr., as Malcolm X, the charismatic Black Muslim whose autobiography was "told to" Haley; Marlon Brando (in his first TV dramatic role in thirty years) as George Lincoln Rockwell, leader of the American Nazi Party, whom Haley interviewed for Playboy magazine. The miniseries culminated with Haley's trip to West Africa, where a griot, or oral historian, told him of the disappearance of Kunta Kinte some 200 years before. Roots: The Next Generations was produced by Stan Margulies; David L. Wolper was the executive producer.

THE ROPERS ABC

13 MARCH 1979–17 APRIL 1979; 15 SEPTEMBER 1979–22 MAY 1980 A spinoff from Three's Company, The Ropers starred Audra Lindley and Norman Fell as Helen and Stanley Roper, who moved into a condominium development. Also featured were Jeffrey Tambor as their new neighbor, Jeffrey P. Brookes III; Patricia McCormack as his wife, Anne Brookes; Evan Cohen as their young son, David; Louise Vallance (January 1980–May 1980) as Jenny Ballinger, the Ropers' boarder. Don Nicholl, Michael Ross, and Bernie West were the executive producers.

ROSEANNE ABC

18 OCTOBER 1988– One of the most influential series of its time, Roseanne was a sitcom about working class Americans whose star was herself a member of the working class. Known simply as Roseanne by 1994, she was born Roseanne Barr in 1952 and grew up in Salt Lake City. Married to Bill Pentland in the early 1970s, she was living in suburban Denver in 1978 and raising three young children (a fourth child, born to Roseanne in 1971 before her marriage, was given up for adoption). While working as a waitress she began writing comedy material for herself and appearing in local comedy clubs.

In 1985 she made her first appearance on the Tonight show (chewing gum during her act, she described herself as a "domestic goddess"), and in 1987 headlined her own comedy special on HBO. A year later she signed with producers Marcy Carsey and Tom Werner, who had produced the hit sitcoms The Cosby Show and A Different World, to star in a sitcom. The series, which was to have been titled Life and Stuff, had not been created specifically for her, but Roseanne made it uniquely her own. It was set in Lanford, Illinois, and starred Roseanne Barr (as she was then still known) as Roseanne Conner, a wife and mother of three who worked in a plastics factory. John Goodman costarred as her husband, Dan, a building contractor. Roseanne and Dan were overweight. Though they were the parents of three kids, they didn't have all the answers; often, neither mother nor father knew best. Rounding out the original cast were Lecy Goranson as elder daughter Becky (Goranson was succeeded by Sarah Chalke in 1993); Sara Gilbert as younger daughter Darlene; Michael Fishman as son D. J.; Laurie Metcalf as Roseanne's unhappy sister, Jackie Harris, a police officer; Natalie West as Roseanne's thrice-married coworker, Crystal Anderson; and George Clooney (1988–1989) as supervisor Booker Brooks.

Roseanne was an immediate success. It finished second in the annual Nielsen ratings during its first season, and finished in the top five for each of its first six seasons. With success, however, came controversy and disagreements. Never one to shy away from confrontation, Roseanne clashed with her producers and writers, and eventually with members of her own family. Series creator Matt Williams and director Ellen Falcon left the show by the middle of the first season, and executive producers Carsey and Werner absented themselves from the set. Roseanne's marriage to Bill Pentland ended in divorce, and in 1990 she married standup comedian Tom Arnold; Arnold appeared occasionally on the show as Dan's pal Arnie (the character was originally known as Arnie Merchant, and later as Arnie Thomas). After her remarriage Roseanne continued to make headlines when she accused her parents of abusing her as a child. In 1991 Roseanne Barr became known professionally as Roseanne Arnold.

The series evolved over the years as its characters, like many working class Americans, lost their jobs and found new ones. As the second season opened, Roseanne no longer worked at Wellman Plastics. After a stint at a beauty salon, she became a waitress. By 1991 she was working at Rodbell's Coffee Shop in a shopping mall. Martin Mull joined the cast as her gay boss, Leon Carp. Occasionally featured were Michael Des Barres as Leon's companion, Jerry, and Bonnie Sheridan (formerly known as Bonnie Bramlett when she was a rock and roll singer) as fellow waitress Bonnie. In 1991 Dan opened his own motorcycle business, Lanford Custom Cycles. Daughter Becky found a boyfriend, Mark Healy (played by Glenn Quinn), with whom she eloped in 1992. Daughter Darlene, like many teenagers, became more and more morose at home, spending much of her time in her room. She, too, acquired a boyfriend, David (played by Johnny Galecki). Dan's pal Arnie got married. Sandra Bernhard appeared occasionally as his wife, Nancy; unfortunately for Arnie, Nancy left him—for another woman. Roseanne's sister, Jackie, left the police force and became a long distance trucker. Estelle Parsons appeared occasionally as Roseanne and Jackie's troublesome mother, Bev.

In the fall of 1992 Dan's motorcycle business had folded, and the Conner family faced financial difficulties; their electricity was briefly shut off. Eventually, Dan landed a municipal job, and Roseanne and Jackie (with financial help from their mother) opened the Lanford Lunch Box. After years of unhappy relationships, Jackie had a baby and got married in 1994; Michael O'Keefe played her husband, Fred. Darlene ended her relationship with David, and went to Chicago to study art (David moved into the Conners' basement, however; in real life, Sara Gilbert started college at Yale, and taped her scenes in New York).

A Saturday-morning cartoon show based on a younger version of Roseanne's character appeared in 1990 (see Little Rosey). In the spring of 1993 Roseanne and Tom Arnold launched The Jackie Thomas Show, a sitcom starring Tom Arnold. Despite good ratings, it was not renewed, and Roseanne briefly threatened to take her series off the air in retaliation. The threat did not materialize, and in the spring of 1994 Roseanne filed for divorce.

As the seventh season premiered in 1994, the star was known no longer as Roseanne Arnold, but simply as Roseanne (the change was noted in the premiere episode's closing credits, as all cast and crew members were listed only by their first names). Early in 1995 Roseanne married Ben Thomas, who had been hired by Tom Arnold as their bodyguard and chauffeur; she was pregnant, through in-vitro fertilization, with Thomas's child. On the series, Roseanne was also pregnant. Roseanne's first husband, Bill Pentland, appeared briefly in one 1995 episode. Lecy Goranson returned as Becky in the fall of 1995, replacing Sarah Chalke (the two appeared together in the season premiere's closing credits, and Chalke also showed up in the 1995 Halloween episode). The Conners' baby was born on 31 October 1995, and was named Jerry Garcia Conner (although the new arrival had been announced as a girl during the previous season, Roseanne explained that she changed her mind and wanted it to be the same sex as her real-life son, Buck).

The success of Roseanne no doubt led to a proliferation of sitcoms starring standup comedians. Several of them, including Seinfeld, Home Improvement, Grace Under Fire, and Ellen, became major hits. Despite Roseanne's huge popularity, it was snubbed at the Emmy awards. During its first six seasons the series was never nominated for Outstanding Comedy Series, and Roseanne herself was not nominated for Outstanding Lead Actress in a Comedy Series until the show's fourth season (she did not win until the following season). The series did win a prestigious Peabody Award in 1993, however (it was cited for having "the courage to look unflinchingly at contemporary family life"). By 1995 Roseanne had become the most powerful woman in domestic television. Earning an estimated $1 million per episode, she also had negotiated commitments to produce four new television series for ABC. One of them was expected to be an adaptation of the British sitcom, Absolutely Fabulous, to which Roseanne had obtained the American rights.

THE ROSEMARY CLOONEY SHOW

SYNDICATED

1956–1957 Rosemary Clooney, pop singer of the 1950s, hosted this series of thirty-nine half-hour variety shows, which also featured the Hi-Lo's (Bob Morse, Clark Burrows, Gene Puerling, and Bob Strasen) and Nelson Riddle's orchestra. In the fall of 1957 Clooney hosted her own network series: see The Lux Show Starring Rosemary Clooney.

ROSETTI AND RYAN

22 SEPTEMBER 1977–10 NOVEMBER 1977 This hour-long crime show vanished early in the 1977–1978 season. It featured Tony Roberts as lawyer Joe Rosetti, the dashing half of a successful defense team; Squire Fridell as his more serious partner, Frank Ryan, a former cop; Jane Elliott as Assistant District Attorney Jessica Hornesby; Ruth Manning as Emma; Randi Oakes as Georgia; and Dick O'Neill as Judge Praetor D. Hardcastle. Leonard B. Stern was the executive producer, Don M. Mankiewicz and Gordon Cotler the supervising producers, and Jerry Davis the producer for Universal Television. The series pilot was televised 23 May 1977.

THE ROSEY GRIER SHOW

SYNDICATED

1969 Former professional football star Roosevelt Grier hosted his own half-hour talk show for a brief time.

ROUGH GUIDE

PBS

1993–1994 Produced by the BBC, this travel series based on a popular series of travel books presented an un-whitewashed view of the selected destinations. Aired on PBS during the summertime, it was hosted by Magenta DeVine, Rajan Datar, and Sankha Guha in 1993, and by DeVine and Datar in 1994.

ROUGH RIDERS

2 OCTOBER 1958–24 SEPTEMBER 1959 An implausible western about three Civil War veterans—two Union soldiers and one Confederate soldier—who teamed up after the war. With Kent Taylor as Captain Flagg; Jan Merlin (the ex-Confederate) as Lieutenant Kirby; and Peter Whitney as Sergeant Sinclair. Kirby wore his guns backward in the holster, permitting him to "cross-draw."

THE ROUND TABLE

NBC

18 SEPTEMBER 1992–16 OCTOBER 1992 Hour continuing drama set in Washington, D.C., where the regulars congregated after work at a bar known as the Round Table. With Stacy Haiduk as Rhea McPherson, a former reporter trying to get a job with the FBI; Jessica Walter as her mother, Anne, a publisher; Roxann Biggs as Rhea's roommate, Jennifer Clemente, a federal prosecutor; David Gail as bartender Danny Burke; Thomas Breznahan as Mitchell Clark, who worked with Jennifer; David Ackroyd as Senator Jack Reed; Pepper Sweeney as Secret Service agent Devereaux Jones; Erik King as Wade Carter, a cop; and Alex Wilson as Rhea's cousin, Kaitlin Cavanaugh.

THE ROUNDERS

6 SEPTEMBER 1966–3 JANUARY 1967 Short-lived sitcom about a couple of cowpokes at a Texas cattle ranch. With Ron Hayes as Ben Jones; Patrick Wayne (son of John Wayne) as Howdy Lewis; Chill Wills as Jim Ed Love, owner of the J. L. Ranch; Janis Hansen as Sally, Ben's girlfriend; Bobbi Jordan as Ada, Howdy's girlfriend; Jason Wingreen as Shorty; James Bowen Brown as Luke; and Walker Edmiston as Regan. Ed Adamson produced the half-hour series for M-G-M.

THE ROUSTERS

NBC

1 OCTOBER 1983–26 DECEMBER 1983; 9 JUNE 1984–21 JULY 1984 Stephen J. Cannell created this hour light adventure series, which was set at the Sladetown Carnival in Southern California. The cast included Chad Everett as Wyatt Earp III (great-grandson of the legendary lawman), the carnival's chief roustabout and peacekeeper; Jim Varney as Evan Earp, Wyatt's con-artist brother; Mimi Rodgers as Ellen Slade, daughter of the carnival owner, who taught the carnival youngsters and worked with the animals; Maxine Stuart as Wyatt's mother, Amanda Earp, a would-be bounty hunter; Timothy Gibbs as Michael, Wyatt's teenage son; and Hoyt Axton as the carnival owner, Cactus Jack Slade.

ROUTE 66 CBS

7 OCTOBER 1960–18 SEPTEMBER 1964 Route 66, an hour-long adventure series about two guys tooling around the country in a 1960 Corvette, was filmed on location throughout America. Featured were Martin Milner as Tod Stiles, a Yale grad, and George Maharis (1960–1962) as Buzz Murdock, a streetwise New Yorker; in the spring of 1963 Glenn Corbett succeeded Maharis as Tod's partner, Lincoln Case. Notable guest appearances on the series included those by Alan Alda ("Soda Pop and Paper Flags," 31 May 1963); Joey Heatherton (in her first TV dramatic role, "Three Sides," 18 November 1960); Robert Redford ("First Class Mouliak," 20 October 1961); Rod Steiger ("Welcome to the Wedding," 8 November 1963), and Ethel Waters ("Goodnight Sweet Blues," 6 October 1961; Waters's performance earned her an Emmy nomination, the first such nomination for a black actress). Herbert B. Leonard was the executive producer of the series for Screen Gems. Nelson Riddle's brilliant theme was a minor hit record in 1962. A new version of the series surfaced briefly in 1993: see below.

ROUTE 66 NBC

8 JUNE 1993–6 JULY 1993 The short-lived revival of the 1960-1963 series marked the 66th anniversary of the opening of the real U.S. Route 66. It starred James Wilder as Nick Lewis, the son of Buz Murdock from the old series, who had inherited his father's 1961 Corvette, and Dan Cortese as Arthur Clark, a hitchhiker picked up by Lewis.

THE ROWAN AND MARTIN SHOW NBC

16 JUNE 1966–8 SEPTEMBER 1966 A summer replacement for The Dean Martin Show, The Rowan and Martin Show was an hour-long variety series cohosted by comedians Dan Rowan and Dick Martin. Also on hand were Lainie Kazan, Frankie Randall, Judi Rolin, Dom DeLuise, the Wisa D'Orso Dancers, and Les Brown and his band. Rowan and Martin are, of course, better known as the hosts of Laugh-In (see also that title).

ROXIE CBS

1 APRIL 1987–8 APRIL 1987 One of the shortest-lived prime-time series in history, Roxie lasted only two episodes (as did Take Five, the unfortunate program which premiered immediately after it). It was set at the studios of WNYV, a tiny UHF television station in Manhattan. The cast included Andrea Martin as Roxie Brinkerhoff, the program director; Jack Riley as Leon Buchanan, the manager; Teresa Ganzel as Marcie McKinley, the secretary; Mitchell Laurance as Roxie's husband, Michael, a teacher; Ernie Sabella as Vito Carteri, the engineer; and Jerry Pavlon as Randy Grant, the gofer.

THE ROY DOTY SHOW DUMONT

10 MAY 1953–4 OCTOBER 1953 Sunday-morning children's show, hosted by Roy Doty, who drew sketches and told stories.

THE ROY ROGERS AND DALE EVANS SHOW ABC

29 SEPTEMBER 1962–22 DECEMBER 1963 Roy Rogers and Dale Evans, who had previously starred in a western, The Roy Rogers Show, cohosted this Saturday-night variety hour. Also featured were Cliff Arquette, Pat Brady, Cathie Taylor, and the Sons of the Pioneers.

THE ROY ROGERS SHOW NBC

30 DECEMBER 1951–23 JUNE 1957 One of the most popular of TV's early westerns, especially with younger viewers, this half-hour show, set in the present, starred Roy Rogers and his wife, Dale Evans, as themselves. Pat Brady was featured as Rogers's jeep-driving sidekick (the jeep was named Nellybelle), and the Sons of the Pioneers, the singing group with which Rogers (then known as Leonard Slye) broke into show business, were also on hand. Rogers rode Trigger, a trained horse (which Rogers had stuffed after its death), while Evans rode Buttermilk; rounding out the animal cast was Bullet, a German shepherd. Some 101 episodes were produced by Rogers' own company, Roy Rogers Productions.

THE ROYAL FAMILY CBS

18 SEPTEMBER 1991–27 NOVEMBER 1991; 8 APRIL 1992–13 MAY 1992 Redd Foxx's last sitcom was this one, on which he played Al Royal, an Atlanta letter carrier whose imminent plans for a peaceful retirement with his wife were spoiled by the arrival back home of their adult daughter and her three kids. Joining Foxx were Della Reese as Al's wife, Victoria; Mariann Aalda as their newly divorced daughter, Elizabeth; Sylver Gregory as Elizabeth's sixteen-year-old, Kim; Larenz Tate as Elizabeth's fifteen-year-old, Curtis; and Naya Rivera as Elizabeth's four-year-old, Hillary. Eddie Murphy created the series, and Foxx tested CBS's censors by coining the catchphrase "Motherfather!" which Al uttered whenever he became exasperated.

On October 11, 1991, after seven episodes had been completed, Foxx collapsed on the set and died of a heart attack. Jackee then joined the series for several episodes as Ruth, Victoria's half-sister, who moved into the household. When the show returned in April 1992, Jackee was reintroduced as a new character, Coco, Victoria's elder daughter.

ROYAL PLAYHOUSE DUMONT

12 APRIL 1951–12 JULY 1951; 3 APRIL 1952–26 JUNE 1952 This half-hour dramatic anthology series was seen on Thursday nights.

RUBIK THE AMAZING CUBE ABC

10 SEPTEMBER 1983–1 SEPTEMBER 1984; 4 MAY 1985–31 AUGUST 1985 The central figure in this Saturday-morning cartoon show was Rubik, an animated version of the Rubik's Cube puzzle. The cartoon Rubik paled around with three kids, Renaldo, Carlos, and Lisa. Rubik was powerless when his colored sides were unaligned, but when his six faces were correctly positioned he wielded an array of superpowers. Ron Palillo (formerly of Welcome Back, Kotter) provided the voice of Rubik, which was electronically speeded up for television. During the 1983–1984 season the series was shown as the second portion of The Pac-Man/Rubik the Amazing Cube Hour. A few reruns popped up on ABC a season later.

RUDE DOG AND THE DWEEBS CBS

16 SEPTEMBER 1989–1 SEPTEMBER 1990 Saturday morning cartoon show starring Rude Dog, a cool canine who operated a delivery service and drove a pink 1956 Cadillac, and his puppy pals.

RUFF AND REDDY NBC

14 DECEMBER 1957–8 OCTOBER 1960; 29 SEPTEMBER 1962–26 SEPTEMBER 1964 Ruff and Reddy was the first network television series from Hanna-Barbera Productions. William Hanna and Joseph Barbera, who had created the Tom and Jerry cartoons early in the 1940s, formed their television partnership in 1957 and went on to produce some 100 series, most of which were animated. Ruff and Reddy was a Saturday-morning half-hour show and featured the adventures of a cat (Ruff) and dog (Reddy) team. Don Messick supplired Ruff's voice, Daws Butler supplied Reddy's. Other theatrical cartoons were also shown. The show was first hosted by Jimmy Blaine and later by Bob Cottle. The success of Ruff and Reddy soon led to such well-known Hanna-Barbera shows as The Flintstones, Huckleberry Hound, The Jetsons, and Quickdraw McGraw.

THE RUGGLES ABC

3 NOVEMBER 1949–19 JUNE 1952 Kinescoped in Hollywood, this half-hour sitcom starred Charles Ruggles as himself, Erin O'Brien Moore and Ruth Tedrow as his wife, Margaret, and Margaret Kerry as their daughter. Robert Raisbeck was the producer.

RUGRATS NICK

11 AUGUST 1991– Half-hour cartoon series on which life was examined from the point of view of a group of toddlers—Tommy Pickles, twins Phil and Lil, Tommy's cousin Angelica, and Spike the dog.

RUN, BUDDY, RUN CBS

12 SEPTEMBER 1966–2 JANUARY 1967 Jack Sheldon starred in this half-hour sitcom as Buddy Overstreet, a mild-mannered accountant who was forced to flee his pursuers from The Syndicate after he overheard mobsters discussing "Chicken Little" in a steam room. Also featured were Bruce Gordon as Mr. Devere, syndicate chieftain; Jim Connell as Junior, Devere's son; Nick Georgiade as Wendell, one of Devere's henchmen; and Gregg Palmer as Harry, another henchman.

RUN FOR YOUR LIFE NBC

13 SEPTEMBER 1965–11 SEPTEMBER 1968 Roy Huggins, who developed The Fugitive, also developed and produced this hour series about a man on the run. It starred Ben Gazzara as Paul Bryan, a lawyer who learned that he had no more than two years to live and decided to spend his remaining time traveling around and assisting others. Though Bryan was told in the initial episode that he had only two years, the series managed to stay on the air for three. The producers searched carefully for a noncontagious, incurable disease which would enable Bryan to remain active; they settled on chronic myelocytic leukemia, an illness which apparently has no debilitating symptoms.

RUN, JOE, RUN NBC

7 SEPTEMBER 1974–4 SEPTEMBER 1976 This unusual live-action Saturday-morning series combined Lassie with The Fugitive. Its central character was a German shepherd named Joe, who, while undergoing training for the Army K-9 Corps, was wrongly accused of attacking his master and ran away; each week Joe found time to help out someone in distress. During the first season Arch Whiting was featured as Joe's master, Sergeant William Corey, who vainly pursued Joe to let him know that he had been exonerated. During the second season Joe teamed up with a young hiker named Josh McCoy (played by Chad States). Joe was played by Heinrich of Midvale. The half-hour series was produced by Robert Williams and Bill Schwartz the first season, and by Dick O'Connor the second season for William P. D'Angelo Productions, Inc.

RUNAROUND NBC

9 SEPTEMBER 1972–1 SEPTEMBER 1973 Paul Winchell hosted this Saturday-morning game show for children, on which nine youngsters competed; when questions were asked, the players were supposed to run to certain squares onstage, which represented possible answers to the questions.

RUNAWAY WITH THE RICH AND FAMOUS SYNDICATED

1987–1994 The third of Robin Leach's trilogy of celebrity-fawning shows (see also Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous and Fame, Fortune and Romance), this one offered the lure of first-class transportation and accommodations, plus spending money, to celebs who were willing to have a camera crew accompany them on their "dream vacations."

THE RUNAWAYS (OPERATION: RUNAWAY) NBC

27 APRIL 1978–18 MAY 1978; 29 MAY 1979–4 SEPTEMBER 1979 An hour dramatic series about a psychologist whose specialty was tracking down runaways and convincing them to return home, the show premiered in 1978 as a short-run series, titled Operation: Runaway. It starred Robert Reed as psychologist David McKay, with Karen Machon as his friend Karen Wingate, dean of women at the college where McKay's office was located; Michael Biehn as Mark Johnson, David's ward; and Ruth Cox as Susan. The show had been scheduled for NBC's fall 1978 schedule, but was yanked in August of 1978; it finally reappeared in May of 1979 entitled The Runaways and starring Alan Feinstein as psychologist Steve Arizzio. Karen Machon and Michael Biehn were retained from the 1978 cast, and two new faces were added: James Callahan as Sergeant Hal Grady, and Patti Cohoon as Debbie Shaw. The series was a QM Production.

RUNNING THE HALLS NBC

11 SEPTEMBER 1993–3 SEPTEMBER 1994 A companion program to Saved by the Bell, this Saturday-morning live-action show was set at a private school, Middlefield Academy, where hijinks prevailed. With Richard Hayes as Andy McBain; Trevor Lissauer as Reese; Senta Moses as Nikki; Laurie Fortier as Holiday; Lackey Bevis as Molloy Simpson; Richard Speight, Jr., as Shark; Craig Kirkwood as Taylor; Mike Sabatino as Ferris Bachman; and Pamela Bowen as Miss Gilman.

RUSH LIMBAUGH, THE TELEVISION SHOW SYNDICATED

1992– Conservative Rush Limbaugh was already well known before inaugurating his television program in 1992. After a career as a disc jockey in the 1970s, he became host of a nationally syndicated talk radio show in 1988; the three-hour daytime radio broadcast became highly popular, and was syndicated to some 500 stations within four years. For television, Limbaugh distilled his presentation to a daily half hour of Limbaugh himself. The show featured no guests or callers, relying instead on the host's verbal skills to skewer liberals, gays, feminists, and other un-American undesirables. Limbaugh managed to hold his diatribes together with a sense of humor, and came across as articulate and affable. He held forth from behind a desk in a wood-paneled set which resembled a den, with its bookshelves lined with multiple copies of the host's two best-selling books. His studio audience was well dressed, with most men sporting coats and ties. Limbaugh succinctly explained himself to Time magazine in a 1995 interview: "I'm an entertainer with a conservative agenda." Roger Ailes, who had assisted the Reagan and Bush administrations in television strategy, was the executive producer.

RUSS HODGES' SCOREBOARD DUMONT

14 APRIL 1948–22 APRIL 1949 Fifteen-minute nightly sports report by veteran sportscaster Russ Hodges.

THE RUSS MORGAN SHOW CBS

7 JULY 1956–1 SEPTEMBER 1956 This Saturday-night half-hour musical variety series was hosted by bandleader Russ Morgan and featured singer Helen O'Connell.

RUTH LYONS' 50 CLUB NBC

1 OCTOBER 1951–5 SEPTEMBER 1952 Broadcast from Cincinnati, this half-hour daytime variety show was hosted by Ruth Lyons and featured singers Bill Thall and Dick Noel.

RUTHIE ON THE TELEPHONE CBS

7 AUGUST 1949–5 NOVEMBER 1949 A five-minute filmed comedy series, Ruthie on the Telephone starred Ruth Gilbert as Ruthie and Philip Reed as the unwilling recipient of her telephone calls. The show was seen five nights a week at 7:55.

RYAN'S FOUR ABC

5 APRIL 1983–27 APRIL 1983 Hour medical drama about a physician supervising four interns. With Tom Skerritt as Dr. Thomas Ryan, who agreed to become director of interns at Wilshire Memorial Hospital after the suicide of his son, who had been an intern there; Albert Hall as intern Dr. Terence Wilson, a former cop; Timothy Daly as Dr. Gillian; Dirk Blocker as Dr. Norman Rostov; Lisa Eilbacher as Dr. Ingrid Sorenson; and Nicolas Coster as Dr. Morris Whitford, the hospital director. David Victor created the series, and served as executive producer with Henry Winkler.

RYAN'S HOPE ABC

7 JULY 1975–13 JANUARY 1989 One of the few daytime serials to be set in a large metropolis, Ryan's Hope was named after a fictional tavern located on Manhattan's West Side; most of the action took place there or at Riverside Hospital, to which most of the show's medical people were affiliated. The half-hour show was created by Claire Labine and Paul Avila Mayer. The original cast included: Faith Catlin as Dr. Faith Coleridge; Justin Deas as Dr. Bucky Carter; Bernard Barrow as Johnny Ryan, founder of Ryan's Hope; Helen Gallagher as his wife, Maeve Ryan; Michael Hawkins as Frank Ryan, their eldest son; Ilene Kristen as Delia Ryan, Frank's wife; Malcolm Groome as Dr. Pat Ryan, Johnny and Maeve's younger son; Kate Mulgrew as Mary Ryan, Johnny and Maeve's daughter; Diana Van Der Vlis as Dr. Nell Beaulac; John Gabriel as her husband, Seneca Beaulac; Frank Latimore as Dr. Ed Coleridge, Faith's father, an old friend of Johnny Ryan; Nancy Addison (later known as Nancy Addison Altman) as Jillian Coleridge, Ed's adopted daughter, who married and divorced Seneca Beaulac; Ronald Hale as Ed's son, Dr. Roger Coleridge, who had an affair with Delia Ryan and eventually married her; Michael Levin as reporter Jack Fenelli, who fell for Mary Ryan and married her; Michael Fairman as unscrupulous Nick Szabo; Earl Hindman as Delia's brother, Bob Reid; Hannibal Penney, Jr., as Clem Moultrie; and Rosalinda Guerra as Ramona Gonzalez.

Subsequent additions to the cast have included: Nancy Barrett (who replaced Faith Catlin), Catherine Hicks, and Karen Ann Morris (later known as Karen Morris-Gowdy) as Dr. Faith Coleridge; Andrew Robinson (who replaced Michael Hawkins), Daniel Hugh-Kelly, Geoffrey Pierson and John Sanderford as Frank Ryan; Robyn Millan, Randall Edwards, Ilene Kristen (again), Robin Mattson and Kristen (yet again) as Delia; Mary Carney (who replaced Kate Mulgrew), Kathleen Tolan, and Nicolette Goulet as Mary Ryan Fenelli, who was killed by mobsters (Mulgrew subsequently played the part in fantasy sequences); Tom MacGreevey as Tom Desmond, who married Faith; Julia Barr as Renie Szabo; Dennis Jay Higgins as Sam Crowell; John Perkins as Father McShane; Rosetta LeNoire as Miriam George; Jose Aleman as Angel Nieves; Ana Alicia Ortiz (later known as Ana Alicia) as Alicia Nieves; Louise Shaffer as Rae Woodard; Jadrien Steele and Jason Adams as Little John Ryan; Fat Thomas as Jumbo Marino; Lisa Sutton, Megan McCracken, and Nana Tucker (later known as Nana Visitor) as Nancy Feldman; John Blazo (who replaced Malcolm Groome), Robert Finoccoli, Patrick James Clarke, and Malcolm Groome (again) as Dr. Pat Ryan; Sarah Felder, Ann Gillespie, Marg Helgenberger, Carrell Myers, and Barbara Blackburn as Siobhan Ryan, another of Johnny and Maeve's children (Johnny and Maeve also had a fifth child, Kathleen Ryan [played by Nancy Reardon], who was occasionally glimpsed on the program); Pauline Flanagan as Annie Colleary; and Patrick Horgan as Thatcher Ross.

Also, Maureen Garrett as Elizabeth Jean Ryan, Johnny's niece; Will Patton as Ox Knowles, her husband; Richard Backus as Barry Ryan, Johnny's nephew; Richard Muenz, Roscoe Born, Michael Hennessy, Walt Willey, and Born (again) as ex-gangster Joe Novak, who married Siobhan Ryan; Kelli Maroney as Kimberly Harris, Rae Woodard's unstable daughter; Peter Haskell as Hollis Kirkland III, Kim's father; Christine Jones as Catsy Kirkland, Hollis's wife; Felicity LaFortune as Leigh Kirkland; Mary Page Keller and Ariane Munker as Amanda Kirkland; Stan Birnbaum (later known as Sam Behrens) as Dr. Adam Cohen; James Sloyan as Mitch Bronsky; Donald Vanhorn as Prince Albert, an ape who (in a King Kong story line) ran off with poor Delia; Michael Corbett as Michael Pavel; Trent Jones as Ken George Jones; Rose Alaio as Rose Melina; Christine Ebersole and Kathryn Dowling as Lilly Darnell; Nell Carter as Ethel Green; David Clarke as mobster Tizo Novotny; Kay de Lancey as Amy Morris; Charles Cioffi as Claudius Church; Joe Silver as Eliot; Kerry MacNamara, Jenny Rebecca Dweir, and Yasmine Bleeth as Ryan Fenelli, daughter of Jack and Mary Fenelli; Malachy McCourt as Kevin MacGuinness; Judith Chapman as Charlotte Greer MacCurtain; Roy Poole as Neil Greer MacCurtain; David Sederholm as Bill

Hyde; Kathleen Widdoes as Una MacCurtain; Gloria DeHaven as Bess Shelby; Robin Greer as Sidney Price; Cali Timmins as Maggie Shelby; Gerit Quealy as Jacqueline Novak; Daniel Pilon as Max Dubujak; Scott Holmes as David Greenberg; Corbin Bernsen as Kenny Graham; Fred Burnstein as Laslo Novotny; Lauren O'Bryan and Julia Campbell as Katie, daughter of the seldom-seen Kathleen; Traci Lin as Pru Shepherd; Herb Anderson as Jeremy Winthrop; Harve Presnell as Matthew Crane; Duncan Gamble as Tiger Bennett; Marisa Pavan as Chantal Dubujak; Susan Scannell as Gabrielle Dubujak/Chessy Blake; Christian Slater as D. J. LaSalle; Franc Luz as Stephen Latham; David O'Brien as Charles Whitehall; Nancy Valen as Melinda Weaver, who married Pat Ryan; Grant Show as Rick Hyde, who eloped with Ryan Fenelli; Tracey Ross as Diana Douglas; Leslie Easterbrook as Devlin Kowalski; Christopher Durham as fisherman Dakota Smith, who took in an amnesiac Jillian; Jack Palmer as Sam Banachek; Tichina Arnold as Zena Brown; Lois Robbins as Concetta D'Angelo, who also married Pat Ryan; Cynthia Dozier as Emily Hall; Jim Wlcek as Ben Shelby; Catherine Larson as Lizzie Ransome, who married young John Ryan; Lewis Arlt as Richard Rowan; Maria Pitillo as Nancy Don Louis; Diana Van Der Vlis (who had played Nell Beaulac in the original cast) as Sherry Rowan; Regis Philbin as Malachy Malone; Brian McGovern as Chaz; Lydia Hannibal as Chris Hannold; Irving Allen Lee as Evan Cooper; Cesare Danova as Silvio Conti; Michael Palance as Robert Rowan; Steve Fletcher as Matthew Strand; and Sylvia Sidney, Nancy Coleman, Natalie Priest, Jacqueline Brookes, Pauline Flanagan, and Rosemary Prinz as Sister Mary Joel, who ultimately turned out to be Jack Fenelli's mother.

During Ryan's Hope's first years, Claire Labine and Paul Avila Mayer were the executive producers and the head writers. Labine and Mayer left the show, but returned briefly as head writers in 1983. Labine returned again in 1988, but by that time the series was in serious trouble. It had been moved to a late morning time slot, and a number of network affiliates were no longer carrying it; as a result it had sunk to the bottom of the daytime ratings. Ryan's Hope breathed its last in January 1989, with Maeve Ryan singing "Danny Boy" at the tavern.

SCTV NETWORK NBC

15 MAY 1981–24 JUNE 1983 Television itself was satirized on this innovative and often hilarious late-night show. Aired at 12:30 A.M. on Friday nights, it replaced NBC's Midnight Special in the spring of 1981. SCTV was a longer and more expensive version of Second City TV, a half-hour syndicated series which ran from 1977 to 1980. It featured members of the Second City comedy troupe, most of whom came along to the network version: John Candy, Joe Flaherty, Eugene Levy, Andrea Martin, Rick Moranis, Catherine O'Hara, and Dave Thomas (Martin Short joined the group in 1982). Celebrity guests and rock bands also appeared regularly. Like Second City TV, SCTV was produced in Canada; facilities in Edmonton, Alberta, and Scarborough, Ontario, were used.

In the series "SCTV" was the call letters of the only television station in Melonville. The station was owned by Guy Caballero (Flaherty), a tasteless clod who cared only about making money, and run by Edith Prickley, an obnoxious administrator. Practically everything on commercial television was lampooned, from Perry Como to promotional spots to public service announcements. Among the station's many semi-regular offerings were such shows as "The Sammy Maudlin Show," a soap opera called "Days of the Week," and the ever-popular "The Fracases, America's Nastiest Couple."

An unexpectedly popular feature was "The Great White North." The segment was prepared in order to satisfy a Canadian regulatory requirement that programs produced there have at least some intrinsically Canadian content. Rick Moranis and Dave Thomas concocted a pair of stereotypical Canadians— the work-shirted, wool-capped, beer-guzzling brothers Bob and Doug McKenzie. As the co-hosts of "The Great White North," Bob and Doug spent most of their time talking aimlessly ("eh?"), opening six-packs, and "hosing" each other with suds. Nevertheless, the characters caught on with both Canadian and American audiences; the "McKenzies" released a popular record album and headlined a 1983 film, aptly titled Strange Brew.

The series went through three titles in its two-year run; it premiered as SCTV

Network 90, but switched to SCTV Comedy Network in the fall of 1981. A year later the title was shortened to SCTV Network. After two years in a late-night slot, the show's producers and cast turned down NBC's offer to move to prime time. The proffered slot was Sundays at 7:00 P.M., which was not only opposite CBS's formidable 60 Minutes, but which also would have necessitated more family-oriented content. Instead, SCTV moved to the Cinemax cable network, where it surfaced late in 1983 as a twice-monthly, forty-five-minute show. Four of the network regulars were featured: Andrea Martin, Joe Flaherty, Eugene Levy, and Martin Short.

S.S. TELECRUISE ABC

28 APRIL 1951–2 JUNE 1951 This two-hour Saturday-morning variety show began locally in Philadelphia before going network for a few weeks in 1951. Hosted by "Cap'n" Jack Steck, it featured the Dave Appell Trio, baritone Eddie Roecker, Bon Bon, and Carol Wynne. The show's musical numbers were performed in front of photographs of exotic places.

S.W.A.T. ABC

24 FEBRUARY 1975–29 JUNE 1976 Generally criticized as one of the most violent shows of the decade, S.W.A.T. was the story of the Special Weapons and Tactics team, an elite unit of police officers stationed somewhere in California. Featured were Steve Forrest as Lieutenant Dan "Hondo" Harrelson, the leader; Rod Perry as Sergeant David "Deacon" Kay, second in command; Robert Urich as Officer James Street; Mark Shera as Officer Dominic Luca; and James Coleman as Officer T. J. McCabe. Created by Robert Hamner, S.W.A.T.'s executive producers were Aaron Spelling and Leonard Goldberg; the pilot for the series was telecast 17 February 1975, as one episode of The Rookies, another Spelling-Goldberg Production.

SABER OF LONDON

See MARK SABER

SABLE ABC

7 NOVEMBER 1987–2 JANUARY 1988 Seven-episode crime show based on a comic book, starring Lewis Van Bergen as Nicholas Flemming, mild-mannered author of children's books by day, and as Jon Sable, black-clad, striped-faced crimefighter by night. With Rene Russo as Nicholas's agent, Eden Kendall; Ken Page as Cheesecake, a black and blind computer whiz, the only person who knew of Flemming's dual identity; Holly Fulger as Myke Blackman, Flemming's illustrator; and Marge Kotlisky as Cynthia, his secretary. Dick Rosetti was executive producer.

SABRINA, THE TEENAGE WITCH CBS

12 SEPTEMBER 1970–31 AUGUST 1974 Sabrina, a teenage witch, was first introduced on The Archie Show, but in the fall of 1970 she was given her own hour cartoon series; that season the show was titled Sabrina and the Groovie Goolies. In the fall of 1971 the show was reduced to thirty minutes and retitled Sabrina, the Teenage Witch (The Groovie Goolies were given their own series that year, too). Sabrina was later reunited with Archie and Company on The Archie Comedy Hour and The New Archie Sabrina Hour. In the fall of 1977 she was again featured on her own series: see Super Witch. See also The Archie Show; The Groovie Goolies.

SAFARI TO ADVENTURE SYNDICATED

1971–1973 Bill Burrud served as host and narrator of this half-hour series of nature films.

SAFARILAND SYNDICATED

1963 Half-hour African travelogue, narrated by Jim Stewart.

SAILOR OF FORTUNE SYNDICATED

1957 Lorne Greene starred in this Canadian-produced half-hour adventure series as freighter captain Grant (Mitch) Mitchell.

THE SAINT SYNDICATED/NBC/CBS

1963–1966 (SYNDICATED); 21 MAY 1967–3 SEPTEMBER 1967; 17 FEBRUARY 1968–14 SEPTEMBER 1968; 18 APRIL 1969–12 SEPTEMBER 1969 (NBC); 21 DECEMBER 1979–15 AUGUST 1980 (CBS) The Saint, as fictional detective Simon Templar was sometimes known, was created by Leslie Charteris in a series of novels. The first television version, which starred Roger Moore as Simon Templar, was produced in England by ITC. Also featured were Winsley Pithey, Norman Pitt, and Ivor Dean as Inspector Claude Teal of Scotland Yard. The CBS version, titled Return of the Saint, starred Ian Ogilvy.

ST. ELSEWHERE NBC

26 OCTOBER 1982–25 MAY 1988 This hour medical drama was set at St. Eligius, a city-run hospital in Boston. The hospital was derisively known as "St. Elsewhere" because of its reputation as a "dumping ground." The series was described by some critics (and advertised by the network) as "Hill Street Blues set in a hospital." There were several similarities: both series were supplied by MTM Enterprises, both employed large casts, and both used continuing storylines. Also, both shows premiered to critical praise but low ratings. Miraculously, St. Elsewhere was renewed for a second season even though it wound up in 86th place out of 98 prime-time series (it was, by far, the season's lowest-rated entertainment series to be renewed).

The large cast of regulars included: Ed Flanders (1982–fall 1987) as Dr. Donald Westphall, St. Eligius's caring and well-respected chief of staff, a widower who lived with his teenage daughter and autistic son; William Daniels as Dr. Mark Craig, the abrasive but highly capable chief of surgery; Ed Begley, Jr., as Dr. Victor Ehrlich, the klutzy resident who worshipped Dr. Craig; David Morse as long-suffering Dr. Jack Morrison, who was put through as many travails as the writers could devise; Howie Mandel as Dr. Wayne Fiscus, specialist in emergency medicine; Christina Pickles as oft-married nurse Helen Rosenthal; Denzel Washington as Dr. Philip Chandler; Norman Lloyd as hospital administrator Dr. Daniel Auschlander, a liver specialist who battled his own liver cancer; David Birney (1982–1983) as libidinous surgeon Dr. Ben Samuels; G. W. Bailey (1982–1983) as psychiatrist Dr. Hugh Beale; Kavi Raz (1982–1984) as anesthesiologist Dr. V. J. Kochar; Cynthia Sikes (1982–1985) as Dr. Annie Cavanero; Barbara Whinnery (1982–1985) as pathologist Dr. Cathy Martin, who was raped; Terence Knox (1982–1985) as Dr. Peter White, the rapist; Ellen Bry (1983–1985) as Nurse Shirley Daniels, who shot and killed White; Nancy Stafford (1983–1985) as city health advisor Joan Halloran; Kim Miyori (1983–1984) as Dr. Wendy Armstrong, who committed suicide; Paul Sand (1983–1984) as psychologist Dr. Michael Ridley; Stephen Furst (1983–1988) as anxiety-filled Dr. Elliot Axelrod; Sagan Lewis (1983–1988) as surgeon Dr. Jacqueline Wade; Mark Harmon (1983–1986) as sexually active surgeon Dr. Bob Calswell, who developed AIDS; Eric Laneuville as Luther Hawkins, an orderly who became an emergency medical technician; Byron Stewart as orderly Warren Coolidge (the same role he'd played on The White Shadw) Florence Halop (1984–1985) as the chronically pesky patient Mrs. Hufnagel; Cindy Pickett (1985–1988) as Carol Novino, a nurse who became a physician; Alfre Woodard (1985–1987) as obstetrician-gynecologist Dr. Roxanne Turner, who had a romance with Chandler; Jennifer Savidge as Nurse Lucy Papandreou, who had a torrid afair with Ehrlich and eventually married him; Bruce Greenwood (1986–1988) as manipulative Dr. Seth Griffin; and France Nuyen (1986–1988) as surgeon Dr. Paulette Kiem.

Occasionally featured over the years were Bonnie Bartlett as Ellen Craig, David's patient wife (Bartlett and Daniels were married in real life, and Bartlett became a full-fledged regular during the later seasons); Dana Short as Lizzie, Westphall's daughter; Chad Allen as Tommy, Westphall's autistic son; Patricia Wettig (1986–1988) as Joanne McFadden, Dr. Morrison's second wife; and Karen Landry (1982–1984) as Myra White, Peter's wife.

In the fall of 1987, St. Eligius was sold to Ecumena, a private health care corporation determined to run the hospital at a profit. Ronny Cox joined the cast as the new administrator, Dr. John Gideon, who soon was at odds with Drs. Auschlander and Westphall. Ed Flanders (as Westphall) left after the first three episodes of the season, departing in the now-famous program of 30 September, "Moon for the Misbegotten," on which Westphall dropped his trousers and "mooned" Gideon. Westphall returned for the series' concluding episode, "The Last One," telecast 25 May 1988; in the final scene, young Tommy is seen playing at home with a miniature St. Eligius snow globe, which is taken from his hands by Donald Westphall, who is not a doctor. The suggestion, of course, was that the entire series had been nothing more than a figment of the imagination.

The series' producers and writers used their imaginations to stretch the series beyond the confines of the ordinary medical drama. References were often made to other TV shows and to films; the hospital's public address system frequently paged other TV doctors, such as "Dr. Morton Chegley" from Julia. Jack Riley, who played the troubled Mr. Carlin on The Bob Newhart Show in the 1970s, showed up in the psycho ward on one episode; the name of an NBC executive was given to a cadaver on one show. Other episodes pushed further, introducing rock videos in a dream sequence, taking Dr. Fiscus to Heaven, and flashing back to the origins of St. Eligius fifty years earlier (with many of the older regulars playing younger versions of themselves). Joshua Brand and John Falsey created the series.

SAINTS AND SINNERS NBC

17 SEPTEMBER 1962–28 JANUARY 1963 This hour-long dramatic series was set at a newspaper, the New York Record (the same paper had been featured in The Roaring Twenties). It starred Nick Adams as Nick Alexander, a reporter, and featured John Larkin as city editor Mark Grainger; Richard Erdman as Klugie, the photographer; Robert F. Simon as copy editor Dave Tobiak; and Barbara Rush as Washington correspondent Liz Hogan.

SALE OF THE CENTURY NBC/SYNDICATED

29 SEPTEMBER 1969–13 JULY 1973 (NBC); 1973 (SYNDICATED); 3 JANUARY 1983–24 MARCH 1989 (NBC); 1985 (SYNDICATED) On this merchandise giveaway show, contestants won the right to "buy" proffered prizes at very low prices by answering simple questions. Jack Kelly hosted the series from 1969 to 1971, when affable Joe Garagiola succeeded him. After the series ended its original run here in 1973, it was bought by Australian producer Reg Grundy. Grundy succeeded in turning the show into a hugely popular hit Down Under and was able to interest NBC in a new American version. When the show reappeared here in 1983, Jim Perry was its new host. Sally Julian was his original assistant; she was replaced by Lee Menning in March 1983. Top prize on the new version was a possible jackpot of $310,000.

SALLY NBC

15 SEPTEMBER 1957–30 MARCH 1958 Sally was a half-hour sitcom about a former salesclerk who was invited to accompany a slightly daffy widow on a trip around the world. It starred Joan Caulfield as Sally Truesdale and Marion Lorne as her patron, Myrtle Banford. By February of 1958, the two had returned home, and Sally went back to her job at the Banford and Bleacher Department Store. Three new regulars were added for the last few episodes: Gale Gordon as Bascomb Bleacher, Sr., manager of the store; Johnny Desmond as Jim Kendall; and Arte Johnson as Junior Bleacher. Sally was the first filmed series produced by Paramount Television.

SALLY JESSY RAPHAEL SYNDICATED

1985– Daytime talk show, hosted by former radio talk show host Sally Jessy Raphael. Like her competitors, Raphael's show employed a studio audience and frequently presented shows on titillating topics. Also like some of her competitors, the show fell prey to impostors: one man who claimed to be an impotent husband on her show also appeared as an unmarried virgin on Geraldo, while a woman masquerading as a surrogate sex partner had been a "wife who hated sex" on The Oprah Winfrey Show. A sampling of topics from shows aired during April and May 1995 would include "Overweight People's Fashion Blunders," "Female Teenage Bullies," "Girls Embarrassed by Their Mothers' Sexy Styles," "Videotaped Indiscretions," and "Teens Who Flaunt Their Sexuality."

SALTY SYNDICATED

1974 An innocuous half-hour adventure series about two boys and Salty, their pet sea lion. With Mark Slade and Johnny Doran as brothers Taylor and Tim Reed, who were rescued in the hurricane that claimed their parents' lives; Julius Harris as Clancy Ames, their rescuer, owner of the Cove Marina; and Vincent Dale as Tim's pal, Rod Porterfield. Filmed in the Bahamas, the series was produced by Kobi Jaeger.

SALVAGE 1 ABC

29 JANUARY 1979–11 NOVEMBER 1979 Hour adventure series starring Andy Griffith as Harry Broderick, a junk dealer with high aspirations; each week he and his crew embarked on a salvage expedition of epic proportions (in the pilot film, for example, they built a rocket and flew to the moon to retrieve the debris left behind by the astronauts). Also featured were Joel Higgins as Skip Carmichael, a former astronaut; Trish Stewart as Melanie Slozar, a fuel expert; J. Jay Saunders as Mack; and Richard Jaeckel as Jack Klinger, a federal agent who kept an eye on Broderick. Executive producers: Harve Bennett and Harris Katleman for Bennett-Katleman Productions in association with Columbia Pictures TV. Though the show did not appear on ABC's schedule for the fall of 1979, it resurfaced as a replacement series for Out of the Blue and A New Kind of Family.

SAM CBS

14 MARCH 1978–18 APRIL 1978 Sam was a Labrador retriever assigned to the Los Angeles Police Department in this half-hour crime show from Jack Webb's Mark VII Ltd. Also featured were Mark Harmon as Officer Mike Breen and Len Wayland as Officer Clagett. The pilot for the series was aired 24 May 1977.

SAM BENEDICT NBC

15 SEPTEMBER 1962–7 SEPTEMBER 1963 An hour-long crime show about a San Francisco defense attorney. With Edmond O'Brien as Sam Benedict; Richard Rust as his young associate, Hank Tabor; and Joan Tompkins as his secretary, Trudy Warner. William Froug produced the series for MGM. The character was loosely based on real-life San Francisco defense attorney Jake Ehrlich.

THE SAM LEVENSON SHOW CBS

27 JANUARY 1951–30 JUNE 1951; 10 FEBRUARY 1952–10 JUNE 1952; 27 APRIL 1959–25 SEPTEMBER 1959 Humorist Sam Levenson hosted three shows of his own. On the first, which was seen on Saturday nights, celebrity guests appeared with their children and discussed the trials and tribulations of child raising. The second Sam Levenson Show was a half-hour variety series, which began on Sunday nights but later shifted to Tuesdays. Levenson's third series was a daytime show which replaced Arthur Godfrey Time when Godfrey had to undergo surgery; this half-hour series was produced by Charles Andrews.

SAMMY AND COMPANY SYNDICATED

1975–1977 Sammy Davis, Jr., hosted this ninety-minute variety series; other regulars included Johnny Brown, Kay Dingle, Joyce Jillson, Avery Schreiber, and announcer William B. Williams. Pierre Cossette was executive producer of the series, which was taped in New York, Las Vegas, and Los Angeles.

THE SAMMY DAVIS, JR. SHOW NBC

7 JANUARY 1966–22 APRIL 1966 The first variety show of the decade to be hosted by a black performer, The Sammy Davis, Jr. Show unfortunately inherited the Friday slot formerly occupied by Convoy and, despite an impressive guest list (Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor on the premiere, Judy Garland on two other shows), failed to attract decent ratings. Also featured were the Lester Wilson Dancers and the George Rhodes Orchestra. One reason for the show's failure was that, because of contractual commitments to ABC, Davis himself was unable to appear on the program after the premiere until 11 February. Another reason was that it was scheduled opposite two popular sitcoms on CBS, Hogan's Heroes and Gomer Pyle.

THE SAMMY KAYE SHOW CBS/NBC/ABC

28 JULY 1951–19 JULY 1952 (CBS); 8 AUGUST 1953–5 SEPTEMBER 1953 (NBC); 20 SEPTEMBER 1958–13 JUNE 1959 (ABC) Bandleader Sammy Kaye hosted three Saturday-night musical programs. All were half-hour shows; the first was an early evening show on CBS; the second, on NBC, was seen at 8 P.M.; and the third, originally titled Sammy Kaye's Music from Manhattan, was scheduled at 10 P.M. on ABC. The latter show also featured singers Ray Michaels, Lynn Roberts, Larry Ellis, and Hank Kanui, plus Kaye's seventeen-piece band. Kaye also hosted a musical game show: see So You Want to Lead a Band.

SAMSON AND GOLIATH NBC

9 SEPTEMBER 1967–31 AUGUST 1968 On this Saturday-morning cartoon show from Hanna-Barbera Productions, a boy named Samson and his dog, Goliath, could, when the need arose, transform themselves into a superhero and a lion, respectively. The series was retitled Young Samson in April 1968.

SAN FRANCISCO INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT NBC

28 OCTOBER 1970–25 AUGUST 1971 The second segment of NBC's Four-in-One umbrella program, this hour show was, obviously, set at a big-city airport. Featured were Lloyd Bridges as Jim Conrad, the manager; Clu Gulager as security chief Bob Hatten; Barbara Siegel as Suzie, Jim's daughter; and Barbara Werle as Jim's secretary, June.

SAN FRANCISCO MIX PBS

6 OCTOBER 1970–29 JUNE 1971 Each program of this twenty-six-week series focused on a single topic or theme. Richard Moore was the producer, and the regulars included Taula Lawrence, Tom Dahlgren, John Sharp, Victor Wong, and Virginia Anderson.

THE SAN PEDRO BEACH BUMS ABC

19 SEPTEMBER 1977–19 DECEMBER 1977 An unsuccessful attempt at an hour sitcom, The San Pedro Beach Bums were a group of five guys who lived on an old boat in the San Pedro (Calif.) harbor: Chris Murney as Buddy Binder; Stuart Pankin as Stuf; John Mark Robinson as Dancer (Ed McClory); Darryl McCullough as Moose; and Christopher DeRose as Boychick. Also featured were Christoff St. John as Ralphie; Susan Mullen as Suzy; and Lisa Reeves as Margo. Aaron Spelling and Douglas S. Cramer were the executive producers; the pilot for the series, "The San Pedro Bums," was telecast 13 May 1977.

SANDY DREAMS ABC

7 OCTOBER 1950–2 DECEMBER 1950 The principal character in this Saturday-evening children's show was a girl named Sandy, who was transported to the fantasy land of her dreams each week.

THE SANDY DUNCAN SHOW CBS

17 SEPTEMBER 1972–31 DECEMBER 1972 Sandy Duncan, who had formerly been featured in Funny Face, returned in this half-hour sitcom with a faintly different format. Duncan starred as Sandy Stockton, a U.C.L.A. student, a part-time secretary, and an occasional star of commercials. Also featured were Marian Mercer as Kay Fox, her neighbor; Tom Bosley as Bert Quinn, her boss at the Quinn and Cohen Advertising Agency; Pam Zarit as Hilary, the receptionist; Eric Christmas as Ben Hampton, the handyman in Sandy's apartment building; and M. Emmet Walsh as Alex Lembeck, a motorcycle cop who was a neighbor of Sandy's.

SANFORD NBC

15 MARCH 1980–10 SEPTEMBER 1980; 29 MAY 1981–14 AUGUST 1981 After a three-year absence, Redd Foxx returned as junk dealer Fred Sanford in this short-lived sequel to Sanford and Son. Also featured were Dennis Burkley as Fred's hefty white partner, Cal Petty; Marguerite Rae as a wealthy Beverly Hills widow, Evelyn (Eve) Lewis, Sanford's romantic interest; Suzanne Stone as Cissy, Eve's daughter; Cathy Cooper as Clara, Eve's maid; Percy Rodriguez as Winston, Eve's stuffy butler; Nathaniel Taylor as Sanford's pal, Raoul "Rollo" Larson; and Clinton Derricks-Carroll as Cliff, Sanford's nephew.

SANFORD AND SON NBC

14 JANUARY 1972–2 SEPTEMBER 1977 Sanford and Son, the second TV series developed by then partners Norman Lear and Bud Yorkin, was NBC's most popular prime-time series for four seasons (1972–1973 through 1975–1976). Lear and Yorkin acquired the rights to a British series, Steptoe and Son, and Americanized it by casting it with black performers. The half-hour sitcom starred veteran comedian Redd Foxx as cantankerous Fred Sanford, a widowed junk dealer living in Los Angeles (Foxx, whose real name was John Sanford, had seldom been seen on television before the series), and Demond Wilson as his devoted but restless son, Lamont Sanford. Foxx also brought in some of his contemporaries to work on the show, such as Whitman Mayo, who appeared as Grady Wilson (and later received his own show, Grady), Slappy White, who played Melvin, and LaWanda Page, who played Aunt Esther, the sister of Fred's late wife Elizabeth and the butt of many of Fred's jokes. Also featured were Gregory Sierra (1972–1974) as Julio, a friend of Lamont's; Nathaniel Taylor as Rollo; Raymond Allen as Uncle Woody; Don Bexley as Bubba Hoover; Lynn Hamilton as Donna Harris, Fred's female friend; Howard Platt as Hoppy, a local police officer; Hal Williams as Smitty, another cop; Pat Morita (1975–1976) as Ah Chew; Marlene Clark as Janet; and Edward Crawford as Roger. By the end of the 1976–1977 season, both Foxx and Wilson had decided to leave the series—Foxx signed with ABC and hosted his own variety show (see The Redd Foxx Comedy Hour) and Wilson turned up in a midseason sitcom (see Baby, I'm Back). NBC, however, decided to salvage what it could from the old show and introduced Sanford Arms in the fall of 1977 (see below). Bud Yorkin was the executive producer of Sanford and Son and Aaron Ruben was its first producer; Ruben was succeeded by coproducers Saul Turteltaub and Bernie Orenstein.

SANFORD ARMS NBC

16 SEPTEMBER 1977–14 OCTOBER 1977 Sanford Arms, NBC's attempt to keep Sanford and Son going after the departures of Redd Foxx and Demond Wilson, proved to be one of the first cancellations of the 1977–1978 season. As Sanford Arms opened, it was explained that Fred and Lamont Sanford had moved to Phoenix, and that their house and the place next door had been bought. Featured were Teddy Wilson as Phil Wheeler, the new purchaser, who planned to convert the place next door to a rooming house and to use the Sanford place as his home and office; Tina Andrews as Angie Wheeler, Phil's twenty-year-old daughter; John Earl as Nat Wheeler, Phil's twelve-year-old son; Bebe Drake-Hooks as Jeannie, Phil's girlfriend; Don Bexley as Bubba Hoover; LaWanda Page as Esther, who collected the mortgage payments for Fred Sanford; and Whitman Mayo as Grady Wilson. Bud Yorkin, Bernie Orenstein, and Saul Turteltaub (all of whom had worked on Sanford and Son) were the executive producers of Sanford Arms and Woody Kling was its producer.

SANTA BARBARA NBC

30 JULY 1984–15 JANUARY 1993 An hour daytime serial, Santa Barbara was created by Bridget and Jerome Dobson, who had previously served as head writers for General Hospital, Guiding Light, and As the World Turns. The Dobsons sold the show to New World Television in 1985; battles over "creative control" ensued, and the Dobsons' connections to the series were severed for a time. Anne Howard Bailey succeeded the Dobsons as head writer; Bailey was replaced by Charles Pratt, Jr., late in 1988. The Dobsons regained control of the series in 1991.

Santa Barbara never achieved ratings success, though it did win Emmys for outstanding daytime drama series in 1987–1988 and in 1988–1989. It was generally considered TV's wittiest soap opera. Originally, its central characters were the members of two wealthy families—the Capwells and the Lockridges—who were neighbors in Santa Barbara, California (their mansions were even connected by a secret tunnel). Most of the Lockridges had been written out by the end of the 1980s, and the lower-class Castillos, DiNapolis, and Donnellys had become prominent.

The cast included: Dame Judith Anderson and Janis Paige as Minx Lockridge, grand dame of the clan; Nicolas Coster as her son, Lionel Lockridge; Louise Sorel as Lionel's wife, Augusta Lockridge; Julie Ronnie, Susan Marie Snyder, and Shell Danielson as their daughter, Laken Lockridge; John Allen Nelson, Scott Jenkins, and Jack Wagner as their son, Warren Lockridge; Peter Mark Richman, Paul Burke, Charles Bateman, and Jed Allan as Channing Creighton (C. C.) Capwell, head of the Capwell clan; Shirley Ann Field and Marj Dusay as his first wife, Pamela; Judith McConnell as his second wife, Sophia Wayne, a former actress; Lane Davies, Terry Lester, and Gordon Thomson as Mason Capwell, son of C. C. and Pamela (Davies also played Mason's alter ego, Sonny Sprockett); Robin Wright, Kimberly MacArthur, Carrington Garland, and Eileen Davidson as Kelly Capwell, daughter of C. C. and Sophia; Marcy Walker as Eden Capwell, daughter of C. C. and Sophia (one of daytime's longest-suffering characters, Eden was hospitalized seven times in the show's first three years; later in the series she split into four personalities, one of them male); Todd McKee and Michael Brainard as Ted Capwell, son of C. C. and Sophia; Robert Wilson as Channing Capwell, Jr., who was actually the son of Lionel Lockridge and Sophia, and who was accidentally killed by Sophia; A Martinez as Cruz Castillo, whose romance with Eden lasted for several years (and innumerable crises) until they finally made it to the altar in 1988 (their honeymoon involved a trip back to the 1960s); Linda Gibboney and Robin Mattson as bitchy Gina Demott, who would become C. C. Capwell's third (and fourth) wife; Scott Curtis, Brandon Call, and Justin Gocke as her adopted son, Brandon Demott; Dane Witherspoon, Mark Arnold, and Andrew Masset as Joe Perkins; Melissa Brennan as teen Jade Perkins; Valorie Armstrong as Marisa Perkins; Robert Alan Browne as John Perkins; Ava Lazar, Margaret Michaels, Gina Gallego, and Wanda De Jesus as Santana Andrade; Rupert Ravens as Danny Andrade; Margarita Cordova as Rosa Andrade; Ismael Carlo as Ruben Andrade; Stephen Meadows as Peter Flint, the "Carnation Killer"; Nancy Grahn as lawyer Julia Wainwright; Paula Kelly as Ginger Jones; Richard Eden as Brick Wallace, son of Sophia and Lionel; Wolf Muser as Marcello Armanti; Suzanne Marshall as Maggie Gillis; Tricia Cast as Christy Duvall; Harley Kozak as Mary Duvall (unfortunately killed, when the "C" from the Capwell Hotel sign fell on her); Joel Bailey as Lindsay Smith; Carmen Zapata, Marisol Rodriguez, and Karmin Murcelo as Cruz's mother, Carmen Castillo; Lenore Kasdorf as Caroline Wilson; Jane Sibbett as her daughter, split personality Jane Wilson/Roxanne; Robert Thaler as Pearl Bradford; Stacy Edwards as Hayley Benson, who married Ted Capwell; Lynn Clark and Paula Irvine as Lily Light, daughter of Gina; Justin Deas and John Novak as district attorney Keith Timmons, who married Gina; David Haskell as Nick Hartley; Page Moseley as his brother, Dylan Hartley; Kristen Meadows as Tori Lane, ex-lover of Cruz, who married Mason Capwell; Joseph Bottoms as evil Kirk Cranston; Kyle Secor as Brian Bradford; Marie-Alise Recasner as Alice Jackson; Julia Campbell as Courtney Capwell, C. C.'s niece; Stoney Jackson as cop Phil Whitney; Ross Kettle as Jeffrey Conrad; Michael Durrell as Dr. Alex Nikolas; Sherilyn Wolter as Elena Nikolas, who threw poor Eden off a cliff; Scott Jaeck as Cain Garver, the mountain man who rescued Eden; David Fonteno as Gus Jackson; Rick Edwards as Jake Morton; Chip Mayer as T. J. Daniels; Vincent Irrizarry as Dr. Scott Clark; James Luisi as Frank Clark; Ally Walker as Andrea Bedford; Eva LaRue as Margot; Warren Burton as Major Philip Hamilton; Jane Rogers as Heather Donnelly; Frank Runyeon as Father Michael Donnelly; Jon Cypher as Dr. Arthur Donnelly; Deborah Pollack as Sister Agatha; Phyllis Frelich as Sister Sarah; Tamlyn Tomita as Ming Li; Leigh McCloskey as rapist Zach Kelton (McCloskey returned to play a second role, district attorney Ethan Asher); Jeanna Michaels as Lydia Saunders; Joe Marinelli as transvestite Bunny Tagliari; Russell Curry as Lieutenant Boswell; Signy Coleman as Crystal/Celeste; Julie Condra as Celeste's sister, Emily DiNapoli; Tawny Kitaen as Lisa DiNapoli; Denise Gentile as Vanessa; Meg Bennett as Megan Richardson; Paul Johannson as Greg Richardson; Christopher Norris as Laura Asher; Kelly Ann Conn as Wanda Berkowski; John Considine as Grant Capwell, C. C.'s brother; Kayla Savage as Anisa; Peter Love as Cruz's brother, Ricardo Castillo; Elizabeth Storm as Hollis Castillo, Ric's wife; Nathan Purdee as Jed; Roscoe Born as Robert Barr; Steve Carlson as Sean Morrissey; Miranda Wilson as Sandra Mills; Steve Bond as Mack Blake; James Healey as Derek Griffin; Constance Marie as Nikki; Michelle Nicastro as Sasha; John O'Hurley as Stephen Slade; Stella Stevens as Phyllis; Karen Moncrieff as Cassandra Benedict; Roberta Bizeau and Marguerite Hickey as split personality Debra/Flame; Jenny Lester McKeon and Rosalind Allen as Gretchen Richards; Allan Miller as Harland Richards, Gretchen's husband; Timothy Gibbs as Dash Nichols; Linden Chiles as Edward Nichols, Dash's dad; Robert Mandan as Maxwell; William Schallert as Roger Wainwright; Kai Wulff as Andre; John Callahan as Craig Hunt; Jennifer Hale as Melanie; Rawley Valverde as Amado Alvarez; Maria Ellingsen as East German immigrant Katrina Braun; John Beck as Judge David Raymond; Nina Arvesen as his wife, Angela Raymond; Terri Garber as Suzanne Collier; Henry Darrow and Castulo Guerra as Rafael Castillo; Alan Feinstein as Jim Sanders; Jack Bannon as Nathaniel Marley; Earl Boen as Judge Cauldwell; Kenny Johnson as Ray Minotta; Kim Zimmer as Jodie Walker; Forry Smith as Jodie's husband, Reese Walker; Eric Close as Sawyer Walker; Robert Fontaine as Rafe Castillo, Cruz's half-brother; Thaao Penghlis as Marcus Disgrazia; Lonnie Quinn as Richard Landers; Stephen Nichols as Skylar; Krista Tesreau as Andie; Charles Grant as Connor McCabe; former Olympic champion Florence Griffith Joyner as photographer Terry Holloway; Manuela Metrix Campanero as Countess Carla Rinaldi; Mitchell Laurance and Matthew Laurance (Mitchell's twin brother) as district attorney Ben Arnold; and Susan Ventulett as Gracie.

SANTO BUGITO

CBS

16 SEPTEMBER 1995– The setting of this Saturday-morning cartoon series was Carmen's, a cafe along the Mexican border owned by a pair of insects, Carmen and Paco de la Antchez, and which attracted a buggy clientele.

SARA

CBS

13 FEBRUARY 1976–30 JULY 1976 Based on a novel by Marian Cockrell, Sara was an hour-long western about an Eastern schoolteacher who came to Independence, Colorado, in the 1870s. The cast included Brenda Vaccaro as Sara Yarnell; Bert Kramer as Emmet Ferguson, a townsman who was also a member of the school board; Albert Stratton as Martin Pope, newspaper publisher; William Wintersole as banker George Bailey, another school board member; Mariclare Costello as Julia Bailey, his wife; Louise Latham as Sara's landlady, Martha Higgins; William Phipps as Claude Barstow, the third member of the school board; Kraig Metzinger as Georgie Bailey, son of George and Julia, one of Sara's students; Debbie Lytton as Debbie Higgins, Martha's daughter, another student; and Hallie Morgan as Emma Higgins, Debbie's sister, another student. George Eckstein was the executive producer and Richard Collins the producer, for Universal Television.

SARA

NBC

23 JANUARY 1985–8 MAY 1985 Gary David Goldberg and Ruth Bennett created this half-hour sitcom, set at the Bay Area Law Offices in San Francisco. With Geena Davis as attorney Sara McKenna; Alfre Woodard as her best friend, attorney Roz Dupree; Bill Maher as wisecracking attorney Marty Lang; Bronson Pinchot as gay attorney Dennis Kemper; Ronnie Claire Edwards as receptionist Helen Newcomb; Mark Hudson as Sara's neighbor, Stewart Webber, a teacher; and Matthew Lawrence as Jesse, Stewart's four-year-old son. NBC reran the series during the summer of 1988; by that time Geena Davis and Alfre Woodard had become major film stars, and Bronson Pinchot was established as the star of Perfect Strangers on ABC.

THE SARAH CHURCHILL SHOW CBS

7 OCTOBER 1951–30 DECEMBER 1951 Fifteen-minute interview show hosted by Sarah Churchill and sponsored by Hallmark Cards. Early in 1952 Hallmark and Churchill moved to NBC, as Churchill became the first host of Hallmark Hall of Fame.

SARGE NBC

21 SEPTEMBER 1971–11 JANUARY 1972 George Kennedy starred in this hour dramatic series as Samuel Patrick ("Sarge") Cavanaugh, a former police officer who decided to become a Catholic priest after his wife was murdered; he was assigned to a parish in San Diego. Also featured were Sallie Shockley as Valerie, his secretary; Ramon Bieri as Lieutenant Barney Varick; and Harold Sakata (better remembered as Oddjob in the movie Goldfinger) as Kenji Takichi, the volunteer athletic director for the parish youth. The pilot for the series, "Sarge: The Badge or the Cross," was televised 22 February 1971.

SATURDAY NIGHT JAMBOREE NBC

4 DECEMBER 1948–2 JULY 1949 Country-and-western music, broadcast from New York.

SATURDAY NIGHT LIVE NBC

11 OCTOBER 1975– NBC introduced this freewheeling ninety-minute comedy-variety show into what appeared to be an unpromising time slot—11:30 P.M. on Saturdays (the slot had previously been occupied by reruns of The Tonight Show). To the surprise of almost everyone, the show took off, and in some ways it represented the boldest leap in television comedy since Sid Caesar's Your Show of Shows, which had held down an earlier slot on Saturdays two decades before. One of the few live network entertainment programs of any kind, the show is presented on three Saturdays a month. Each week a guest host emcees the show, backed up by a stock company of regulars. Originally billed as Not Ready for Prime Time Players, this group first included Chevy Chase, Dan Aykroyd, John Belushi, Jane Curtin, Garrett Morris, Laraine Newman, and Gilda Radner (Chase left the series in the fall of 1976 and was later replaced by Bill Murray; Aykroyd and Belushi left after the 1978–1979 season). The members of this talented group were virtual newcomers to television (though Chase had been featured on The Great American Dream Machine and Morris had appeared regularly on a 1973 sitcom, Roll Out!). Several of the others, along with a number of the show's writers, had been featured in various productions under the auspices of National Lampoon magazine. George Carlin was the first guest host, but the show has not always relied on show business regulars for its hosts—among the more unusual emcees have been Presidential press secretary Ron Nessen (17 April 1976), consumer advocate Ralph Nader (15 January 1977), Georgia legislator Julian Bond (9 April 1977), and even NBC Entertainment president Brandon Tartikoff (9 November 1985). Regular segments have included "Weekend Update," a news satire first presented by Chevy Chase, later by Jane Curtin and Dan Aykroyd; "The Coneheads," the story of a family from another planet trying to blend inconspicuously into American society; "Samurai Warrior," the adventures of an Oriental swordsman (played by John Belushi). Some of the comedy presented on the show has been criticized as being in poor taste, but that criticism can be made of almost any variety series in television history (Arthur Godfrey was regularly condemned in the late 1940s for his "blue" material). NBC's Saturday Night Live was developed by network vice president Dick Ebersol, who was its executive producer during the 1975–1976 season. Lorne Michaels, who began his career as a writer on Laugh-In, was the producer. The show was originally titled NBC's Saturday Night—the word Live was officially added in May of 1977; NBC's was later discarded. The stable of writers has included Aykroyd, Belushi, Chase, Morris, and Murray, together with Anne Beatts, Tom Davis, Al Franken, producer Michaels, Marilyn Suzanne Miller, Michael O'Donoghue, Herb Sargent, Tom Schiller, Rosie Shuster, and Alan Zweibel. The show's announcer is Don Pardo, whose mellifluous voice is most closely associated with game shows. In the fall of 1979 the series came to prime time; beginning 24 October, edited reruns were shown Wednesdays at 10 p.m. as The Best of Saturday Night Live. The show's early seasons also featured short films from Albert Brooks and Gary Weiss, and (in the earliest programs) a special puppet segment created by Jim Henson. The Not Ready for Prime Time Players also performed seventeen skits as The Killer Bees, a routine that John Belushi found particularly loathsome.

Major changes took place in 1980, as producer Lorne Michaels departed, together with most of the writers and all of the regulars—Jane Curtin, Garrett Morris, Laraine Newman, Gilda Radner, Bill Murray, and Don Novello (who had appeared regularly as Father Guido Sarducci for two seasons). Jean Doumanian was named the new producer, and put together a new company of performers: Gilbert Gottfried, Charles Rocket, Joe Piscopo, Denny Dillon, Ann Risley, and Gail Matthius. A young and very talented black performer, Eddie Murphy, also appared occasionally that season; not technically a regular, he was billed as a "featured" player. The results were disappointing. Ratings sagged as internal problems mounted, and Doumanian was dismissed in the spring of 1981. Dick Ebersol, who had put the show on the air in 1975, succeeded her as producer, and was able to put one show on the air in April 1981 before a writers' strike shut down production for the remainder of the season. Retaining only Piscopo and Murphy from the Doumanian crew, Ebersol assembled his own group of regulars: Robin Duke (1981–1984), Christine Ebersole (1981–1982), Mary Gross (1981–1985), Tim Kazurinsky (1981–1984), Tony Rosato (1981–1982), and Brian Doyle-Murray (1981–1982). Added in 1982 were Julia Louis-Dreyfus, Brad Hall, and Gary Kroeger (announcer Don Pardo also returned that year). Louis-Dreyfus and Kroeger stayed for three seasons, Hall for two. Jim Belushi, brother of John Belushi (who had died of a drug overdose in 1982), joined the group in the fall of 1983. The new crew succeeded in turning the show around, as Saturday Night Live began to recapture its audience. Joe Piscopo and Eddie Murphy emerged as the most popular members of this crew. Piscopo was able to impersonate such diverse personalities as Frank Sinatra and Ted Koppel, while Murphy's repertoire extended from Stevie Wonder to Buckwheat to his own invention, militant film critic Raheem Abdul Muhammad. Murphy also went on to enjoy success in films, with starring roles in 48 Hrs. and Trading Places (in which he costarred with SNL alumnus Dan Aykroyd).

In the fall a half-dozen new regulars joined Gross, Louis-Dreyfus, Kroeger, and Jim Belushi, giving the series its largest annual stable of performers. The new faces were Billy Crystal, Martin Short, Rich Hall, Christopher Guest, Harry Shearer, and Pamela Stephenson. Crystal's "Fernando" talk-show host ("you look mahvelous!") and Short's hyper-nerdy Ed Grimley were probably the most popular bits of the season.

After five years away from the show, Lorne Michaels returned as producer in the spring of 1985. The following fall he introduced an all-new cast, just as his successor Jean Doumanian had done in 1980. The 1985–1986 troupe was comprised of Joan Cusack, Robert Downey, Jr., Nora Dunn, Anthony Michael Hall, Jon Lovitz, Randy Quaid, Terry Sweeney, and Danitra Vance, with A. Whitney Brown, Don Novello (again), and Damon Wayans as featured performers. The season was not particularly successful, and another overhaul took place in the fall of 1986. Joining Dunn and Lovitz were newcomers Dana Carvey, Phil Hartman, Jan Hooks, Victoria Jackson, and Dennis Miller; Kevin Nealon, a featured player that season, became a regular the following season. This unit managed to stay intact through the 1989–1990 season, and developed its own set of memorable characters: Carvey's "Church Lady" and impersonations of George Bush, Dunn's talk-show hostess "Pat Stevens," Miller's "Weekend Update," and Lovitz's "Master Thespian," to name a few. A. Whitney Brown remained a featured player, usually doing commentary on the Weekend Update segment, and writer Al Franken returned in 1987 as a featured player. Mike Myers was featured in 1988 and in 1989, Ben Stiller in 1988.

Nora Dunn boycotted the final show of the 1989–1990 season, which was hosted by controversial comedian Andrew Dice Clay (scheduled music guest Sinead O'Connor also boycotted). Shortly afterward both Dunn and Jon Lovitz announced that they would not be returning to the series for the 1990–1991 season. They were succeeded by new regulars Chris Rock and Chris Farley. The 1991–1992 troupe included Dana Carvey, Chris Farley, Phil Hartman, Victoria Jackson, Mike Myers, Kevin Nealon (who succeeded Dennis Miller as "Weekend Update" anchor), Chris Rock, Rob Schneider, David Spade, Julia Sweeney, Ellen Cleghorne, Tim Meadows, Adam Sandler, and Siobhan Fallon. Most of the group, except for Jackson and Fallon, returned for the 1992–1993 season, together with newcomer Melanie Hutsell. Dana Carvey departed in the spring of 1993 (by that time, Phil Hartman had taken over the presidential impersonation chores, as Bill Clinton). Norm McDonald became a regular in 1993, and eventually succeeded Nealon as "Weekend Update" anchor. Michael McKean was added in the spring of 1994. A major shakeup occurred at the end of the 1993–1994 season, as Hartman, Hutsell, Schneider, and Sweeney all left. Joining returnees Cleghorne, Farley, McDonald, McKean, Meadows, Myers, Nealon, Sandler, and Spade in the fall of 1994 were Chris Elliott and Janeane Garofalo; Garofalo left in midseason and was succeeded by Morwenna Banks and Molly Shannon. By the end of its twentieth season the series was criticized for a decline in its writing quality, and further changes materialized for the 1995–1996 season. McDonald, Mark McKinney (who had joined in the middle of the previous season), Meadows, Shannon, and Spade returned, and six newcomers were introduced: Jim Breuer, Will Ferrell, Darrell Hammond, David Koechner, Cheri Oteri, and Nancy Walls.

A number of SNL sketches were transformed into motion pictures over the years, with varying success. The Mike Myers-Dana Carvey "Wayne's World" sketches, set in a teenager's basement cable-TV local access show in Aurora, Illinois, spawned a hugely successful feature film in 1992 and a moderately successful sequel the following year. "Coneheads," starring Dan Aykroyd and Jane Curtin, proved to be a moderate hit as a 1993 film, while "It's Pat," starring Julia Sweeney in the gender-unspecified title role, was released in only a tiny handful of cinemas before vanishing completely.

Rock and roll music has been a central part of Saturday Night Live from its inception. Each week a musical guest has performed—live. The roster of acts has been impressive, ranging from the Rolling Stones to Roy Orbison, Devo to Tracy Chapman, and Living Color to Kate Bush. The show has also had its own band, which was originally led by Howard Shore; Paul Shaffer succeeded Shore and remained with the show for several seasons (occasionally appearing in other roles as well, such as concert promoter Don Kirshner) before leaving to become musical director of Late Night with David Letterman. Guitarist G. E. Smith later became the house bandleader.

Saturday Night Live celebrated its fifteenth anniversary with a prime-time retrospective on 24 September 1989; the festivities were actually held a year early, as the series had only been on the air for fourteen years at the time.

SATURDAY NIGHT LIVE WITH HOWARD COSELL ABC

20 SEPTEMBER 1975–17 JANUARY 1976 Not to be confused with NBC's Saturday Night Live, which also premiered in the fall of 1975, this hour-long variety show was seen in prime time and was hosted by ABC sportscaster Howard Cosell. The show originated from New York, with pickups from other parts of the country. Roone Arledge was the executive producer, and Rupert Hitzig was the producer. Among Cosell's regulars was Bill Murray, who later turned up on NBC's Saturday Night Live.

THE SATURDAY NIGHT REVUE NBC

6 JUNE 1953–5 SEPTEMBER 1953; 12 JUNE 1954–18 SEPTEMBER 1954 The Saturday Night Revue was twice a summer replacement for Sid Caesar's Your Show of Shows. Hoagy Carmichael was the host in 1953 and Eddie Albert in 1954, with Alan Young and Ben Blue alternating biweekly as guest stars. The latter version also featured Pat Carroll and the Sauter-Finnegan Band and was produced by Ernie Glucksman.

SATURDAY NIGHT WITH CONNIE CHUNG CBS

23 SEPTEMBER 1989–2 JUNE 1990 This self-titled hour news magazine show was the successor to West 57th. Before joining CBS News, Chung had been a correspondent and weekend anchor at NBC News and a local anchorwoman in Los Angeles. The new show received some criticism for its use of "dramatic reenactments" of some events. The series earned low ratings in its Saturday slot, and seemed destined for cancellation until it was given two Monday airings in May 1990, which achieved much larger numbers. As a result, the show was permanently moved to Mondays in July, with an emphasis on celebrity interviews, and given a new title: see Face to Face with Connie Chung.

SATURDAY PROM NBC

15 OCTOBER 1960–1 APRIL 1961 Merv Griffin hosted this half-hour music show for teens, which was telecast early on Saturday evenings.

SATURDAY ROUNDUP NBC

16 JUNE 1951–1 SEPTEMBER 1951 Kermit Maynard, younger brother of Ken Maynard, starred in this unusual western series. Maynard did not play a continuing character, but rather a different character each week.

SATURDAY SPORTS MIRROR CBS

14 JULY 1956–15 SEPTEMBER 1956 Cohosts Jack Drees and Bill Hickey presented news from the world of sports and interviews with athletes on this half-hour Saturday-evening series.

SATURDAY SQUARE NBC

7 JANUARY 1950–18 FEBRUARY 1950 This short-lived prime-time variety series, broadcast from Chicago, was produced by Ted Mills and Norman Felton. The setting was a city block in downtown Chicago.

SATURDAY SUPERCADE CBS

17 SEPTEMBER 1983–24 AUGUST 1985 Several cartoon segments, all inspired by popular video arcade games, were presented on this hour Saturday morning series: "Donkey Kong," the adventures of a gorilla who escaped from a circus and is pursued by his trainer and the trainer's assistant; "Donkey Kong, Junior," the adventures of Donkey Kong's young son, who was also looking for his famous father; "Frogger," the story of an investigative reporter for the Swamp Gazette; "Pitfall," the escapades of Pitfall Harry, a treasure hunter; and "Q*Bert," the tale of a teenager named Q*Bert living in a town named Q*Bert (the latter two segments were telecast on alternate weeks). For the show's second season the segments included "Q*Bert" and "Donkey Kong" from before, and two new features, "Kangaroo" and "Space Ace."

SATURDAY TODAY NBC

1 AUGUST 1992– In the first change in Saturday-morning network programming in decades, NBC scrapped two hours of kids' shows to make room for a Saturday edition of the Today show (a Sunday version had been launched in 1987). It was hosted first by Jackie Nespral and Scott Simon; Mike Schneider replaced Simon in June 1993; Schneider and Nespral hosted until the end of 1994, when Nespral departed. She was succeeded by Giselle Fernandez. Jack Ford succeeded Mike Schneider in May 1995.

SAVED BY THE BELL NBC

20 AUGUST 1989–4 SEPTEMBER 1993 Live-action Saturday morning comedy set at Bayside High School in Palisades, California. With Mark-Paul Gosselaar as girl-crazy teenager Zack Morris who, like TV's Dobie Gillis, addressed the camera directly; Mario Lopez as his pal, A. C. Slater; Tiffani-Amber Thiessen as Kelly Kapowski; Elizabeth Berkley as Jessie Spano; Lark Voorhies as Lisa Turtle; Dustin Diamond as Screech Powers, the nerd; Ed Alonzo as Max, who worked at the nearby soda fountain; Leanna Creel (1992–1993) as Tory; and Dennis Haskins as the principal, Richard Belding. In an effort to build an audience the series was given two prime-time airings before settling on the Saturday morning schedule in September 1989. Two prime-time specials aired on NBC during the 1992–1993 season: "Saved by the Bell—Hawaiian Style" (27 November 1992), and "Saved by the Bell Goes to College" (22 May 1993). The latter telecast led to the shift of the series itself to prime time in the fall of 1993 (see Saved by the Bell: The College Years), while a new cast was assembled for a continuation of the Saturday-morning show (see Saved by the Bell: The New Class).

SAVED BY THE BELL: THE COLLEGE YEARS NBC

14 SEPTEMBER 1993–8 FEBRUARY 1994 Saved by the Bell, the popular Saturday-morning kids' sitcom, made a brief attempt at prime time here, as four of the gang headed for college at California University: Mark-Paul Gosselaar as Zach Morris; Mario Lopez as A.C. Slater; Dustin Diamond as Samuel "Screech" Powers; and Tiffani-Amber Thiessen as Kelly Kapowski. The four pals shared a dorm suite with two newcomers: Anne Tremko as Leslie Burke, and Kiersten Warren as Alex, a drama major. Rounding out the cast were former pro footballer Bob Golic as former pro footballer Mike Rogers, who had gone back to obtain his degree; and Roger Kabler as anthropology professor Jeremiah Lasky.

SAVED BY THE BELL: THE NEW CLASS NBC

11 SEPTEMBER 1993– As the original Saved by the Bell crew headed to college, and prime time, in the fall of 1993 (see Saved by the Bell: The College Years), a new cast was introduced on the Saturday-morning show, now retitled Saved by the Bell: The New Class. Dennis Haskins was the only holdover, continuing his role as Bayside High's much put-upon principal, Richard Belding. Joining him were David Byrd (1993–1994) as Hammersmith; Jonathan Angel as tough guy "Tommy Dee" Deluca; Isaac Lidsky (1993–1994) as nerd Weasel; Natalie Cigliuti as Lindsay Warner; Bianca Lawson (1993–1995) as Meghan; Bonnie Russavage (1993–1994) as Vicki; and Ryan Hurst (1993–1995) as Crunch Grabowski, captain of the football team. In the fall of 1994 Dustin Diamond of the original Saved by the Bell cast returned to the show; his character, Samuel "Screech" Powers, was now Belding's administrative assistant. Also added were Christian Oliver (1994–1995) as Brian Keller; Sarah Lancaster as Rachel Myers; and Spankee Rogers (1994–1995) as Bobby Wilson. Three new cast members were added in the fall of 1995: Richard Lee Jackson as Ryan Parker; Salim Grant as R. J. "Hollywood" Collins; and Samantha Becker as Maria Lopez. All were transfer students from Valley High.

SAWYER VIEWS HOLLYWOOD

14 April 1951–31 August 1951 Hal Sawyer hosted this half-hour variety and interview program.

SAY IT WITH ACTING

NBC/ABC

14 August 1949–24 September 1950 (NBC); 7 September 1951–22 February 1952 (ABC) Ben Grauer hosted this game show, on which teams from Broadway shows played charades. See also Act It Out.

SAY WHAT?

CBS

26 June 1992–10 July 1992 Limited-run comedy series, hosted by Bill Maher, on which wacky dialogue was added to newsreel footage and other video clips.

SAY WHEN

NBC

2 January 1961–26 March 1965 This merchandise giveaway show from Goodson-Todman Productions was similar in format to The Price Is Right— contestants could choose items of merchandise, and the object of the game was to choose a set of items that totaled closest to a preset dollar amount. The player whose bid was closer won whatever he or she had chosen. Art James hosted the series and was assisted by Ruth Hasely.

SCARECROW AND MRS. KING

CBS

3 October 1983–10 September 1987 In this hour adventure series a government agent teamed up with a suburban housewife. Featured were Bruce Boxleitner as Lee Stetson, a government agent whose code name was "Scarecrow"; pursued by enemy agents in a train station, he handed a mysterious package to a woman standing on the platform. Kate Jackson played the recipient, recently divorced housewife Amanda King, who decided that she liked being a part-time, unofficial agent. Also on hand were Beverly Garland as Amanda's mother, Dotty West; Paul Stout as Amanda's son Philip; Greg Morton as Amanda's son Jamie; Mel Stewart as Scarecrow's section chief, Billy Melrose; and Martha Smith as Billy's assistant, Francine Desmond. In one 1985 episode Mr. King finally showed up; he was played by Sam Melville, who had played Kate Jackson's husband on The Rookies. Several changes occurred for the series' final season, as Amanda became a trainee agent at "the Agency," and she and Scarecrow were finally married in February 1987. Raleigh Bond and Myron Natwick also became regulars that season, as informant T. P. Aquinas and Agency boss Dr. Smyth, respectively. The series was filmed in Washington, D. C.

THE SCARLET LETTER

PBS

2 April 1979–5 April 1979 A meticulous but labored adaptation of Nathaniel Hawthorne's 1850 novel, The Scarlet Letter was telecast in four consecutive hour installments. Principal players included Meg Foster as Hester Prynne, the convicted adulteress who was condemned to wear the letter A on her dress forever (inexplicably, the letter used on the series was gold, not scarlet); John Heard as her lover, the Reverend Arthur Dimmesdale; Kevin Conway as Hester's husband, Roger Chillingworth. Herbert Hirschman was the executive producer of the series, which was filmed largely in Rhode Island. Rick Hauser produced and directed.

THE SCARLET PIMPERNEL

SYNDICATED

1958 This half-hour adventure series, a European import, was based on Baroness Orczy's novel and starred Marius Goring as The Scarlet Pimpernel, hero of the French Revolution.

SCARLETT

CBS

13 November 1994–17 November 1994 Alexandra Ripley's 1991 novel, the bestselling sequel to Gone with the Wind, came to television as a four-night, eight-hour miniseries, following Scarlett O'Hara and Rhett Butler from America to Ireland and England. Produced by Robert Halmi, Sr., and directed by John Erman, the series cost a reported $45 million. The cast included Joanne Whalley-Kilmer as Scarlett

O'Hara; Timothy Dalton as Rhett Butler; Stephen Collins as Ashley Wilkes; Julie Harris as Eleanor Butler; Annabeth Gish as Anne Hampton; John Gielgud as Pierre Robillard; George Grizzard as Henry Hamilton; Ann-Margret as Belle Watling; Melissa Leo as Scarlett's sister, Suellen; Sean Bean as Lord Fenton; Colm Meaney as Father Colum O'Hara; and Brian Bedford as Sir John Morland.

SCATTERGORIES NBC

18 JANUARY 1993–11 JUNE 1993 Daytime game show, hosted by Dick Clark, based on the popular home game. Two four-person teams competed in an effort to supply answers beginning with a designated letter to various questions. Each team won or lost points as their answers were compared with those given by a panel of celebrities in pre-taped interviews.

SCENE OF THE CRIME NBC

14 APRIL 1985–26 MAY 1985 NBC almost literally pasted this hour series together, and put it on with little fanfare. Orson Welles hosted the series, which consisted of two separate half-hour mysteries.

SCENE OF THE CRIME CBS

3 APRIL 1991–24 AUGUST 1994 A television rarity, Scene of the Crime was a late-night mystery series presented by a repertory company. One segment of CBS's Crime Time After Prime Time, it was hosted by one of TV's most prolific writers and producers, Stephen J. Cannell. The series, a Canadian-French co-production, was filmed in Vancouver and Paris, and featured an international cast: Canadians Maxine Miller, Robert Paisley, and Barbara Parkins, Americans George Touliatos, Stephen McHattie, and Teri Austin, and French actors Lisa Houle, Olivier Pierre, and Francois Montagut. Two episodes were specially scheduled in prime time on 31 August 1991. Scene of the Crime was scheduled regularly through the spring of 1992, later popping up in reruns through 1994.

SCENE 70 SYNDICATED

1969 Jay Reynolds hosted this hour-long rock music show.

THE SCHAEFER CENTURY THEATRE SYNDICATED

1952 Filmed half-hour dramatic anthology series. Natalie Wood made her first major TV appearance on one episode, "Playmates."

SCHLITZ PLAYHOUSE OF STARS CBS

5 OCTOBER 1951–27 MARCH 1959 This long-running half-hour dramatic anthology series was hosted for several seasons by Irene Dunne and later by Robert Paige. A sampling of presentations would include: "Not a Chance," with Helen Hayes (5 October 1951); "Never Wave at a WAC," with Rosalind Russell (19 October 1951); "Dark Fleece," with Anthony Quinn (21 December 1951); "Double Exposure," with Amanda Blake (in her first major TV role, 15 August 1952); "Four Things He'd Do," with Lee Van Cleef (in his first major TV role, 5 February 1954); "The Long Trail," with Anthony Quinn (19 November 1954); "The Unlighted Road," with James Dean (in his last dramatic appearance on television, 6 May 1955); "Bandit's Hideout," with Anthony Quinn (in his last TV appearance until 1971, 7 October 1955); "The Life You Save," with Gene Kelly (in his TV dramatic debut, 1 March 1957); "Carriage from Britain," with Janet Leigh (her first dramatic role on American television, 8 March 1957); "The Restless Gun," with John Payne (telecast 29 March 1957, this was the pilot for the series of the same title); and "Old Spanish Custom," with Dolores Del Rio (7 June 1957).

THE SCHOOL HOUSE DUMONT

SCIENCE FICTION THEATER SYNDICATED

1955–1956 Truman Bradley hosted this science fiction anthology show. The half-hour series was one of the first shows produced by Ivan Tors, who later developed Sea Hunt, Flipper, and other such shows.

SCOOBY-DOO CBS/ABC

13 SEPTEMBER 1969–7 AUGUST 1976 (CBS); 11 SEPTEMBER 1976–6 SEPTEMBER 1986 (ABC) This Saturday-morning cartoon show from Hanna-Barbera Productions about a cowardly Great Dane (Scooby-Doo) and four teenage sleuths (Daphne, Freddy, Shaggy, and Velma) has been seen in several different formats over the years. It premiered in 1969 as a half-hour series, Scooby-Doo, Where Are You?, which ran for three years. In the fall of 1972 it expanded to an hour and was titled The New Scooby-Doo Movies. In the fall of 1974 reruns of Scooby-Doo, Where Are You? were shown under the latter title. The series switched networks in 1976 and became known as The Scooby-Doo/Dynomutt Hour, as a new segment was added: the adventures of Dynomutt, bionic dog who battled crime together with the Blue Falcon. In the fall of 1977 the series expanded to two hours, and several cartoon segments were shown under the title Scooby's All-Star Laff-A-Lympics. In the fall of 1978 Scooby starred in two Saturday cartoon shows on ABC: the half-hour Scooby-Doo, Where Are You?, followed later in the morning by the ninety-minute Scooby's All-Stars, the new title for the Laff-A-Lympics. In the fall of 1979 Scooby returned to a single program, teaming up with his feisty nephew in Scooby and Scrappy-Doo. In the summer of 1980 reruns were shown as Scooby's Laff-a-Lympics. In 1980 Scooby took second billing for the first time in his career on The Richie Rich/Scooby-Doo Show (see also that title). Another set of reruns popped up briefly in September 1981, when an animators' strike delayed many cartoon premieres; these were titled Scooby-Doo Classics. Scooby regained top billing in the fall of 1982 on an hour series, Scooby & Scrappy-Doo/The Puppy's New Adventures. A year later Scooby and The Puppy went their separate ways: The Puppy headlined his own show (see The Puppy's Further Adventures), while Scooby could be seen on not one but two Saturday-morning cartoon shows: The Best of Scooby-Doo (reruns) and The New Scooby & Scrappy-Doo (fresh fare). During the 1984–1985 season two more Scooby shows graced the airwaves: The New Scooby-Doo Mysteries and Scary Scooby Funnies. For the 1985–1986 season Scooby was carried on The 13 Ghosts of Scooby-Doo and Scooby's Mystery Funhouse; the latter series was replaced by reruns of Laff-a-Lympics in March 1986. In 1988 another incarnation of the Great Dane appeared: see A Pup Named Scooby Doo. The name of the title character was suggested by CBS programming chief Fred Silverman after hearing Frank Sinatra singing the phrase "scooby-dooby-doo" in "Strangers in the Night."

SCORCH CBS

28 FEBRUARY 1992–13 MARCH 1992 Asinine sitcom about a wisecracking 1,300-year-old dragon who fell out of the sky and befriended an actor in New Haven, Connecticut. With Jonathan Walker as the actor, Brian Stevens, who then got a job as a TV weather forecaster using Scorch as his puppet; Rhea Silver-Smith as his young daughter, Jessica; Rose Marie as the landlady, Mrs. Bracken; John O'Hurley as news anchor Howard Gurman; Brenda Strong as coanchor Allison King; and Todd Susman as station manager Jack Fletcher. Scorch was scheduled Fridays with another new entry, Fish Police; both shows were yanked after three showings.

SCOTLAND YARD ABC

17 NOVEMBER 1957–3 OCTOBER 1958 Produced in England, this half-hour filmed series was based on case histories from Scotland Yard and was hosted by British author and criminologist Edgar Lustgarten.

SCOTT ISLAND

See HARBOURMASTER

THE SCOTT MUSIC HALL NBC

8 OCTOBER 1952–26 AUGUST 1953 Scott Paper Company sponsored this biweekly half-hour musical variety series, hosted by Patti Page and featuring Frank Fontaine and Mary Ellen Terry.

SCRABBLE NBC

2 JULY 1984–23 MARCH 1990; 18 JANUARY 1993–11 JUNE 1993 Chuck Woolery hosted this daytime game show, based loosely on the popular word game. Two contestants competed one at a time, trying to identify words from clues read by Woolery and by guessing whether certain letters appeared in the word. Winning contestants could play for a top prize of $40,000. A "900" number was later introduced to permit home viewers to play a version of the game as well.

SCREEN DIRECTORS PLAYHOUSE NBC

5 OCTOBER 1955–26 SEPTEMBER 1956 Members of the Screen Directors Guild directed the presentations on this half-hour dramatic anthology series. Among the major stars who appeared on the series were John Wayne (in "Rookie of the Year," 7 December, his only real dramatic role on TV), Robert Ryan (in "Lincoln's Doctor's Bag," 14 December, his first TV dramatic role), Jeanette MacDonald (in "The Prima Donna," 1 February, a rare television appearance), Buster Keaton (in "The Silent Partner," 21 March), and Errol Flynn (in "The Sword of Villon," 4 April, his first TV dramatic role).

SEA HUNT SYNDICATED

1957–1961; 1987 Lloyd Bridges starred as underwater adventurer Mike Nelson in this half-hour series, one of the most widely syndicated shows of its time. Ivan Tors produced the series. The short-lived 1987 syndicated revival starred Ron Ely (formerly TV's Tarzan) as Mike Nelson, and Kimberly Sissons as his daughter, Jennifer Nelson, a college student.

SEALAB 2020 NBC

9 SEPTEMBER 1972–1 SEPTEMBER 1973 Half-hour Saturday-morning cartoon series from Hanna-Barbera Productions about a group of oceanauts led by Dr. Paul Williams.

SEAQUEST DSV (SEAQUEST 2032) NBC

12 SEPTEMBER 1993–27 DECEMBER 1995 Reportedly the most expensive regular series in television history (at $2 million per episode), this hour show was produced by Steven Spielberg's Amblin Entertainment. It was set in the year 2018 aboard the SeaQuest, a 1000-foot research submarine, or "DSV"—Deep Submergence Vehicle. The cast included Roy Scheider as Captain Nathan Bridger; Stephanie Beacham as chief science officer Dr. Kristin Westphalen; Don Franklin as Commander Jonathan Ford; Stacy Haiduk as Lieutenant Commander Katherine Hitchcock; Jonathan Brandis as kid computer genius Lucas Wolenczak; Royce D. Applegate as Chief Manilow Crocker; John D'Aquino as supply officer Benjamin King; and Ted Raimi as O'Neill. The ship's human crew was assisted by a talking bottlenose dolphin named Darwin. Several changes occurred after the first season. The original SeaQuest was destroyed and was replaced by a smaller vehicle with a different design; production shifted from California to Orlando; and Beacham, Haiduk, Applegate, and D'Aquino left the series. Joining the cast were Edward Kerr as Lieutenant Brody, an expert on armaments; Rosalind Allen as Dr. Smith, a biologist with ESP; Michael DeLuise as Tony Piccolo; Peter DeLuise as Dagwood, the janitor; Mario Sanchez as Ortiz; and Kathy Evison as Ensign Henderson.

In the fall of 1995 the series acquired a new title and more new cast members. Now known as SeaQuest 2032, it had jumped several decades into the future. Scheider, Allen, and Sanchez were gone, and the ship had a new commanding officer: Michael Ironside as Captain Oliver Hudson. Also featured was Michael York as Alexander Bourne, the evil dictator of the nation of Macronesia.

THE SEARCH CBS

17 OCTOBER 1954–27 SEPTEMBER 1955 Charles Romine hosted this Sunday afternoon public affairs program; most of the shows were filmed at American colleges and universities. Irv Gitlin produced the series, which resurfaced briefly in the summers of 1957 and 1958 with Eric Sevareid as host.

SEARCH NBC

13 SEPTEMBER 1972–29 AUGUST 1973 An hour-long adventure series about three agents for Probe, a division of World Securities Corporation, a Washington-based outfit. The Probe agents, equipped with ultramodern scientific gadgets (such as miniaturized receivers implanted in their ears), could be hired to search for anything. The principals included Hugh O'Brian as Hugh Lockwood; Tony Franciosa as Nick Bianco; Doug McClure as C. R. Grover; Burgess Meredith as B. C. Cameron, head of the Probe unit; and Ford Rainey as Dr. Barnett, the research director. The three stars seldom appeared together—O'Brian was featured in about half of the episodes, and Franciosa and McClure split up the remaining half. Among the lesser Probe agents who were occasionally featured were Angel Tompkins as Gloria Harding; Byron Chung as Kuroda; Albert Popwell as Griffin; Ron Castro as Carlos; and Cheryl Stoppelmoor (later known as Cheryl Ladd of Charlie's Angels fame) as Amy. Leslie Stevens was the executive producer.

SEARCH AND RESCUE: THE ALPHA TEAM NBC

10 SEPTEMBER 1977–28 JANUARY 1978 The Alpha Ranch, a wildlife preserve, was the setting for this Saturday-morning series about a pair of young rescuers. Featured were: Michael J. Reynolds as Bob; Donann Cavin as Katy; and Michael Kane as Uncle Jack. Levy Lehman produced the half-hour series.

THE SEARCH FOR BEAUTY NBC

26 SEPTEMBER 1955–9 DECEMBER 1955 Makeup consultant Ern Westmore interviewed celebrity guests and dispensed advice on beauty to members of the studio audience on this half-hour daytime show. Late in the summer Westmore had become the host of a daytime show called Hollywood Backstage, and this series continued in that time slot.

SEARCH FOR THE NILE NBC

25 JANUARY 1972–29 FEBRUARY 1972 This six-hour dramatization of the efforts by members of the Royal Geographic Society to discover the source of the Nile was produced by the BBC and filmed in Africa; it was run by NBC as a five-part miniseries. James Mason narrated the show, and the principal cast included: Kenneth Haigh as Sir Richard Burton; John Quentin as John Hanning Speke; Ian McCulloch as Captain James Grant; Norman Rossington as Samuel Baker; Catherine Schell as Florence Baker; Keith Buckley as Henry Morgan Stanley; and Michael Gough as David Livingstone.

SEARCH FOR TOMORROW CBS/NBC

3 SEPTEMBER 1951–26 MARCH 1982 (CBS); 29 MARCH 1982–26 DECEMBER 1986 (NBC) Before its cancellation in 1986 after a remarkable thirty-five-year run, Search for Tomorrow could claim several TV records for longevity, with more than 9,000 episodes telecast. However, most of those records were soon eclipsed by The Guiding Light, which came to TV nine months after Search, and ultimately outlasted it. Search for Tomorrow was created by Roy Winsor, who also served as its first executive producer; Charles Irving was the first producer and director. Subsequent producers have included Frank Dodge, Bernie Sofronski, Mary-Ellis Bunim, Joanna Lee, Ellen Barrett, and John Whitesell. Agnes Nixon was the first head writer, but was succeeded late in 1951 by Irving Vendig. Later head writers have included, among others, Ann Marcus, Peggy O'Shea, Joyce and John William Corrington, and Gary Tomlin. Like most soaps of the 1950s, Search began as a fifteen-minute program. It was one of the last to expand to thirty minutes, doing so in September 1968, when it also shifted from live to videotaped performances. In 1983 one of the tapes was lost, so the episode of 4 August 1983 was done live; because of advance publicity, ratings were higher than usual that day. In 1982 Search became only the second daytime serial to switch networks (The Edge of Night was first).

Search for Tomorrow was set in the town of Henderson, and its central character was Joanne Gardner Barron Tate Vincente Tourneur, a considerate and compassionate woman who was married four times and widowed three times; the part was played by Mary Stuart for the show's entire run. Other principal players over the many years included: Johnny Sylvester as Joanne's first husband, Keith Barron, who died in a car crash (Johnny Sylvester was later known as John Sylvester White and was featured on Welcome Back, Kotter); Lynn Loring (1951–1961), Nancy Pinkerton (1961), Abigail Kellogg (1961–1964); Patricia Harty (1964–1965), Trish Van Devere (briefly in 1965), Gretchen Walther (1965–1966), Melissa Murphy (1966–1967), Melinda Plank (1967–1969), Leigh Lassen (1969–1974), Tina Sloan (1976), and Jacqueline Schultz (1985–1986) as their daughter, Patti Barron; Cliff Hall as Victor Barron, Keith's father; Bess Johnson as Irene Barron, Keith's mother; Harry Holcombe and Eric Dressler as Frank Gardner, Joanne's father; Melba Rae (1951–1971) as Joanne's best friend, Marge Bergman; Larry Haines as Marge's husband, Stu Bergman; Ellen Spencer, Sandy Robinson (to 1961), Fran Sharon (1961–1966), Nancy Franklin, Marian Hailey, and Millee Taggart (who would later become the head writer of another daytime serial, Loving) as their daughter, Janet Bergman, Patti Barron's best friend; Peter Broderick, Ray Bellaran, John James, Mitch Litrofsky, and Robert LuPone as their son, Tommy Bergman; Joanna Roos and Nydia Westman as Jessie Bergman; Peter Lazar as Jimmy Bergman; Coe Norton as Dr. Ned Hilton, who befriended Joanne after her first husband's death; Terry O'Sullivan (1955–1966) and Karl Weber (briefly in 1956) as Arthur Tate, who became Joanne's second husband on 18 May 1955, and died of a heart attack in 1966; Mary Patton as Sue, who masqueraded as her twin sister, Hazel Tate, Arthur Tate's ex-wife; Jeffrey Krolik (son of Mary Stuart in real life) as Duncan Eric Tate, the son of Joanne and Arthur Tate who died in infancy; George Petrie, Richard Derr, Mark Lenard, and Frank Overton as lawyer Nathan Walsh; Lee Grant, Nita Talbot, and Constance Ford as Rose Peabody; Don Knotts as Rose's mute brother, Wilbur Peabody; Marion Brash and Ann Williams as Eunice, Joanne's widowed sister; Larry Hugo as Rex Twining, who married Eunice; Doris Dalton as Cornelia Simmons, Arthur Tate's aunt; Vicki Vola as Harriet Baxter, Cornelia's housekeeper; Nina Reader and Ann Pearson as Allison Simmons, Cornelia's sister; Tom Carlin, Donald Madden, and David O'Brien as Fred Metcalf, who married Allison; Katherine Meskill as Agnes Metcalf, Fred's mother; Tony Ray, Anthony Cannon, and George Maharis as Joanne's nephew, Bud Gardner, who married Janet Bergman; Martin Brooks, Philip Abbott, and Ron Husmann as Dr. Dan Walton, who also married Janet; Denise Nickerson, Kathy Beller, Meg Bennett, Hope Busby, Sherry Mathis, and Louan Gideon as Liza Walton, daughter of Dan and Janet Walton; Robert Mandan, George Gaynes, and Roy Shuman as Sam Reynolds, who romanced Joanne for several years after Arthur Tate's death but never married her; Virginia Gilmore, Lesley Woods, and Joan Copeland as Andrea Whiting, Sam's ex-wife; Dino Narizzano, Jeff Pomerantz, and Dino Narizzano (again) as Len Whiting, son of Sam and Andrea, who married Patti Barron; Freida Altman as Mrs. Miller; Carl Low as Dr. Bob Rogers; Pamela Murphy, Louise Shaffer, and Kathryn Walker as Emily Rogers, Bob's daughter; Burr De Benning, Stephen Joyce, Terry Logan, and Ken Kercheval as Nick Hunter, who married Emily; Ken Harvey as lawyer Doug Martin, who married Eunice; John Napier and Michael Wagner as Cliff Williams; Martin Brooks as Dr. Everett Moore; Lenka Peterson as Isabelle Kittridge Moore; Geoffrey Lumb as Geoffrey Crane;

After its switch to NBC in 1982 the series never fared well; some critics believed that the de-emphasis of Mary Stuart's character harmed the show. John Whitesell took over as the series' last executive producer, but was unable to salvage it from the bottom of the daytime ratings heap. The ambitious story line of flooding the town of Henderson failed to lift the ratings, and Search for Tomorrow ended just after Christmas 1986, some three months after its special thirty-fifth anniversary telecast, which contained flashbacks of notable events on the show. On the finale, Patty married Hogan McCleary, and in the last scene Jo Tourneur looked up at the night sky, turned to her longtime friend and neighbor Stu Bergman, and said: "Tomorrow, I can't wait!"

SEAWAY SYNDICATED

1965 Produced in Canada in 1965 but not made available in the United States until later, this hour adventure series starred Stephen Young as Nick King, a security agent working along the St. Lawrence Seaway, and Austin Willis as Admiral Fox, his boss, the head of the Ship Owners Association.

SECOND CHANCE ABC

7 MARCH 1977–15 JULY 1977 Jim Peck hosted this daytime game show on which three contestants competed; after writing down their answers to various questions, contestants were shown three possible answers (including the correct one) and were permitted to change their answer. After each round the contestants took a spin at the prize board, where they could win cash and prizes or lose everything. Bill Carruthers, who created the series with Jan McCormack, was the executive producer.

SECOND CHANCE FOX

26 SEPTEMBER 1987–2 JULY 1988 From September until January, this half-hour sitcom was titled Second Chance, and starred Kiel Martin (fresh from Hill Street Blues) as Charles Russell, who died in the year 2011, but was sent back to Earth by St. Peter to earn a "second chance" to enter heaven. Charles returned to Venice, California, in 1987, rented a room above his garage, and tried to advise his teenaged self on matters of life and love. Other regulars were Matthew Perry as fifteen-year-old Charles "Chazz" Russell; Randee Heller as his divorced mother, Helen; William Gallo as Chazz's pal Booch; Demian Slade as Chazz's pal Eugene; and Joseph Maher as St. Peter.

On 16 January the series changed formats and titles, dropping Martin and Maher. Now known as Boys Will Be Boys, it featured Perry, Gallo and Slade as teen pals, Heller as the now-widowed Helen, and added Terri Ivens as Chazz's girlfriend, Debbie Miller.

SECOND CHANCES CBS

2 DECEMBER 1993–27 JANUARY 1994 Ill-fated continuing drama set in Santa Rita, California. With Connie Sellecca as Dianne Benedict, who was running for a judgeship; Justin Lazard as law student Kevin Cook; Jennifer Lopez as Kevin's fiancee, Melinda Lopez; Megan Porter Follows as Dianne's sister, Kate; Matt Salinger as Mike; Pepe Serna as Melinda's father, Sal Lopez; Ronny Cox as Kevin's father, George Cook; Ray Wise as Judge Stinson, Dianne's political opponent; Michelle Phillips as Joanna; Ramy Zada as Detective Kuntz; and Stephen Nichols as Tommy. The series's production facilities were badly damaged by the Northridge earthquake in January 1994, and production was halted; the series resurfaced briefly on CBS's late-night schedule in February 1994. Lopez and Serna received a second chance to repeat their roles, however, on a subsequent CBS offering: see Hotel Malibu.

SECOND CITY T.V. SYNDICATED

1977–1980 This half-hour videotaped series satirized television. Featured were: John Candy, Joe Flaherty, Eugene Levy, Andrea Martin, Catherine O'Hara, Harold Ramis, and Dave Thomas. Bernard Sahlins was the producer. By the end of its syndicated run the show was known as SCTV Television Network. In 1981 most of the crew moved to network television (see SCTV Network).

THE SECOND HALF NBC

7 SEPTEMBER 1993–14 DECEMBER 1993; 22 MARCH 1994–12 APRIL 1994 Standup comic John Mendoza headlined this sitcom as John Palmaro, a newly divorced 42-year-old sportswriter for the Chicago Daily Post. Also on hand were Jessica Lundy as his sister, Denise, who lived in the same apartment building; Ellen Blain as his fourteen-year-old, Cathy; Brooke Stanley as his nine-year-old, Ruth; Joe Guzaldo as his pal and coworker, David; Wayne Knight as Robert Piccolo, his editor; and Kimberley Kates as John's dog-walking neighbor, Gloria.

THE SECOND HUNDRED YEARS ABC

6 SEPTEMBER 1967–19 SEPTEMBER 1968 Monte Markham played dual roles in this half-hour sitcom—Luke Carpenter, a gold prospector who was frozen in an avalanche in 1900 and who miraculously thawed out, unharmed, after a second avalanche in 1967, and Ken Carpenter, Luke's thirty-three-year-old grandson, who looked exactly like him. Arthur O'Connell costarred as sixty-seven-year-old Edwin Carpenter, Luke's son and Ken's father. Luke came to live with Edwin and Ken, while the Army, for security reasons, struggled to keep secret the fact of Luke's discovery. Also featured were Frank Maxwell as Colonel Garroway and Bridget Hanley as Nurse Anderson; Karen Black, in one of her first TV roles, appeared occasionally as Garroway's hippie daughter, Marcia. Harry Ackerman was the executive producer and Bob Claver the producer for Screen Gems.

SECRET AGENT CBS

5 APRIL 1961–13 SEPTEMBER 1961; 3 APRIL 1965–11 SEPTEMBER 1965; 4 DECEMBER 1965–10 SEPTEMBER 1966 Patrick McGoohan starred in this adventure series as John Drake, a comparatively moral intelligence agent who refused to carry a gun and who avoided violence when possible. The series was produced in England by ATV; thirty-nine half-hour episodes were filmed in 1961, and the series was televised there and here as Danger Man, in which Drake was a NATO agent. The series was revived in 1965 in an hour format, under the title Secret Agent, with Drake now working for British intelligence. The show's theme, "Secret Agent Man," was composed by P. F. Sloan and Steve Barri, and sung by Johnny Rivers.

SECRET FILE, U.S.A. SYNDICATED

1955 Filmed principally in Amsterdam, this half-hour Cold War spy show starred Robert Alda as Major William Morgan of Army Intelligence and Lois Hensen as Colonel Custer.

THE SECRET LIVES OF WALDO KITTY NBC

6 SEPTEMBER 1975–4 SEPTEMBER 1976 This live and animated Saturday-morning series was inspired by the Walter Mitty stories. Waldo Kitty was a daydreaming cat who fantasized about saving his girlfriend, Felicia, from the clutches of his nemesis, Tyrone the bulldog. Howard Morris was the voice of Waldo, Jane Webb that of Felicia, and Allan Melvin that of Tyrone. Lou Scheimer and Norm Prescott were the executive producers.

SECRET SERVICE NBC

16 AUGUST 1992–23 JUNE 1993 Re-enactments of great moments in the history of the Secret Service, the federal agency in charge of protecting the president and tracking down counterfeiters, were presented on this reality-based show, hosted by actor Steven Ford. As the son of former president Gerald Ford, Steven Ford had first-hand knowledge of the work of the organization.

SECRET SQUIRREL NBC

2 OCTOBER 1965–2 SEPTEMBER 1967 Secret Squirrel, a Hanna-Barbera cartoon character, had his own Saturday-morning series for two seasons before joining forces with Atom Ant in the fall of 1967. Secret Squirrel was accompanied on his missions by Morocco Mole; other animated segments included "Winnie Witch" and "Squiddly Diddly," a squid who habitually escaped from his aquarium. See also Atom Ant.

THE SECRET STORM CBS

1 FEBRUARY 1954–8 FEBRUARY 1974 The Secret Storm was created by Roy Winsor, who had previously developed Search for Tomorrow. For many years it was produced by Gloria Monty; Joe Manetta produced it during the later seasons. The story lines centered on the comings and goings of the Ames family of Woodbridge until the late 1960s, when the show was sold by American Home Products to CBS; successive sets of writers managed to kill off almost all of the Ameses, and The Secret Storm, which had been television's most popular daytime serial at one time, left the air in 1974 after a run of twenty years and a week. It had begun as a fifteen-minute show and had expanded to thirty minutes in June 1962. Principal players included: Peter Hobbs (1954–1960), Cec Linder (1960–1964), Ward Costello (1964–1966), and Lawrence Weber (1966–1968) as Peter Ames, a father of three who was widowed during the first week of the story when his wife, Ellen, was hit by a car; Jean Mowry, Rachel Taylor, Mary Foskett, and Judy Lewis as Susan Ames, his elder daughter; Robert Morse, Warren Berlinger, Wayne Tippit, Peter White, and Stephen Bolster as Jerry Ames, his son; Jada Rowland, Beverly Lunsford, and Lynne Adams as Amy Ames, his younger daughter (Rowland played the role from 1954 until 1974, but not continuously); Russell Hicks as Judge J. T. Tyrell, father of the late Ellen Ames; Marjorie Gateson and Eleanor Phelps as Grace Tyrell, Ellen's mother; Haila Stoddard as Pauline, Ellen's sister; Virginia Dwyer as Jane Edwards, the Ames' housekeeper; Ed Bryce as Bruce Edwards, her estranged husband; James Vickery (1957–1965) as Alan Dunbar, who married Susan Ames and later bought the town newspaper; Donny Melvin as Peter Dunbar; Joan Hotchkis and June Graham as Myra Lake, one of Amy's schoolteachers, who married Peter Ames in 1959; Carl King as Bryan Fuller, who married Pauline and later divorced her; Frank Sutton as reporter Joe Sullivan; Jane McArthur as Nancy Hewlett; Jim Pritchett as Jeff Nichols; Don Galloway, David O'Brien, and Ed Griffith as Kip Rysdale, a boyfriend of Amy's; John Baragrey as Arthur Rysdale, Kip's father; Polly Childs as Kate Lodge, who married Jerry Ames and was later found murdered; Pamela Raymond as Hope, who later married Jerry; Lori March as Valerie Hill, who married Peter Ames; Bibi Besch as Janet Hill, Valerie's daughter; Roy Scheider, Justin McDonough, and Ed Winter as Bob Hill, Valerie's son; Diana Muldaur as Ann Wicker; Nick Coster, Jed Allan, Ed

Kemmer, Ryan MacDonald, Conrad Fowkes, and Linden Chiles as Paul Britton, who married Amy Ames; Julie Wilson as Brooke Lawrence, who was accidentally killed by Valerie; Jane Rose as Aggie Parsons; Jacqueline Brookes as Ursula Winthrop; Robert Sherwood as Doug Winthrop; Jack Ryland, Robert Loggia, and Laurence Luckinbill as Frank Carver, who married Susan Ames Dunbar; Keith Charles as Nick Kane; Christina Crawford (daughter of Joan Crawford) as Joann Kane; Jeffrey Lynn as Charlie Clemens; Marla Adams as Belle Clemens, who married Paul Britton; Diane Dell, Terry Falis, and Judy Safran as Lisa Britton, daughter of Paul and Amy Britton; Bernie Barrow as Dan Kincaid, who married Belle Clemens; David Ackroyd and Dennis Cooney as Kevin Kincaid, Dan's son; Barbara Rodell as Jill Stevens Clayborne; Peter MacLean as her husband, Hugh Clayborne, who was killed with her in a plane crash; Joel Crothers as Ken Stevens, Jill's brother; James Grover as Clay Stevens, his son; Stephanie Braxton as Lauri Reddin; David Gale as Mark Reddin, who left the priesthood to marry Lauri, but later returned to it while Lauri married Ken Stevens; Frances Sternhagen as Jesse Reddin; Gary Sandy as Stacey Reddin; Troy Donahue (seldom seen on TV since he starred in SurfSide 6) as Keefer, a drug dealer; Jennifer Darling as Iris Sims, Keefer's girlfriend; Gordon Rigsby and Alexander Scourby as Dr. Ian Northcote, who married Valerie Hill Ames; Terry Kiser as Cory Boucher; James Storm as Sean Childers, Jr.; Jeff Pomerantz and Keith Charles as Dr. Brian Neeves; Audre Johnston as nurse Martha Ann Ashley; Dan Hamilton as Robert Landers, son of Dan Kincaid; Ellen Barber and Audrey Landers as Joanna Morrison; Sidney Walker as Monsignor Quinn; Joe Ponazecki as Reilly; Patrick Fox as Phil; Madeline Sherwood as Carmen; Richard Venture as Tom Gregory; Sue Ann Gifillan as Lurene Post; Roberta Royce as Freddie; Susan Sudert as Charlotte; Philip Bruns as Julius Klepner; Mary K. Wells as Nola Hallister; Diane Ladd as Kitty Styles; Scott Medford as Jonathan Styles; and Nicholas Lewis as Tim Brannigan.

SECRETS OF MIDLAND HEIGHTS CBS
6 DECEMBER 1980–24 JANUARY 1981 An hour prime-time serial, set in a Midwestern college town. The cast included Bibi Besch as Dorothy Wheeler; Linda Grovenor (in the first episode) and Nancy Jones as her daughter, Holly Wheeler; Jordan Christopher as scheming Guy Millington; Doran Clark as Guy's niece, Ann Dulles; Martha Scott as Guy's mother, Margaret Millington, the grand dame of Midland Heights; Robert Hogan as Professor Nathan Welsh, a widower who had an affair with Dorothy; Daniel Zippi as Nathan's son, Teddy Welsh; Stephen Manley as Nathan's son, Danny Welsh; Mark Pinter as Calvin Richardson; Lorenzo Lamas as Burt Carroll; Linda Hamilton as Burt's girlfriend, Lisa Rogers; Jim Youngs as gas jockey John Gray; Melora Hardin as Micky Carroll; and Jenny O'Hara as Lucy Dexter. Although the series was canceled after only eight weeks, several of the show's regulars showed up in King's Crossing, which aired during the 1981–1982 season on ABC. Both were produced by Lorimar Productions, which dominated the prime-time serial field during the early 1980s.

SECRETS OF THE DEEP SYNDICATED

SEE IT NOW CBS
18 NOVEMBER 1951–7 JULY 1958 Though it was not television's first public affairs program, See It Now was surely its most significant. Through careful preparation, thoughtful production, and skillful editing, it demonstrated that television could present to the viewer something more, something deeper, than a mere interview or newsreel. As Alexander Kendrick noted in his book, Prime Time: The Life of Edward R. Murrow, See It Now was the first public affairs show to use its own film footage instead of newsreel or file footage; no interview was rehearsed and nothing was dubbed.

See It Now also pioneered the use of field producers, who supervised the filming on location. See It Now was jointly produced by Edward R. Murrow (who also hosted the series) and Fred W. Friendly. The two had previously collaborated on two projects: "I Can Hear It Now," a series of three record albums, narrated by Murrow, of "aural history" from 1919 to 1949, and Hear It Now, a CBS radio news analysis show. Murrow and Friendly were deeply committed to a high-quality television program; though Murrow continued to do a nightly news show on CBS radio, See It Now's weekly schedule gave Murrow and Friendly time to assemble material and to focus the presentation. The producers hoped that See It Now would not only show a news event but would explain to the viewer why it happened. Though a sponsor—Alcoa—had been acquired, the advertising fees paid for only a small fraction of the show's cost; the remainder was absorbed by the network.

The show premiered 18 November 1951; the opening showed, on a split screen, San Francisco's Golden Gate Bridge and New York's Brooklyn Bridge, in the first live commercial coast-to-coast broadcast (the first coast-to-coast broadcast had been on 4 September, when President Truman addressed the Japanese Peace Treaty Conference in San Francisco). Many of the early shows focused on the Korean War, but few stirred any real controversy. It was during See It Now's third season, as the series began to examine the anti-Communist fervor of the time, that the program grew to full maturity. The first notable broadcast of the season took place on 20 October 1953, with the telecast of "The Case Against Milo Radulovich, AO589839." Radulovich, an Air Force lieutenant, had been ordered dismissed from the service because his father, a Serbian immigrant, and sister were said to be Communist sympathizers; following the broadcast, Secretary of the Air Force Harold E. Talbott reviewed the case and ordered Radulovich reinstated. The program was widely hailed as the best single program of the year, and Murrow won an Emmy as most outstanding personality of 1953. Though CBS never pressured Friendly or Murrow to refrain from airing the program, neither the network nor the sponsor would agree to advertise it; Murrow and Friendly put up $1,500 of their own money to purchase an ad in the New York Times.

Another significant broadcast from 1953 was titled "Argument in Indianapolis." Shown on 24 November, it examined the refusal by the Indianapolis chapter of the American Legion to permit its meeting hall to be used by the American Civil Liberties Union. The single most important show of the season, however, was shown on 9 March 1954; the untitled half hour, which had been months in preparation, was a series of film clips of Senator Joseph McCarthy, the bombastic demagogue who most embodied the anti-Communist hysteria. The clips showed McCarthy as a shallow and callous man whose stock in trade included conflicting statements, misstatements, and half-truths. The following week's program showed a second half hour of McCarthy, principally of his recent questioning of Annie Lee Moss, an alleged subversive who was employed by the State Department. On 6 April McCarthy accepted Murrow's offer of equal time; McCarthy's appearance on that show probably did as much to weaken his own credibility as the two earlier shows. McCarthy concluded his rebuttal with these remarks: "Now ordinarily I would not take time out from the important work at hand to answer Murrow. However, in this case I feel justified in doing so because Murrow is a symbol, the leader and cleverest of the jackal pack which is always found at the throat of anyone who dares to expose individual Communists and traitors." At a subsequent press conference Murrow uttered his now-famous response: "Who has helped the Communist cause and who has served his country better, Senator McCarthy or I? I would like to be remembered by the answer to that question." After the broadcasts, opposition to McCarthy strengthened; though McCarthy's subcommittee conducted several more weeks of investigations (which ABC and DuMont covered live), McCarthy was censured by the Senate late in 1954, and his influence diminished rapidly.

During the 1954–1955 season See It Now presented several noteworthy programs, including a report on Brown v. Board of Education, the Supreme Court's historic school desegregation decision; stories on the changing face of Africa and the Middle East; "A Conversation with J. Robert Oppenheimer," who had previously been labeled a security risk; and a two-part series on tobacco and lung cancer (Murrow, a chain smoker, lost a lung to cancer and died of a brain tumor in 1965). At the end of the season, See It Now lost both its sponsor and its prime-time slot; the reasons for the losses are not entirely clear, but it has been suggested that Alcoa withdrew its sponsorship as a result of pressure following a May 1955 report on a small Texas newspaper that had uncovered a major land scandal (Alcoa was then expanding its Texas operations). The loss of the time slot was principally due to the introduction of The $64,000 Question into the preceding half hour on 7 June 1955; network executives no doubt felt that a runaway hit such as that could serve as an effective lead-in to a more popular type of show.

From the fall of 1955 until the summer of 1958, See It Now was broadcast as a series of specials, most of which were in a sixty-minute format; some CBS insiders by that time referred to the show as "See It Now and Then." This latter group of broadcasts ranged from "The Secret Life of Danny Kaye" to an interview with Chinese premier Chou En-Lai (filmed in Rangoon, the meeting was arranged by Burma's premier, U Nu). The final telecast, on 7 July 1958, was a report on postwar Germany, entitled "Watch on the Ruhr."

Though See It Now left the air in 1958, its legacy has survived. In 1959 the network introduced CBS Reports; though not always a regularly scheduled program, it has presented a number of hard-hitting news documentaries. In 1968 CBS introduced 60 Minutes, which gradually built up a large audience; its executive producer is Don Hewitt, who directed See It Now for several years, and one of its principal producers is Joe Wershba, who was a staff reporter on See It Now.

THE SEEKING HEART CBS

5 JULY 1954–10 DECEMBER 1954 A medically oriented soap opera. The cast of the fifteen-minute daily serial included Judith Braun, Flora Campbell, Scott Forbes (who later turned up in Jim Bowie), Dorothy Lovett, and James Yarborough. Road of Life replaced The Seeking Heart in December of 1954.

SEINFELD NBC

31 MAY 1990–21 JUNE 1990; 23 JANUARY 1991– Standup comic Jerry Seinfeld brought his unique perspective on everyday life to this sitcom, which he created with former standup comic Larry David. Jerry Seinfeld starred as himself, a standup comic (and neatness fanatic) who lived in an apartment on Manhattan's Upper West Side; when Seinfeld was not at home, he could often be seen doing a brief standup routine at a local club. Unlike other sitcoms, however, the central characters were neither coworkers nor related to one another. Instead, three friends of the fictional Seinfeld were the other regulars: Jason Alexander as hapless George Costanza, who was a realtor as the series began but later bumbled through other jobs; Julia Louis-Dreyfus as Jerry's ex-girlfriend Elaine Benes, who worked for a publisher; and Michael Richards as Jerry's oddball neighbor Kramer (his first name was revealed to be Cosmo in a 1995 episode). Occasionally featured were Wayne Knight as Newman, Estelle Harris and Jerry Stiller as George's overbearing parents, and Elizabeth Sheridan and Barney Martin as Jerry's parents.

The insignificant aspects of everyday life formed the grist for most programs; not since The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet has a sitcom been less truly plot-driven. As Seinfeld succinctly explained his show to TV Guide: "It's micro-concept TV." Co-creator Larry David elaborated slightly on the concept to Entertainment Weekly: "No hugging. No kissing." The carefully crafted scripts explored such details of life as forgetting a date's name, waiting in line at the bank, finding a parking space, and even the etiquette of "double dipping"—putting a potato chip back in the dip after having already taken a bite. Bodily functions were also fair game for examination; in one well-known show, "The Contest," Jerry, George, Kramer, and Elaine tried to see who could last the longest without masturbating (the episode won a writing Emmy).

The series was not an immediate hit. Introduced in a four-week trial run in 1990 (a quasi-pilot, "The Seinfeld Chronicles," had aired on NBC 5 July 1989), Seinfeld attracted chiefly a cult audience until early 1993, when it was moved from Wednesday nights to Thursdays, immediately after Cheers. In the fall of 1993 it replaced Cheers as NBC's Thursday night anchor show, and rose to third place in the seasonal Nielsens; it topped the ratings the following season. Seinfeld also won a prestigious Peabody Award in 1992.

SEMINAR ABC

11 OCTOBER 1952–3 JANUARY 1953 In this early experiment in educational television, the camera sat in on an actual course in American civilization, taught at Columbia University by Professor Donald Bigelow. Erik Barnouw, Jack Pacey, and Dorothy Oshlag produced the Saturday-evening series, and Alex Segal directed it.

SEMI-TOUGH ABC

29 MAY 1980–19 JUNE 1980 This half-hour sitcom was based on the movie of the same title (which was in turn based on Dan Jenkins' novel). It starred Bruce McGill and David Hasselhoff as Billy Clyde Puckett and Shake Tiller, two stars of the New York Bulls professional football team, and Markie Post as their roommate, writer Barbara Jane Bookman (the relationship among the three was purely platonic). Also featured were Ed Peck as Coach Cooper; Bubba Smith (who had played pro ball in real life) as teammate Puddin'; Freeman King as teammate Story Time; and Carlos Brown as teammate T. J.

SERGEANT PRESTON OF THE YUKON CBS/SYNDICATED

29 SEPTEMBER 1955–25 SEPTEMBER 1958 (CBS); 1958 (SYNDICATED) This half-hour adventure series, which ran on radio from 1947 to 1955, starred Richard Simmons as Sergeant Preston of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police; astride his horse, Rex, and accompanied by his faithful canine companion, King, Preston seemed to spend most of his time by himself, trudging through the snow to apprehend fugitives. The character was created by George W. Trendle, who had previously conceived The Lone Ranger and The Green Hornet. The series was filmed in color, principally at Ashcroft, Colorado, and was produced by the Wrather Corporation; Von Reznicek's "Donna Diana Overture" was used as the theme music. An additional twenty-six episodes were produced for first-run syndication after the show concluded its network prime-time run in 1958. Richard Simmons, the star of the show, later revealed in an interview that Sergeant Preston's first name was Frank, though he added that the first name was never used on the air.

SERPICO NBC

24 SEPTEMBER 1976–28 JANUARY 1977 This unsuccessful hour-long crime show was based on Peter Maas's biography of Frank Serpico, an unorthodox New York cop (the book had been made into a movie in 1974, starring Al Pacino). On TV David Birney starred as the uncorruptible Frank Serpico, with Tom Atkins as Lieutenant Tom Sullivan. Emmet G. Lavery was executive producer for Emmet G. Lavery Productions in association with Paramount Television and NBC-TV.

SESAME STREET NET-PBS

10 NOVEMBER 1969– The most important children's show in the history of television, Sesame Street proved to be not only informative, but also phenomenally successful. It was developed by Joan Ganz Cooney, executive director of the Children's Television Workshop, a company established in 1967 to produce the series with financial support from the United States Office of Education, the Ford Foundation, and the Carnegie Corporation. The show is set along a city street because it was primarily targeted at inner-city preschoolers (fortunately, Sesame Street proved popular with children of all backgrounds). Through a skillful blending of skits, songs, puppetry, and animation, Sesame Street has managed to teach letters, numbers, and grammatical concepts in a totally entertaining fashion. Most shows are "sponsored" by particular letters or numbers, which are presented as "commercials." Sesame Street's human performers have included: Loretta Long as Susan; Matt Robinson and Roscoe Orman as Gordon; Bob McGrath as Bob; Will Lee as Mr. Hooper; Northern J. Calloway as David; Emilio Delgado as Luis; and Sonia Manzano as Maria. Equally important are the Muppets, the talented group of expressive puppets created by Jim Henson: Ernie, Bert, Grover, Oscar the Grouch, The Cookie Monster, and Big Bird (who is not really a puppet, but rather a life-size figure played by Frank Oz and later by Carroll Spinney). Songs for the series have been composed by Jeff Moss and Joe Raposo. Other versions of Sesame Street have been produced in countries throughout the world. The series has managed to confront life and death during its run. When Will Lee (Mr. Hooper) died, the series chose not to replace him, but to deal with the character's departure in a sensitive program in which Big Bird learns of the death. On 13 May 1988 audiences celebrated the TV wedding of Luis and Maria. A network prime-time special, telecast 7 April 1989 on NBC, hosted by Bill Cosby, commemorated the series' twentieth anniversary. A second special, on 18 May 1994 on ABC, saluted its twenty-fifth anniversary.

In the fall of 1992 a new opening sequence was created, replacing the original one. Steve Whitmire became the new puppeteer and voice of Ernie, following Jim Henson's sudden death earlier that year. In the fall of 1993, as Sesame Street embarked on its twenty-fifth season, a new, larger set was introduced. It included the Furry Arms Hotel and the Finders Keepers thrift shop (operated by Ruth Buzzi); Tarah Lynne Schaeffer joined the cast as Tarah, a nine-year-old with a disability. Hillary Rodham Clinton made a guest appearance on the show 22 November 1993.

SEVEN AT ELEVEN NBC

28 MAY 1951–27 JUNE 1951 Broadcast Mondays and Wednesdays at 11:00 P.M., Seven at Eleven alternated with Broadway Open House, which was cut back from five nights a week to three after Jerry Lester left the show. The seven regulars were host George DeWitt, singers Denise Lor, Betty Luster, and Jack Stanton, bandleader Milton DeLugg, comic Sid Gould, and the show's unidentified floor manager.

SEVEN BRIDES FOR SEVEN BROTHERS CBS

19 SEPTEMBER 1982–2 JULY 1983 This hour dramatic series was based on the 1954 musical film. Featured were Richard Dean Anderson as Adam McFadden, the eldest of seven orphaned brothers; Terri Treas as his new wife, Hannah Moss, who came home with Adam to find six more McFaddens living on the ranch; Drake Hogestyn as Brian; Peter Horton as Crane; Roger Wilson as Daniel; Tim Topper as Evan; Bryan Utman as Ford; and River Phoenix as Guthrie (conveniently, the brothers had been named in alphabetical order). The ambitious series featured original music by Jim Webb, but failed to catch on with family audiences.

THE 700 CLUB SYNDICATED/FAM

1976– Based in Virginia Beach, this syndicated daily religious talk show is hosted by Pat Robertson, president of the Christian Broadcasting Network. Robertson got his start in television in October 1961, when he put back on the air a foundering UHF outlet in Virginia that he had recently purchased. In 1963 he asked for 700 viewers to pledge ten dollars a month to keep the station afloat. In 1966, when Robertson staffer Jim Bakker started hosting a talk show, the name 700 Club was suggested. Bakker hosted the program for six years, until he and his wife, Tammy, left Robertson's employ (the Bakkers, of course, would later set up The P. T. L. Club). Robertson himself then took over as host of The 700 Club. The program was distributed nationally beginning in 1976. It became one of the cornerstones of Robertson's cable service, the Christian Broadcasting Network (later known as the Family Channel), which he established in 1977. Robertson temporarily resigned as host in 1986 in order to pursue his quest for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination; his son, Tim Robertson, took over. The senior Robertson returned to the anchor desk in 1988. By the mid-1990s the nightly hour broadcast was divided into two segments, both hosted by Robertson, his longtime sidekick Ben Kinchlow, and former Miss America Terry Meeuwsen. The first segment was a newsmagazine, with topical stories filed by contributing reporters; the second segment focused on religious topics, and featured guests and a live studio audience.

SEVEN KEYS ABC

3 APRIL 1961–27 MARCH 1964 Jack Narz hosted this daytime game show on which two contestants attempted to advance along a board of squares by identifying pictures on the squares. The winner of the game won one of seven keys. One of the seven was the key to the prize for which the contestant was playing; thus, a player who won seven games was certain to win the desired prize.

SEVEN LEAGUE BOOTS SYNDICATED

1959 Another of the several documentary series hosted by Jack Douglas, this one presented adventurers from all over the world.

THE SEVEN LIVELY ARTS CBS

3 NOVEMBER 1957–16 FEBRUARY 1958 This ambitious Sunday-afternoon show was supposed to compete with Omnibus (which had left CBS in 1956), but never did; thanks to a disastrous premiere, the show never really had a chance to get off the ground. John Crosby, television critic for the New York Herald Tribune, was the host of the series. Among the varied presentations were: "The Changing Ways of Love," by S. J. Perelman, with Perelman, Piper Laurie, Jason Robards, Jr., Rip Torn, Mike Wallace, and Dick York (3 November); "The World of Nick Adams," adapted by A. E. Hotchner from Hemingway's stories, with Steven Hill, William Marshall, and Eli Wallach (10 November); "Here Is New York" narrated by E. G. Marshall (15 December); "Hollywood Around the World," a look at the film industry (29 December). Blues singer Billie Holiday also made a rare television appearance on the series (8 December). The executive producer of the hour show was John Houseman.

704 HAUSER CBS

11 APRIL 1994–9 MAY 1994 One of TV's better-known addresses, 704 Hauser Street in Queens had been Archie and Edith Bunker's home on creator Norman Lear's landmark sitcom, All in the Family. By 1994, however, the house had passed into the hands of a black family. Featured were John Amos as Ernest Cumberbatch, an auto mechanic; Lynnie Godfrey as his wife, Rose; T. E. Russell as their son, business school student Thurgood Marshall ("Goodie") Cumberbatch, whose conservatism baffled his father; Maura Tierney as Goodie's white girlfrend, Cherlyn Markowitz; and Casey Siemaszko as Joey Stivic, the Bunkers' grandson.

THE SEVENTH SENSE SYNDICATED

1978 Jim Peck hosted this interview series, which attempted to probe the subconscious minds of those interviewed through the use of hypnosis. Elroy Schwartz, a hypnotist, was the producer.

77 SUNSET STRIP ABC

10 OCTOBER 1958–9 SEPTEMBER 1964 Warner Brothers' best-known detective show starred Efrem Zimbalist, Jr., and Roger Smith as Stu Bailey and Jeff Spencer, two private eyes whose offices were located at 77 Sunset Strip in Hollywood; Zimbalist had first played his role in an episode of Warner Brothers' anthology show, Conflict, titled "Anything for Money" (aired 23 July 1957). Edd Byrnes costarred in 77 Sunset Strip as Gerald Lloyd Kookson III, better known as Kookie; the character, a hip-talking parking lot attendant at Dino's Lodge next door, was not intended to be a recurring one, but public reaction (chiefly from teenage girls) was so strong that Byrnes was given a regular role. Byrnes capitalized on the character in 1959 with a hit record, "Kookie, Kookie (Lend Me Your Comb)," recorded with Connie Stevens (soon to appear on Warner Brothers' Hawaiian Eye). Because of a contract dispute, Byrnes did not appear on the series during most of the 1959–1960 season; shortly after his return (in May of 1960), however, Kookie became a private eye, working with Bailey and Spencer (in Byrnes's absence, Troy Donahue had played the parking lot attendant in several 1959 episodes; Donahue later starred in SurfSide 6). Also featured were Jacqueline Beer (Miss France of 1954) as Suzanne Fabray, the receptionist and switchboard operator; Louis Quinn as Roscoe (introduced in the third episode), a horse-playing contact man who hung out at the office; and Byron Keith as Lieutenant Gilmore of the Los Angeles police. In 1960 Richard Long joined the cast as detective Rex Randolph (Long had played the same part a year earlier on Warner Brothers' Bourbon Street Beat), and in 1961 Robert Logan was added as J. R. Hale, the new parking lot attendant who usually spoke in abbreviations. Major changes took place in the fall of 1963 as all the regulars except for Zimbalist were dropped; Zimbalist continued as Stu Bailey, but his offices were no longer at 77 Sunset Strip; Joan Staley was added as his secretary, Hannah. The series even acquired a new theme, Bob Thomson's "New Sunset," which replaced the familiar finger-snapping "77 Sunset Strip" written by Mack David and Jerry Livingston. The series left the air for a few weeks in February 1964 but returned (in reruns) in April of that year. Production was handled first by Roy Huggins, later by Howie Horwitz, and finally by William Conrad (who later starred in Cannon). The success of 77 Sunset Strip spawned several other Warner Brothers hours (Bourbon Street Beat and Hawaiian Eye in 1959, SurfSide 6 in 1960), but none of them was as popular as the first of the line.

77TH BENGAL LANCERS NBC

21 OCTOBER 1956–2 JUNE 1957 This half-hour adventure series was set in India at Fort Oghora, headquarters of the Seventy-seventh Bengal Lancers during the late nineteenth century. The show, a Screen Gems production, featured Warren Stevens as Lieutenant Rhodes; Philip Carey as Lieutenant Storm; and John Sutton and Patrick Whyte as Colonel Standish.

SHA NA NA SYNDICATED

1977–1981 A successful half-hour musical series, Sha Na Na was named for its hosts, a ten-member aggregation dedicated to reviving interest in the music of the 1950s, the Golden Era of rock and roll. The group was founded at Columbia University in 1968, when the members of the Kingsmen, a campus singing group, began to include hits of the fifties in their repertoire; the name "Sha Na Na" was taken from the background chant of the Silhouettes' 1958 classic, "Get a Job." By 1977 the group included Lenny Baker, Johnny Contardo, Denny Greene, Jocko Marcellino, Danny (Dirty Dan) McBride, Chico Ryan, (Screamin') Scott Simon, Scott Powell (also known as Tony Santini), Don York, and muscle-flexing Jon (Bowzer) Bauman, the unofficial leader of the gang (Denny, Jocko, Tony, and Don were original members). Among those featured on the show were Jane Dulo, Pamela Myers, Avery Schreiber (1977–1978), Kenneth Mars, and Soupy Sales (1978–1981). Pierre Cossette was the executive producer, and Bernard Rothman and Jack Wohl were the producers.

SHADOW CHASERS ABC

14 NOVEMBER 1985–16 JANUARY 1986 A tongue-in-cheek adventure series about a tabloid newspaper reporter and an anthropologist who teamed up to investigate reports of paranormal phenomena and other strange stuff. With Dennis Dugan as Edgar "Benny" Benedek, reporter for the National Register; Trevor Eve as Professor Jonathan MacKensie; and Nina Foch as Dr. Julianne Moorhouse, who directed the boys' investigations.

SHADOW OF THE CLOAK DUMONT

6 JUNE 1951–20 MARCH 1952 This half-hour spy show starred Helmut Dantine as Peter House, an agent for International Security Intelligence. Roger Gerry produced the series.

SHADOW THEATER USA

1 APRIL 1990–22 JULY 1990 Half-hour magazine show on horror films, hosted by Robert Englund, who is perhaps better known as Freddy of the Nightmare on Elm Street movies.

SHAFT CBS

9 OCTOBER 1973–20 AUGUST 1974 This ninety-minute crime show shared a Tuesday slot with Hawkins and with The New CBS Tuesday Movie. Richard Roundtree starred as John Shaft, a slick and successful black private eye who worked in New York, and Ed Barth costarred as Lieutenant Al Rossi. The TV series was considerably less violent than the 1971 film (which had also starred Roundtree) on which it was based. Allan Balter and William Read Woodfield produced the series for M-G-M.

SHAKESPEARE ON TV SYNDICATED

1954 This lecture series was presented by Dr. Frank Baxter of the University of Southern California.

THE SHAKESPEARE PLAYS PBS

14 FEBRUARY 1979–31 MAY 1985 One of the most ambitious projects in broadcasting history, The Shakespeare Plays was a six-year effort by the BBC (with financial assistance from Exxon, Morgan Guaranty Trust Company and Metropolitan Life Insurance) to produce all thirty-seven of William Shakespeare's plays. Julius Caesar was the first of the works to be broadcast (the plays were not produced in chronological order). The series concluded in 1985 with Love's Labour's Lost.

SHAKY GROUND FOX

13 DECEMBER 1992–4 JULY 1993 Domestic sitcom about a wacky but lovable dad and his family. With Matt Frewer as Bob Moody, who worked at United General Technologies, a Southern California aerospace company; Robin Riker as his wife, Helen; Matthew Brooks as teen son Carter; Love Hewitt as teen daughter Bernadette; Bradley Pierce as preteen son Dylan; Harold Sylvester as Bob's coworker, Russell; Alex Nevil as Arthur Dannenberg, a younger coworker who had nudged out Bob for a promotion; Stephen Elliott as Helen's father, Heywood; and Gloria Dorson as Helen's mother, Beverly.

SHANE ABC

10 SEPTEMBER 1966–31 DECEMBER 1966 Based on the 1953 film, this hour-long western starred David Carradine as Shane, a drifting gunman who signed on as a hired hand with the Starrett family and helped them save their farm from the clutches of an evil land baron. Also featured were Jill Ireland as widow Marian Starrett, owner of the place; Chris Shea as her young son, Joey; Tom Tully as Tom Starrett, her father-in-law; Bert Freed as Rufe Ryker, the land baron; and Sam Gilman as Grafton, Ryker's henchman. Herbert Brodkin was the executive producer.

SHANNON SYNDICATED

1961 George Nader starred in this half-hour crime show as Joe Shannon, insurance investigator for the Transport Bonding & Surety Company; Regis Toomey was featured as his boss, Bill Cochran. Shannon drove an ultramodern 1961 Buick, equipped with cameras, a dictating machine, tape recorders, and weapons. Jerry Briskin produced the series for Screen Gems.

SHANNON CBS

11 NOVEMBER 1981–2 DECEMBER 1981; 17 MARCH 1982–7 APRIL 1982 Kevin Dobson starred in this hour crime show as Jack Shannon, a tough New York cop who moved to San Francisco after the death of his wife. Also featured were Michael Durrell as his new boss, Lieutenant Moraga; Charlie Fields as John, Shannon's ten-year-old son; Al Ruscio as Paul Lobatelli, Shannon's father-in-law, a fisherman; Karen Kondazian as Irene, Shannon's mother-in-law; and Bruce Kirby as Officer Schmidt, one of Shannon's colleagues.

SHANNON'S DEAL NBC

13 APRIL 1990–16 MAY 1990; 10 AUGUST 1990–17 AUGUST 1990; 23 MARCH 1991–21 MAY 1991 Filmmaker John Sayles created this hour series about a Philadelphia lawyer who left his job with a big firm and opened his own office after piling up heavy gambling debts and destroying his marriage. Featured were Jamey Sheridan as Jack Shannon; Jenny Lewis as his teenage daughter, Neala; Elizabeth Peña as his secretary, Lucy Acosta; Martin Ferrero as lawyer Lou Gondolph, whose office was in the same building as Shannnon's; and Richard Edson as Wilmer Slade, the legbreaker sent to collect Shannon's outstanding gambling loans. The series featured an excellent score by trumpeter Wynton Marsalis. The pilot, a two-hour TV-movie, was aired on NBC 4 June 1989.

THE SHAPE OF THINGS NBC

6 APRIL 1982–27 APRIL 1982 This hour comedy-variety show was described in ads as "a hilarious view of today's world through women's eyes!" Not only was it not hilarious, but its executive producer (George Schlatter), its producer (Bob Wynn), and most of its writers and crew were men. On-camera regulars included Dottie Archibald, Rhonda Bates, Elaine Boosler, Judy Carter, Alvernette Jiminez, Maureen Murphy, Howie Mandel, David Ruprecht, comedy duo Monteith & Rand, and the Chippendale Dancers.

SHAPING UP ABC

20 MARCH 1984–17 APRIL 1984 This witless sitcom was set at a Santa Monica health club. Featured were Leslie Nielsen as the owner, Buddy Fox, who had been married eight times (he wanted to have a child, but had had a vasectomy somewhere along the way); Michael Fontaine as Ben, the manager; Jennifer Tilly as Shannon, one of the instructors, an aspiring actress; Shawn Weatherly as Melissa, another instructor, studying for her master's degree; Cathy Shirriff as Zoya Antonova; and Judy Pioli as Shirley.

THE SHARI LEWIS SHOW NBC

1 OCTOBER 1960–28 SEPTEMBER 1963 Saturday-morning puppet show hosted by Shari Lewis and her puppets, Lamb Chop, Hush Puppy, and Charlie Horse. Also featured were Jackie Warner as Jum-Pup, Ronald Radd as Mr. Goodfellow, and Clive Russell. Robert Scherer was the producer.

THE SHARI SHOW SYNDICATED

1975 Half-hour puppet show hosted by Shari Lewis. See also The Shari Lewis Show.

SHAZAM! CBS

7 SEPTEMBER 1974–3 SEPTEMBER 1977 Based on the Marvel Comics character, this live-action Saturday-morning series featured Michael Gray as Billy Batson, a young man who could transform himself into Captain Marvel, the World's Mightiest Mortal, by uttering the word "Shazam!" (Shazam was an acronym for the six immortal elders—*S*olomon, *H*ercules, *A*tlas, *Z*eus, *A*chilles, and *M*ercury—who selected Batson and chose to endow him with rare powers). Also featured were Les Tremayne as Mentor, Batson's traveling companion; John Davey (1974–1976) and Jackson Bostwick (1976–1977) as Captain Marvel. Lou Scheimer and Norm Prescott were the executive producers of the half-hour series; during its last two seasons Shazam! was one-half of The Shazam!/Isis Hour (see also Isis). Shazam! was rerun on CBS in 1980.

SHAZZAN! CBS

9 SEPTEMBER 1967–6 SEPTEMBER 1969 Not to be confused with Shazam!, this half-hour cartoon show from Hanna-Barbera Productions featured a pair of twins (Chuck and Nancy) who were transported back to the time of the Arabian Nights. Shazzan was a giant genie at their disposal.

SHE TV ABC

16 AUGUST 1994–13 SEPTEMBER 1994 Hour sketch comedy series, performed by a mostly female company and occasional guest stars. The regular performers included Jennifer Coolidge, Linda Kash, Simbi Khali, Becky Thyre, Linda Wallem, Nick Bakay, Carl Banks, Elon Gold, and Henriette Mantel. Music was provided by the She TV All Girl She Band.

SHEBANG SYNDICATED

1965 Another of the several rock-and-roll shows that followed in the wake of Hullabaloo and Shindig.

SHEENA, QUEEN OF THE JUNGLE SYNDICATED

1955 Based on the comic strip, this half-hour children's adventure series starred Irish McCalla as Sheena, the leopard-tunicked jungle denizen who was the female counterpart of Tarzan. Christian Drake was also featured as her friend Bob, a trader, and Chim the chimpanzee was on hand to keep Sheena company. The twenty-six episodes were filmed in Mexico by Nassour Studios. The character returned in a 1984 theatrical film, Sheena, starring Tanya Roberts.

THE SHEILA MacRAE SHOW SYNDICATED

1971 Half-hour talk show hosted by Sheila MacRae, with help from her daughters Meredith and Heather MacRae.

THE SHEILAH GRAHAM SHOW NBC

20 JANUARY 1951–14 JULY 1951 Hollywood gossip columnist Sheilah Graham hosted her own fifteen-minute show on Saturday nights. In 1955 she hosted a daytime show: see Hollywood Today.

SHELL GAME CBS

8 JANUARY 1987–12 FEBRUARY 1987 Hour adventure series about a couple of former con artists who got back together after their divorce to work as producers on a consumer affairs TV show at KJME, channel six in Santa Ana, California. With James Read as John Reid; Margot Kidder as Jennie Jerome, his ex; Chip Zien as reporter Bert Luna; Rod McCary as Bill Bauer, coanchor of the show, called "Solutions"; Marg Helgenberger as the other coanchor, Natalie Thayer; and Fred McCarren as the boss, Vince Vanneman.

SHELL'S WONDERFUL WORLD OF GOLF NBC

20 JANUARY 1963–28 FEBRUARY 1970 Weekend series of golf matches filmed at courses throughout the world. Sponsored by Shell Oil, the show was hosted by Gene Sarazen and George Rogers.

SHENANIGANS ABC

SHE-RA: PRINCESS OF POWER SYNDICATED

1985 Half-hour daily cartoon series starring She-Ra, the twin sister of He-Man (from whose series, He-Man and the Masters of the Universe, she was spun off). The characters were based on the line of Mattel toys.

SHERIFF OF COCHISE (U.S. MARSHAL) SYNDICATED

1956–1958 John Bromfield starred in both of these half-hour crime shows as modern-day law enforcement officer Frank Morgan. In the first thirty-nine episodes, syndicated as Sheriff of Cochise or Man from Cochise, Morgan was the sheriff of Cochise County, Arizona. In the latter thirty-nine shows, syndicated as U.S. Marshal, Morgan was a federal marshal working in Arizona. Stan Jones was also featured as Deputy Olson. Mort Briskin was the producer and writer.

SHERLOCK HOLMES SYNDICATED

1954 Ronald Howard starred as Sherlock Holmes, fiction's most famous sleuth, in this series of thirty-nine half hours. Also featured were H. Marion-Crawford as his faithful companion, Dr. John H. Watson, and Archie Duncan as Inspector Lestrade.

The series was filmed in France and produced by Sheldon Reynolds, who also directed most of the episodes; some of the stories were based on Arthur Conan Doyle's works, and others were newly written.

SHE'S THE SHERIFF SYNDICATED

1987–1988 Half-hour sitcom starring Suzanne Somers as Hildy Granger, a widow who took over her late husband's job as sheriff of Lakes County, Nevada. Also on board were George Wyner as Deputy Max Rubin; Pat Carroll as Hildy's mother, Gussie Holt; Nicky Rose as Hildy's daughter, Allison; Taliesin Jaffe as Hildy's son, Kenny; Lou Richards as Deputy Dennis Putnam; Guich Koock (who had played a similar role in Carter County a decade earlier) as Deputy Hugh Mulcahy; and Leonard Lightfoot as Deputy Alvin Wiggins. A pilot for this series was made for CBS in 1983, but was never picked up by the network.

SHIELDS AND YARNELL CBS

13 JUNE 1977–25 JULY 1977; 31 JANUARY 1978–28 MARCH 1978 This half-hour variety series was cohosted by Robert Shields and Lorene Yarnell, a husband-and-wife mime team who had previously worked as street performers in San Francisco. Other regulars included Ted Zeigler and Joanna Cassidy in 1977, and Gailard Sartain and John Bloom in 1978. Shields and Yarnell's best-known sketch was "The Clinkers," an inept bionic couple. Steve Binder was the executive producer and director, Frank Peppiatt and John Aylesworth the producers.

SHINDIG ABC

16 SEPTEMBER 1964–8 JANUARY 1966 West Coast disc jockey Jimmy O'Neill was the host of this prime-time rock-and-roll show, which predated NBC's Hullabaloo by a few months and spawned a host of syndicated competitors. Shindig was probably a cut above the rest, if for no other reason than that it was broadcast live (usually) and the acts actually performed on stage, rather than lip-synching to a recording. Several acts were regularly featured on Shindig, such as Bobby Sherman, The Righteous Brothers (Bill Medley and Bob Hatfield, who weren't brothers at all), The Wellingtons, The Blossoms (featuring Darlene Love and Fanita James), Glen Campbell, and Donna Loren. The composition of the house combo, the Shindogs, changed periodically but included James Burton, Delaney Bramlett, Chuck Blackwell, Joey Cooper, Glen Hardin, Don Preston, and Leon Russell. The Ray Pohlman Band was also featured, as were the Shindigger Dancers, choreographed by Andre Tayir. Several shows were produced in England, including one with the Beatles (telecast 7 October 1964). The lineup on the 1965 fall premiere (16 September) included the Rolling Stones, the Kinks, the Byrds, and the Everly Brothers; the Who made their American TV debut on the show later that year (2 October). Shindig was introduced as a half-hour show in the fall of 1964 and expanded to an hour in January 1965. In the fall of 1965 it was broken into two half hours, scheduled Thursdays and Saturdays, and was bumped in midseason to make room for Batman. Shindig was developed by Jack Good, a British producer who had put together several such shows in England (one of which, Oh, Boy!, was carried briefly by ABC). Leon I. Mirell was the executive producer and Dean Whitmore the producer.

SHINING TIME STATION PBS

1989– Half-hour children's series set at a magical train depot, with Didi Conn as Stacy Jones, the station manager; Brian O'Connor as Schemer; Leonard Jackson as Harry, the engineer; Nicole Leach as Tanya; Jason Woliner as Matt; and Ringo Starr as Mr. Conductor, an eighteen-inch-tall character who appeared and disappeared in a cloud of magic dust. George Carlin succeeded Starr as Mr. Conductor in 1992. The series grew out of a five-minute British kids' show, Thomas the Tank Engine and Friends, first produced in 1982, for which Starr had done the narration. Segments of Thomas were used on the American series.

SHIRLEY NBC

26 OCTOBER 1979–25 JANUARY 1980 Hour comedy-drama about a widow and her children who moved from New York City to Lake Tahoe, starring Shirley Jones as Shirley Miller, with Patrick Wayne as her friend Lew; Peter Barton as Shirley's stepson, Bill; Rosanna Arquette as her daughter Debra; Bret Shryer as her son, Hemm; Tracey Gold as her daughter Michelle; John McIntire as Dutch McHenry, a crusty local character; Ann Doran as Charlotte McHenry, Dutch's ex-wife, the Millers' housekeeper; Cynthia Eilbacher as Tracy, Debra's friend; and Oregano, the family dog.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE'S STORYBOOK NBC/ABC

12 JANUARY 1958–21 DECEMBER 1958 (NBC); 12 JANUARY 1959–21 DECEMBER 1959 (ABC)

SHIRLEY TEMPLE THEATRE NBC

18 SEPTEMBER 1960–10 SEPTEMBER 1961 Shirley Temple, who has appeared rarely on television, served as host, narrator, and occasional star of these children's anthology series. Presentations included: "Beauty and the Beast," with Charlton Heston (12 January 1958); "Rumpelstiltskin," with Kurt Kasznar (2 February 1958); "Rapunzel," with Carol Lynley and Agnes Moorehead (27 October 1958); "Mother Goose," with Elsa Lanchester (21 December 1958); "The Land of Oz," with Shirley Temple (as Princess Ozma) and Jonathan Winters (18 September 1960); "Babes in Toyland," with Jonathan Winters (25 December 1960). Shirley Temple's Storybook, introduced on NBC, was broadcast as a series of specials, usually on Sundays; reruns were shown on ABC in 1959, when the show was seen on occasional Mondays. Shirley Temple Theatre was a weekly series, scheduled on Sundays; William H. Brown, Jr., was its executive producer, and William Asher produced it.

SHIRLEY'S WORLD ABC

15 SEPTEMBER 1971–5 JANUARY 1972 Another example of an unsuccessful TV series featuring a major film star, Shirley's World was an expensive half-hour situation comedy, produced in England (by ITC) and filmed on location around the world. It starred Shirley MacLaine as photojournalist Shirley Logan, on assignment for World Illustrated magazine, and featured John Gregson as her editor, Dennis Croft. Sheldon Leonard was the producer.

SHIRT TALES NBC/CBS

18 SEPTEMBER 1982–8 SEPTEMBER 1984 (NBC); 15 SEPTEMBER 1984–23 MARCH 1985 (CBS) A half-hour Saturday-morning cartoon series from Hanna-Barbera Productions, Shirt Tales was inspired by a popular line of greeting cards which depicted a group of cuddly animals. Five such creatures originally comprised the TV Shirt Tales; Rick (a raccoon), Pammy (a panda), Digger (a mole), Bogey (a monkey), and Tyg (a tiger). A sixth animal (and second female), a kangaroo named Kit, subsequently joined. All of the animals wore shirts on which words from the show's dialogue appeared and lived in a city park. Occasionally assisted by Mr. Dinkle, the park superintendent, the Shirt Tales became involved in assorted adventures.

SHIVAREE SYNDICATED

1965 Gene Weed hosted this half-hour rock-and-roll show, an imitation Shindig or Hullabaloo.

THE SHOCK OF THE NEW PBS

1981 An eight-part look at modern art, hosted by Robert Hughes, art critic for Time magazine. The series was coproduced by the BBC and Time-Life Productions.

SHŌGUN NBC

15 SEPTEMBER 1980–19 SEPTEMBER 1980 James Clavell's epic novel was made into a five-part, twelve-hour miniseries. Set in feudal Japan in the early 1600s, it starred Richard Chamberlain as John Blackthorne, the English pilot of a Dutch ship which was wrecked off the Japanese coast. Toshiro Mifune costarred as Toranaga, a powerful warlord with whom Blackthorne allied, and Yoko Shimada costarred as Lady Mariko, the interpreter with whom Blackthorne fell in love. Also featured were John Rhys-Davies as Rodrigues, a Portuguese emissary; Damien Thomas as Father Alvito, a Portuguese missionary; Frankie Sabai as Yabu; Nobuo Kaneko as Ishido, Toranaga's enemy; and Alan Badel as Dell'Aqua. The series was written for television and produced by Eric Bercovici, and directed by Jerry London. Filmed on location, it made extensive use of Japanese dialogue; when the miniseries was rerun in 1983, additional narration (by Orson Welles) was added to further explicate these passages.

SHOOT FOR THE STARS NBC

3 JANUARY 1977–30 SEPTEMBER 1977 Geoff Edwards hosted this daytime game show, a phrase identification game that was played similarly to The $20,000 Pyramid and featured two celebrity-and-contestant teams. Bob Stewart was the executive producer.

SHORT SHORT DRAMAS NBC

30 SEPTEMBER 1952–9 APRIL 1953 Ruth Woods hosted this fifteen-minute anthology series, seen Tuesday and Thursday evenings at 7:15.

SHOTGUN SLADE SYNDICATED

1959–1960 Scott Brady starred in this half-hour western as Shotgun Slade, who was apparently intended to be a nineteenth-century Peter Gunn. To the accompaniment of a jazz score by Gerald Fried, Slade wandered the west as a detective on horseback. In case of trouble, Slade could rely on his specially designed double-barreled shotgun. The lower barrel fired a 12-gauge shotgun shell, while the upper one discharged a .32 caliber rifle bullet.

THE SHOW PBS

11 JANUARY 1970–12 JULY 1970 Variety series for young people hosted by Bob Walsh (who also produced it) and singer Donal Leace. Each week a studio audience of about twenty-five young people was on hand to talk with the performing guests.

SHOW BUSINESS, INC. NBC

10 MARCH 1949–4 SEPTEMBER 1949 This half-hour variety show was first hosted by New York News columnist Danton Walker; Dick Kollmar took over as emcee in June, and the show was later titled Broadway Scrapbook and Broadway Spotlight.

THE SHOW GOES ON CBS

19 JANUARY 1950–23 FEBRUARY 1952 Robert Q. Lewis hosted this prime-time talent show, on which talent buyers—agents, producers, and stars—dropped by to audition and hire promising young hopefuls. Lester Gottlieb produced the half-hour series, and Alex Leftwich directed it.

SHOW STREET SYNDICATED

1964 Phyllis Diller hosted this half-hour talent show.

SHOW WAGON NBC

8 JANUARY 1955–1 OCTOBER 1955 Officially known as The Swift Show Wagon, this variety show featured Horace Heidt and the American Way and was presented from a different American city each week, utilizing local talent. Jerry Brown produced the half-hour series.

SHOWCASE '68 NBC

11 JUNE 1968–3 SEPTEMBER 1968 Disc jockey Lloyd Thaxton hosted this half-hour variety series that featured new professional talent. Most shows were taped at American colleges and universities, and the ten weekly winners (who included Julie Budd, Andrea Marcovicci, the Chambers Brothers, Sly and the Family Stone, and the American Breed) competed on the finale at the Ohio State Fair in Columbus.

SHOWDOWN NBC

4 JULY 1966–14 OCTOBER 1966 The only interesting feature of this daytime game show, hosted by Joe Pyne, was that it featured breakaway seats, so that contestants who missed a question would fall to the floor. Two three-member teams competed.

SHOWER OF STARS CBS

30 SEPTEMBER 1954–17 APRIL 1958 Shower of Stars, a once-a-month replacement for Climax on Thursdays, was the catchall title for a wide variety of presentations. Most shows were variety spectaculars, such as the 1954 premiere, which featured Betty Grable, Mario Lanza, and bandleader Harry James (Grable's husband), though some dramatic shows were aired, such as Dickens's "A Christmas Carol," with Fredric March (3 December 1954). William Lundigan, who also hosted Climax, was the first master of ceremonies and was succeeded by Jack Benny.

SHOWOFFS ABC

30 JUNE 1975–26 DECEMBER 1975 On this daytime game show from Goodson-Todman Productions, teams consisting of two celebrities and a contestant tried to pantomime words to one another. Larry Blyden was to have hosted the series, but he died just before production; Bobby Van was selected to replace him.

SHOWTIME CBS

11 JUNE 1968–17 SEPTEMBER 1968 Produced in England, this hour-long variety series was hosted by a guest celebrity each week; the show was a summer replacement for The Red Skelton Hour.

SHOWTIME U.S.A. ABC

1 OCTOBER 1950–24 JUNE 1951 Vinton Freedley was the usual host of this half-hour series, on which scenes from current Broadway plays were performed by the cast members.

SiBS ABC

17 SEPTEMBER 1991–30 OCTOBER 1991; 15 APRIL 1992–29 APRIL 1992 Half-hour sitcom about a middle-aged woman whose two single sisters moved in just as she and her husband sent their child off to college. With Marsha Mason as the eldest sister, Nora Ruscio; Margaret Colin as middle sister Audie, a recovering alcoholic and realtor; Jami Gertz as youngest sister Lily; Alex Rocco as Nora's husband, Howie, an eighth grade teacher; and Dan Castellaneta as Warren Morris, Nora's boss at the business management firm of Morris & Morris. Heide Perlman created the series.

SID CAESAR INVITES YOU ABC

26 JANUARY 1958–25 MAY 1958 This half-hour comedy show briefly reunited Sid Caesar and Imogene Coca, who had worked together on Your Show of Shows. Paul Reed, Milt Kamen, Carl Reiner, and Howard Morris were also on hand, but the Sunday-night show failed to catch on.

SID CAESAR PRESENTS NBC

4 JULY 1955–12 SEPTEMBER 1955 A summer replacement for Caesar's Hour, this hour-long variety show was produced by Sid Caesar and directed by Carl Reiner. Among the regulars were Sid Gould, Barbara Nichols, Sandra Deel, Phil Foster, Bill Hayes, and Cliff Norton.

THE SID CAESAR SHOW ABC

19 SEPTEMBER 1963–12 MARCH 1964 The last of the several comedy-variety shows hosted by Sid Caesar, this series was a half-hour program that alternated biweekly with Here's Edie. Other regulars included Gisele MacKenzie, Joey Forman, and Charlotte Rae. See also Caesar's Hour; Sid Caesar Invites You; and Your Show of Shows.

SIDEKICKS ABC

19 SEPTEMBER 1986–14 MARCH 1987; 6 JUNE 1987–27 JUNE 1987 Sidekicks was a rarity in late-80s prime-time TV: a half-hour dramatic series. It was derived from "The Last Electric Knight," a 1986 presentation on The Disney Sunday Movie. The series starred Gil Gerard as Sergeant Jake Rizzo, bachelor cop; Ernie Reyes, Jr., as Ernie Lee, an Asian youngster and martial arts expert. Ernie and his dying grandfather had recently arrived from Patasan, and his grandfather's last mission was to find a suitable guardian for Ernie; reluctantly, Rizzo agreed to the idea. Also featured were Keye Luke as the grandfather, Sabasan, who appeared in flashbacks (a technique used in the 1970s martial arts series Kung Fu, also featuring Luke); Nancy Stafford as social worker Patricia Blake; Frank Bonner as Detective R. T. Mooney, a colleague of Rizzo's; and Vinny Argiro as Captain Blanks. In real life, Ernie Reyes, Jr., was a martial arts expert; his younger brother Lee Reyes sometimes appeared in the flashback sequences as young Ernie.

SIERRA NBC

12 SEPTEMBER 1974–12 DECEMBER 1974 This hour-long adventure series from Jack Webb's Mark VII, Ltd., was set at Sierra National Park and told the story of a dedicated group of park rangers; like the members of the Emergency! team, they seemed to spend most of their time rescuing people. Featured were James C. Richardson as Tim Cassidy; Ernest Thompson as Matt Harper; Susan Foster as Julie Beck; Mike Warren as P. J. Lewis; and Jack Hogan as Jack Moore, the chief ranger. Scheduled on Thursdays, Sierra proved to be no match for CBS's The Waltons and was gone in thirteen weeks. Robert A. Cinader was the executive producer, Bruce Johnson the producer.

SIGHTINGS FOX/SYNDICATED

17 APRIL 1992–23 JULY 1993 (FOX); 1994– (SYNDICATED) One of several "documentary" series about paranormal subjects (ghosts, alien encounters, near-death experiences), this one was hosted by Tim White. After a moderately successful run on the Fox network, it was offered in first-run weekly syndication in 1994.

SIGHTSEEING WITH THE SWAYZES

See VACATIONLAND AMERICA

SIGMUND AND THE SEA MONSTERS NBC

8 SEPTEMBER 1973–18 OCTOBER 1975 On this live-action Saturday-morning series two brothers took in a refugee sea monster (Sigmund) and helped him elude the other members of his monstrous family. With Billy Barty as Sigmund Ooz; Johnny Whitaker as Johnny Stuart; Scott Kolden as Scott Stuart; Mary Wickes as Zelda, the Stuart family's housekeeper; Rip Taylor as Sheldon the Sea Genie; Fran Ryan as Gertrude; and Sparky Marcus as Shelby. Si Rose was the executive producer for Sid and Marty Krofft Productions.

THE SILENT FORCE ABC

21 SEPTEMBER 1970–11 JANUARY 1971 Bruce Geller was the executive producer of this half-hour crime show about a trio of federal undercover agents. With Ed Nelson as Ward Fuller; Lynda Day (later known as Lynda Day George after her marriage to Chris George) as Amelia Cole; and Percy Rodriguez as Jason Hart.

THE SILENT SERVICE SYNDICATED

1957 This half-hour anthology series about submarine warfare was hosted by Rear Admiral (Ret.) Thomas M. Dykers.

SILENTS PLEASE ABC/SYNDICATED

4 AUGUST 1960–5 OCTOBER 1961 (ABC); 1962 (SYNDICATED) Host Ernie Kovacs introduced clips from vintage silent movies on this half-hour documentary series.

THE SILK ROAD SYNDICATED
1991 42-part documentary series on the history of China.

SILK STALKINGS CBS/USA
7 NOVEMBER 1991–4 NOVEMBER 1993 (CBS); 10 NOVEMBER 1991– (USA) Jointly financed by a broadcast and a cable network, Silk Stalkings premiered as part of CBS's late-night umbrella, Crime Time After Prime Time. Each episode was rerun on the USA cable network, in prime time, a few days later. The hour series was set in Palm Beach, Florida, and starred Rob Estes and Mitzi Kapture as homicide detectives Chris Lorenzo and Rita Lee Lance, whose cases often involved sex crimes among the wealthy; Ben Vereen costarred as the boss, Captain Hutch Hutchinson. Rita also served as the series narrator; she had a brain aneurysm, but declined to undergo surgery for it because of the dangers posed by such an operation. The long-simmering romantic relationship between Chris and Rita matured into marriage in the fall of 1995, following which Chris departed (Rob Estes had long planned to leave the series, and Mitzi Kapture had also announced her intention to quit). Two new cast members were introduced: Nick Kokotakis as Detective Michael Price and Tyler Layton as Detective Holly Rawlins.

SILVER SPOONS NBC/SYNDICATED
25 SEPTEMBER 1982–7 SEPTEMBER 1986 (NBC); 1986–1987 (SYNDICATED) Half-hour sitcom about wealthy, but immature, divorcée whose son came to live with him. With Joel Higgins as Edward Stratton III, a tycoon who spent most of his time playing with his toys; Ricky Schroder as his sensible son, Ricky, who left military school to live with his father, and helped the elder Stratton to grow up; Erin Gray as Edward's secretary, Kate Summers, who married him in February 1985; Leonard Lightfoot (1982–1983) as Edward's lawyer, Leonard Rollins; Franklyn Seales (1983–1987) as Edward's business manager, Dexter Stuffins; Alfonso Ribeiro (1984–1987) as Dexter's nephew, Alfonso Speers, who was adopted by Dexter and became Ricky's best friend; Jason Bateman (1982–1984) as Ricky's conniving pal, Derek Taylor; and Corky Pigeon (1983–1985) as Ricky's nerdy pal, Freddy Lippincottleman. Ray Walston appeared during the 1985–1986 season as Kate's uncle, Harry Summers. John Houseman also appeared from time to time as Edward's imperious father, Edward Stratton II. The series lasted four years on NBC, after which another twenty-two episodes were made for first-run syndication.

THE SILVER SWAN CAFE
See THE MOREY AMSTERDAM SHOW

SILVER THEATER CBS
3 OCTOBER 1949–10 JULY 1950 This dramatic anthology series, sponsored by the International Silver Company, began on radio in 1938; Conrad Nagel hosted the half-hour television version, which ran on Monday nights. Representative presentations included: "Farewell Supper," with Charles Korvin (31 October); "The First Show of 1950," with George Reeves (2 January); "My Brother's Keeper," with Ward Bond and Glenn Corbett (20 February); "Minor Incident," with Nancy Kelly (10 April); "Papa Romani," with William Frawley, Margaret Hamilton, and Chico Marx (15 May); and "My Heart's in the Highlands," with Howard Da Silva (12 June). Although most presentations were live, several were filmed using the "Multicam" process, by which the action was filmed by three motion picture cameras. A similar technique was later used on I Love Lucy.

SIMON WB
10 SEPTEMBER 1995– Half-hour sitcom about a pair of white brothers who found a cheap apartment in Harlem. With Harland Williams as Simon Himple, a Forrest Gump-type who stumbled into a job at a cable TV network; Jason Bateman as his brother, Carl Himple, an MBA who had trouble finding work; Paxton Whitehead as Duke Stone, owner of Vintage Television, the rerun network where Simon was hired; Patrick Breen as Duke's nephew, Mitch Lowin, who battled Simon at the office; Andrea Bendewald as Libby, another Vintage exec; and Clifton Powell as the Himples' ex-con neighbor, John Doe.

SIMON & SIMON CBS

24 November 1981–8 September 1987; 3 December 1987–11 August 1988; 8 October 1988–31 December 1988 This hour crime show starred Jameson Parker and Gerald McRaney as brothers A. J. and Rick Simon, a pair of none-too-prosperous private eyes; A. J. was a suave college man, while Rick was a laid-back Vietnam veteran. The genesis of the series was a 1980 made-for-TV movie "Pirate's Key," which had been filmed in Florida. By the time a series had been ordered, the locale had shifted to San Diego. Also featured were Eddie Barth (1981–1983) as Myron Fowler, owner of the rival Peerless Detective Agency; Jeannie Wilson (1981–1983) as Myron's daughter, Janet Fowler, who worked for her father during the first season, and was an assistant district attorney the second; Mary Carver as Cecilia Simon, A. J. and Rick's mother; and Tim Reid (1983–1987) as Downtown Brown, an undercover cop. Joan McMurtrey joined the cast in the fall of 1987 as Lieutenant Abby Marsh. Simon & Simon performed marginally but unspectacularly during its first season; in 1982 it changed producers and theme music (an instrumental theme by Barry DeVorzon replaced the country-flavored "Best of Friends," sung by the Thrasher Brothers), and zoomed into Nielsen's top ten on Thursday nights, following Magnum, P.I. The series was virtually indestructible during the 1980s. Canceled at the end of the 1986–1987 season, it remained in production as a backup series and returned in December 1987. Another batch of episodes popped up in the fall of 1988. The characters returned in a TV-movie, "Simon & Simon: In Trouble Again" (23 February 1995, CBS).

THE SIMPSONS FOX

14 January 1990– A prime-time cartoon show, The Simpsons was Fox's top-rated series of the 1989–1990 season, ranking 30th among all prime-time programs. The series quickly became a cult favorite. The Simpsons was created by Matt Groening, who had achieved fame for his "Life in Hell" comic strip. Groening's TV family—father Homer, who worked at a nuclear power plant; blue-haired mother Marge; proud underachiever Bart, a fourth-grader; brainy goody two-shoes Lisa, a second-grader; and pacifier-sucking baby Maggie—originally appeared as a brief but regular feature of The Tracey Ullman Show. A thirty-minute Simpsons holiday special was telecast 23 December 1989. Voices: Nancy Cartwright (Bart), Dan Castellaneta (Homer), Julie Kavner (Marge), Yeardley Smith (Lisa), and Harry Shearer (others). It is probably not coincidental that Groening's own parents were named Homer and Margaret, and that his two sisters were named Lisa and Maggie. Among the many celebrities who lent their voices to the show were Michael Jackson (as a mental patient who thought he was Michael Jackson), Elizabeth Taylor (who uttered baby Maggie's first word, "Dad-dee"), Bob Hope, Dustin Hoffman, Ringo Starr, Kathleen Turner, Michelle Pfeiffer, and Johnny Carson.

Consistently well written, The Simpsons examined "family values" in its own unique way, against a backdrop of cynicism and greed in their hometown of Springfield. More importantly, it was the first TV cartoon series since The Flintstones (which premiered a generation earlier) to appeal successfully to an adult audience. It opened the door for subsequent animated series such as The Ren and Stimpy Show and Beavis and Butt-head.

THE SINBAD SHOW FOX

16 September 1993–28 July 1994 Standup comic Sinbad, who had previously appeared on A Different World, was given his own half-hour sitcom in 1993. Sinbad (whose real name was David Adkins) played David Brian, owner of a computer graphics company whose life changed when he took in two foster children. Also featured were Erin Davis and Willie Norwood as two kids, Zana and Little John (L.J.) Beckley; T. K. Carter as David's pal Clarence, who worked at a clothing store; Salma Hayek as Gloria, the daughter of David's landlady; and Hal Williams as David's father, Rudy Brian.

SING ALONG CBS

4 JUNE 1958–9 JULY 1958 This short-lived half-hour musical series predated Sing Along with Mitch by some three years. As on Sing Along with Mitch, the lyrics to the songs performed on stage were shown at the bottom of viewers' home screens so that everyone could sing along. Jim Lowe hosted the series and featured vocalists included Tina Robin, Florence Henderson, and Somethin' Smith and the Redheads.

SING ALONG WITH MITCH NBC

27 JANUARY 1961–21 APRIL 1961; 28 SEPTEMBER 1961–21 SEPTEMBER 1964 Home viewers were able to participate in this hour-long musical series, as the lyrics to the songs were superimposed at the bottom of their screens; viewers were invited to "follow the bouncing ball" as it moved from one lyric to the next. Goateed composer-arranger Mitch Miller led the Sing-Along Gang, an on-stage aggregation of about two dozen. Among the featured vocalists were Leslie Uggams, Diana Trask, Barbara McNair, and Gloria Lambert. Sing Along with Mitch was introduced on Ford Startime in 1960 and had a limited run in the spring of 1961, alternating with The Bell Telephone Hour, before going weekly in the fall of that year. Reruns were exhumed in the spring of 1966 to replace the faltering Sammy Davis, Jr. Show. Bill Hobin produced and directed the series.

SING IT AGAIN CBS

7 OCTOBER 1950–23 JUNE 1951 Sing It Again ran on CBS radio for two years before coming to television. The Saturday-night game show featured contestants from the studio audience who tried to identify songs from a few notes; phone calls were also placed to home viewers, who were given the chance to identify a "mystery voice." Dan Seymour hosted the hour show until February, when Jan Murray took over.

SING-CO-PATION ABC

23 JANUARY 1949–30 OCTOBER 1949 Fifteen-minute musical-variety program, broadcast on Sunday night from Chicago. Subsequently titled Serenade, the show was hosted first by Dolores Marshall, later by Joanelle James.

SINGER & SONS NBC

9 JUNE 1990–27 JUNE 1990 Half-hour sitcom about a widowed New York deli owner with no sons of his own who decided to turn the business over to the sons of his black housekeeper. With Harold Gould as Nathan Singer; Esther Rolle as his long-time housekeeper, Mrs. Patterson; Bobby Hosea as her elder son, Mitchell, who was college educated and divorced; Tommy Ford as her younger son, Reggie, who was streetwise; Fred Stoller as Nathan's meek nephew, Sheldon, who worked at the deli; Arnetia Walker as Claudia, the black waitress at the deli; Phil Leeds as Lou Gold, a regular patron; and Brooke Fontaine as Deanna, Mitchell's young daughter. Michael Jacobs and Bob Young created the series.

THE SINGING LADY ABC

12 AUGUST 1948–6 AUGUST 1950; 27 SEPTEMBER 1953–21 MARCH 1954 "The Singing Lady" was Ireene Wicker, who began this children's series on radio in 1931; the Suzarri Marionettes were also featured. The 1948–1950 series was seen Sunday evenings; the 1953–1954 series, titled Ireene Wicker Storytime, was seen Sunday mornings.

THE SINGLE GUY NBC

21 SEPTEMBER 1995– Half-hour sitcom about a single guy (what else?) and his four married pals. With Jonathan Silverman as title character Jonathan Eliot, a novelist; Jessica Hecht as Janeane Percy-Parker; Mark Moses as Janeane's husband, Matt Parker; Joey Slotnick as Jonathan's best friend, Sam Sloane, who worked at a recording studio; Ming-Na Wen as Sam's wife, Trudy; and Ernest Borgnine as Manny, the doorman of Jonathan's New York apartment building.

SIR FRANCIS DRAKE NBC

24 JUNE 1962–9 SEPTEMBER 1962 Produced in Great Britain, this half-hour adventure series starred Terence Morgan as Sir Francis Drake, commander of The Golden Hind. Also featured were Milton Reid as Diego; Roger Delgado as Mendoza, the Spanish ambassador; Peter Diamond as Bosun; Patrick McLoughlin as Richard Trevelyan; Howard Lang as Grenville; Michael Crawford as John Drake; and Jean Kent as Queen Elizabeth I.

SIR LANCELOT NBC

24 SEPTEMBER 1956–24 JUNE 1957 This British import followed Robin Hood one season later. Featured were William Russell as Sir Lancelot; Ronald Leigh-Hunt as King Arthur; Jane Hylton as Queen Guinevere; Cyril Smith as Merlin; and Bobby Scroggins as Brian the Squire. Scheduled opposite The Burns and Allen Show and The Danny Thomas Show, the half-hour swashbuckler was dropped after one season. Dallas Bower produced the series.

SIRENS ABC/SYNDICATED

10 MARCH 1993–28 APRIL 1993; 12 JUNE 1993–18 AUGUST 1993 (ABC); 1994–1995 (SYNDICATED) Hour crime show focusing on three new female members of the Pittsburgh Police Department. The ABC version featured Adrienne-Joi Johnson as Officer Lynn Stanton, recently divorced; Liza Snyder as Officer Molly Whelan, daughter of a police commander; Jayne Brook as Officer Sarah Berkezchuk, a former teacher's aide; Deirdre O'Connell as Heidi Schiller, Molly's partner; Tim Thomerson as Buddy Zunder, Lynn's partner; John Terlesky as Dan Kelly, Sarah's partner; John Speredakos as Sarah's husband, Cary; and Jesse Goins as the desk sergeant. In 1994 new episodes were produced for first-run syndication. Johnson, Snyder, and Thomerson remained from the network cast, and were joined by Jayne Heitmeyer as Officer Jessie Jaworski; Ellen Cohen as Amy Shapiro, Molly's new partner; D. Christopher Judge as Richie Styles, Jessie's partner; and Joel Wyner as Detective Springer. Ann Lewis Hamilton created the series.

SIROTA'S COURT NBC

1 DECEMBER 1976–20 APRIL 1977 This half-hour sitcom came and went almost unnoticed, as it was scheduled irregularly during the middle of the 1976–1977 season. Featured were Michael Constantine as Judge Matthew J. Sirota, magistrate of a big city night court; Cynthia Harris as Maureen O'Connor, the court clerk; Kathleen Miller as public defender Gail Goodman; Ted Ross as defense attorney Sawyer Dabney; Fred Willard as assistant district attorney H. R. Nugent; and Owen Bush as John Belson, the bailiff. Harvey Miller and Peter Engel were the producers.

SISKEL & EBERT SYNDICATED

1986– Originally titled Siskel & Ebert & the Movies, this was the third series of film reviews cohosted by Chicago film critics Roger Ebert and Gene Siskel. See also Sneak Previews and At the Movies. On 21 May 1990 the two critics hosted their first network prime-time special on CBS.

SISTER KATE NBC

16 SEPTEMBER 1989–21 JANUARY 1990; 16 JULY 1990–1 SEPTEMBER 1990 Stephanie Beacham, late of The Colbys, had the title role in this insipid sitcom about a nun who was dispatched to Redemption House, a big-city orphanage, where she was put in charge of seven delightfully delinquent youngsters. Appearing as her charges were Harley Cross as eleven-year-old Eugene Colodner; Erin Reed as teenager April Newberry; Jason Priestley as teenager Todd Mahaffey; Penina Segall as twelve-year-old Hilary Logan; Hannah Cutrona as teenager Fredddy Marasco; Joel Robinson as seven-year-old Neville Williams; and Alexaundria Simmons as nine-year-old Violet Johnson.

SISTER, SISTER ABC/WB

1 APRIL 1994–20 MAY 1994; 28 JUNE 1994–6 SEPTEMBER 1994; 16 NOVEMBER 1994–28 APRIL 1995 (ABC); 2 AUGUST 1995– (WB) Set in Detroit, this sitcom told the story of twin sisters who had been adopted by separate families at birth; as ninth graders they were accidentally reunited and tried to get their now-single parents to get together. With real-life twins Tia Mowry and Tamera Mowry as Tia Landry and Tamera Campbell; Tim Reid as Tamera's adoptive father, Ray Campbell, a level-headed man who owned a limosine service; Jackée Harry as Tia's adoptive mother, the impulsive Lisa Landry; and Marques Houston as Roger, Tamera's neighbor, who had a crush on her.

SISTERS NBC

11 MAY 1991–4 MAY 1996 Hour dramatic series about the lives of four sisters who were reunited in their hometown (Winnetka, Illinois) following the death of their father. Introduced in the spring of 1991 for a seven-episode test run, the series was renewed and performed surprisingly well over the next several seasons in a 10 P.M. time slot on Saturday nights. The very first scene of the premiere episode, with the four siblings sitting in a steam room discussing orgasms, was not televised by NBC (it was included in the off-network rerun package, however). The series deftly blended serious topics such as cancer, career changes, and crime with lighter ones, such as an attempt to make a TV-movie about the characters. It also incorporated fantasy sequences in which the adult sisters meet with their childhood selves. The large cast has included: Swoosie Kurtz as eldest sister Alex Halsey, who was married to a physician as the show began; Patricia Kalember as sister Georgie Whitsig; Sela Ward as sister Teddy Reed; Julianne Phillips (1991–February 1995) as youngest sister Frankie Reed; Elizabeth Hoffman as their mother, Beatrice Reed; David Dukes as Alex's husband, Wade Halsey (they divorced in 1991, although the character appeared in subsequent episodes); Kathy Wagner (spring 1991), Ashley Judd (fall 1991–1995), and Noelle Parker (1995–1996) as their daughter, Reed; Garrett M. Brown as Georgie's husband, John Whitsig (he filed for divorce in 1995); Dustin Berkovitz as their son Evan; Ryan Francis as their son Trevor; Ed Marinaro (1991–1994) as Mitch Margolis, who had been married to Teddy, and later married (and separated from) Frankie; Heather McAdam as Cat Margolis, daughter of Teddy and Mitch; Philip Sterling (1991–1995) as Judge Truman Ventnor, who married Beatrice in the fall of 1992 (later stricken with Alzheimer's disease, Truman asked Alex to assist him in dying); David Gianopoulos (1991–1992) as Victor; Mary Donnelly (1991–1992) as Fern Neuswanger; Paul Rudd (1992–1996) as Kirby, Reed's boyfriend; Mark Frankel (1992–1994) as Simon; George Clooney (1993–1994) as Detective James Falconer, who married Teddy and was murdered; Nora Dunn (1993–1996) as Norma Lear, a gay TV producer who convinced Alex to host a talk show; Robert Klein (1993–1996) as Big Al Barker, a discount store magnate who married Alex, was sent to prison, and became mayor; Jo Anderson (spring 1994–1995) and Sheila Kelley (1995–1996) as Dr. Charley Bennett, who turned out to be the sisters' half-sister (their late father had had an affair years earlier); John Wesley Shipp (1994–1996) as boxer Lucky Williams, who helped Teddy search for Falconer's killer; Daniel Gerroll (1994–1996) as therapist Dr. David Caspian, who seduced Georgie (Gerroll was the husband of Patricia Kalember in real life); Gregory Harrison (1994–1996) as Daniel Albright; and Stephen Collins as Dr. Gabriel Sorenson.

SIT OR MISS ABC

6 AUGUST 1950–29 OCTOBER 1950 Half-hour game show on which five contestants played a form of musical chairs, with quizzes and stunts thrown in as well. Kay Westfall and George Sotos cohosted the series, which offered a top prize of $75.

THE SIX MILLION DOLLAR MAN ABC

20 OCTOBER 1973–6 MARCH 1978 The Six Million Dollar Man was introduced as a monthly feature on The ABC Suspense Movie before becoming a weekly series in January of 1974. It starred Lee Majors as Steve Austin, an American astronaut who was severely injured in a training mishap and who was rebuilt (at a cost of $6 million) by the Office of Strategic Information, a government agency. Equipped with two bionic legs, a bionic arm, and a bionic eye, Austin was far stronger than any mere mortal and was employed by the O.S.I. to undertake an assortment of delicate missions. Also featured were Richard Anderson as Oscar Goldman, an O.S.I. topsider; Alan Oppenheimer and Martin E. Brooks as Dr. Rudy Wells, an O.S.I. physician. The series was very popular with younger viewers, and a spinoff was introduced in January of 1976; see The Bionic Woman. The pilot for The Six Million Dollar Man was telecast 7 March 1973, and was based on Cyborg, a novel by Martin Caidin. Harve Bennett was executive producer of the series for Harve Bennett Productions in association with Universal Television. Lee Majors and Lindsay Wagner were reunited in several made-for-TV sequels: "The Return of the Six Million Dollar Man and the Bionic Woman" (17 May 1987, NBC), which also featured Richard Anderson, "Bionic Showdown: The Six Million Dollar Man and the Bionic Woman" (30 April 1989, NBC), with Anderson and Martin E. Brooks, and "Bionic Ever After?" (29 November 1994, CBS), also with Anderson and Brooks.

SIX O'CLOCK FOLLIES NBC

24 APRIL 1980–26 APRIL 1980; 2 AUGUST 1980–13 SEPTEMBER 1980 The Vietnam War was the unlikely setting for this half-hour sitcom, five episodes of which were sporadically televised by NBC. Featured were A. C. Weary as Specialist Sam Page and Larry Fishburne as Corporal Don "Robby" Robinson, two former Chicago newscasters who were reunited in Saigon, where they were assigned to the Army news broadcast, nicknamed "The Six O'Clock Follies." Also on board were Philip Charles MacKenzie as Midas Metkovich, proprietor of a Saigon bar where the crew hung out; Randall Carver as stick-in-the-mud Lieutenant Beuhler; David Hubbard as Specialist Percy Wiggins; Aarika Wells as Candi, the weather forecaster; Joby Baker as Colonel Marvin; and George Kee Cheung as Ho, a civilian employee. Although the success of *M*A*S*H* had demonstrated that audiences could appreciate an antiwar comedy, the memory of the Vietnam debacle was too fresh for a comedy set there to have even a chance to succeed.

THE SIX WIVES OF HENRY VIII CBS

1 AUGUST 1971–5 SEPTEMBER 1971 CBS imported this six-part historical miniseries from England. Each of the six 90-minute stories centered on one of King Henry's marriages. Keith Michell starred as Henry VIII. His wives were played by: Annette Crosbie as Catherine of Aragon, whom Henry divorced; Dorothy Tutin as Anne Boleyn, who was beheaded; Anne Stallybrass as Jane Seymour, who died after giving birth to Henry's long awaited male heir; Elvi Hale as Anne of Cleves, whom Henry divorced; Angela Pleasence as Catherine Howard, who was also beheaded; and Rosalie Crutchley as Catherine Parr, who survived Henry. Anthony Quayle narrated the series when it was telecast on CBS; the show was rerun on PBS's Masterpiece Theatre in 1972.

THE SIXTH SENSE ABC

15 JANUARY 1972–30 DECEMBER 1972 This hour-long dramatic series purported to examine the occult and the supernatural. It starred Gary Collins as Dr. Michael Rhodes, a trained parapsychologist, researcher, and college instructor; also featured was Catherine Ferrar as his assistant, Nancy Murphy. Stan Shpetner was the producer.

60 MINUTES CBS

24 SEPTEMBER 1968– An hour newsmagazine with a strong emphasis on investigative reporting, 60 Minutes began in 1968 as a biweekly show, alternating on Tuesdays with CBS Reports. In the fall of 1971 it shifted to Sunday evenings but was often preempted by professional football games and was later seen only during the winter and spring. In the fall of 1975 it finally became a weekly series, and its ratings have steadily improved to the point where 60 Minutes is the highest-rated public affairs program in television history. A typical show consists of two or three features, each separately produced but put together under the careful supervision of executive producer Don Hewitt. From 1968 until 1970 the show was cohosted by veteran CBS newsmen Mike Wallace and Harry Reasoner; when Reasoner left CBS for ABC, he was replaced by Morley Safer, a Canadian-born CBS correspondent who had been its bureau chief in Saigon and in London. In the fall of 1975 Dan Rather, who had been the network's White House correspondent, joined Wallace and Safer. Another regular feature of 60 Minutes was "Point/Counterpoint," a segment on which liberal and conservative viewpoints on topical issues were vocally, if not intensively, exchanged; conservative columnist James J. Kilpatrick originally did battle with liberal Nicholas von Hoffman and jousted with Shana Alexander until 1979, when the feature was dropped. Among the best-known stories covered by 60 Minutes were those concerning ITT lobbyist Dita Beard, Howard Hughes's supposed biographer Clifford Irving, and Colonel Anthony Herbert, whose claims that certain Vietnam war atrocities had been covered up were disputed by other officers. Herbert's libel suit went all the way to the Supreme Court, which ruled in 1979 that Herbert was entitled to question 60 Minutes' producers as to their state of mind and motives in presenting the story. Mike Wallace also did two one-hour interviews with former Nixon aide H. R. Haldeman (these were technically broadcast as specials, but were scheduled in 60 Minutes' time slot); Wallace and his producers were criticized when it was learned that Haldeman had been paid (some estimates ranged as high as $100,000) for the appearances. In the fall of 1978, Harry Reasoner returned to CBS News and rejoined 60 Minutes; a new regular feature, "A Few Minutes with Andy Rooney," was also added. Dan Rather left the show in 1981, when he was named to succeed Walter Cronkite as host of The CBS Evening News. Ed Bradley took Rather's place on 60 Minutes. Diane Sawyer became a regular correspondent in the fall of 1984.

In the 1979–1980 season 60 Minutes was the highest-rated prime-time series, the first public affairs program ever to top the ratings. After running second to Dallas for the next two seasons, it again topped the Nielsens during the 1982–1983 season, and remained in Nielsen's top ten for the remainder of the decade. 60 Minutes celebrated its twentieth anniversary with a two-part retrospective on 10 and 17 October 1988. In the fall of 1989 Diane Sawyer moved to ABC to cohost her own prime-time news magazine series, PrimeTime Live. She was replaced by Meredith Vieira and Steve Kroft, both of whom had previously worked on CBS's trendier magazine series, West 57th. Andy Rooney was briefly suspended from the broadcast in 1990 as a result of his remarks during a December 1989 CBS News special citing (among other things) "homosexual unions" as a cause of "self-induced" death among Americans. Though his suspension was to have been for three months, it was lifted after just three weeks; perhaps it was only coincidental that 60 Minutes' ratings had slipped during that three-week period.

THE $64,000 CHALLENGE CBS

8 APRIL 1956–14 SEPTEMBER 1958 The first TV game show spun off from another TV game show, The $64,000 Challenge offered alumni of The $64,000 Question the chance to win even more money; contestants who had won at least $8,000 on Question were eligible to compete on Challenge, where they faced two challengers in their chosen field of knowledge. Big winners included Myrt Power, Leonard Ross, Dr. Joyce Brothers, Billy Pearson, Gino Prato, Teddy Nadler, and Michael Della-Rocca. Sonny Fox was the first host of Challenge, but he was abruptly replaced by Ralph Story in September of 1956. Among the young women who escorted the contestants on and off stage (such assistants were known as "elbow grabbers") were Doris Wiss, Lisa Laughlin, and Pat Donovan. Along with most of television's big money prime-time game shows, The $64,000 Challenge was canceled in September of 1958 as the heat of the game show scandals intensified; the show had been scheduled to shift to NBC beginning 18 September 1958, but it never reached the air.

THE $64,000 QUESTION CBS

7 JUNE 1955–9 NOVEMBER 1958 The first of prime-time television's big money game shows, The $64,000 Question premiered in the summer of 1955 and became an instant hit; three years later it passed away unceremoniously amidst the quiz show scandals of 1958. The object of the game was for contestants, each of whom was an expert in a particular field of knowledge, to double their money each time they answered a question correctly; the questions, of course, became increasingly harder as the stakes grew larger, and an incorrect answer at any point ended the game. The first question was worth a dollar, and the stakes doubled up to the tenth question, worth $512. The next question was worth an even $1,000, and the stakes again began to double progressively. To heighten the suspense at the higher levels, players were placed in isolation booths onstage for the question-and-answer sessions, and, if they answered correctly, returned the following week to compete at the next level (a player could always elect to stop after any level, but few of them chose to do so). Thus, on any given show, some contestants would be starting out at the lowest levels while others were announcing their decisions to return the following week to try for more big money. A player who chose to try for the $64,000 question was permitted to bring an expert along, but if neither the player nor the expert answered the question correctly, the player left the show with $4,000. Hal March was the host of the series and was assisted by Lynn Dollar, who escorted the contestants into the isolation booth (Pat Donovan succeeded her in 1958). Dr. Bergen Evans compiled the questions and served as the judge. The first $64,000 winner was a captain in the Marines, Richard S. McCutchen; his area of expertise was gastronomy. Dr. Joyce Brothers, a psychologist who later hosted several TV shows of her own, was the second big winner; her category was boxing. Actress Barbara Feldon, later seen on Get Smart, won the top prize for her knowledge of Shakespeare, and dancer-choreographer Geoffrey Holder won $16,000 on the show. Other well-known winners included ten-year-old Rob Strom (science), Myrt Power (baseball), Dr. Alexander Sas-Jaworsky (history), jockey Billy Pearson (art), Gloria Lockerman (spelling), Gino Prato (opera), police officer Redmond O'Hanlon (Shakespeare), and Teddy Nadler, one of the biggest money winners in television history; after his appearances on The $64,000 Question's sister show, The $64,000 Challenge (see also that title), Nadler had won $264,000. As a gag, Jack Benny once appeared on the show but elected to quit after winning the first dollar. The $64,000 Question was packaged by Louis G. Cowan, who sold out his interest in the show shortly after it began and later became a CBS executive; Revlon sponsored the series, and Steve Carlin produced it. Though no specific allegations against The $64,000 Question were ever substantiated during the game show investigations of 1958 and 1959, the series was dropped along with almost all other prime-time game shows. In 1976 a syndicated version, adjusted for inflation, reappeared: see The $128,000 Question.

SKAG NBC

6 JANUARY 1980–21 FEBRUARY 1980 Hour family drama starring Karl Malden as Pete "Skag" Skagska, a foreman at a Pittsburgh steel mill. With Piper Laurie as wife Jo; Craig Wasson as son David; Peter Gallagher as son John; Leslie Ackerman as daughter Barbara; and Kitty Holcomb as daughter Patricia. Abby Mann created the series.

THE SKATEBIRDS CBS

10 SEPTEMBER 1977–21 JANUARY 1978 Three skateboarding birds (played by actors) were the hosts of this Saturday-morning hour. The Skatebirds introduced three cartoon segments ("The Robonic Stooges," "Wonder Wheels," and "Woofer and Wimper") and a live-action segment ("Mystery Island"). Trimmed to a half hour in midseason, the series continued under the title The Three Robonic Stooges. The Skatebirds was rerun on CBS's Sunday-morning cartoon schedule between September 1979 and January 1981.

SKELETON WARRIORS CBS

1 October 1994–2 September 1995 Good battled evil on this half-hour Saturday-morning cartoon series. The kingdom of Luminicity was threatened by the evil Baron Dark, who had acquired half of a magic crystal and had assembled his Skeleton Warriors. They were opposed by three siblings—Prince Justin, Prince Joshua, and Princess Jennifer—who were transformed into Prince Lightstar, Grimskull, and Talon, respectively. The trio was assisted by their wise uncle, Guardian.

THE SKIP FARRELL SHOW ABC

17 January 1949–28 August 1949 Half-hour variety series hosted by Skip Farrell and featuring Joanelle James.

SKIPPY SYNDICATED

1969 A kangaroo named Skippy was the marsupial star of this Australian import; Skippy, wounded and apparently orphaned, had been taken in by a park ranger and his two sons. The human roles were played by Ed Deveraux as Matt Hammond; Garry Pankhurst as Sonny; Ken James as Mark; and Liza Goddard as Clancy, a young woman who boarded with the Goddards. Officially titled Skippy the Bush Kangaroo, the half hour series was filmed on location in Australia's Waratah National Park and was sponsored in this country by Kellogg cereals.

SKY HAWKS ABC

6 September 1969–4 September 1971 Saturday-morning cartoon series about the members of the Wilson family, who ran Sky Hawks, Incorporated, an all-purpose air service.

SKY KING NBC/ABC

16 September 1951–26 October 1952 (NBC); 8 November 1952–12 September 1954 (ABC) Kirby Grant starred in this half-hour adventure series for children as Schuyler J. (Sky) King, the airborne owner of the Flying Crown Ranch; King used his plane, The Songbird, not only to patrol his spread but also to rescue the trapped and to capture fugitives. Also featured were Gloria Winters as Penny, King's niece; Ron Hagerthy as Clipper, King's nephew; Ewing Mitchell as Mitch, the local sheriff; Norman Ollstead as Bob Carey; and Gary Hunley as Mickey. The series began on radio in 1947, and the TV version was rerun on CBS after its initial run on NBC and ABC. It was supplied by Jack Chertok Productions.

THE SKY'S THE LIMIT NBC

1 November 1954–1 June 1956 A daytime game show, The Sky's the Limit was hosted first by Gene Rayburn and later by Monty Hall; Hope Lange and Marilyn Cantor were on hand as assistants. The show, which involved both stunts and quizzes, began as a fifteen-minute series but expanded to thirty minutes in the summer of 1955.

THE "SLAP" MAXWELL STORY ABC

23 September 1987–16 March 1988; 30 April 1988–14 September 1988 One of several so-called "dramadies" on the 1987–1988 schedule (see also Frank's Place, Hooperman, and The Days and Nights of Molly Dodd), The "Slap" Maxwell Story starred Dabney Coleman as "Slap" Maxwell, an egotistical sportswriter for a Midwest newspaper, The Ledger, whose column ("Slap Shots") provoked anger and frequent lawsuits from those who were its subjects. Slap's personal life was a mess as well: he had a rocky relationship with his girlfriend and his ex-wife also hung around. Other regulars included Megan Gallagher as Slap's girlfriend, Judy Ralston, a Ledger secretary; Susan Anspach as his ex-wife, Annie; Brian Smiar as the editor, Nelson Kruger; Bill Calvert as copyboy Charlie Wilson; and Bill Cobbs as The Dutchman, the barkeep at Slap's favorite watering hole. Joseph Brutsman was occasionally seen as Eliot, Slap's estranged son. The series was crated by Jay Tarses, who had previously created Buffalo Bill, an iconoclastic sitcom also starring Dabney Coleman.

SLATTERY'S PEOPLE CBS

21 SEPTEMBER 1964–26 NOVEMBER 1965 Richard Crenna starred in this hour-long dramatic series as Slattery, the idealistic leader of the minority party in the legislature of an unnamed state. Also featured during the first season were Paul Geary as his aide, Johnny Ramos; Maxine Stuart as B. J. Clawson, Slattery's secretary; Ed Asner as Frank Radcliff, veteran political reporter for the Times-Chronicle; and Tol Avery as Bert Metcalf, the speaker of the state house of representatives. For the show's abortive second season Slattery acquired not only a new supporting cast but also a first name—Jim. New regulars included: Alejandro Rey as aide Mike Valera; Francine York as secretary Wendy Wendowski; and Kathie Browne as TV newscaster Liz Andrews, Slattery's romantic interest. James Moser created the series, and Matthew Rapf produced it, for Bing Crosby Productions. Some of the show's exteriors were filmed on location in Sacramento.

SLEDGE HAMMER! ABC

23 SEPTEMBER 1986–3 MARCH 1988; 16 JUNE 1988–30 JUNE 1988 Offbeat sitcom about a cop whose best friend and confidant was his gun, a .44 Magnum called "Gun." With David Rasche as Inspector Sledge Hammer; Anne Marie Martin as his partner, Sergeant Dori Doreau; Harrison Page as beleaguered Captain Trunk; Leslie Morris as Officer Mayjoy; Patti Tippo (1987–1988) as Officer Daley; and Kurt Paul (1987–1988) as Coroner Norman Blates (a takeoff on the lead character from the movie Psycho, Norman Bates). In the final episode of the 1986–1987 season Sledge was apparently blown to smithereens while attempting to dismantle a nuclear device; the show's producers had not expected the series to be renewed. When the green light was given for a second season, Sledge showed up alive and well.

SLEEPY JOE ABC/SYNDICATED

3 OCTOBER 1949–28 OCTOBER 1949 (ABC); 1951 (SYNDICATED) Originally a radio series, Sleepy Joe was created by Jimmy Scribner, the dialectician who had created The Johnson Family on radio in 1934. Sleepy Joe first came to television as a local series over KTSL-TV in Los Angeles. On that version Scribner appeared in blackface as Sleepy Joe, an Uncle Remus-type character who spun yarns at the request of a little girl named Gayle (played by Gayle Scribner, Jimmy's daughter). The ABC and syndicated versions of the show were filmed puppet programs, however, with voices supplied by Scribner.

SLIDERS FOX

22 MARCH 1995–17 MAY 1995; 25 JUNE 1995–27 AUGUST 1995; 1 MARCH 1996– Hour sci-fi series in which a quartet of people slid each week through a "wormhole" into alternate worlds. Each world they encountered had the same geographic setting—San Francisco—but different historical events had created a separate reality; on one program, for example, the sliders found themselves in a Communist Bay Area, while on another they encountered an ultra-Conservative scene. With Jerry O'Connell as grad student Quinn Mallory, who discovered the way to reach those parallel worlds while working in his basement; John Rhys-Davies as his physics professor, Maximilian Arturo; Sabrina Lloyd as his girlfriend, Wade Wells; and Cleavant Derricks as washed-up soul singer Rembrandt "Crying Man" Brown, who accidentally got mixed up with the others during their first adventure.

SLIMER! AND THE REAL GHOSTBUSTERS

See THE REAL GHOSTBUSTERS

SMALL & FRYE CBS

7 MARCH 1983–21 MARCH 1983; 1 JUNE 1983–15 JUNE 1983 Half-hour sitcom about a pair of private eyes, one of whom had the power to shrink in size. With Darren

McGavin as Nick Small, the tall one; Jack Blessing as Chip Frye, the shrinkable one; Bill Daily as Dr. Hanratty; and Debbie Zipp as Phoebe, Nick's daughter. This series, which came from Walt Disney Productions, was not the first to feature miniature detectives (see also Inch High, Private Eye and The World of Giants).

SMALL FRY CLUB DUMONT

11 MARCH 1947–15 JUNE 1951 Network television's first successful children's program, Small Fry Club was broadcast every weekday evening for most of its run. "Big Brother" Bob Emery hosted the program, which employed most of the devices featured in subsequent kids' shows—cartoons, silent films, puppets, skits, songs, and demonstrations.

SMALL TALK CBS

4 MAY 1990–25 MAY 1990 This half-hour prime-time series combined equal parts of America's Funniest Home Videos, Candid Camera and Art Linkletter's House Party to present a look at things through the eyes of children. Roger Rose hosted the show, which featured a studio audience, vidoes of kids submitted by viewers, and prerecorded and onstage interviews with precocious young moppets.

SMALL WONDER SYNDICATED

1985–1989 Low-budget half-hour sitcom about a scientist who built a robot that looked like a ten-year-old girl. With Dick Christie as Ted Lawson, who worked at United Robotronics; Tiffany Brissette as the robot, Vicki (an acronym for Voice Input Child Identicant), who came home to live with Ted and his family; Marla Pennington as Ted's wife, Joan; Jerry Supiran as their son, Jamie; Emily Schulman as nosy Harriet Brindle, the girl who lived next door and had a crush on Jamie; Edie McClurg (1985–1986) as Harriet's nosy mother, Bonnie; William Bogert (1986–1989) as Harriet's father, and Ted's boss, Brandon Brindle; Lihann Jones (1986–1989) as Jessica, Jamie's girlfriend; and Daryl T. Bartley (1986–1987) as Jamie's classmate, Warren. Howard Leeds created the series for Metromedia Video Productions.

SMALL WORLD CBS

12 OCTOBER 1958–5 APRIL 1959 On this Sunday-afternoon public affairs program, host Edward R. Murrow conversed with three guests; the show was not unlike Person to Person, as Murrow remained in New York while his guests were filmed on location throughout the world. On the premiere Murrow chatted with Indian premier Jawaharlal Nehru, former governor Thomas E. Dewey, and Aldous Huxley. Other guest threesomes included Hyman Rickover, Rebecca West, and Mark Van Doren (2 November), and Noel Coward, James Thurber, and Siobhan McKenna (29 March). Murrow produced the show with Fred W. Friendly and had planned to have Eric Sevareid host it; the network, however, insisted that Murrow take the job. The show was broadcast during the 1959–1960 season as a series of specials.

SMILIN' ED'S GANG NBC/CBS/ABC

26 AUGUST 1950–19 MAY 1951 (NBC); 11 AUGUST 1951–11 APRIL 1953 (CBS); 22 AUGUST 1953–16 APRIL 1955 (ABC); 23 APRIL 1955–13 AUGUST 1955 (NBC) Smilin' Ed McConnell began this popular children's show on radio in 1943 and brought it to television seven years later; the show was a mixture of stories, filmed segments and onstage antics with McConnell and his unpredictable puppets: Midnight the Cat, Squeaky the Mouse, and Froggy the Gremlin. Some of the voices were supplied by June Foray, who later provided the voice of Rocky the Flying Squirrel. Frank Ferrin produced and directed the series, which was produced in Hollywood and sponsored by Buster Brown Shoes (it was originally titled The Buster Brown TV Show With Smilin' Ed McConnell and the Buster Brown Gang). When McConnell died in 1955, Andy Devine took over as host, and the show was retitled Andy's Gang (see also that title).

SMITH & JONES CBS

16 SEPTEMBER 1991–10 OCTOBER 1991 British comedy duo Mel Smith and Griff Rhys Jones cohosted this comedy series, which ran weeknights at 1 A.M. for four weeks. The twenty half-hours were edited from the pair's long-running BBC series.

THE SMITH FAMILY ABC

20 JANUARY 1971–5 JANUARY 1972; 12 APRIL 1972–14 JUNE 1972 Half-hour comedy-drama about a Los Angeles police officer and his family. With Henry Fonda as Detective Sergeant Chad Smith, a twenty-five-year veteran; Janet Blair as his wife, Betty Smith; Darleen Carr as their elder daughter, Cindy, a college student; Ronny Howard as their teenage son, Bob; and Michael-James Wixted as their younger son, Brian (who inexplicably spoke with a British accent). Don Fedderson was the executive producer of the series.

THE SMITHSONIAN NBC

15 OCTOBER 1966–8 APRIL 1967 Bill Ryan hosted this Saturday afternoon informational series for children, which was filmed at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., and on location.

SMITHSONIAN WORLD PBS

1984–1991 Wide-ranging hour documentary series, produced in cooperation with the Smithsonian Institution.

THE SMOKEY BEAR SHOW ABC

6 SEPTEMBER 1969–12 SEPTEMBER 1971 Weekend cartoon series starring Smokey the Bear, the animated version of the real Smokey, who had been saved from a forest fire as a cub and spent the rest of his days in the National Zoo in Washington. One of the first of the conservation-oriented cartoon shows, The Smokey Bear Show was seen Saturdays during its first season; reruns were shown Sundays the following year.

THE SMOTHERS BROTHERS COMEDY HOUR CBS

5 FEBRUARY 1967–8 JUNE 1969

THE SMOTHERS BROTHERS SUMMER SHOW ABC

15 JULY 1970–16 SEPTEMBER 1970

TOM SMOTHERS' ORGANIC PRIME TIME SPACE RIDE SYNDICATED

THE SMOTHERS BROTHERS SHOW NBC

13 JANUARY 1975–26 MAY 1975 Brothers Tom and Dick Smothers, who cohosted The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour on CBS, battled the network over the program content for two years, and finally lost their show. Though the series was planned to appeal to the under-thirty generation, its open criticism of the Vietnam War and the Johnson administration created a dilemma for an understandably sensitive network; the dilemma was solved by canceling the show less than 100 days into the Nixon administration. To most of its audience, The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour was a breath of fresh air, but to CBS the Smothers Brothers seemed to be in the wrong place at the wrong time with the wrong things to say.

The brothers were singing together at San Jose State College as early as 1959, and made their network TV debut on Jack Paar's Tonight show. In 1965 they were involved in a trivial sitcom (see The Smothers Brothers Show below); though their first series was unsuccessful, CBS did not lose interest. When network research suggested that a variety show with appeal to the fifteen-to-thirty age group could compete with NBC's Bonanza on Sundays (previous CBS casualties in the 9 p.m. slot included The Judy Garland Show, My Living Doll, The Joey Bishop Show, Perry Mason, and The Garry Moore Show), CBS executives contacted Tom Smothers, who negotiated a twenty-six-week contract for a variety series. The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour premiered in February 1967 and ranked a surprising sixteenth over the remainder of the season (during the 1967–1968 season the show slipped to eighteenth but succeeded in toppling Bonanza from first to sixth).

On camera, Tom Smothers, the funny one (and the older one), seemed to be an inarticulate bumbler. Off camera, though, Tom was keenly involved with almost every aspect of the production; the show went through several producers (including Saul Ilson, Ernie Chambers, and Allan Blye) and at least six directors. More importantly, it was Tom who sought to use the show not only to introduce little-known performers to national audiences but also to provide a forum for the expression of political and critical viewpoints seldom expressed on a variety show. Though brother Dick shared Tom's sentiments, he preferred to let Tom take charge; Dick was less interested in show business and the media than Tom; he spent as much time as he could pursuing his real passions—automobile collecting and racing.

Censorship problems arose almost immediately and persisted throughout the Smothers' seventy-one-show run on CBS. Unlike most disputes between performers and networks over program material, the Smothers' disputes usually involved neither lines nor words (though the use of the word "mindblowing" was forbidden), but entire segments. Among the battles which the brothers lost and won were: a skit on film censorship with Tom Smothers and Elaine May, deleted; Pete Seeger's performance on the fall 1967 premiere of "Waist Deep in the Big Muddy," a song with antiwar overtones, deleted (the appearance marked Seeger's return to network television after being blacklisted in the 1950s; Seeger was permitted to perform the number on a later show); a special 1968 Mother's Day message (which concluded with the words, "Please talk peace"), deleted; Harry Belafonte singing in front of a filmed montage of disturbances at the 1968 Democratic convention in Chicago, deleted; an interview with Dr. Benjamin Spock, who had been convicted of aiding draft evaders, deleted. The Smothers Brothers also received a lot of hate mail, particularly for their frequent use of black performers on the show.

After the telecast of 27 October 1968 (from which a David Steinberg "sermonette" had generated much critical mail), CBS took the then unusual step of demanding that a tape of each upcoming show be prescreened for network affiliates by closed circuit. When Tom Smothers failed to deliver one tape until a day before air time, CBS yanked the show and did not broadcast it until three weeks later (on that show, Joan Baez dedicated a song to her husband, David Harris, then serving a jail sentence for draft evasion).

In spite of the constant conflicts, CBS announced its decision to renew The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour on 14 March 1969. Less than two weeks later Tom Smothers attended the National Broadcasters Association convention in Washington, where he sought support from liberal Congressmen and other officials, such as FCC Commissioner Nicholas Johnson. Undoubtedly, Smothers's appearance in Washington worried the network, which would hardly have welcomed any government investigation. On 3 April 1969, Bob Wood, president of CBS Television, telegraphed Smothers that the show was canceled; ostensibly, the reason was that Smothers had failed to deliver a tape on time, though Smothers insisted that timely delivery had been made (the Smothers' guests on that show were David Steinberg, Dan Rowan, and Nancy Wilson). TV Guide ran a special editorial in its 19 April issue, characterizing CBS's decision to axe the show "wise, determined, and wholly justified," and citing the network's responsibility to the American public.

Neither ABC nor NBC expressed interest in signing the Smothers Brothers immediately after their cancellation, and The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour left the air quietly in June 1969; it was replaced by Hee Haw. ABC signed the two for a summer series a year later; The Smothers Brothers Summer Show was a toned-down variety hour and attracted little, if any, controversy. Tom Smothers later starred in an ill-conceived comedy half hour known as Tom Smothers' Organic Prime Time Space Ride, which also featured comics Hudson and Landry. In 1975 Tom and Dick returned to network TV as hosts of The Smothers Brothers Show, a toothless effort; Joe Hamilton was the executive producer of the variety hour.

Many of the regulars on the Smothers Brothers' shows have become major stars. Among the more successful from The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour crew were comedian Pat Paulsen (who campaigned for the Presidency in 1968), singers Glen Campbell and John Hartford, writer-composer Mason Williams, Bob Einstein (who often appeared as Officer Judy, the humorless cop, and later produced The Redd Foxx Comedy Hour with Allan Blye), and Steve Martin (who began as a writer for the show, but occasionally appeared on camera). Other regulars included Leigh French, Jennifer Warren (later known as Jennifer Warnes), and Don Wyatt. Regulars on the Smothers' 1970 summer series included Spencer Quinn and Sally Struthers, who later starred in All in the Family. Regulars on the 1975 show included Pat Paulsen, Bob Einstein, and Don Novello.

THE SMOTHERS BROTHERS COMEDY HOUR CBS
30 MARCH 1988–25 MAY 1988; 28 JANUARY 1989–18 FEBRUARY 1989; 2 AUGUST 1989–23 AUGUST 1989 On 3 February 1988 CBS welcomed back Tom and Dick Smothers with "The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour 20th Reunion," which featured guests Pat Paulsen, Bob Einstein, Leigh French, Jennifer Warnes, Steve Martin, John Hartford, Glen Campbell, and Mason Williams. A few weeks later the Brothers returned on a regular basis, with regulars Pat Paulsen and Jim Stafford. The look and format of the show were much the same as they had been twenty years previously, but the sharp, irreverent edge was no longer there. The show popped up in various niches on CBS's prime-time schedule during the next eighteen months, and was occasionally seen as a one-shot telecast at times other than those listed above.

THE SMOTHERS BROTHERS SHOW CBS
17 SEPTEMBER 1965–9 SEPTEMBER 1966 This first of the several series starring brothers Tom and Dick Smothers was a half-hour situation comedy in which they played themselves. Tom Smothers was a probationary angel assigned to return to Earth and help people there, while Dick Smothers was a publishing executive who was forced to share his apartment with his late sibling. Also featured were Roland Winters as Dick's boss, Leonard J. Costello; Harriet MacGibbon as Mrs. Costello; Marilyn Scott as their daughter, Diane Costello; and Ann Elder as Janet, Dick's girlfriend. Neither of the Smothers Brothers was happy with the show; both felt that the situation comedy format was not the right showcase for their talents. The filmed series was originally produced by Phil Sharp for Four Star Films. See also The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour.

SMURFS NBC
12 SEPTEMBER 1981–25 AUGUST 1990 The smash hit of the 1981–1982 Saturday-morning season, Smurfs was an hour series chronicling the adventures of a lovable group of little blue humanoids living peacefully in the forest; their enemy, the evil Gargamel, tried in vain to capture them. The characters were created in 1957 by Belgian cartoonist Peyo Culliford, and various Smurf toys were licensed in the United States in the late 1970s. After seeing his young daughter playing with a Smurf doll, Fred Silverman (then president of NBC Television) ordered the cartoon series. His decision proved to be a wise one, as Smurfs helped NBC to dominate the Saturday-morning ratings race. Smurfs expanded to ninety minutes in 1982 and inspired several imitations (see also The Littles, Monchhichis, Shirt Tales, and Trollkins). New characters were introduced over the years, such as Smurfette (the only female Smurf), Grandpa Smurf, and the evil Scruple. In the fall of 1988 the show returned to an hour format.

SNAP JUDGMENT NBC
3 APRIL 1967–28 MARCH 1969 This Goodson-Todman daytime game show was similar in format to Password; Ed McMahon was the first host, and was succeeded by Gene Rayburn.

SNARKY PARKER CBS
9 JANUARY 1950–29 SEPTEMBER 1950 The Bil and Cora Baird Puppets were the stars of this fifteen-minute children's serial with a western setting. Snarky Parker and his horse, Heathcliffe, were the principal characters. Officially titled Life with Snarky Parker, and usually broadcast four evenings a week, the show was directed by Yul Brynner, whose stage and film career took off after Snarky Parker left the air.

SNEAK PREVIEWS PBS/LIFETIME

1978–1987 (PBS); 1987–1988 (LIFETIME); 1988– (PBS) Movies are the subject of this half-hour series. Each week cohosts Roger Ebert (film critic for the Chicago Sun-Times) and Gene Siskel (film critic for the Chicago Tribune) introduced clips from four or five new releases, then discussed and rated the films. Occasional programs were dedicated not to current films, but to some other aspect of the medium. By 1982 Sneak Previews had become the highest-rated regular series in PBS history, but Siskel and Ebert elected to move to commercial television (see At the Movies). Sneak Previews carried on with new critics Jeffrey Lyons and Neal Gabler. Michael Medved replaced Gabler in the fall of 1985.

After nine seasons on PBS, the series moved to the Lifetime cable network for one season, returning to PBS in the fall of 1988. In the fall of 1989 the series changed formats and titles. Now known as Sneak Previews Goes Video, it concentrated not on motion pictures newly released to theaters, but rather on films and other subjects recently made available on the home video market. In 1991 the series reverted to its original title.

THE SNOOKY LANSON SHOW NBC

17 JULY 1956–13 SEPTEMBER 1956 Snooky Lanson, who was regularly featured on Your Hit Parade, hosted this summer replacement for the Dinah Shore Show. The fifteen-minute musical series was officially titled Chevrolet on Broadway and also featured the Mello-Larks.

THE SNOOP SISTERS NBC

19 DECEMBER 1973–20 AUGUST 1974 One segment of The NBC Wednesday Movie, The Snoop Sisters starred Helen Hayes and Mildred Natwick as sisters Ernesta and Gwendolin Snoop, who wrote mystery stories and solved real mysteries as well. Also featured were Lou Antonio as their friend Barney, an ex-con; Bert Convy as their nephew, Lieutenant Steve Ostrowski, a New York cop. Six episodes were filmed.

SNOOPS CBS

22 SEPTEMBER 1989–8 DECEMBER 1989; 22 JUNE 1990–6 JULY 1990 Tim Reid and his wife, Daphne Maxwell Reid, appeared in their third series together, this time as a sophisticated Washington, D.C., couple who solved crimes in their spare time. Tim Reid played Chance Dennis, a professor of criminology at Georgetown; Daphne Maxwell Reid played Micki Dennis, a protocol aide at the State Department; John Karlen was Lieutenant Sam Akers, Chance and Micki's police contact; and Troy Curvey, Jr., was Hugo, a State Department driver. Tim Reid and Sam Egan created the series and were its executive producers.

SNORKS NBC

15 SEPTEMBER 1984–6 SEPTEMBER 1986 The title characters in this Saturday-morning cartoon show were a tribe of multi-colored submarine creatures with long snorkels.

SO THIS IS HOLLYWOOD NBC

1 JANUARY 1955–19 AUGUST 1955 Half-hour sitcom about two young women trying to make it in show business. With Mitzi Green as Queenie Dugan, an aspiring stunt woman; Virginia Gibson as Kim Tracey, an aspiring actress; Jimmy Lydon as Kim's agent and boyfriend, Andy Boone; Gordon Jones as Queenie's boyfriend, stunt man Hubie Dodd; and Peggy Knudsen as April Adams, the actress for whom Queenie became a stand-in. The filmed series was produced by Ed Beloin and directed by Richard Bare.

SO YOU THINK YOU GOT TROUBLES?! SYNDICATED

1982 Ventriloquist Jay Johnston and his dummy, Bob, hosted this contrived game show. Persons with unusual problems appeared as contestants, and discussed their problems with Johnston and the wisecracking Bob. A panel of three experts then gave advice as to how the contestant might solve the problem; the contestant then tried to guess which expert's advice had impressed the largest segment of the studio audience.

SO YOU WANT TO LEAD A BAND ABC

5 AUGUST 1954–27 JANUARY 1955 Bandleader Sammy Kaye hosted this half-hour musical series, on which members of the studio audience were given a chance to conduct the band; the audience selected the winning amateur conductor by its applause, and the lucky contestant won a prize. Featured vocalists included Barbara Benson and Jeffrey Clay.

SOAP ABC

13 SEPTEMBER 1977–20 APRIL 1981 This prime-time comedy serial barely made it to the air because of protests lodged before its premiere by an assortment of religious and ethnic groups; ABC's excessive and exaggerated publicity doubtless precipitated the onslaught of complaints, most of which died down after the show came to the air. Though the plot dealt with impotence, transsexualism, extramarital affairs, and organized crime, Soap was no more sensational than Norman Lear's pioneer serial, Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman. Set in Dunn's River, Connecticut, it told the story of the wealthy Tate family and the middle-class Campbell family. Principal players included Katherine Helmond as Jessica Tate, a free-thinking socialite who was convicted of murder during the first season; Robert Mandan as Chester Tate, her philandering husband; Jennifer Salt as their daughter Eunice; Diana Canova as their daughter Corinne; Jimmy Baio as their son, Billy; Robert Guillaume (1977–1979) as Benson, the family's cook; Cathryn Damon as Mary Campbell, Jessica's sister; Richard Mulligan as Burt Campbell, her second husband; Ted Wass as Mary's macho son, Danny, who became involved with organized crime; Billy Crystal as Mary's son, Jodie Dallas, who intended to change his gender; Richard Libertini as The Godfather; Katherine Reynolds as Claire; Robert Urich (1977–1978) as Peter; Arthur Peterson as Grandpa Tate, a veteran who was unaware that the war is over; Roscoe Lee Browne (March 1980–1981) as Saunders, the new butler; and Jay Johnston as Chuck. Rod Roddy was the announcer. Susan Harris created, produced, and wrote the half-hour series. See also Benson.

SOAP BOX THEATER ABC

1 JULY 1950–3 DECEMBER 1950 Half-hour dramatic anthology series.

THE SOAP FACTORY SYNDICATED

1978 A half hour of disco dancing, taped at the Soap Factory in Palisades Park, New Jersey. Paul Harriss was the host of the series, and David Bergman the executive producer.

SOAP WORLD SYNDICATED

1982 The growing popularity of TV's serials spawned this half-hour magazine show. Host Michael Young spent most of the time interviewing the stars of the several soap operas.

SOLDIER PARADE ABC

14 JULY 1954–8 SEPTEMBER 1955 This Army talent show was hosted at various times by Gisele MacKenzie, Arlene Francis, and Martha Wright. Richard Hayes, then an Army private, was the cohost. The half-hour show grew out of an earlier military talent show, Talent Patrol (see also that title).

THE SOLDIERS NBC

25 JUNE 1955–3 SEPTEMBER 1955 Half-hour sitcom starring Hal March and Tom D'Andrea as a couple of Army privates. Bud Yorkin produced and directed. March and D'Andrea had previously played the characters on several variety shows, such as The Colgate Comedy Hour.

SOLDIERS OF FORTUNE SYNDICATED

1955 Half-hour adventure series with John Russell as Tim Kelly and Chick Chandler as Toubo Smith, a pair of freewheeling troubleshooters. The show was produced at Revue Studios.

SOLID GOLD SYNDICATED

1980–1988 This hour variety series highlighted the week's top records, with personal appearances or video clips of the featured recording artists. Also on hand were a bevy of briefly attired dancers. Dionne Warwick hosted the series during the first season, joined each week by a celebrity guest host. Andy Gibb (whose three older brothers were the Bee Gees) and Marilyn McCoo (formerly of the Fifth Dimension) took over as cohosts for the 1981–1982 season. In the fall of 1982 Rex Smith succeeded Gibb as McCoo's cohost. Marilyn McCoo was the sole host for the 1983–1984 season. In the fall of 1984 disc jockey Rick Dees became the sole host. He lasted a season, and was replaced by Dionne Warwick in the fall of 1985. Warwick was in turn succeeded by McCoo in the fall of 1986. In the fall of 1987 the series was titled Solid Gold in Concert, in an attempt to call attention to the fact that many of the artists who appeared were performing live.

In June 1984 a second version of the series surfaced briefly; titled Solid Gold Hits, it was broadcast daily in a half-hour format, hosted by Grant Goodeve.

SOMEONE LIKE ME NBC

14 MARCH 1994–25 APRIL 1994 Half–hour sitcom whose central character was an eleven-year-old girl living in St. Louis. With Gaby Hoffmann as Gaby Stepjak; Patricia Heaton as her mother, Jean; Anthony Tyler Quinn as her stepfather, Steven, an optician; Nikki Cox as her older sister, Sam; Joseph Tello as her younger half-brother, Evan; and Raegan Kotz as her pal, Jane Schmidt.

SOMERSET NBC

30 MARCH 1970–31 DECEMBER 1976 Though Somerset was the first serial spinoff from another serial, it had little in common with its parent, Another World, even though it was titled Another World/Somerset at first. Though some of the characters from Another World traveled back and forth from Bay City to Somerset, Somerset's principal characters were developed independently. While Another World's story lines centered on psychological and romantic themes, Somerset's emphasized crime and intrigue; the principal reason for the difference was that Somerset's first head writer was Henry Slesar, who had previously worked on The Edge of Night (all three soaps were owned by Procter and Gamble). Subsequent head writers included Roy Winsor and Russell Kubec.

The two main characters who emigrated from Bay City to Somerset (a town of 25,000) as the series premiered were lawyer Sam Lucas (played by Jordan Charney) and his wife, Lahoma Vane Lucas (played by Ann Wedgeworth); Missy Matthews (played by Carol Roux), another Bay City resident, was also featured in the early months. Other members of the cast included: Ed Kemmer as Ben Grant, Sam's law partner, who died in a plane crash; Georgann Johnson as his wife, Ellen Bishop Grant, who later fell for a much younger man; Ralph Clanton as Jasper Delaney, owner of Delaney Brands, a major industry in Somerset; Len Gochman as his son, Peter Delaney; Nick Coster as his son, Robert Delaney; Dorothy Stinette as his daughter, Laura Delaney Cooper; Marie Wallace as Robert's wife, India Delaney; Paul Sparer as Laura's husband, Rex Cooper; Doug Chapin, Ernest Thompson, and Barry Jenner as Laura's son, Tony Cooper; Fred J. Scollay as Ike Harding (also known as Harry Wilson), Tony's real father, and the murderer of Jasper Delaney; Susan MacDonald as Jill Grant, daughter of Ben and Ellen Grant; Ron Martin and Tom Calloway as David Grant, Jill's twin brother; Dick Shoberg as Mitch Farmer, who married Jill and later died; Alan Gifford as Judge Brad Bishop, Ellen Grant's father; Phil Sterling as Rafe Carter; Walter Matthews as Gerald Davis; Alice Hirson as Marsha Davis; Wynne Miller as nightclub singer Jessica Buchanan; Gary Sandy as Randy Buchanan; Gene Fanning and George Coe as Leo Kurtz, who became the owner of Delaney Brands; Michael Lipton as Leo's brother, Dr. Stanley Kurtz; Renne Jarrett, Meg Wittner, and Fawne Harriman as Leo's daughter, Ginger Kurtz, who married Tony Cooper; Lois Smith as the deranged Zoe Cannel; Joel Crothers as her husband, Julian Cannel; Harriet Hall as Andrea Moore, whom Zoe tried to poison; Chris Pennock as Andrea's brother, Dana Moore; Lois Kibbee as their mother, Emily Moore; Frank Schofield as Zoe's father, Philip Matson, who married Emily Moore; Jay Gregory as Zoe's brother, Carter Matson, whom Zoe murdered; Diahn Williams as Chrystal Ames, also killed by Zoe; Marc Alaimo as Virgil Paris, plant manager at Delaney Brands; Bibi Besch as Eve Lawrence, fiancée of Judge Bishop; Audrey Landers as Eve's daughter, Heather Lawrence Kane; James O'Sullivan as Dr. Jerry Kane, Heather's husband; Gary Swanson as reporter Greg Mercer, Heather's half brother; Stanley Grover as Mark Mercer; Judith Searle as Edith Mercer, Mark's wife; Joseph Julian as Vic Kirby; Ed Winter as Chuck Hillman; Melinda Plank as Danny Cotsworth; Dortha Duckworth as Rowena Standish; Peter MacLean as Scott MacKensie; Glenn Zachar as Skipper MacKensie; Bill Hunt as Bill Greeley; Polly Rowles as Freida Lang; Tina Sloan as Kate Cannel, who became the second wife of Julian Cannel; Eugene Smith as Lieutenant Will Price; Michael Nouri and Ted Danson as lawyer Tom Conway; James Congdon as Ned Paisley; Velekka Gray as Ned's sister, Victoria Paisley; Gloria Hoye as Dr. Teri Martin, who married Stanley Kurtz; Sean Ward as Joey Cooper; Bernard Grant as Dan Briskin; Molly Picon as Sarah Briskin; Nancy Pinkerton as Karen MacMillan; Abby Lewis as Lena Andrews; Elizabeth Lowry as Marge; Helen Funai as Lyling Sun; Jane Rose as Becky Winkler; Ellen Barber as Marion Parker; Bruce Gray as Warren Parker; Matthew Greene as Bobby Hansen; Lou Jacobi as Mac Wells; Jameson Parker as Dale Robinson, the younger man who became involved with widow Ellen Grant; Sigourney Weaver as Avis Ryan; and Gene Bua as Steve Slade.

SOMERSET MAUGHAM THEATRE CBS/NBC

18 OCTOBER 1950–28 MARCH 1951 (CBS); 2 APRIL 1951–10 DECEMBER 1951 (NBC) W. Somerset Maugham hosted this anthology series of adaptations of Maugham stories. The show began on CBS as a half-hour series and was kinescoped for presentation on those CBS affiliates that did not have direct transmission lines to the New York station from which the program originated; when it shifted networks in April of 1951 it expanded to an hour, was seen biweekly (alternating with Robert Montgomery Presents), and was presented only in live form. The latter change enabled several more Maugham stories to be presented on television, since, in the absence of a kinescope transcription, there was no longer any legal dispute with the owners of the film rights to those stories. Among the stories presented were: "The Dream," with Joan Bennett (14 February 1951); "The Moon and Sixpence," with Lee J. Cobb (30 April 1951); and "Cakes and Ale," with June Havoc (28 May 1951). The CBS version of the series was also titled Teller of Tales.

SOMETHING ELSE SYNDICATED

1970 Half-hour musical variety show, hosted by John Byner and later by John Hartford.

SOMETHING IS OUT THERE NBC

21 OCTOBER 1988–9 DECEMBER 1988 Hour sci-fi series, derived from the two-part TV-movie of the same name broadcast 8 and 9 May 1988. The series starred Joe Cortese as Los Angeles cop Jack Breslin and Maryam D'Abo as Ta'ra, a mind-reading alien, who teamed up to track down a "xenomorph," an evil creature from Ta'ra's spacecraft that could assume human form. Ta'ra and Jack became interested in one another, although Ta'ra was satisfied merely to look at Jack's hands, as the hands were considered the most attractive body part on Ta'ra's planet. Also featured was Gregory Sierra as Captain Victor Maldonado. Frank Lupo and John Ashley were executive producers.

SOMETHING WILDER NBC

1 OCTOBER 1994–22 OCTOBER 1994; 6 DECEMBER 1994–14 MARCH 1995; 6 JUNE 1995–13 JUNE 1995 Half-hour sitcom set in Stockbridge, Massachusetts, where an older father and his wife were raising their four-year-old twins. With Gene Wilder as Gene Bergman, who owned Berkshire Hills Advertising; Hillary B. Smith as his wife, Annie; Carl Michael Lindner as son Sam; Ian Bottiglieri as son Gabe; Jake Weber as Gene's brother-in-law, Richie, who worked at the ad agency; and Gregory Itzin as Jack Travis, who also worked at the ad agency.

SONG AND DANCE NBC

7 JANUARY 1949–14 JUNE 1949 Irregularly scheduled prime-time musical series, hosted by Roberta Quinlan.

SONG AT TWILIGHT NBC

3 JULY 1951–31 AUGUST 1951 This fifteen-minute musical series was hosted by Bob Carroll, then by Buddy Greco, and finally by Johnny Andrews. A summer replacement for John Conte's The Little Show and The Roberta Quinlan Show, the Monday-through-Friday program was produced by Richard Schneider. It was originally titled Songs at Twilight.

SONG SNAPSHOTS ON A SUMMER HOLIDAY CBS

24 JUNE 1954–9 SEPTEMBER 1954 A summer replacement for The Jane Froman Show, this fifteen-minute musical series was cohosted by Merv Griffin and Betty Ann Grove.

SONGS FOR SALE CBS

4 JULY 1950–1 SEPTEMBER 1950; 30 JUNE 1951–28 JUNE 1952 On this hour-long musical show compositions by amateur songwriters were performed by guest vocalists and were then judged by a panel of music business professionals. The series, which also ran on radio, was hosted by Jan Murray in 1950; Steve Allen was the host when the show returned to TV in the summer of 1951. Al Span was the producer, Bob Bleyer the director.

SONGTIME ABC

6 OCTOBER 1951–17 MAY 1952 Jack Wyrtzen sang religious songs on this weekly show, broadcast Saturdays at 11:00 P.M.

SONIC THE HEDGEHOG ABC

18 SEPTEMBER 1993–3 JUNE 1995 Half-hour Saturday-morning cartoon series derived from the popular video game. Set in the Great Forest, its chief characters were Sonic and his animal pals Nicole, Sally, and Rotor. Jaleel White (better known as Urkel on Family Matters) provided the voice of the title character.

THE SONNY AND CHER COMEDY HOUR CBS

1 AUGUST 1971–5 SEPTEMBER 1971; 27 DECEMBER 1971–29 MAY 1974

THE SONNY AND CHER SHOW CBS

1 FEBRUARY 1976–29 AUGUST 1977 The Sonny and Cher Comedy Hour was introduced as a summer variety show and found a place in the network's schedule in midseason. By the 1973–1974 season it was television's top-rated variety series. Unfortunately, after nine years of marriage, Sonny (born Salvatore Bono) and Cher (born Cherilyn LaPiere) were divorced in 1974, and the show came to an end. Each of them later hosted their own variety series (The Sonny Comedy Revue and Cher), neither of which was particularly successful; finally, in 1976, they were reunited, at least on camera, in The Sonny and Cher Show, and became the first divorced couple to cohost a variety series. The two had met in the mid-1960s, when Sonny was an occasional songwriter and studio musician (he played percussion at many of Phil Spector's recording sessions) and Cher was an aspiring singer. Their first records, released under the name Caesar and Cleo, went nowhere, but in 1965 "I Got You Babe," released under their own names, was a smash (and subsequently became their theme song on their TV shows). After a few years of relative obscurity in the late 1960s, Sonny persevered in getting them their summer show; its freshness and slick production insured its chances of renewal. The show was produced by Chris Bearde and Allan Blye, and Cher's elaborate costumes were designed by Bob Mackie. The show also made effective use of such videotape tricks as chroma-key, a process by which one image can be superimposed upon another. Other regulars on The Sonny and Cher Comedy Hour included their daughter Chastity Bono, Peter Cullen, Freeman King, Teri Garr, Ted Zeigler, Billy Van, and Murray Langston (who later appeared as "The Unknown Comic" on The Gong Show). Nick Vanoff was the executive producer of The Sonny and Cher Show, and Frank Peppiatt and Phil Hahn were the producers. Regulars on that show included Ted Zeigler, the mime team of Shields and Yarnell (who later cohosted their own show), Billy Van, and Gailard Sartain. See also Cher; The Sonny Comedy Revue.

THE SONNY COMEDY REVUE ABC

22 SEPTEMBER 1974–29 DECEMBER 1974 Following the breakup of his marriage to Cher, and the cancellation of The Sonny and Cher Comedy Hour on CBS, Sonny Bono tried to go it alone as host of a comedy hour on ABC. The effort, produced by Allan Blye and Chris Bearde (who had worked on The Sonny and Cher Comedy Hour), was unsuccessful. Other regulars included Freeman King, Billy Van, Ted Zeigler, Peter Cullen, Murray Langston, and Teri Garr. Sonny and Cher were later reunited on The Sonny and Cher Show.

THE SONNY KENDIS SHOW CBS

18 APRIL 1949–6 JANUARY 1950 Sonny Kendis hosted this musical series, seen once or twice a week before or after the evening news. It was seen in both a ten-minute and fifteen-minute format. Gigi Durston was the featured vocalist.

SONNY SPOON NBC

12 FEBRUARY 1988–25 MARCH 1988; 27 MAY 1988–15 JULY 1988; 7 OCTOBER 1988–16 DECEMBER 1988 Mario Van Peebles had the title role in this hour crime show, playing Sonny Spoon, a fast-talking black private eye who was a master of disguise. Other regulars included Terry Donahoe as assistant district attorney Carolyn Gilder; Joe Shea as newsstand operator Lucius DeLuce; Jordana Capra as Monique the hooker; and Bob Wieland as Johnny Skates, the skateboarding amputee. In the fall of 1988 Van Peebles's father, actor/director Melvin Van Peebles, joined the cast as Sonny's father, Mel.

SONS AND DAUGHTERS CBS

11 SEPTEMBER 1974–6 NOVEMBER 1974 A high school drama set at Southwest High in Stockton, California, during the 1950s, Sons and Daughters was presumably inspired by the 1973 film American Graffiti. The hour series featured Gary Frank as Jeff Reed, all-American boy; Glynnis O'Connor as Anita Cramer, all-American girl, Jeff's girlfriend; Jay W. MacIntosh as Lucille Reed, Jeff's recently widowed mother; John S. Ragin as Walter Cramer, Anita's father; Jan Shutan as Ruth Cramer, Anita's mother; Michael Morgan as Danny Reed, Jeff's younger brother; Debralee Scott as Evie; Laura Siegel as Mary Anne; Scott Colomby as Stash; Barry Livingston as Moose; Lionel Johnston as Charlie; and Christopher Nelson as Cody. David Levinson was the executive producer, and Michael Gleason the producer, for Universal Television.

SONS AND DAUGHTERS CBS

4 JANUARY 1991–1 MARCH 1991 The second series of this title was an hour comedy-drama which told the stories of the Hammersmith family of Portland, Oregon. The cast included: Lucie Arnaz as Tess Hammersmith; Michelle Wong as her adopted daughter, Astrid; Peggy Smithhart as Tess's sister, Patty Lincoln; Rick Rossovich as her husband, Spud Lincoln, a high-school coach; Paul Scherrer as their sixteen-year-old, Rocky; Kamaron Harper as their fourteen-year-old, Paulette; Billy O'Sullivan as their seven-year-old, Ike; Scott Plank as Tess's brother, Gary Hammersmith; Stacy Edwards as Gary's wife, Lindy; Don Murray as Tess's father, Bing Hammersmith; Lisa Blount as Bing's wife, Mary Ruth; Aaron Brownstein as Bing and Mary's four-year-old, Bing Jr.; and George D. Wallace as Grandpa Hank.

SOUL! PBS

1970–1975 An hour-long variety series featuring black musicians, singers, and dancers; produced at WNET-TV, New York.

SOUL TRAIN SYNDICATED

1971– Essentially the black counterpart of American Bandstand, Soul Train features a group of about seventy teenagers who dance to the music and listen to assorted recording artists who drop by to lip-synch their newest hits. The hour series was created and is produced and hosted by Don Cornelius. The show began in 1970 as a local series in Chicago and later moved to Hollywood. Cornelius relinquished the hosting chores in 1993, appearing only to introduce each program's guest host.

SOUND-OFF TIME NBC

14 OCTOBER 1951–6 JANUARY 1952 Half-hour comedy-variety show, with three rotating hosts: Bob Hope, Jerry Lester, and Fred Allen.

SOUNDSTAGE PBS

1974–1981 A series of hour concerts by popular musical acts, produced at WTTW-TV, Chicago.

THE SOUPY SALES SHOW ABC/SYNDICATED

4 JULY 1955–26 AUGUST 1955 (ABC); 3 OCTOBER 1959–25 JUNE 1960 (ABC); 3 DECEMBER 1960–25 MARCH 1961 (ABC); 26 JANUARY 1962–13 APRIL 1962 (ABC); 1965–1967 (SYNDICATED); 1979 (SYNDICATED) Soupy Sales has hosted a plethora of children's shows, both local and national. His first effort was Soupy's On, a local show in Detroit that began in 1953; the show caught ABC's attention, and in 1955 Sales hosted his first network program, The Soupy Sales Show. It originated from Detroit and was seen weekday evenings for eight weeks. Sales then headed to Los Angeles and hosted a local show there for several years before returning to network TV in the fall of 1959 with a Saturday-morning show, which lasted until 1961 (with one six-month interruption). Early in 1962 Sales hosted a Friday evening show on ABC, and in 1964 he began a daily local show in New York, which was offered in syndication a year later. In 1979 Sales again hosted a syndicated half-hour show, produced in Hollywood. All of his shows have incorporated a combination of features—jokes, puns, songs, silent films, and sketches with an assortment of puppets, including White Fang, Black Tooth, Marilyn MonWolf, Herman the Flea, and Pookie the Lion. Pie-throwing was also a regular feature—Sales no doubt holds the world's record for receiving pies in the face. Sales's offbeat humor occasionally got him in trouble; The New York Times reported in January 1965 that Sales had been suspended for one week by WNEW-TV after asking his young viewers to go to their parents' wallets and send him "those little green pieces of paper." It was noted that although the incident had been intended as a joke, it could have been misinterpreted by certain members of Sales's audience.

SOUTH AMERICAN JOURNEY PBS

30 JUNE 1987–18 AUGUST 1987 An eight-week series filmed on location throughout South America, hosted by Australian TV reporter Jack Pizzey.

SOUTH BEACH NBC

6 JUNE 1993–6 JULY 1993 Miami's South Beach was the setting for this hour crime show, on which a con artist helped a government agent nail the bad guys. With Yancy Butler as the con artist, Kate Patrick; John Glover as the g-man, Roberts; Eagle-Eye Cherry as Kate's partner, Vernon; and Patti D'Arbanville as Roxanne, a former federal agent who now ran an inn.

SOUTH CENTRAL FOX

5 APRIL 1994–30 AUGUST 1994 Gritty comedy-drama about a black single parent household trying to cope in Los Angeles's sprawling South Central district. With Tina Lifford as Joan Mosley, a divorcee who lost her job and found work as assistant manager of a food co-op; Larenz Tate as her teenage son, Andre (an older son had been killed by gang warfare); Tasha Scott as her preteen daughter, Tasha; Keith Mbulo as her troubled foster son, Deion, who would not speak; Clifton Powell as her patronizing boss, Bobby Deavers; Jennifer Lopez as coworker Lucille; Earl Billings as coworker Mayo Bonner; and Paula Kelly as Joan's friend, Sweets. The critically acclaimed, but little watched, series was created by Michael J. Weithorn and Ralph Farquar.

SOUTH OF SUNSET CBS

27 OCTOBER 1993 South of Sunset was a member of one of TV's most exclusive clubs—series canceled after one episode. Glenn Frey (better known as a rocker than an actor) starred as Los Angeles private eye Cody McMahon, with Aries Spears as his partner, an ex-thief named Ziggy Duane, and Maria Pitillo as their secretary, an aspiring actress named Gina. The premiere (and finale) notched an anemic 6.1 rating/9 share, a figure believed to be the lowest ever achieved by a major network fall premiere.

THE SOUTHERNAIRES ABC

19 SEPTEMBER 1948–21 NOVEMBER 1948 Half-hour prime-time musical series starring a vocal quartet known as the Southernaires.

SPACE CBS

14 APRIL 1985–18 APRIL 1985 A thirteen-hour, five-part adaptation of James A. Michener's epic novel chronicling the American efforts to explore space from 1946 to a late-1960s mission to the dark side of the moon. Principal players included James Garner as Senator Norman Grant; Harry Hamlin as astronaut John Pope; David Dukes as Martin Scorcella; Bruce Dern as Stanley Mott; Michael York as scientist Dieter Kolff; Blair Brown as Penny Pope; Susan Anspach as Elinor Grant; Melinda Dillon as Rachel Mott; Beau Bridges as Randy Claggett; and Maggie Han as Cindy Rhee. Laurence Luckinbill narrated. The series was rerun, in edited form, on CBS during the summer of 1987; the ratings were disastrous.

SPACE: ABOVE AND BEYOND FOX

24 SEPTEMBER 1995– This sci-fi series drew on Combat for its inspiration. The hour show was set in 2063 A.D., when a peaceful Earth had begun to colonize other planets. Discovering that one such colony had been annihilated, a squadron of United States Marine space warriors was deployed to battle the unknown enemy. The cast included Morgan Weisser as Lieutenant Nathan West, who was convinced that his girlfriend (who had been dispatched to the colony) had escaped death and was determined to find her; Kristen Cloke as Lieutenant Shane Vansen; Rodney Rowland as Lieutenant Cooper Hawkes, an "In Vitro," or second-class citizen born without parents; Lanei Chapman as Lieutenant Vanessa Damphousse; Joel de la Fuente as Lieutenant Paul Wang; and James Morrison as their commanding officer, Colonel McQueen, who was also an In Vitro.

SPACE ACADEMY CBS

10 SEPTEMBER 1977–1 SEPTEMBER 1979 This half-hour Saturday-morning series was set at the Space Academy, an artificial planetoid founded in Star Year 3732 as a training school for young space explorers. Featured were Jonathan Harris as Commander Gampu, the three-hundred-year-old head of the Academy; Pamelyn Ferdin as Laura; Ty Henderson as Paul; Ric Carrott as Chris; Pam Cooper as Adrian; Brian Tochi as Tee Gai; Eric Greene as Loki, the junior cadet; and Peepo the robot. Norm Prescott and Lou Scheimer were the executive producers.

SPACE GHOST AND DINO BOY CBS/NBC

10 SEPTEMBER 1966–7 SEPTEMBER 1968 (CBS); 27 NOVEMBER 1976–3 SEPTEMBER 1977 (NBC) Half-hour Saturday-morning cartoon series from Hanna-Barbera Productions about a galactic hero whose magic belt rendered him invisible. Space Ghost was assisted in his exploits by two teenagers, Jan and Jayce. Gary Owens provided the voice of Space Ghost. The second segment, "Dino Boy," featured the adventures of a young man who had parachuted into a prehistoric world. The series ran for two seasons on CBS and returned in the fall of 1976 on NBC to replace Land of the Lost, where it was shown under the title Space Ghost/Frankenstein Jr., and included segments of Frankenstein Jr. and the Impossibles, another 1966 cartoon series from Hanna-Barbera. In April 1994 Space Ghost reappeared on cable television, in a totally new format: as the thickheaded host of a talk show. Space Ghost: Coast to Coast aired on the Cartoon Network. The host was in animated format, and his human guests appeared in TV monitors.

SPACE KIDETTES NBC

10 SEPTEMBER 1966–2 SEPTEMBER 1967 Another cartoon series from Hanna-Barbera Productions, Space Kidettes featured a group of preteen space rangers.

SPACE: 1999 SYNDICATED

1975–1977 Produced in England, this hour-long science fiction series told the story of the 311 inhabitants of Moonbase Alpha, a lunar space colony. As the result of a tremendous nuclear explosion (caused by the storage of radioactive wastes on the dark side of the moon), the moon—with the surprised colonists aboard—was sent out of its orbit and careening into space. Featured were Martin Landau as Commander John Koenig; Barbara Bain as Dr. Helena Russell, research scientist; Barry Morse (1975–1976) as Professor Victor Bergman; Roy Dotrice as Commissioner Simmonds, Koenig's commanding officer, who was visiting Moonbase Alpha when the explosion occurred; Nick Tate as First Lieutenant Alan Carter; Zienia Merton as communications officer Sandra Benes; Anton Phillips as medical officer Dr. Bob Mathias; Clifton Jones (1975–1976) as David Kano; and Prentis Hancock (1975–1976) as Paul Morrow. In the fall of 1976 Catherine Schell joined the cast as Moonbase Alpha's scientific officer and resident alien, Maya, who could transform herself into any kind of creature at will; Tony Anholt also joined the cast as First Officer Tony Verdeschi. Gerry Anderson (who had previously worked on such series as Fireball XL-5 and Thunderbirds) was the executive producer. Sylvia Anderson, his wife, was producer during the first season, and Fred Freiberger (who had worked on Star Trek) was producer during the second season.

SPACE PATROL ABC

11 SEPTEMBER 1950–26 FEBRUARY 1955 One of the longer-running children's space shows of the early 1950s, Space Patrol was set in the thirtieth century. It featured Ed Kemmer as Commander Buzz Corry; Lyn Osborn as his assistant, Cadet Happy; Ken Mayer as Major Robbie Robertson; Paul Cavanaugh as Colonel Henderson, the Secretary General of the United Planets; Virginia Hewitt as Carol, the Secretary General's daughter; Nina Bara as Tonga, a onetime enemy who became an ally. Space Patrol began as a fifteen-minute daily series but shifted to a once-a-week, half-hour format late in 1951. Jack Narz, who later hosted several game shows, was the announcer. Mike Moser produced the series, and Dik Darley directed.

SPACE PRECINCT SYNDICATED

1994–1995 Created by Gerry Anderson and filmed in England, this hour cop show was set in the year 2040 in the City of Demeter on the planet Altor, where the law enforcement community battled all sorts of evil life forms. Featured were Ted Shackelford as Lt. Patrick Brogan, a former New York City cop; Rob Youngblood as Officer Jack Haldane; Simone Bendix as Officer Jane Castle; Nancy Paul as Patrick's wife, Sally Brogan; Nic Klein as their son, Matt; and Megan Olive as their daughter, Liz.

SPACE RANGERS CBS

6 JANUARY 1993–27 JANUARY 1993 Short-lived sci-fi hour set in 2104 A.D. on the planet Avalon, headquarters of a planetary police force. With Jeff Kaake as Captain John Boon; Jack McGee as Doc; Marjorie Monaghan as JoJo; Cary-Hiroyuki Tagawa as Zylyn; Linda Hunt as Commander Chennault; Danny Quinn as Kincaid; and Gottfried John as Colonel Weiss.

SPACE SENTINELS

See THE YOUNG SENTINELS

SPACE STARS NBC

12 SEPTEMBER 1981–11 SEPTEMBER 1982 This Saturday-morning cartoon consisted of four segments, all supplied by Hanna-Barbera Studios. Two were reruns—"Space Ghost" and "The Herculoids"—and two were new—"Teen Force" and "Astro and the Space Mutts."

SPACE STRIKERS UPN

10 SEPTEMBER 1995– An updated version of Jules Verne's 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea, this Sunday-morning cartoon series found Captain Nemo skippering the starship Nautilus for the Earthside Military Command, and battling the evil Master Phantom.

SPACECATS NBC

14 SEPTEMBER 1991–25 JULY 1992 Half-hour Saturday-morning kids show which mixed live action and animated segments to depict the adventures of a group of feline-like visitors from another galaxy. Led by Captain Catgut, the Spacecats received their orders from DORC—the Disembodied Omnipotent Ruler of Cats—who was played by Charles Nelson Reilly.

SPARRING PARTNERS ABC

8 APRIL 1949–13 MAY 1949 Prime-time game show hosted by Walter Kiernan, on which three men competed against three women in a question-and-answer format.

SPEAK UP AMERICA NBC

1 AUGUST 1980–10 OCTOBER 1980 This ill-conceived series, billed as "the Time magazine of the airwaves," was little more than a pastiche of audience and person-on-the-street reactions to various topical questions. Former child evangelist Marjoe Gortner was the principal host of the show, assisted by Jayne Kennedy and by stentorian Rhonda Bates. Blasted by the critics, detested by the network's top executives, and ignored by the public, the program was abruptly cancelled after two months. It ranked second to last in the 1980–1981 seasonal ratings.

SPEAKEASY SYNDICATED

1964 Host Chip Monck rapped with rock stars on this hour series.

SPECIAL AGENT 7 SYNDICATED

1958 Half-hour crime show starring Lloyd Nolan as Conroy, an agent for the Treasury Department.

SPECIAL EDITION SYNDICATED

1977 Barbara Feldon hosted this documentary series, the segments of which were filmed versions of various nonfiction magazine articles. Alan Sloan produced the series.

THE SPECTACULAR WORLD OF GUINNESS RECORDS SYNDICATED

1987 The second television series inpsired by the popular Guinness Book of World Records (see also The Guinness Game), this one was cohosted by David Frost and Shawn Southwick. It featured stories about present record holders as well as attempts to break existing records.

SPEED BUGGY CBS/ABC/NBC

8 SEPTEMBER 1973–30 AUGUST 1975 (CBS); 6 SEPTEMBER 1975–4 SEPTEMBER 1976 (ABC); 27 NOVEMBER 1976–3 SEPTEMBER 1977 (NBC); 28 JANUARY 1978–2 SEPTEMBER 1978 (CBS); 18 SEPTEMBER 1982–29 JANUARY 1983 (CBS) A seemingly indestructible cartoon series from Hanna-Barbera Productions, Speed Buggy was a flying car that carried three teenage passengers: Debbie, Mark, and Tinker. Mel Blanc provided the voice of Speed Buggy.

SPEED RACER SYNDICATED

1967; 1993 Japanese-produced cartoon series about a race-car driver, Speed Racer.

SPENCER (UNDER ONE ROOF) NBC

1 DECEMBER 1984–12 JANUARY 1985; 23 MARCH 1985–11 MAY 1985; 14 JUNE 1985–5 JULY 1985 This half-hour sitcom about the trials and tribulations of a high school student went through its own trials and tribulations during its brief run. It started out as Spencer, with Chad Lowe (younger brother of Rob Lowe) in the title role as sixteen-year-oid Spencer Winger; Mimi Kennedy as his mother, Doris; Ronny Cox as his father, George; Amy Locane as his younger sister, Andrea; Grant Heslov as his pal Wayne; Dean Cameron as his pal Herbie Bailey; Richard Sanders as the guidance counselor, Mr. Benjamin Beanley; and Beverly Archer as the English teacher, Miss Spier. Production was halted after just five episodes, when Chad Lowe quit the series after his demands for above-the-title billing and creative control were turned down. The role was eventually recast, and the series returned to the air in March with a new title, Under One Roof, and a new star, Ross Harris as Spencer Winger. The other regulars from Spencer remained, except for Ronny Cox (it was explained that George had run off with a younger woman), and Harold Gould and Frances Sternhagen joined the cast as Doris's parents, Ben and Millie Sprague, who moved into the Winger household. Guidance counselor Beanley was now the principal of Spencer's high school, and Miss Spier was teaching Spanish. After Under One Roof left the air in May 1985, reruns of the original Spencer series popped up on NBC's Friday schedule for four weeks in June and July.

SPENCER'S PILOTS CBS

17 SEPTEMBER 1976–19 NOVEMBER 1976 An unimpressive adventure series about charter pilots working for Spencer Aviation. Spencer's Pilots was scheduled Fridays at 8 P.M., a slot which CBS found difficult to fill successfully for most of the 1970s. Only six episodes were televised. Featured were Gene Evans as Spencer Parish; Christopher Stone as Cass Garrett; Todd Susman as Stan Lewis; Margaret Impert as Linda Dann, a pilot and secretary; and Britt Leach as Mickey "Wig" Wiggins, the mechanic. The hour series was created and produced by Larry Rosen; Bob Sweeney and Edward H. Feldman were the executive producers for CBS Television.

SPENSER: FOR HIRE ABC

20 SEPTEMBER 1985–3 SEPTEMBER 1988 This modestly successful crime show, inspired by Robert B. Parker's books, was filmed on location in Boston. It starred Robert Urich as Spenser, the one-named, quotation-spouting, principled private eye, and featured Avery Brooks as Hawk, Spenser's black, semi-malevolent, Magnum-toting street source; Barbara Stock as Spenser's lady friend, guidance counselor Susan Silverman (ousted after the first season due to a change in producers, Stock was brought back for the series' third, and final, year); Carolyn McCormick (1986–1987) as assistant district attorney Rita Fiore, Spenser's second-season romantic interest; Richard Jaeckel (1985–1987) as Lieutenant Martin Quirk; and Ron McLarty as Sergeant Frank Belson. The character returned in several TV-movies aired on the Lifetime cable network beginning in 1993. See also A Man Called Hawk.

SPIDER-MAN ABC

9 SEPTEMBER 1967–30 AUGUST 1969; 22 MARCH 1970–6 SEPTEMBER 1970

SPIDER-MAN AND HIS AMAZING FRIENDS NBC

12 SEPTEMBER 1981–11 SEPTEMBER 1982; 15 SEPTEMBER 1984–6 SEPTEMBER 1986

THE INCREDIBLE HULK AND THE AMAZING SPIDER-MAN NBC

18 SEPTEMBER 1982–10 SEPTEMBER 1983

THE AMAZING SPIDER-MAN AND THE INCREDIBLE HULK NBC

17 SEPTEMBER 1983–8 SEPTEMBER 1984

SPIDER-MAN FOX

4 FEBRUARY 1995– Spider-Man first came to Saturday-morning television in 1967, as the star of a half-hour cartoon series; the character had first appeared in Marvel Comics in 1962. In real life, Spider-Man was none other than Peter Parker, who had been bitten by a radioactive spider as a college freshman and had acquired the power to spin webs and to walk on walls. The first TV version of Spider-Man remained on Saturday mornings for two seasons; reruns were seen on Sunday mornings in 1970. The character reappeared in a new series in 1981; in Spider-Man and His Amazing Friends, Spider-Man attended college with two other unusual superheroes, Iceman and Firestar. In 1982 Spider-Man teamed up with a cartoon version of The Incredible Hulk, and nobly gave the latter top billing; The Hulk graciously returned the favor the following season. Reruns of Spider-Man and His Amazing Friends were carried on NBC's Saturday morning lineup (usually under that title) for two more seasons. The character returned to Saturday morning, in new episodes, on the Fox network in 1995.

SPIDER-WOMAN ABC

22 SEPTEMBER 1979–1 MARCH 1980 Saturday-morning cartoon show starring Jessica Drew, editor-publisher of Justice magazine, who had been bitten by a poisonous spider as a child and had been treated with an experimental serum that endowed her with arachnid powers.

SPIES CBS

3 MARCH 1987–14 APRIL 1987 A short-lived comedy-adventure series about a veteran spy assigned to train a new agent. With George Hamilton as the senior snoop, Ian Stone; Gary Kroeger as his protegé, Ben Smythe; and Barry Corbin as Thomas Brady, the boss.

THE SPIKE JONES SHOW NBC/CBS

2 JANUARY 1954–8 MAY 1954 (NBC); 2 APRIL 1957–27 AUGUST 1957 (CBS); 1 AUGUST 1960–19 SEPTEMBER 1960 (CBS); 17 JULY 1961–25 SEPTEMBER 1961 (CBS) Bandleader Spike Jones hosted several half-hour comedy-variety shows; all of them featured Jones, singer Helen Grayco (his wife), and Jones's band, The City Slickers. Born Lindley Armstrong Jones, the gum-chewing, loud-suited bandleader injected a great deal of humor and slapstick into his shows—unusual musical instruments and pies in the face were commonplace. Jones is perhaps best remembered for his recording of "Der Führer's Face," popular during World War II.

SPIN THE PICTURE DUMONT

25 JUNE 1949–4 FEBRUARY 1950 Kathi Norris hosted this early game show on which telephone calls were placed to home viewers, who were then given the opportunity to identify a celebrity from a rapidly revolving photograph. The hour series replaced a similar game show called Cut.

SPIN-OFF CBS

16 JUNE 1975–5 SEPTEMBER 1975 Jim Lange was the host of this short-lived daytime game show, on which the contestants played an automated version of poker. Nick Nicholson and E. Roger Muir were the executive producers.

SPLIT PERSONALITY NBC

28 September 1959–5 February 1960 Tom Poston hosted this daytime game show from Goodson-Todman Productions. Contestants attempted to identify celebrities from clues read by the host.

SPLIT SECOND ABC/SYNDICATED

20 March 1972–27 June 1975 (ABC); 1987 (SYNDICATED) Tom Kennedy first hosted this fast-moving daytime quiz show. Each day three contestants competed for money; a player won a greater sum if he or she was the only person to answer a particular question correctly. At the end of the show the top money winner chose one of five automobiles that were on display; if the car started (only one of them did), the contestant won it. If not, the contestant returned the following day to compete again (if the same contestant won the second day, one of the five cars would be eliminated; thus, a contestant who won five shows automatically received a car). Stu Billet was the executive producer for Stefan Hatos–Monty Hall Productions. Monty Hall hosted the short-lived syndicated remake, which surfaced in 1987.

THE SPORTING LIFE PBS

16 April 1985–18 June 1985 Half-hour series of interviews with athletes and other notables from the sports world, hosted by the former Baltimore Orioles pitcher Jim Palmer.

SPORTS ALBUM SYNDICATED

1949 One of the first series made especially for television syndication, Sports Album was a package of sports newsreels distributed by Ziv TV, one of the industry's pioneers in the field of syndication.

THE SPORTS CAMERA ABC

12 September 1950–14 June 1952 Half-hour series of sports films.

SPORTS CHALLENGE SYNDICATED

1971–1973 Dick Enberg hosted this sports quiz show, which featured two three-member teams composed of athletes.

SPORTS CLUB SYNDICATED

1958 Sports interview show hosted by former pro football star Elroy "Crazy Legs" Hirsch.

SPORTS FOCUS ABC

3 June 1957–12 September 1958 Monday-through-Friday sports commentary show, hosted by Howard Cosell.

SPORTSBEAT ABC

16 August 1981–15; December 1985 Veteran ABC sportscaster Howard Cosell hosted this half-hour weekend afternoon series, which usually investigated a behind-the-scenes sports story. The program was originally televised once a month, but went weekly early in 1982.

SPORTSMEN'S QUIZ CBS

26 April 1948–2 May 1949 This five-minute, once-a-week sports quiz was sponsored by Sports Afield magazine.

SPORTSWOMAN OF THE WEEK

See GIRL OF THE WEEK

SPORTSWORLD NBC

22 January 1978– Sportsworld is the umbrella title for NBC's weekend sports anthology series, similar in concept to ABC's Wide World of Sports. The series celebrated its tenth anniversary with a prime-time special on 19 August 1988.

SPOTLIGHT CBS

4 JULY 1967–29 AUGUST 1967 This Tuesday-night summer variety hour had no regulars, other than the Lionel Blair Dancers and the Jack Parnell Orchestra. It was taped in London and produced and directed by Jon Scoffield.

SPOTLIGHT ON SPORTS NBC

8 JULY 1950–3 SEPTEMBER 1950 Bill Stern hosted this half-hour prime-time sports-interview show. During its later weeks the show was titled The Bill Stern Show.

SQUARE ONE TV PBS

26 JANUARY 1987–7 OCTOBER 1994 Produced by The Children's Television Workshop, Square One TV was an ambitious effort, intended to promote an interest in mathematics among third- to sixth-graders, using songs, skits, and guest celebrities.

SQUARE PEGS CBS

27 SEPTEMBER 1982–12 SEPTEMBER 1983 Anne Beatts, a former writer for NBC's Saturday Night Live, created this offbeat sitcom. Set at suburban Weemawee High School, its central characters were two klutzy girls—one tall with glasses, the other short with braces—who were never able to penetrate the ranks of the "in" crowd. Featured were Sarah Jessica Parker as Patty Greene (the tall one); Amy Linker as Lauren Hutchison (the short one); Merrit Butrick as John "Johnny Slash" Ulasewicz, the punk rocker; John Femia as Marshall Blechtman, would-be comic; Tracy Nelson (daughter of actor-singer Rick Nelson) as empty-headed valley girl Jennifer DeNuccio; Jami Gertz as Muffy Tepperman, captain of the Pep Squad; Claudette Wells as LaDonna Fredericks, the token black; Jon Caliri as heartthrob Vinnie Pasetta; Catlin Adams as Ms. Loomis, one of the teachers; Basil Hoffman as Mr. Dingleman, the principal; and Steven Peterman as Rob Donovan, the political science teacher. The series' New Wave theme song was composed and sung by the Waitresses.

THE SQUARE WORLD OF ED BUTLER SYNDICATED

1970 Half-hour talk show hosted by Ed Butler.

STACCATO NBC/ABC

10 SEPTEMBER 1959–24 MARCH 1960 (NBC); 27 MARCH 1960–25 SEPTEMBER 1960 (ABC) John Cassavetes starred in this half-hour crime show as New York private eye Johnny Staccato, a former jazz pianist. Also featured was Eduardo Ciannelli as Waldo, owner of Waldo's, the MacDougal Street club where Staccato usually hung out. Despite an excellent jazz score by Elmer Bernstein, Staccato was panned by most critics as an imitation Peter Gunn (with a touch of Pete Kelly's Blues thrown in), and was dropped in midseason by NBC; ABC picked up the reruns for another twenty-six weeks.

STAGE A NUMBER DUMONT

10 SEPTEMBER 1952–20 MAY 1953 This prime-time talent program showcased not only aspiring performers, but also fledgling writers, directors, choreographers, and other backstage people. The two best presentations, as selected by a celebrity panel, were invited to return to the show the following week. Bill Wendell hosted the series, and Roger Gerry produced it.

STAGE DOOR CBS

7 FEBRUARY 1950–28 MARCH 1950 This short-lived Tuesday-night half-hour series starred Louise Allbritton as Celia Knox, an aspiring actress, and also featured Scott McKay and Tom Pedi. It was produced by Carol Irwin and directed by Barry Kroeger.

STAGE ENTRANCE DUMONT

2 MAY 1951–2 MARCH 1952 Columnist Earl Wilson hosted this fifteen-minute variety and interview series; it was produced by Tod Hammerstein and directed by Bill Seaman.

STAGE 7 CBS

30 JANUARY 1955–25 SEPTEMBER 1955 An undistinguished half-hour dramatic anthology series. Don Rickles played his first TV dramatic role on one show, "A Note of Fear," broadcast 15 May. Warren Lewis produced the series.

STAGE SHOW CBS

3 JULY 1954–18 SEPTEMBER 1954; 1 OCTOBER 1955–22 SEPTEMBER 1956 Stage Show was a musical variety series cohosted by bandleaders Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey. It was introduced, in an hour format, in 1954 as a summer replacement for The Jackie Gleason Show (Gleason was its executive producer). Gleason resurrected the show in the fall of 1955, trimmed it to thirty minutes, and scheduled it immediately preceding his own show on Saturdays (Gleason, too, cut back to a half-hour format that season, as he had decided to do only The Honeymooners, instead of a full-hour variety show). Jack Carter, who guested frequently on the show, became the permanent emcee early in 1956 in an effort to boost ratings. It was on Stage Show that Elvis Presley, barely twenty-one, made his first national television appearances. Elvis first appeared on the show 28 January 1956, performing "Shake, Rattle and Roll," "Flip, Flop and Fly" and "I Got a Woman"; public reaction was strong, and Presley made five more appearances on Stage Show over the following eight weeks. Bobby Darin also made his national TV debut on the show that spring, singing "Rock Island Line."

STAGE 13 CBS

19 APRIL 1950–28 JUNE 1950 Wyllis Cooper produced and directed this suspense anthology series.

STAGE TWO REVUE ABC

30 JULY 1950–24 SEPTEMBER 1950 Half-hour Sunday-night variety series, hosted by Georgia Lee.

STAGECOACH WEST ABC

4 OCTOBER 1960–26 SEPTEMBER 1961 This hour-long western borrowed heavily from Wagon Train and Overland Trail. It featured Wayne Rogers as stagecoach driver Luke Perry; Robert Bray as driver Simon Kane; and Richard Eyer as Simon's young son, Davey.

STAINED GLASS WINDOWS ABC

26 SEPTEMBER 1948–2 OCTOBER 1949 ABC's first religious program, Stained Glass Windows was a filmed-series broadcast for fifteen or thirty minutes on Sunday evenings.

THE STAND (STEPHEN KING'S THE STAND) ABC

8 MAY 1994–12 MAY 1994 Four-night, eight-hour miniseries adapted by Stephen King from his apocalyptic 600-page 1978 novel (which he expanded to 1100 pages in 1990). It pitted good against evil, in the conflict between two groups of people who survived the outbreak of a viral infection which killed most of the world's population. The large cast included Jamey Sheridan as Randall Flagg, satanic leader of the evil group, which was headquartered in Las Vegas; Ruby Dee as Mother Abigail, saintly leader of the good group, which formed in Nebraska; Gary Sinise as Stu Redman; Ray Walston as Professor Glen Bateman; Rob Lowe as Nick Andros; Miguel Ferrer as Lloyd Henreid; Kathy Bates as Rae Flowers; Molly Ringwald as Fran Goldsmith; Corin Nemec as Harold Lauder; Laura San Giacomo as Nadine Cross; and Adam Storke as Larry Underwood. King himself had a small role, as trucker Teddy Weizak.

STAND BY FOR CRIME ABC

22 JANUARY 1949–27 AUGUST 1949 Thirty-minute murder mysteries were presented on this series; at the climax of the show a guest "detective" tried to guess the identity of the killer. Telephone calls from home viewers were also aired during the show. The series was produced in Chicago by Greg Garrison. In May of 1949 Myron Wallace was added as Lieutenant Kidd, Chief of Homicide, who showed the solution to the crime through the use of flashbacks. Wallace went on to greater fame, not as an actor but as a newsman—Mike Wallace.

STAND BY YOUR MAN FOX

5 APRIL 1992–9 APRIL 1992 Half-hour sitcom about two New Jersey sisters who moved in together after their husbands were imprisoned for bank robbery. With Melissa Gilbert-Brinkman as Rochelle Dunphy, the wealthy sister; Rosie O'Donnell as Lorraine Popowski, who moved out of a trailer and into Rochelle's fancy house; Sam McMurray as Rochelle's husband, Roger Dunphy; Rick Hall as Lorraine's husband, Artie Popowski; Don Gibb as Scab; and Miriam Flynn as Adrienne, the sisters' neighbor. The series was based on the British sitcom Birds of a Feather.

STAND UP AND BE COUNTED CBS

28 MAY 1956–6 SEPTEMBER 1957 On this unusual daytime audience participation show, preselected guests appeared and related a problem to the studio audience. Possible solutions to the problem were then suggested by members of the studio audience, who strode to the "rail of justice" to air their views. The entire audience then voted on the best solution propounded by the panel. One of television's few twenty-minute series, Stand Up and Be Counted was hosted by Bob Russell.

STAND UP AND CHEER SYNDICATED

1971 On this half-hour musical series host Johnny Mann, together with the Johnny Mann Singers and assorted guests, sang the praises of the good old U.S.A.

STANDBY . . . LIGHTS! CAMERA! ACTION! NICKELODEON

9 APRIL 1983–4 OCTOBER 1986 Leonard Nimoy hosted this children's show, which provided a behind-the-scenes look at movies and movie-making, as well as clips from newly released films.

STANLEY NBC

24 SEPTEMBER 1956–11 MARCH 1957 Buddy Hackett starred in this half-hour sitcom as Stanley Peck, manager of a newsstand and ticket agency at a New York hotel. Also featured were Carol Burnett as Celia, his girlfriend; Frederic Tozere as Mr. Phillips, manager of the hotel; Tom Pedi; and Danny Dayton. Produced and directed by Max Liebman, the show was broadcast live from New York; the premiere episode was written by Billy Friedberg and Neil Simon.

STAR BLAZER SYNDICATED

1979 A fifty-two-part series of half-hour cartoon shows made in Japan and set in outer space. The series was shown in Japan under the title Space Cruiser Yamato.

STAR GAMES SYNDICATED

1985 Bruce Jenner and Pamela Sue Martin cohosted this hour sports show, on which cast members of two television series battled one another in various athletic endeavors. Dick Butkus refereed.

STAR NIGHT NBC

25 FEBRUARY 1951–2 SEPTEMBER 1951 Bill Stern and Candy Jones cohosted this half-hour audience participation and variety series.

STAR OF THE FAMILY CBS

22 SEPTEMBER 1950–26 JUNE 1952 The celebrity guests who appeared on this half-hour variety show were supposedly "nominated" by letters submitted by members of their families. Morton Downey hosted the series during the 1950–1951 season, and Peter Lind Hayes and Mary Healy were the cohosts during the 1951–1952 season.

STAR OF THE FAMILY ABC

30 SEPTEMBER 1982–23 DECEMBER 1982 Half-hour sitcom about a crusty but lovable firefighter and his teenage daughter, a promising singer. With Brian Dennehy as Leslie "Buddy" Krebs, Captain of Engine Company 64; Kathy Maisnik as his sixteen-year-old daughter, Jennie; Michael Dudikoff as his thick son, Douggie; Todd Susman as firefighter Leo Feldman; George Deloy as firefighter Francis Rosetti; Danny Mora as firefighter Max; and Judy Pioli as Jennie's hefty road manager, Moose. Rick Mitz, author of The Great TV Sitcom Book, created the series with Stu Silver.

STAR SEARCH SYNDICATED

1983– Ed McMahon hosted this talent contest for hopeful singers, dancers, actors, and comics. Competition was held in eight categories: male actor, female actor, male vocalist, female vocalist, vocal group, dancer, comic, and model/spokesperson. Each week seven pairs of contestants competed in seven of those categories. The winning contestant, determined by a panel of judges, returned the following week to face a new challenger in that category. The longest-reigning champions in each of the eight categories were to return in the spring for the final competition to select the Best New Star of the year. In the fall of 1992 a five-day-a-week version of Star Search was introduced; it lasted only a few months, while the weekly series continued. By the mid-1990s, production had shifted to the Disney-MGM Studios in Orlando. In the fall of 1994 the program, now officially titled Ed McMahon's Star Search, added a male spokesmodel category. Former MTV vee-jay Martha Quinn emceed the vocal competition segments.

STAR STAGE NBC

8 SEPTEMBER 1955–7 SEPTEMBER 1956 A Friday-night half-hour filmed dramatic anthology series of little note. Louise Beavers and Betty Grable costarred in one presentation, "Cleopatra Collins," broadcast 9 March.

STAR TIME DUMONT

5 SEPTEMBER 1950–27 FEBRUARY 1951 An hour-long variety series cohosted by Frances Langford and Don Ameche, also featuring the Benny Goodman Sextet and Lew Parker.

STAR TONIGHT ABC

3 FEBRUARY 1955–9 AUGUST 1956 The format of this half-hour dramatic anthology series was similar to that of Hollywood Screen Test—each week an unknown actor was teamed up with established professionals. Jacqueline Holt, for example, was showcased on the premiere. The series was produced by Harry Herrmann and was broadcast live from New York in 1955; by 1956 the series was filmed.

STAR TREK NBC

8 SEPTEMBER 1966–2 SEPTEMBER 1969 One of the few series to prove more popular in reruns than in its three-year network run, Star Trek acquired a fiercely loyal cult following. Its devoted fans were almost certainly responsible for securing the show's renewal for a third season on NBC, having written more than one million letters to the network protesting its threatened cancellation. Surprisingly, the fans (commonly known as "Trekkers") remained loyal as the reruns went into syndication; several fans' conventions have been held, and more Star Trek merchandise was sold during the 1970s than during the late 1960s. For these reasons, Star Trek should probably be considered television's most popular adult science fiction series. Set in the twenty-third century aboard the starship Enterprise, Star Trek's voyagers were commissioned by the United Federation of Planets to embark on a five-year mission to "seek out new life and new civilizations." Many of the seventy-nine episodes stressed the differences between humankind, an obviously imperfect but essentially noble species, and the other life forms, which ranged from gaseous beings to remarkably similar humanoids.

Though the Enterprise was designed to be staffed by a crew of 400, there were only eight principals in the cast: William Shatner as Captain James Kirk; Leonard Nimoy as Science Officer Spock, an extremely intelligent but coldly unemotional creature born of a Vulcan father and an Earthling mother; DeForest Kelley as Dr. Leonard "Bones" McCoy, the medical officer; James Doohan as Montgomery Scott (Scotty), the chief engineer; Nichelle Nichols as Lieutenant Uhura, the communications officer; George Takei as Mr. Sulu, the helmsman; Majel Barrett as Christine Chapel, chief nurse; and Walter Koenig (1967–1969) as Ensign Pavel Chekov, the navigator. During the first season Grace Lee Whitney was occasionally featured as Yeoman Janice Rand. Star Trek was created by Gene Roddenberry, who also served as executive producer. Gene Coon was the first producer and was succeeded by John Meredyth Lucas and Fred Freiberger. Special effects (which Roddenberry wisely refrained from overemphasizing) were created by the Howard Anderson Company, Film Effects of Hollywood, Jim Rugg, and the Westheimer Company. The pilot for the series (which starred Jeffrey Hunter as Captain Pike) was never televised in its entirety, though footage from it was used on a two-part episode, "The Menagerie." In 1973 an animated version of the series was introduced: see below. The series also spawned seven motion pictures made between 1979 and 1993, and a second TV series: see Star Trek: The Next Generation.

STAR TREK NBC

8 SEPTEMBER 1973–30 AUGUST 1975 The Saturday-morning cartoon version of the 1966–1969 science fiction series (see above) featured the voices of seven of Star Trek's principals: William Shatner, Leonard Nimoy, DeForest Kelley, Nichelle Nichols, George Takei, Majel Barrett, and James Doohan. Many of the episodes were based on stories originally televised on the prime-time show. Norm Prescott and Lou Scheimer produced the half-hour series.

STAR TREK: DEEP SPACE NINE SYNDICATED

1993– Spun off from Star Trek: The Next Generation, this hour sci-fi series was set far off in space, at a rundown space station orbiting the planet Bajor, which had been used for mining; it was also conveniently located near a "wormhole," a shortcut to unexplored parts of the galaxy. The cast included Avery Brooks as Commander Benjamin Sisko; Nana Visitor as the First Officer, Major Kira Nerys; Armin Shimerman as Quark, who ran the concessions; Siddig El Fadil as Doctor Julian Bashir (El Fadil changed his name to Alexander Siddig in 1995); Colm Meaney (formerly of Star Trek: The Next Generation) as Miles O'Brien, chief of operations; Rene Auberjonois as the security officer, Odo, a shape-shifting alien; Terry Farrell as Lieutenant Jadzia Dax, chief science officer, a "trill" whose human body was inhabited by a 300-year-old being; Cirroc Lofton as Jake Sisko, Benjamin's young son; and Rosalind Chao as Keiko O'Brien, wife of Miles. Michael Dorn joined the cast in the fall of 1995 as Worf, a Klingon (he'd played the same role on Star Trek: The Next Generation).

STAR TREK: THE NEXT GENERATION SYNDICATED

1987–1994 The continuing popularity of the parent series in reruns, coupled with the success of the five Star Trek Motion pictures, led to the creation of this sequel series in 1987. Gene Roddenberry, who had created the original series, was the executive producer. The new series was set in the early twenty-fourth century, about eighty years after the prior series, aboard a new, and larger, starship Enterprise. The new cast included: Patrick Stewart as Captain Jean-Luc Picard; Jonathan Frakes as Commander William Riker; LeVar Burton as Lieutenant Geordi LaForge, the blind flight controller (and later chief engineer) who wore a special sensor which enabled him to "see" (the character was named to honor a real-life "Trekker," George La Forge, a handicapped fan who died in 1975); Denise Crosby (1987–1988) as security chief Tasha Yar; Gates McFadden (1987–1988; 1989–1994) as medical officer Dr. Beverly Crusher; Marina Sirtis as half-alien Starfleet Counselor Deanna Troi; Brent Spiner as Lieutenant Commander Data, an android; Michael Dorn as Lieutenant Worf, a Klingon; Wil Wheaton (1987–1990) as Beverly's son, Wesley, who became a crew member in the second season; Colm Meaney (1987–1992) as Transporter Chief

Miles O'Brien; Diana Muldaur (1988–1989) as medical officer Dr. Kate Pulaski; and Whoopi Goldberg (1988–1994, appearing occasionally) as Guinan, hostess of the Enterprise's lounge. One of the original Star Trek cast members, Majel Barrett (who was married to Gene Roddenberry), appeared occasionally as Deanna's mother, Lwaxana Troi (Barrett also supplied the voice of the Enterprise's computer). Other notable guest stars included John de Lancie as the villainous Q, member of a super-race which despised humans; Leonard Nimoy (who guested as Spock in a two-part 1991 episode); Mae Jemison, America's first black female astronaut (who appeared in a 1993 episode; Jemison credited Star Trek's Nichelle Nichols with inspiring her career); and physicist Stephen Hawking, who also appeared in a 1993 episode (playing a cosmic game of poker with Data, Albert Einstein, and Isaac Newton).

Star Trek: The Next Generation is a rare example of a sequel series which was more popular than its progenitor. STTNG spawned a spinoff in 1993 (series regular Colm Meaney joined it; see Star Trek: Deep Space Nine), and a successor series in 1995 (see Star Trek: Voyager). STTNG's two-hour finale, televised in May 1994, was the highest rated syndicated program of the season. A feature film, Star Trek Generations, was released in 1994. It starred most of the cast of The Next Generation, as well as William Shatner as Captain Kirk.

STAR TREK: VOYAGER UPN

16 January 1995– Third of the Star Trek progeny, Star Trek: Voyager was the first series aired on the United Paramount Network (and the only one of the fledgling network's first offerings to be renewed for a second season). It was also the first of the Star Trek group in which the regular commanding officer was a woman. Its premise paid tribute to Lost in Space, as its central characters—the crew of the U.S.S. Voyager, a starship smaller than the Enterprise—took a cosmic wrong turn while pursuing the rebel Maquis; the two crews realized that they had to join forces in order to get themselves back to the right side of the galaxy. The cast included Kate Mulgrew as the commander, Captain Kathryn Janeway (Genevieve Bujold had originally been cast but quit after a few days); Robert Beltran as the new First Officer, the Native American Chakotay, who had been the Maquis leader; Roxann Biggs-Dawson as Chief Engineer B'Elanna Torres, who was half human and half Klingon; Robert Duncan McNeill as Lieutenant Tom Paris, the womanizing pilot; Tim Russ as the Vulcan security officer, Tuvok; Ethan Phillips as Neelix, the Talaxian cook; Jennifer Lien as Neelix's love interest, Kes, a one-year-old Ocampan (Ocampans had a life span of only nine years); Robert Picardo as the holographic Doc Zimmerman; and Garrett Wang as the communication officer, Ensign Harry Kim.

STARCADE SYNDICATED

1983 Calling itself "TV's first video game arcade show," this half-hour series was hosted by Geoff Edwards. Each week two youngsters (or, occasionally, two parent-child teams) competed at various video arcade games for the chance to win prizes such as home computers or the games themselves.

STARCOM SYNDICATED

1987 Cartoon series set in space, on which the good guys of Starcom battled the evil Emperor Dark.

THE STARLAND VOCAL BAND SHOW CBS

31 July 1977–2 September 1977 A limited-run half-hour variety series hosted by the Starland Vocal Band (Bill Danoff, Taffy Danoff, Jon Carroll, and Margot Chapman) and taped on location at several sites, including Washington, D.C. Additional regulars included Phil Proctor and Peter Bergman (formerly of the Firesign Theater), Washington satirist Mark Russell, Jeff Altman, and Dave Letterman. The Starland Vocal Band was given the summer series primarily on the strong showing of one hit record, "Afternoon Delight." Jerry Weintraub was the executive producer, and Al Rogers was the producer.

STARLIGHT THEATER CBS

2 APRIL 1950–4 OCTOBER 1951 A half-hour dramatic anthology series produced by Robert Stevens and directed by John Peyser. During the 1950–1951 season it alternated biweekly with The Burns and Allen Show.

STARLIT TIME DUMONT

9 APRIL 1950–19 NOVEMBER 1950 This Sunday-night musical revue was the successor to Front Row Center and retained many of its regulars. Starlit Time featured Phil Hanna, Bill Williams, Allen Prescott, Gordon Dillworth, Bibi Osterwald, Holly Harris, and the Cy Coleman Trio. Bela Lugosi made a very rare guest appearance on the show (21 May).

STARLOST SYNDICATED

1973 Created by Harlan Ellison and produced in Canada, this hour-long science fiction series was set in the twenty-eighth century. Traveling through space in a large spacecraft were the three principals: Keir Dullea as Devon, Gay Rowan as Rachel (Devon's beloved), and Robin Ward as Garth (the man who had intended to marry Rachel). Disappointed with the results, Ellison had his name removed from the credits (the pseudonym of Cordwainer Bird was given for the creator).

STARMAN ABC

19 SEPTEMBER 1986–4 SEPTEMBER 1987 Hour sci-fi series derived from the 1984 motion picture. Robert Hays starred as Starman, a creature from another planet who had visited Earth and fathered a son fourteen years earlier; he returned to Earth to rescue his now-orphaned son (whose stepparents had died) and to look for the boy's mother, Jenny. Upon his return, Starman assumed the identity of photographer Paul Forrester, who had been killed in a helicopter crash. Also featured were C. B. Barnes as the son, Scott Hayden, who helped his father learn about Earth customs; and Michael Cavanaugh as George Fox of the Federal Security Agency, who pursued Starman. In a two-part finale (4 and 11 April) Paul and Scott found Jenny (played by Erin Gray) in Arizona.

STARRING BORIS KARLOFF ABC

22 SEPTEMBER 1949–15 DECEMBER 1949 Boris Karloff hosted and occasionally starred in this half-hour mystery anthology series, which was directed by Alex Segal.

STARS IN KHAKI AND BLUE NBC

13 SEPTEMBER 1952–27 SEPTEMBER 1952 Wendy Barrie hosted this prime-time talent show for members of the Armed Forces. Craig G. Allen directed the half-hour series.

STARS OF JAZZ ABC

18 APRIL 1958–30 NOVEMBER 1958 Half-hour musical series, hosted by trumpeter Bobby Troup, and featuring guest artists from the world of jazz.

STARS ON PARADE DUMONT

4 NOVEMBER 1953–30 JUNE 1954 Half-hour prime-time variety show featuring talent from the armed forces, as well as civilian acts. Don Russell was the first host of the show, but was succeeded by Bobby Sherwood on the third telecast.

STARS OVER HOLLYWOOD NBC

6 SEPTEMBER 1950–29 AUGUST 1951 This half-hour filmed dramatic anthology series was seen on Wednesday nights. One 1950 program, "Grady Everett for the People," was the first script written by Rod Serling; it was bought for $100.

STARSKY AND HUTCH ABC

10 SEPTEMBER 1975–21 AUGUST 1979 A popular, and comparatively violent, hour-long crime show about a pair of undercover cops. With Paul Michael Glaser as Dave Starsky; David Soul as his partner, Ken Hutchinson; Bernie Hamilton as their commanding officer, Captain Harold Dobey; and Antonio Fargas as their street contact, Huggy Bear. William Blinn created the series, and Aaron Spelling and Leonard Goldberg were the executive producers.

THE START OF SOMETHING BIG SYNDICATED

1985–1986 Hour documentary series hosted by Steve Allen (whose many musical compositions included "This Could Be the Start of Something Big"), consisting of interviews with celebrities about their origins in showbiz and segments explaining the origins of various products.

STARTING FROM SCRATCH SYNDICATED

1988–1989 Predictable half-hour sitcom starring Bill Daily as James Shepherd, a divorced veterinarian raising two teenagers, and Connie Stevens as Helen, his meddlesome ex-wife. With Heidi Helmer as daughter Kate; Jason Marin as son Robbie; and Nita Talbot as Rose, James's assistant.

STAT ABC

16 APRIL 1991–21 MAY 1991 Created by Danny Arnold and reminiscent of his 1978 series, A.E.S. Hudson Street, this was a medical sitcom set at Hudson Memorial Hospital in New York. It featured Dennis Boutsikaris as senior resident Tony Menzies; Alison LaPlaca as first-year resident Elizabeth Newberry; Alix Elias as Jeanette Lemp; Casey Biggs as Dr. Lewis "Cowboy" Doniger; Ron Canada as Nurse Anderson "Mary" Roche; Dannel Arnold as Dr. Werner; Julio Oscar Mechoso as orderly Julio Oscar; and Wren T. Brown as Dr. Ron Murphy. Costars Boutsikaris and LaPlaca would later work together on The Jackie Thomas Show.

STATE TROOPER SYNDICATED

1957 Half-hour crime show starring Rod Cameron as Nevada State Trooper Rod Blake. Much of the series was filmed in Las Vegas.

STEP BY STEP ABC

20 SEPTEMBER 1991– This sitcom borrowed its premise from The Brady Bunch: two single parents, each with three kids, get married and blend themselves into one happy family. Set in Port Washington, Wisconsin, it featured Patrick Duffy as divorced contractor Frank Lambert; Suzanne Somers as widow Carol Foster, who operated a beauty shop with her mother and sister; Staci Keanan as Dana Foster; Angela Watson as Karen Foster; Brandon Call as J. T. Lambert; Christine Lakin as Alicia "Al" Lambert; Josh Byrne as Brendan Lambert; Christopher Castile as Mark Foster; Patrika Darbo as Carol's sister, Penny Williams; and Peggy Rea as Carol's mother, Ivy Williams. Sasha Mitchell joined the cast later in the fall of 1991 as Frank's nephew, Cody.

STEP THIS WAY ABC/SYNDICATED

9 JULY 1955–14 APRIL 1956 (ABC); 1966 (SYNDICATED) Step This Way was a half-hour dance contest. The 1955 version was hosted by Bobby Sherwood and featured the Nat Brandwynne Orchestra. The 1966 version was hosted by Gretchen Wyler and featured singer Jim Lucas; music was supplied by Warren Covington and his band, and later by Ray McKinley and his band.

THE STEPHANIE MILLER SHOW SYNDICATED

1995 Although several new syndicated daytime talk shows were introduced in 1995, The Stephanie Miller Show was aimed at late-night viewers. Hosted by former disc jockey Stephanie Miller, the short-lived hour show was comprised of celebrity interviews and comedy sketches. Fellow talker Danny Bonaduce filled in for Miller during the series' final week.

STEVE ALLEN PRESENTS STEVE LAWRENCE AND EYDIE GORMÉ NBC
13 JULY 1958–31 AUGUST 1958 Steve Lawrence and Eydie Gormé, who had been featured vocalists on Steve Allen's Tonight show, were given their own series in 1958, a summer replacement for Steve Allen's Sunday-night variety show. Also featured were Gene Rayburn, the Artie Malvin Singers, and the Jack Kane Orchestra.

THE STEVE ALLEN SHOW CBS/NBC/ABC/SYNDICATED
25 DECEMBER 1950–22 FEBRUARY 1952 (CBS); 17 JULY 1952–28 AUGUST 1952 (CBS); 24 JUNE 1956–6 JUNE 1960 (NBC); 27 SEPTEMBER 1961–27 DECEMBER 1961 (ABC); 1962–1964 (SYNDICATED); 14 JUNE 1967–16 AUGUST 1967 (CBS); 1967–1969 (SYNDICATED); 1976 (SYNDICATED) Steve Allen is not only one of the busiest performers in television, but he is also one of the most versatile people in show business. In addition to hosting several TV series, he has also starred in films (The Benny Goodman Story), on Broadway (The Pink Elephant), and in summer stock (The Fourposter), has written at least a dozen books and several television scripts, has composed hundreds of songs (to win a bet with singer Frankie Laine, he once "composed" 350 songs in one week), has played several musical instruments, and has had time left over to deliver an occasional lecture or do a little sculpture.

In 1948 Allen was working at KNX radio in Los Angeles, where his late-night radio show began to attract a studio audience and unscheduled visits by celebrities; it was here that Allen first began to interview members of the studio audience, a device he has continued to use effectively in most of his TV shows. Allen also hosted a radio giveaway show, Earn Your Vacation (Johnny Carson would later emcee the TV version). In 1950 he was brought East to New York for the first of his TV shows. The Steve Allen Show began as an evening show, broadcast Mondays through Fridays at 7:00 P.M. After thirteen weeks he moved to a daytime slot, and the show remained on the air for another year; the show was directed by Fred Kelly, and in 1952 featured singer Peggy Lee, announcer Bern Bennett, and a llama named Llemuel. By the time the daytime show left the air, Allen had substituted for Arthur Godfrey on Talent Scouts and had hosted a prime-time musical show, Songs for Sale. During the summer of 1952 he hosted a prime-time half-hour show on alternate Thursdays. In 1953 he hosted Talent Patrol on ABC and later began a local late-night talk show; in the summer of 1954 Allen's local show went network, and the Tonight show was born.

The nightly pace of the Tonight show did not seem to slow Allen down, however. In the summer of 1956 he agreed to host a variety show opposite The Ed Sullivan Show on Sunday nights. The second Steve Allen Show premiered on 24 June, with guests Kim Novak, Sammy Davis, Jr., Dane Clark, Wally Cox, Vincent Price, and Bambi Linn and Rod Alexander. Elvis Presley also appeared that summer, and Allen's use of big name guest stars provoked a long-running feud between Sullivan and Allen. Though both shows were variety hours, the difference between them was considerable, as Allen's hour emphasized humor. Allen assembled a talented group of young funny men, who appeared in the well-remembered "Man in the Street" sequences and in the other comedy sketches. Over the years the group included Don Knotts, Tom Poston, Louis Nye, Gabe Dell, Pat Harrington, Jr., Dayton Allen, Cal Howard, and Bill Dana. Allen's writers at the time included Leonard Stern, Stan Burns, Herb Sargent, Bill Dana, Don Hinkley, Arne Sultan, and Marvin Worth.

Though the Sunday-night show rarely outdrew Sullivan's show on a weekly basis, it did succeed in making a significant dent in Sullivan's ratings; The Ed Sullivan Show slipped from the second top-rated show during the 1956–1957 season to the nineteenth during the next season. Allen, who gave up his Tonight show hosting chores early in 1957, later took his variety show to the West Coast; during the 1959–1960 season the show was seen on Monday nights.

After a season's absence Allen returned to TV, this time on ABC. The New Steve Allen Show was a lot like the old Steve Allen show and featured Louis Nye, Don Knotts, Pat Harrington, Jr., Gabe Dell, and Dayton Allen; slotted on Wednesdays opposite Wagon Train, it was gone in thirteen weeks. A year later Allen returned to the talk-show format, hosting a daily ninety-minute show for Westinghouse; in many markets the show was scheduled opposite the Tonight show that Allen had started eight years earlier (Johnny Carson had since taken over as host). Allen later hosted I've Got A Secret for three seasons, and in the summer of 1967 he emceed The Steve Allen Comedy Hour; that series featured Jayne Meadows (Steve's wife), Louis Nye, Ruth Buzzi, John Byner, Ron Carey, and the Terry Gibbs Band. Toward the end of 1967 he again hosted a syndicated, ninety-minute talk show. He later hosted a series of musical performances for educational television, The Sounds of Summer, and in 1972 he presided over the short-lived syndicated revival of I've Got a Secret. In 1976 he again returned to the syndication arena as the host of Steve Allen's Laughback; on that ninety-minute show Allen, Jayne Meadows, and guests reminisced over kinescopes and film clips of Allen's old shows. Allen also wrote and hosted a series for PBS, Meeting of Minds, a kind of historical talk show on which actors, appearing as historical figures from different eras, discussed issues. See also I've Got A Secret; Songs for Sale; Talent Patrol; Tonight; and What's My Line?

STEVE CANYON NBC

13 SEPTEMBER 1958–8 SEPTEMBER 1959 Steve Canyon, the fearless Air Force pilot created by cartoonist Milton Caniff in 1948, came to life for one season. Produced by David Haft and Michael Meshekoff, the half-hour series was set at Big Thunder Air Force Base and starred Dean Fredericks (who actually resembled the cartoon prototype) as Lieutenant Colonel Stevenson B. Canyon. Jerry Paris was occasionally seen as Major Willie Williston, and Abel Fernandez appeared as Police Chief Hagedorn.

STEVE DONOVAN, WESTERN MARSHAL SYNDICATED

1955 Half-hour western set in Wyoming during the 1870s, with Doug Kennedy as Marshal Steve Donovan and Eddy Waller as his sidekick, Rusty Lee. The series was also shown under the title Western Marshal.

THE STEVE LAWRENCE SHOW CBS

13 SEPTEMBER 1965–13 DECEMBER 1965 Steve Lawrence's Monday-night variety hour lasted only thirteen weeks. Other regulars included comics Charles Nelson Reilly and Betty Walker, the Pussycat Dancers, the Dick Williams Singers, and the Joe Guercio Orchestra. The series was taped principally in New York.

THE STEVEN BANKS SHOW PBS

1994 A rarity for public television, The Steven Banks Show was an American-produced comedy program. Comedian/musician Steven Banks starred, playing himself, a single guy in his thirties who lived in a cluttered apartment. The other regulars were Teresa Parente and Michael Kostroff, who played several different characters during the series' thirteen-episode run.

STINGRAY SYNDICATED

1965 Stingray was another of the half-hour puppet adventure shows produced in England by Gerry and Sylvia Anderson (creators of Fireball XL-5, Supercar, and Thunderbirds); all utilized a process known as Supermarionation. Stingray was set aboard a futuristic submarine, whose crew battled the usual assortment of wrongdoers, despots, and invaders.

STINGRAY NBC

4 MARCH 1986–22 AUGUST 1986; 9 JANUARY 1987–31 JULY 1987 Although television has had its share of heroes with only one name (Paladin, Columbo, Quincy, and Spenser, to cite a few), creator Stephen J. Cannell invented a protagonist with no name at all for this hour action series. The solitary hero, played by Nick Mancuso, was known only by the car he drove: a 1965 Corvette Stingray. He tooled around, stopping to help people in distress; Stingray asked for no money in return, but reserved the right to request a return favor from those he helped. One of the most interesting features of the show was its closing credits, which showed members of the series' crew at work, setting up shots from that evening's episode. The pilot for the series was telecast 14 July 1985.

STIR CRAZY CBS

18 SEPTEMBER 1985–23 OCTOBER 1985; 17 DECEMBER 1985–7 JANUARY 1986 A short-lived comedy-adventure series inspired by the 1980 movie. Joe Guzaldo and Larry Riley starred as Skip Harrington and Harry Fletcher, two pals (one white, one black) who were wrongly imprisoned for murder in Texas, escaped from a chain gang, and set out to find the real killer, the tattooed Crawford (played by Marc Silver). Chasing them was Captain Betty Phillips (played by Jeannie Wilson).

STOCK CAR DERBY NBC

28 JANUARY 1950–11 MARCH 1950 This late-night series offered coverage of the races from the Kingsbridge Armory in the Bronx; Herb Sheldon provided the commentary.

THE STOCKARD CHANNING SHOW CBS

24 MARCH 1980–28 JUNE 1980 Stockard Channing starred in this half-hour series, her second sitcom in as many years (she had headlined in Just Friends in 1979). Here she appeared as Susan Goodenow, a single woman who landed a job at a TV station assisting its consumer advocate. Also featured were Jack Somack as Mr. Kramer, Susan's landlord; Ron Silver as egotistical Brad Gabriel, the consumer advocate; Max Showalter as Gus Kline, the station manager; and Sydney Goldsmith as her neighbor and coworker, Earlene Cunningham.

STONE ABC

14 JANUARY 1980–17 MARCH 1980 Hour crime show starring Dennis Weaver as Sergeant Daniel Ellis Stone, a cop and a writer, with Bobby Weaver (his real-life son) as his young partner, Buck Rogers.

STONEY BURKE ABC

1 OCTOBER 1962–2 SEPTEMBER 1963 One of two modern-day westerns introduced in 1962 (Wide Country was the other), Stoney Burke starred Jack Lord in the title role as a rodeo performer. Also featured were Bruce Dern as E. J. Stocker; Bill Hart as Red; Warren Oates as Ves Painter; and Robert Dowdell as Cody Bristol. Leslie Stevens produced the hour-long series for Daystar Productions.

STOP ME IF YOU'VE HEARD THIS ONE NBC

5 MARCH 1948–22 APRIL 1949 Half-hour game show, based on the radio program, on which celebrity panelists tried to supply punch lines to jokes submitted by home viewers. Ira Skutch produced the show, which was hosted first by Ted Brown, and later by Leon Janney. Panelists included Lew Lahr, Morey Amsterdam, Cal Tinney, Mae Questel, and Benny Rubin.

STOP THE MUSIC ABC

5 MAY 1949–24 APRIL 1952; 7 SEPTEMBER 1954–14 JUNE 1956 A prime-time game show, Stop the Music came to television a year after it began on radio. For most of its run it was hosted by Bert Parks, though Dennis James filled in occasionally. The game involved identification of songs by members of the studio audience and by home viewers, who were telephoned during the broadcast. Featured vocalists over the years included Kay Armen, Jimmy Blaine, Betty Ann Grove, Estelle Loring, Jaye P. Morgan, and June Valli; rounding out the group of regulars were dancers Sonja and Courtney Van Horne, cartoonist Chuck Luchsinger, and the orchestra of Harry Salter. Louis G. Cowan, who later developed The $64,000 Question, packaged the half-hour series.

THE STOREFRONT LAWYERS (MEN AT LAW) CBS

16 SEPTEMBER 1970–1 SEPTEMBER 1971 This hour-long dramatic series began with three stars: Robert Foxworth as David Hanson, Sheila Larken as Deborah Sullivan, and David Arkin as Gabe Kaye. The three were members of a Los Angeles law firm but also operated Neighborhood Legal Services, a nonprofit law clinic. In midseason the format was changed slightly, the show was retitled Men at Law, and Gerald S. O'Loughlin was added as attorney Devlin McNeil, a senior partner at Horton, Troy, McNeil, and Carroll. Leonard Freeman was the executive producer.

STORIES OF THE CENTURY SYNDICATED

1954 Half-hour western about a pair of detectives for the Southwestern Railroad. With Jim Davis as Matt Clark; Mary Castle as his first partner, Frankie Adams; Kristine Miller as his second partner, Jonesy. Stories of the Century was one of the first syndicated series to win a major Emmy award; it was named the best western or adventure series of 1954.

THE STORK CLUB CBS/ABC

7 JULY 1950–31 OCTOBER 1953 (CBS); 11 SEPTEMBER 1954–24 JULY 1955 (ABC) Sherman Billingsley hosted this variety show, telecast from the fourth floor of The Stork Club, a Manhattan night club which Billingsley had opened in 1934. Peter Lind Hayes and Mary Healy were also featured in the early weeks. The Stork Club began as a fifteen-minute show and was first telecast five nights a week. In January 1951 it was cut back to twice weekly, and in the fall of 1952 it became a once-a-week, half-hour show.

STORY FOR AMERICANS CBS

6 JULY 1952–2 NOVEMBER 1952 A Sunday-afternoon anthology series that dramatized incidents from American history.

THE STORY OF . . . SYNDICATED

1962 A half-hour anthology series from David Wolper Productions and United Artists, The Story Of . . . was advertised as a "semidocumentary." John Willis narrated the filmed series.

THE STORY OF ENGLISH PBS

15 SEPTEMBER 1986–10 NOVEMBER 1986 Highly acclaimed nine-part documentary series on the English language—its origins, evolution, usage, and popularity—hosted by Robert MacNeil.

STORY THEATER DUMONT/NBC

24 NOVEMBER 1950–11 MAY 1951 (DUMONT); 24 JUNE 1951–17 SEPTEMBER 1951 (NBC) Half-hour filmed dramatic anthology series.

STORY THEATRE SYNDICATED

1971 Story Theatre was an unusual anthology series, based on the Broadway show of the same title. The half-hour show featured a large repertory company, the members of which acted out various fables, parables, and other stories. Paul Sills directed both the stage and the television versions; the series was taped in British Columbia. Among the members of the repertory company were Peter Bonerz, Paul Sand, Richard Schaal, Bob Dishy, Hamilton Camp, Melinda Dillon, Richard Libertini, Eugene Troobnick, and Severn Darden.

THE STORYBOOK SQUARES NBC

4 JANUARY 1969–30 AUGUST 1969 The Storybook Squares was a children's edition of The Hollywood Squares; the Saturday-morning show was hosted by Peter Marshall.

The principal difference was that the nine celebrity panelists were costumed on The Storybook Squares.

STRAIGHTAWAY ABC

6 OCTOBER 1961–4 JULY 1962 This half-hour adventure series starred Brian Kelly as Scott Ross and John Ashley as Clipper Hamilton, the partners who ran the Straightaway Garage, an exclusive garage for race car drivers and other exciting people. The series was beset with production problems, having gone through three producers before the first episode was televised; Joe Shaftel was the fourth producer. It was to have been titled The Racers, with Autolite Spark Plugs as its sponsor. In the summer of 1961 Autolite was absorbed by the Ford Motor Company, which then insisted that the racing angle be deemphasized. Maynard Ferguson composed the music for the series.

STRANGE LUCK FOX

15 SEPTEMBER 1995– Offbeat hour series starring D. B. Sweeney as Chance Harper. As a young child, Harper had been the only survivor of a plane crash; as an adult, he discovered that luck—good and bad—seemed to follow him. He embarked upon a career as a photojournalist, because of his propensity to be present where unusual events occurred. He also discovered that he had an older brother who had not been killed in the air crash, and set out to find him. Also featured were Pamela Gidley as Audrey Westin, Harper's ex-girlfriend, who was the photo editor of a newspaper and often gave him assignments; Cynthia Martells as Dr. Richter, a police psychiatrist who befriended Harper; and Frances Fisher as Angie, the waitress at Harper's favorite hangout, the Blue Plate Cafe.

STRANGE PARADISE SYNDICATED

1969 One of television's few syndicated serials, Strange Paradise was an imitation of Dark Shadows. Set at Maljardin Island, a mysterious Caribbean isle, its story lines dealt with voodoo, communication with spirits, and family curses. The cast included: Colin Fox as Jean Paul Desmond, owner of Desmond Hall, and as Jacques Eloi Des Mondes, an ancestor; Tudi Wiggins as his wife, Erica Desmond, who died—once—and returned to life; Dawn Greenhalgh as Erica's sister, Dr. Alison Carr, a visitor to Maljardin; Jon Granik as Dan Forrest; Bruce Gray as artist Tim Stanton; Sylvia Feigel as Holly Marshall; Paisley Maxwell as Holly's mother, Elizabeth Marshall; Dan MacDonald as Reverend Matt Dawson; Costee Lee as Raxl, an island priestess; Kurt Schiegl as Quito; Patricia Collins as Huaco; Peg Dixon as Ada; Pat Moffat as Irene; Jack Creley as Laslo; Lucy Warner as Emily; David Wells as Cort; and Neil Dainard as Philip. Videotaped in color, the half-hour series was produced in Canada.

STRANGE REPORT NBC

8 JANUARY 1971–10 SEPTEMBER 1971 British import about a trio of criminologists, with Anthony Quayle as widower Adam Strange; Kaz Garas as Ham Gynt; and Anneke Wills as Evelyn McClain. The hour series was a midseason replacement for Bracken's World.

STRANGE STORIES SYNDICATED

1956 Edward Arnold hosted this half-hour anthology series of supernatural tales.

THE STRANGER DUMONT

25 JUNE 1954–11 FEBRUARY 1955 Frank Telford produced and directed this half-hour series, which is reminiscent of The Millionaire. It starred Bob Carroll as The Stranger, a mysterious individual who appeared each week to help someone in distress.

THE STRAUSS FAMILY ABC

5 MAY 1973–16 JUNE 1973 ABC imported this seven-part series from England. It traced the lives of the famous composers over a seventy-five-year period. Principal players included: Eric Woolfe as Johann Strauss, Sr.; Anne Stallybrass as Anna, his wife; Stuart Wilson as Johann Strauss, Jr.; Barbara Ferris as Emilie; Derek Jacobi as Lanner; Lynn Farleigh as Adele; and Tony Anholt as Eduard.

STRAWHAT MATINEE NBC

25 JUNE 1951–7 SEPTEMBER 1951 A summer replacement for The Kate Smith Show, Strawhat Matinee was broadcast from Cincinnati and featured country-and-western music. Principal vocalists included Mel Martin, Rosemary Olberding, and Dick and Pat.

THE STRAWHATTERS DUMONT

27 MAY 1953–9 SEPTEMBER 1953; 23 JUNE 1954–8 SEPTEMBER 1954 Johnny Olson hosted this summer variety show, broadcast from Palisades Park, New Jersey. The half-hour series was produced by Roger Gerry and directed by Frank Bunetta.

THE STREET SYNDICATED

1988 An unusual half-hour crime show, produced on location in Newark, N.J., The Street used a video verité style (and lots of four-letter words) as it focused on the lives of four police officers. Appearing were Bruce MacVittie as Bud Peluso; Stanley Tucci as Arthur Scolari, his partner on the night shift; Ron J. Ryan as Jack Runyon; and Michael Beach as Shepard Scott, his partner on the graveyard shift.

STREET HAWK ABC

4 JANUARY 1985–8 MARCH 1985; 2 MAY 1985–16 MAY 1985 Hour crime show, with an emphasis on vehicular hardware. The series starred Rex Smith as Jesse Mach, an ex-motorcycle cop who was recruited by the government for special missions and rode the Street Hawk, a super-powered cycle: it could travel at speeds up to 300 m.p.h., it could go on any terrain, it had a .50 caliber machine gun and a special "blue ray" particle beam weapon. Mach kept his cover as a public relations officer with the police department. Also featured were Joe Regalbuto as Norman Tuttle, inventor of the Street Hawk, the only person who knew of Mach's dual role; Richard Venture as Commander Leo Altobelli, Mach's boss on the police force, who wanted to apprehend Street Hawk; and Jeannie Wilson as Officer Rachel Adams.

STREET JUSTICE SYNDICATED

1991–1993 Hour crime show, filmed in Vancouver, with Carl Weathers as Sergeant Adam Beaudreaux; Charlene Fernetz as Malloy, who co-owned a local bar with Beaudreaux; Bryan Genesse as Grady Jamieson, who worked at the bar and lived with Beaudreaux; and Leam Blackwood as Beaudreaux's boss, Lieutenant Charles Pine.

STREET MATCH ABC

28 JULY 1993–1 SEPTEMBER 1993 This unusual prime time series was a revamped version of The Dating Game. Host Ricky Paull Goldin roamed the streets of various cities, introducing strangers to each other, and accompanying them on their first dates.

STREET PEOPLE SYNDICATED

1971 A half-hour series with almost no format—host Mal Sharpe merely interviewed people, or asked them to tell jokes or sing or whatever; the show was filmed on location throughout the United States.

STREET STORIES CBS

9 JANUARY 1992–6 AUGUST 1993 Hour investigative series, hosted by Ed Bradley, with regular contributors Harold Dow, Bob McKeown, Bernard Goldberg, and Victoria Corderi.

STREETS OF DANGER

See THE LONE WOLF

THE STREETS OF SAN FRANCISCO ABC

16 SEPTEMBER 1972–23 JUNE 1977 This hour-long crime show was filmed entirely on location in San Francisco. It starred Karl Malden as Detective Lieutenant Mike Stone, a streetwise veteran; Michael Douglas as his young partner, Inspector Steve Keller; and Lee Harris as Lieutenant Lessing. Michael Douglas left the show at the outset of the 1976–1977 season (it was explained that he had decided to pursue a teaching career), and Richard Hatch was added in the fall of 1976 as Stone's new partner, Inspector Dan Robbins. The series was developed by Edward Hume and was based on a novel by Carolyn Weston. Quinn Martin was the executive producer. On 27 January 1992 NBC aired a two-hour telefilm, "Back to the Streets of San Francisco," starring Malden as Stone, investigating Keller's disappearance.

STRIKE FORCE ABC

13 NOVEMBER 1981–23 APRIL 1982 Hour crime show starring Robert Stack as Captain Frank Murphy, head of the Strike Force, an elite unit of the Los Angeles Police Department. Also on hand were Richard Romanus as Charlie Gunzer; Trisha Noble as Rosie; Dorian Harewood as Paul; Michael Goodwin as Mark Osborn; and Herb Edelman as Murphy's commanding officer, Detective Commander Herb Klein.

STRIKE IT RICH CBS

7 MAY 1951–3 JANUARY 1958 Strike It Rich, which began on radio in 1947, was a game show not unlike Queen for a Day. Each day a succession of needy people came on; whoever told the most woeful story (as determined by the studio audience) was the day's winner. The show also featured a perfunctory quiz segment, and the "Heart Line," where viewers could call in with offers of aid for any of the contestants. The show aroused the wrath of the New York City Welfare Department early in 1954, when it was disclosed that in 1953 some fifty-five families had come to New York, hoping to get on the show, and had remained in New York and gone on welfare. Strike It Rich was hosted by Warren Hull; the daytime version of the half-hour series ran from May 1951 to January 1958, while a nighttime version was broadcast between July 1951 and January 1955. Walt Framer was the producer.

STRIKE IT RICH SYNDICATED

1986 This game show bore no resemblance to the 1950s series of the same title. Joe Garagiola hosted the show, on which two couples competed, moving across a series of arches onstage by answering multiple choice questions correctly.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING CBS

19 SEPTEMBER 1979–3 OCTOBER 1979 A short-lived sitcom that was pulled from the air after only three showings, Struck By Lightning was set at the Brightwater Inn in Maine, where Frankenstein's monster worked as the handyman. The half-hour series featured Jeffrey Kramer as Ted Stein, a science teacher from Boston who inherited the inn from his late grandfather and subsequently learned that he was a descendant of the Frankensteins; Jack Elam as Frank, the 231-year-old monster; Millie Slavin as Nora, who worked at the inn and had expected to inherit it; Bill Erwin as Glenn, one of the inn's guests; Jeff Cotler as Brian, Nora's young son; and Richard Stahl as Walt Calvin, the local realtor. Arthur Fellows and Terry Keegan were the executive producers.

THE STRUGGLE FOR DEMOCRACY PBS

11 JULY 1989–12 SEPTEMBER 1989 A timely look at the evolution of the democratic form of government. The series' host, Canadian journalist Patrick Watson, visited thirty nations for the ten-part series.

STRYKER OF SCOTLAND YARD SYNDICATED

1957 Half-hour crime show from England, starring Clifford Evans as Inspector Robert Stryker of Scotland Yard.

THE STU ERWIN SHOW ABC

21 OCTOBER 1950–13 APRIL 1955 One of TV's first filmed sitcoms, The Stu Erwin Show helped set the pace for dozens of comedies to come—it featured a bumbling father, his loving and level-headed wife, and two irrepressible kids. Stu Erwin (playing himself) starred as the principal of Hamilton High School. Also on hand were June Collyer (Erwin's real-life wife and Bud Collyer's sister) as his wife, June Erwin; Ann Todd and Merry Anders as their older daughter, Joyce; Sheila James as their younger daughter, Jackie; Martin Milner as Joyce's boyfriend (and husband in the final season), Jimmy Clark; and Willie Best as Willie, the Erwins' handyman. Produced by Hal Roach, Jr., the half-hour series was aired under several other titles during its network run and later in syndication—Life with the Erwins, The New Stu Erwin Show, and The Trouble with Father.

STUDIO 59

See INTO THE NIGHT STARRING RICK DEES

STUDIO 57 DUMONT/SYNDICATED

21 SEPTEMBER 1954–26 JULY 1955 (DUMONT); 1955–1956 (SYNDICATED) A half-hour dramatic anthology series from Revue Studios, sponsored by Heinz 57 Varieties.

STUDIO 5B ABC

24 JANUARY 1989–5 FEBRUARY 1989 Only three episodes of this hour dramatic series were televised. It was supposed to provide a behind-the-scenes look at a fictional popular network morning television show, Studio 5B. Its dismal ratings (the series finished in a tie for last place among all prime-time shows for the season) suggested that American viewers are not really interested in what happens behind the screen. The cast included Wendy Crewson as producer Gail Browning; Kerrie Keane as anchor Carla Montgomery; Kim Myers as rookie production assistant Samantha Hurley; Justin Deas as Carla's ex-boyfriend, Jake; Jeffrey Tambor as Lionel, the executive producer; Kenneth David Gilman as David, the senior producer; Kate Zentell as Rosemary; George Grizzard as Douglas Hayward; and William Thomas, Jr., as Woody.

STUDIO ONE CBS

7 NOVEMBER 1948–29 SEPTEMBER 1958 Studio One was one of the oldest, and most highly acclaimed, of the several dramatic anthology series that comprised television's "Golden Age." The hour-long series was produced by Worthington "Tony" Miner from 1948 until 1952, and was later produced by Herbert Brodkin. Many directors worked on Studio One at one time or another, but Franklin Schaffner and Paul Nickell, who alternated biweekly during part of the show's ten-year-run, were especially closely associated with it. Other prominent directors who were involved with Studio One included Yul Brynner, George Roy Hill, Sidney Lumet, and Robert Mulligan. Studio One was broadcast live from New York until January of 1958, when production shifted to the West Coast (and the show was retitled Studio One in Hollywood); the show left the air a few months later. A sampling of the many presentations from Studio One would include: "The Storm," with Margaret Sullavan (7 November 1948); a 1949 production of "Mary Poppins," with Mary Wickes, E. G. Marshall, and Valerie Cossart; "Of Human Bondage," with Charlton Heston and Felicia Montealegre (Maugham's story was adapted by Sumner Locke Elliott, and broadcast 21 November 1949); "The Rockingham Tea Set," with Grace Kelly (23 January 1950); "The Taming of the Shrew," with Charlton Heston and Lisa Kirk (5 June 1950); "Macbeth," with Charlton Heston and Judith Evelyn (22 October 1951); "The Kill," with Grace Kelly (22 September 1952); "The Laugh Maker," with Jackie Gleason (18 May 1953, in a rare dramatic appearance); "Sentence of Death," with James Dean (in one of his first major TV roles, broadcast 17 August 1953 on Summer Studio One); "A Handful of Diamonds," with Lorne Greene (in his first major TV role, 19 April 1954); "Sue Ellen," with Inger Stevens (in her first major TV role, 9 August 1954); Reginald Rose's "Twelve Angry Men," with Edward Arnold, John Beal, Walter Abel, Bart Burns, Robert Cummings, Paul Hartman, Lee Philips,

Joseph Sweeney, Franchot Tone, George Voskovec, and Will West (broadcast 20 September 1954, the drama was later made into a movie); "A Picture in the Paper," with Jason Robards, Jr. (in his first major TV role, 9 May 1955); "For the Defense," with Mike Wallace (in a rare dramatic role, 27 June 1955); "Dino," with Sal Mineo (written by Reginald Rose, broadcast 2 January 1956); Reginald Rose's "The Defender," with Ralph Bellamy, William Shatner, and Steve McQueen (broadcast in two parts on 25 February and 4 March 1957, the drama was the basis for The Defenders, a 1961 series); "The Mother Bit," with Peter Falk (10 June 1957); and "The Night America Trembled," with Warren Beatty (in a rare TV appearance, 9 September 1957).

STUDIO SEE PBS

25 JANUARY 1977–3 AUGUST 1979 Half-hour magazine series aimed principally at young people between ten and fifteen; filmed on location, the show included poetry readings, original animation, and filmed segments. Jayne Adair created the show.

STUDS SYNDICATED

1991–1993 Prurient game show featuring a panel of two men and three women; the guys, each of whom had dated all three of the women, attempted to match the gals' double-entendre-laden responses to various questions about the date. Mark DeCarlo hosted the festivities.

STUDS' PLACE NBC/ABC

26 NOVEMBER 1949–24 AUGUST 1950 (NBC); 13 OCTOBER 1950–24 DECEMBER 1951 (ABC) This half-hour comedy was set at Studs' Place, a corner bar and grille in a Chicago neighborhood. Most of the dialogue was improvised by the regulars: Studs Terkel as the owner, Beverly Younger as Grace the waitress, Win Stracke, Chet Roble, and Philip Lord. Developed by Charles Andrews, the show was produced and directed in Chicago by Ben Park and Dan Petrie.

STUMP THE AUTHORS ABC

15 JANUARY 1949–2 APRIL 1949 Another of the several Chicago-based shows that were broadcast back East after the opening of the coaxial cable in 1949, Stump the Authors was a Saturday-night panel series on which professional writers tried to extemporize on various subjects.

STUMP THE STARS

See PANTOMIME QUIZ

STUMPERS NBC

4 OCTOBER 1976–31 DECEMBER 1976 Allen Ludden hosted this daytime game show that was quite similar to Password, which Ludden had also hosted. Two teams, each with a celebrity and a contestant, competed, trying to identify words from various three-word clues supplied by their partner. The winning team then had the chance to identify ten words within one minute for a large cash prize. Lin Bolen, former chief of daytime programming for NBC-TV, was the executive producer.

SUGAR AND SPICE CBS

30 MARCH 1990–11 MAY 1990 Half-hour sitcom about two black sisters who lived together with their niece in Ponca City, Oklahoma. With Loretta Devine as the sensible Loretta, a cafe hostess; Vickilyn Reynolds as the carefree Vickilyn, a shopkeeper; LaVerne Anderson as their teenage niece, Toby; Dana Hill as Toby's friend, Ginger; Stephanie Hodge as neighbor Bonnie Buttram; Gerrit Graham as Bonnie's husband, Cliff, a trucker; Troy Searcy as Toby's schoolmate, Ralph; Bumper Robinson as schoolmate Brian Cooper; and Leslie Jordan as diminutive Jacques, manager of the restaurant where Loretta worked.

SUGAR RAY LEONARD'S GOLDEN GLOVES SYNDICATED

1982 A series of boxing matches, hosted by former lightweight champion Sugar Ray Leonard.

SUGAR TIME! ABC

13 AUGUST 1977–29 MAY 1978 Half-hour sitcom about a female rock-and-roll trio known as "Sugar." With Barbi Benton as Maxx; Marianne Black as Maggie Barton; Didi Carr as Diane; Wynn Irwin as Al Marks; Mark Winkworth as Paul Landson; and Charles Fleischer as Lightnin' Jack Rappaport. Created by James Komack and developed by Hank Bradford, the series had a four-week run in the summer of 1977 and was seen irregularly thereafter. Komack was the executive producer; Bradford and Martin Cohan were the producers. Paul Williams supervised the music.

SUGARFOOT ABC

17 SEPTEMBER 1957–20 SEPTEMBER 1960 An hour western from Warner Brothers starring Will Hutchins as Tom (Sugarfoot) Brewster, a naive, sarsaparilla-drinking Easterner who headed West, intending to become a lawyer. Introduced in the fall of 1957, Sugarfoot alternated with Cheyenne for its first two seasons, then alternated with Bronco for one season; a few more Sugarfoot episodes were telecast under the Cheyenne title during the 1960–1961 season. See also Bronco; Cheyenne. William T. Orr was the executive producer, and Carroll Case the producer.

THE SULLIVANS SYNDICATED

1980 This Australian serial premiered there in 1976, and was exported to the United States four years later (a second Australian soap opera, Prisoner: Cell Block H, was also syndicated that year). Set in Melbourne in 1939, its central characters were, of course, the members of the Sullivan family. The cast included Paul Cronin as David Sullivan; Lorraine Bayly as his wife, Grace Sullivan; Andrew McFarlane as their son John, a pacifist medical student who reluctantly joined the army; Steven Tandy as their son Tom; Richard Morgan as their son Terry; Susan Hannaford as their daughter, Kitty (in real life, Hannaford was 24, though her character was supposed to be only 13); and Ingrid Mason as John's girlfriend, Anna Kauffman.

THE SUMMER BROTHERS SMOTHERS SHOW

See THE GLEN CAMPBELL GOODTIME HOUR

SUMMER CAMP SYNDICATED

1977 Half-hour educational series for children, emphasizing instruction in arts and crafts, produced by the YMCA.

SUMMER SCHOOL CBS

6 JULY 1953–4 SEPTEMBER 1953 Monday-through-Friday educational series for young children. Broadcast from Philadelphia every afternoon at 4:00, the half-hour show featured guest teachers rather than regular instructors.

SUMMER SHOWCASE NBC

28 JUNE 1988–30 AUGUST 1988 Tuesday-night series of documentaries, hosted by various NBC News correspondents.

SUMMER SUNDAY U.S.A. NBC

1 JULY 1984–7 SEPTEMBER 1984 One of NBC's least successful attempts at a prime-time newsmagazine, Summer Sunday U.S.A. was telecast opposite 60 Minutes on CBS. Cohosted by Andrea Mitchell and Linda Ellerbee, it was broadcast live from various locations around the country. One regular feature of the series was a segment called "Trading Places," in which newsmakers were given the opportunity to grill reporters. Because of the show's low clearance rate, and frequent technical glitches, one NBC executive later described the show as "one of the most screwed-up programs in history."

SUMMERTIME U.S.A. CBS

7 JULY 1953–27 AUGUST 1953 A summer replacement for The Jane Froman Show, Summertime U.S.A. was a twice-weekly, fifteen-minute musical series cohosted by Teresa Brewer and Mel Tormé.

SUNDAY NBC

27 OCTOBER 1963–11 JULY 1965 Sunday was a Sunday-afternoon newsmagazine hosted by Frank Blair. Regular contributors included Joe Garagiola (sports), Ray Scherer (politics), Richard Schickel (books), and William K. Zinsser (films).

SUNDAY AT HOME NBC

10 JULY 1949–31 JULY 1949 The several members of the Pickard Family were the stars of this fifteen-minute musical show, one of the first Hollywood-based programs to be kinescoped for broadcast in the East.

SUNDAY AT THE BRONX ZOO ABC

11 JUNE 1950–17 SEPTEMBER 1950 This self-explanatory children's show was hosted by William Bridges, with assistance from Durward Kirby.

SUNDAY BEST NBC

3 FEBRUARY 1991–24 FEBRUARY 1991 This hour show, scheduled at 7 P.M. on Sundays, took a lighthearted look at television. Carl Reiner hosted the show, which featured highlights of NBC's shows from the preceding week, clips from vintage TV series, and other light fare. Regular contributors included Harry Shearer, Linda Ellerbee (who had appeared seven years earlier in the same time slot on Summer Sunday U.S.A.), Merrill Markoe, and Jeff Cesario.

THE SUNDAY COMICS

SUNDAY DATE NBC

21 AUGUST 1949–9 OCTOBER 1949 Hosted by Helen Lee, this fifteen-minute Sunday musical series was set at a café.

SUNDAY DINNER CBS

2 JUNE 1991–7 JULY 1991 Producer Norman Lear based this sitcom on his own life: after his divorce from Frances Lear, he married a much younger woman. The series, set in Great Neck, New York, featured a 56-year-old man who became engaged to a 30-year-old woman, much to the chagrin of his grown children. The cast included Robert Loggia as Ben Benedict; Teri Hatcher as his fiancee, lawyer Thelma Todd (TT) Fagori, who talked directly to God; Kari Lizer as Ben's 30-year-old daughter, Diana; Martha Gehman as Ben's divorced daughter, Vicki, a scientist; Patrick Breen as Ben's son, Kenneth, a realtor; Shiri Appleby as Vicki's young daughter, Rachel; and Marian Mercer as Ben's sister, Martha.

THE SUNDAY MYSTERY HOUR NBC

29 MAY 1960–25 SEPTEMBER 1960; 2 JULY 1961–17 SEPTEMBER 1961 This summer anthology hour was hosted by Walter Slezak. The show was presented live and in color during the summer of 1960, but the 1961 fare consisted of reruns. Among the presentations were "Murder Me Nicely," with Everett Sloane (3 July 1960), and "Trial by Fury," with Agnes Moorehead (7 August 1960).

SUNDAY NIGHT

SUNDAY TODAY NBC

20 SEPTEMBER 1987– Almost nine years after CBS expanded its morning news show to Sundays, NBC followed suit with this version of the Today show. The ninety-minute program was originally cohosted by Boyd Matson and Maria Shriver. Garrick

Utley replaced Matson as cohost in 1988 and became sole host after Shriver's departure in 1989. Utley was later joined by Mary Alice Williams. They were succeeded by Jackie Nespral and Scott Simon in August 1992; Nespral and Simon were also the anchors of NBC's new venture, Saturday Today. In September 1992 the Sunday broadcast was reduced to sixty minutes. Mike Schneider succeeded Simon as cohost in June 1993, and Giselle Fernandez succeeded Nespral in January 1995. Jack Ford succeeded Mike Schneider in May 1995.

SUNRISE SEMESTER CBS

1963–1980 An early-morning educational series, Sunrise Semester was CBS's answer to NBC's Continental Classroom. It began in 1957 as a local show in New York and went network six years later. Each year several college-level courses were presented by members of the faculty of New York University. The half-hour show was produced by Roy Allen for WCBS-TV, New York. During the summers, courses were offered under the title Summer Semester.

SUNSET BEAT ABC

21 APRIL 1990–28 APRIL 1990 Only two episodes of this Saturday night cop show were televised. It followed the exploits of an experimental unit of undercover Los Angeles cops who posed as bikers. With George Clooney as Chic Chesbro, who moonlighted as a guitarist in a rock and roll band; Michael DeLuise as Tim Kelly, a med school dropout; Markus Flanagan as Bradley Coolidge; Erik King as Tucson Smith; and James Tolkan as the boss, Captain Ray Parker.

SUNSHINE NBC

6 MARCH 1975–19 JUNE 1975 Offbeat sitcom about a recently widowed young musician, trying to raise his young stepdaughter in Vancouver. Featured were Cliff DeYoung as Sam Hayden; Elizabeth Cheshire as his stepdaughter, Jill Hayden; Bill Mumy as Sam's musician friend, Weaver; Corey Fischer as Givits, another musician who formed a trio with Sam and Weaver; and Meg Foster as their friend, Nora. The half-hour series was based on a journal excerpted in the Los Angeles Times, which was made into a TV-movie shown on CBS on 9 November 1973, with De Young, Mumy, Fischer, and Foster. A TV-movie sequel, "Sunshine Christmas" (12 December 1977, NBC), was also produced, with De Young, Mumy, Foster, and Cheshire. The series was produced by George Eckstein for Universal Television.

THE SUPER ABC

21 JUNE 1972–23 AUGUST 1972 Half-hour summer sitcom starring Richard S. Castellano as Joe Girelli, the harried superintendent of a New York City apartment building. Also featured were Ardell Sheridan as his wife, Francesca Girelli; B. Kirby, Jr., as their son, Anthony; Margaret E. Castellano (Richard's daughter) as their daughter, Joanne; Ed Peck as Officer Clark, a tenant; Virginia Vincent as his wife, Dottie Clark; Janet Brandt as Mrs. Stein; and Louis Basile as Louie. The series was created by Rob Reiner and Phil Mishkin (who appeared as Joe's brother, Frankie), and produced and directed by Alan Rafkin.

SUPER CIRCUS ABC

16 JANUARY 1949–3 JUNE 1956 This long-running circus show was aimed principally at children. It was broadcast from Chicago from 1949 to 1955, where it was hosted by ringmaster Claude Kirchner and his assistant, Mary Hartline. Also on hand were three clowns: Cliffy Sobier as Cliffy, Bardy Patton and Sandy Dobritch as Scampy, and Nicky Francis as Nicky. In 1955 the show moved to New York, and Jerry Colonna took over as ringmaster, assisted by baton twirler Sandy Wirth. Jack Gibney produced the series.

SUPER DAVE SHOWTIME/USA

21 NOVEMBER 1987–12 MAY 1993 (SHOWTIME); 7 JANUARY 1995–19 FEBRUARY 1995 (USA) Half-hour comedy show, spun off from Bizarre, starring Bob Einstein as bumbling stuntman Super Dave Osborne. On the short-lived USA Cable Network sitcom, titled Super Dave's Vegas Spectacular, Dave operated a Las Vegas hotel. Assisting him were Art Irizawa as Fuji and Jennifer Grant as Sandi.

SUPER DAVE FOX

12 SEPTEMBER 1992–21 AUGUST 1993 The animated version of the comedy series featured live-action wraparounds by Bob Einstein. Following a special premiere on 9 September, it settled into a Saturday morning slot.

SUPER FRIENDS ABC

8 SEPTEMBER 1973–30 AUGUST 1975; 21 FEBRUARY 1976–4 SEPTEMBER 1976; 4 DECEMBER 1976–3 SEPTEMBER 1983; 8 SEPTEMBER 1984–31 AUGUST 1985 Super Friends, a Hanna-Barbera cartoon series, depicted the adventures of the members of the Justice League of America—Superman, Batman and Robin, Aquaman, Wonder Woman, Marvin and Wendy, and Wonder Dog. Several of the group had previously been seen in other series, such as The Superman/Aquaman Hour or The Batman/Tarzan Adventure Hour. In the fall of 1977 the show expanded from thirty to sixty minutes and was retitled The All-New Superfriends Hour. The Wondertwins, Zan and Jayna, were added, along with their monkey Gleek. In the fall of 1978 it continued under a new title, Challenge of the Superfriends, as the members of the Justice League of America battled emissaries of the Legion of Doom. In 1979 it continued as The World's Greatest Superfriends.

SUPER GHOSTS NBC

27 JULY 1952–21 SEPTEMBER 1952; 19 JULY 1953–6 SEPTEMBER 1953 Hosted by Dr. Bergen Evans, this prime-time summer game show was broadcast from Chicago. The game was similar to Hangman—each successive panelist named a letter of the alphabet, and the object of the game was to avoid completing a word. The 1952 panel included Dr. Irving Lee of Northwestern University, former drama critic Robert Pollak, housewife Shirl Stern, and a guest panelist.

THE SUPER GLOBETROTTERS NBC

8 SEPTEMBER 1979–1 DECEMBER 1979; 12 APRIL 1980–3 MAY 1980 Saturday-morning cartoon series featuring the animated antics of the Harlem Globetrotters. See also The Harlem Globetrotters; The Godzilla Power Hour.

THE SUPER MARIO BROS. SUPER SHOW SYNDICATED

1989–1991 Half-hour daily cartoon series featuring the two heroes of the popular Nintendo series of video games, plumbers Mario and Luigi. Wrapped around the cartoons was a live-action segment, starring professional wrestling personality Captain Lou Albano as Mario and Danny Wells as Luigi. See also Captain N: The Game Master.

SUPER POWERS TEAM: GALACTIC GUARDIANS ABC

7 SEPTEMBER 1985–6 SEPTEMBER 1986 Saturday morning cartoon series on which Cyborg, "a black bionic wonder," teamed up with Superman, Batman and Robin, and Wonder Woman, to protect the galaxy from evil.

SUPER PRESIDENT AND SPY SHADOW NBC

9 SEPTEMBER 1967–28 DECEMBER 1968 The central character in this half-hour Saturday cartoon show was James Norcross, President of the United States, who possessed the ability to transform himself into almost anything. The second segment of the show, "Spy Shadow," featured a private eye whose shadow had a mind of its own.

THE SUPER 6 NBC

10 SEPTEMBER 1966–31 AUGUST 1969 Half-hour cartoon show about a half-dozen crimefighters.

SUPER WITCH NBC

19 NOVEMBER 1977–28 JANUARY 1978 Super Witch was the title given to the episodes of Sabrina the Teenage Witch when The New Archie-Sabrina Hour was broken up in midseason. See also The Archie Show; The Groovie Goolies; and Sabrina, the Teenage Witch.

SUPERBOY SYNDICATED

1988–1991 This half-hour sci-fi series focused on the life of superhero Superman when he was a college lad. Filmed in Florida, it featured John Haymes Newton (1988–1989) and Gerard Christopher (1989–1991) as the young man of steel, attending college as journalism major Clark Kent; Jim Calvert (1988–1989) as Clark's pal T. J. White (son of Perry White, editor of the Daily Planet); Ilan Mitchell-Smith (1989–1991) as Clark's roommate, Andy McAllister; Stacy Haiduk as Clark's girlfriend, Lana Lang; Robert Levine (1990–1991) as C. Dennis Jackson, head of the Bureau for Extranormal Matters, for which Clark and Lana worked as interns; and Peter Jay Fernandez (1990–1991) as Bureau field officer Matt Ritter. Scott Wells and Sherman Howard appeared occasionally as young Lex Luthor, Superboy's nemesis.

SUPERCAR SYNDICATED

1961 One of the first children's series developed by Gerry and Sylvia Anderson, Supercar was a marionette show which centered on Mike Mercury, driver of Supercar, a very versatile vehicle. Other characters included Dr. Beeker, Professor Popkiss, Jimmy, and Mitch the Monkey. The Andersons later refined their technique in such series as Fireball XL-5, Stingray, and Thunderbirds.

SUPERCARRIER ABC

6 MARCH 1988–24 APRIL 1988; 2 JULY 1988–27 AUGUST 1988 Life aboard the Georgetown, a giant aircraft carrier, was depicted on this hour dramatic series. With Robert Hooks as Captain Jim Coleman, supervisor of the carrier's team of pilots; Dale Dye as Captain Henry Madigan, the ship's commanding officer; Richard Jaeckel as Master Chief Sam Rivers; Ken Olandt as Lietenant Jack "Sierra" DiPalma, a pilot; Cec Verrell as Lieutenant Commander Ruth "Bee Bee" Rutkowski, a pilot; John David Bland as Lieutenant Doyle "Anzac" Sampson, a pilot; Gerardo Mejia as Master-at-Arms; Luis Cruz, an m.p.; Matthew Walker as Seaman Raymond Lafitte; Michael Sharrett as Ocean Specialist Donald Willoughby; Tasia Valenza as Yeoman Rosie Henriques; and Marie Windsor as Billie Costello, proprietor of a nearby bar.

SUPERHUMAN SAMURAI SYBER-SQUAD SYNDICATED

1994– No doubt inspired by the success of The Mighty Morphin Power Rangers, this daily half-hour live action kids' adventure series featured a quartet of high school students who could transform themselves into the Superhuman Samurai Syber-Squad. They then battled the evil Kilokahn, a dragon-like virus which dwelled in computer circuits but was capable of unleashing other monsters. The four SSSS members were played by Matthew Lawrence as Sam Collins (known as Servo when he was in uniform); Troy Slaten as Amp; Kevin Castro as Tank; and Robin Mary Florence as Sidney. Also featured were Glen Beaudin as Malcolm, a teenager who assisted Kilokahn; Jayme Betcher as Jennifer, Sam's girlfriend; Diana Bellamy as Mrs. Starkey, the cafeteria lady; and Tim Curry as the voice of Kilokahn.

SUPERIOR COURT SYNDICATED

1986–1990 One of the several courtroom dramas of the late 1980s, this one starred a former judge, William E. Burns, as the first season's presiding judge. For the second and third seasons various actors played the judge, and in 1989 Raymond St. Jacques took over the role.

SUPERMAN SYNDICATED

1951–1957 One of fiction's best known heroes, Superman was created by Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster and first appeared in the June 1938 issue of "Action Comics." This humanlike creature had been sent to Earth as an infant by his parents, who discovered that their native planet, Krypton, was about to be destroyed. The boy was raised in a small town by the Kent family and took the name Clark Kent. He soon discovered that he possessed "powers and abilities far beyond those of mortal men." His senses of sight and hearing were extraordinarily acute, he was incredibly strong, and best of all, he was virtually indestructible (certain particles of Kryptonite, which apparently reached Earth from the exploding planet, could render Superman ineffective, however). Fortunately, he vowed to use his gifts for the good of humanity, fighting "a never-ending battle for truth, justice, and the American way." When he grew up, he moved to Metropolis and got a job as a reporter for the Daily Planet. As a reporter, Kent was in a position to learn immediately of impending catastrophes, major crimes, and other compelling situations in which the presence of Superman might be needed.

The Superman character appeared not only in comic books, but also in a radio series beginning in 1940 (on which Bud Collyer played the lead), in a series of feature-length cartoons produced between 1941 and 1943, in two 15-chapter movie serials made in 1948 and 1950 (both of which starred Kirk Alyn), and in a full-length film, Superman and the Mole Men, made in 1951 (a second, lavishly produced picture was released late in 1978). Aside from the comic books, the character is most closely associated with the 104 half-hour television episodes, produced between 1951 and 1957, starring George Reeves (Reeves had played Superman in the 1951 motion picture; the film was later edited into a two-part TV story). Still widely syndicated today, Superman's reruns are rivaled in popularity only by those of I Love Lucy.

As production of the first twenty-six episodes began in the summer of 1951, the cast included (in addition to Reeves) Phyllis Coates as Lois Lane, another Daily Planet reporter, who was infatuated with Superman but cared little for Kent (none of the show's principals ever realized that the two were one and the same, though in one 1955 episode, "The Wedding of Superman," Lois dreamed not only that she married Superman, but also that Kent revealed his true identity to her); Jack Larson as the Planet's cub reporter, Jimmy Olsen; John Hamilton as the Planet's apoplectic editor, Perry White; and Robert Shayne as Inspector William Henderson of the Metropolis police. The 1951 episodes were produced by Robert Maxwell and Bernard Luber, and directed by Lee Sholem and Tommy Carr; though they were somewhat more violent than the remaining episodes (the only on-screen murders were committed during the first twenty-six shows), they set the tone for the run of the series—a low budget, a hectic production schedule, a small guest cast, and lots of stock footage. In spite of the cost cutting, the stock sequences of Superman in flight (production of which was supervised by Thol "Si" Simonson) and the other frequently used special effects, such as Superman crashing through a brick wall (he rarely used the door), were quite effective for the time. Because of the production schedule, parts of several episodes were filmed at the same time (Superman was one of the first TV shows to employ this technique); this explains the fact that Clark, Lois, Jimmy, and Perry often seemed to wear the same set of clothes week after week.

Though twenty-six episodes had been completed by the end of 1951, the series was not made available to any broadcasting stations until early in 1953. By that time Kellogg's Cereals had agreed to sponsor the series. Production of Superman resumed in May 1953, and a second set of twenty-six episodes was filmed. Whitney Ellsworth was now the producer (and would remain so) and, as Phyllis Coates had accepted other offers, Noel Neill was signed to play Lois Lane (Neill had previously played the part in the fifteen-chapter serials). These episodes were directed by Tommy Carr and George Blair. By now the character had become extremely popular, and all kinds of Superman merchandise flooded the market; Reeves himself did several successful promotional tours.

Production slowed down to a more leisurely pace in 1954, as only thirteen new episodes were produced (this schedule continued for the next three years); the most significant change was that the show was now being filmed in color. The majority of the final fifty-two episodes were directed by Harry Gerstad, Phil Ford, and George Blair, though Reeves himself directed three shows. In one of the 1957 episodes, "The Big Forget," Clark Kent actually did reveal his identity to Lois, Perry, and Jimmy, but thanks to an antimemory vapor developed by eccentric Professor Pepperwinkle (played by Phillips Tead), the three immediately forgot what they had witnessed.

In June of 1959, two years after production ceased, George Reeves shot and killed himself; he left no note, and the reasons for his death remain conjectural. Because of his close identity with the Superman character, Reeves did have trouble finding suitable work after 1957, but, according to Gary Grossman's book, Superman—Serial to Cereal, Reeves had several offers pending at the time of his death. Another possible explanation is that Reeves, who had been in a serious auto accident two weeks earlier, may have taken his life while under the influence of alcohol and pain killers. Sadly, Reeves, who often lamented that he wished he'd had a few adult fans among the Superman viewers, did not live long enough to watch his audiences grow up.

Though no major guest stars appeared on Superman, several struggling young performers played some of their first television roles on the series. Among them were: Claude Akins ("Peril By Sea," 1955), Hugh Beaumont ("The Big Squeeze," 1953), John Beradino ("The Unlucky Number," 1955), Paul Burke ("My Friend Superman," 1953, and "The Phantom Ring," 1955), Chuck Connors ("Flight to the North," 1954), and Joi Lansing ("Superman's Wife," 1957). In 1966 an animated version of Superman first appeared on television: see below. In 1988 a new live-action series appeared: see Superboy. In 1993 the characters came to network prime-time: see Lois & Clark: The New Adventures of Superman.

SUPERMAN CBS

10 SEPTEMBER 1966–7 SEPTEMBER 1968; 17 SEPTEMBER 1988–9 SEPTEMBER 1989 Superman first appeared in a Saturday-morning cartoon series in the fall of 1966—the show, produced by Allen Ducovny, was titled The New Adventures of Superman during the 1966–1967 season. The half-hour show featured "Superman" and "Superboy" cartoon segments. In the fall of 1967, Superman shared an hour program with Aquaman, but retained top billing as the show was titled The Superman Aquaman Hour. Superman continued to be seen on Saturday mornings after 1968 but no longer commanded top billing: see The Batman-Superman Hour and Super Friends. A new series of cartoons was made for CBS's 1988–1989 Saturday morning slate; in addition to the usual adventures, the show also presented a "family album" segment, focusing on the Man of Steel's early years.

SUPERMARKET SWEEP ABC/LIFETIME

20 DECEMBER 1965–14 JULY 1967 (ABC); 5 FEBRUARY 1990– (LIFETIME) A daytime game show taped at supermarkets throughout the country, Supermarket Sweep gave contestant couples the chance to load their shopping carts with merchandise for a limited period of time; the couple whose total was the highest was declared the winner and got to keep the goods and return the next day. Bill Malone hosted the half-hour show on ABC. David Ruprecht emceed the 1990 revival on the Lifetime Cable channel.

SUPERSONIC SYNDICATED

1976 Half-hour series of performances by rock stars.

THE SUPERSTARS ABC

27 JANUARY 1974–3 MARCH 1974; 5 JANUARY 1975–23 MARCH 1975; 11 JANUARY 1976–4 APRIL 1976; 2 JANUARY 1977–27 MARCH 1977; 8 JANUARY 1978–26 MARCH 1978; 14 JANUARY 1979–1 APRIL 1979; 20 JANUARY 1980–30 MARCH 1980; 25 JANUARY 1981–29 MARCH 1981; 24 JANUARY 1982–28 MARCH 1982; 6 FEBRUARY 1983–20 FEBRUARY 1983 A Sunday-afternoon sports show, The Superstars featured professional athletes, who competed against each other in a variety of athletic endeavors (no competitor was permitted to participate in the sport of his or her profession, however). On some shows teams of athletes competed, and these programs were broadcast under the title The Superteams. Keith Jackson was the principal commentator, but he was assisted from time to time by Al Michaels, Donna De Varona, O. J. Simpson, Reggie Jackson, Billie Jean King, Bruce Jenner, Hilary Hilton, Andrea Kirby, and Frank Gifford. The Superstars proved surprisingly popular with viewers and spawned a host of similar shows—specials such as "Battle of the Network Stars" and "Us vs. the World," and series such as The Challenge of the Sexes and Celebrity Challenge of the Sexes; the term "trashsport" was coined to describe the genre.

SUPERSTARS OF ROCK SYNDICATED

1973 Wolfman Jack interviewed rock stars on this half-hour series.

SUPERTRAIN NBC

7 FEBRUARY 1979–28 JULY 1979 An anthology series set aboard an atomic-powered train which traveled from coast to coast in 36 hours, Supertrain was an expensive flop. Its lavish set (one of the most expensive ever produced for television) failed to captivate viewers, and its uncertain vacillation between comedy and adventure also seemed to discourage large audiences. The Supertrain itself featured a disco, gymnasium, and swimming pool. The original train crew included: Edward Andrews as Harry Flood, the conductor; Patrick Collins as Dave Noonan, the passenger relations officer; Robert Alda as Dr. Lewis; Nita Talbot as Rose Casey; Harrison Page as porter George Boone; Michael DeLano as bartender Lou Atkins; Charlie Brill as Robert the hairdresser; Aarika Wells as exercise attendant Gilda; William Nuckols as exercise attendant Wally; Anthony Palmer as T. C., the chief engineer. Dan Curtis, Supertrain's first executive producer, was replaced by Robert Stambler in March 1979, and Supertrain left the air for a few weeks for retooling. It returned with a slimmed-down cast: from the original cast only Andrews, Page, and Alda remained, and Ilene Graff was added as social director Penny Whitaker, along with Joey Aresco as executive operations officer Wayne Randall. The changes were of no avail.

SURE AS FATE CBS

4 JULY 1950–3 APRIL 1951 Half-hour mystery anthology series, narrated by Paul Lukas.

SURF'S UP SYNDICATED

1966 Stan Richards hosted this half-hour documentary series, which presented color film footage of surfing and skateboarding activities at the nation's beaches.

SURFSIDE 6 ABC

3 OCTOBER 1960–24 SEPTEMBER 1962 This Warner Brothers detective series was set in Miami Beach; except for its locale, it was virtually identical to Warners' other hour-long detective shows, 77 Sunset Strip and Hawaiian Eye. SurfSide 6 was the address of a trio of private eyes, whose houseboat was anchored next to a Miami Beach hotel. Featured were Troy Donahue as Sandy Winfield II; Van Williams as Ken Madison; Lee Patterson as Dave Thorne; Diane McBain as their friend, Daphne Dutton; Margarita Sierra as nightclub singer Cha Cha O'Brien; Donald Barry (1960–1961) as Lieutenant Snedigar; Richard Crane (1961–1962) as Lieutenant Plehn; and Mousie Garner as Mousie.

SURVIVAL SYNDICATED

1964 Survival was a series of thirty-eight half-hours, mostly containing documentary film footage on famous disasters. James Whitmore narrated the series, and Sherman Grinberg produced it.

THE SURVIVORS ABC

29 SEPTEMBER 1969–12 JANUARY 1970 One of the biggest flops of the decade, The Survivors was an expensive hour series created by novelist Harold Robbins. Shot on location around the world, it told a seamy tale of sex, wealth, and power for its fifteen-week run. The series was a success only for Robbins, who had wisely insisted on a guarantee of $500,000 regardless of the show's duration. The cast included: Ralph Bellamy as Baylor Carlyle, wealthy investor; George Hamilton as his son, Duncan Carlyle; Lana Turner as his daughter, Tracy Hastings; Kevin McCarthy as Philip Hastings, Tracy's husband; Rossano Brazzi as Riakos; Robert Viharo as Miguel Santerra, a South American revolutionary; Jan-Michael Vincent as Jeffrey, Tracy's son; Diana Muldaur as Belle, Baylor's secretary; Louise Sorel as Jean Vale; Kathy Cannon as Sheila; Donna Bacalla as Marguerita, Miguel's sister; Robert Lipton as Tom; Clu Gulager as Senator Jennings; and Louis Hayward as Jonathan. After the show was dropped in midseason, Universal Television, which produced the series, developed a new show for George Hamilton, which premiered in a new time slot shortly afterward. See Paris 7000. Reruns of The Survivors were shown in that time slot during the summer of 1970.

THE SUSAN POWTER SHOW SYNDICATED

1994–1995 Half-hour daily talk show hosted by Susan Powter, the crewcut nutrition and fitness guru whose book Stop the Insanity! was a best seller.

THE SUSAN RAYE SHOW DUMONT

2 OCTOBER 1950–20 NOVEMBER 1950 Fifteen-minute musical show hosted by Susan Raye.

SUSAN'S SHOW CBS

4 MAY 1957–18 JANUARY 1958 Twelve-year-old Susan Heinkel hosted her own children's show on Saturday mornings; it was set in a fantasy land known as Wonderville, to which Susan and her dog Rusty were transported by means of a magic chair in Susan's kitchen. Wonderville was populated by stuffed animals, led by Caesar P. Penguin, and a flying, talking table named Mr. Pegasus. The half-hour program was produced by Paul Frumkin in Chicago, where it had premiered locally in 1956.

SUSPENSE CBS

1 MARCH 1949–17 AUGUST 1954; 25 MARCH 1964–9 SEPTEMBER 1964 Suspense was a half-hour anthology series of thrillers, based on the radio series that ran from 1942 to 1962. The TV series aroused some controversy late in 1949, when an episode showing a woman drinking blood precipitated an outcry over violence and gore on television. Bela Lugosi made a rare television appearance in one episode (11 October 1949), and Boris Karloff starred in an early adaptation of "The Monkey's Paw" the same year (17 May). Other unusual guest appearances included those by Jacqueline Susann ("Pigeons in the Cave," 21 July 1953) and Mike Wallace (7 July 1953). One of the earliest televised Sherlock Holmes stories was presented on Suspense. "The Adventure of the Black Baronet," written by Adrian Conan Doyle and John Dickson Carr, starring Basil Rathbone and Martyn Green, was broadcast 26 May 1953. Bob Stevens produced and directed the first incarnation of Suspense. Sebastian Cabot hosted the 1964 version, which replaced Tell It to the Camera.

SUSPICION NBC

30 SEPTEMBER 1957–22 SEPTEMBER 1958 An hour-long suspense anthology series of little note, Suspicion was hosted first by Dennis O'Keefe, and later by Walter Abel. Reruns were shown on NBC during the summer of 1959.

THE SUZANNE SOMERS SHOW SYNDICATED

1994–1995 Unsuccessful talk show hosted by Suzanne Somers. Each program usually featured a celebrity guest and a non-celebrity expert on a particular topic.

SWAMP THING USA

27 JUNE 1990–25 OCTOBER 1992 Half-hour adventure series based on the DC Comic character. It starred Dick Durock as Swamp Thing, who lived in the Louisiana bayou country; formerly a human (Dr. Alec Holland), the plant-like swamp denizen emerged after Holland had ingested a secret formula. Also featured were Jesse Zeigler (1990–1991) as Swamp Thing's young friend, Jimmy Kipp; Carrell Myers as Jimmy's mother, Tressa; Mark Lindsay Chapman as Swamp Thing's enemy, Dr. Anton Arcane; Scott Garrison (1991–1992) as Jimmy's half-brother, Will; and Kari Wuhrer as Abigail. Swamp Thing had previously inspired a 1982 movie and its 1989 sequel, The Return of Swamp Thing. An animated version of the series was also produced: see below.

SWAMP THING FOX

20 APRIL 1991–3 AUGUST 1991 The animated version of the live-action series ran for half a season on Fox's Saturday-morning schedule.

SWANS CROSSING SYNDICATED

1992 This short-lived daily soap opera was aimed at a teen audience. Set in the town of Swans Crossing somewhere along the Eastern seaboard, its main characters were a group of wealthy young people. The cast included Kristy Barbera as Nancy Robbins; Tom Carroll as J. T. Adams; Carisa Dahlbo as Glory Booth; Brittany Daniel as Mila Rosnovsky; Devin Doherty as Jimmy Clayton; Evan Ferrante as Owen Fowler; Sarah Michelle Gellar as Sydney Rutledge; Kristen Mahon as Sandy Swan; Shane McDermott as Glory's brother, Garrett Booth; Stacey Moseley as Callie Walker; Eddie Tyclus Robinson as Neil Atwater; and Alex Tanaka as Saja Decastro.

SWEATING BULLETS CBS/SYNDICATED

8 APRIL 1991–2 JANUARY 1995 (CBS); 1992–1993 (SYNDICATED) Part of CBS's late-night Crime Time After Prime Time, Sweating Bullets was a light hour crime show set at Key Mariah in the Florida Keys. Featured were Rob Stewart as private eye Nick Slaughter, a former DEA agent; Carolyn Dunn as Sylvie Girard, a former travel agent who became Slaughter's business partner; John David Bland as Nick's buddy Ian Stewart, a British former rock star who now ran a dive shop and bar; and Pedro Armendariz as the local police chief, Lieutenant Carrillo. Slaughter and Girard were reminiscent of Moonlighting's Addison and Hayes—the sexual tension was rife and the dialogue was laced with double entendres. During its first season, the series was a joint production of Canadian and Mexican concerns and was filmed in Puerto Vallarta, Mexico. During the second season it was a Canadian-Israeli venture, as production shifted to Elat, Israel.

SWEEPSTAKE$ NBC

26 JANUARY 1979–30 MARCH 1979 An hour anthology series focusing on several of the finalists in a state lottery with the grand prize of a million dollars. Edd Byrnes appeared as the sweepstakes emcee. Executive producer: Robert Dozier for Miller-Milkis Productions in association with Paramount TV.

SWEET JUSTICE NBC

With Melissa Gilbert as Kate Delacroy; Cicely Tyson as Kate's new boss, Carrie Grace Battle, a progressive black attorney; Ronny Cox as Kate's father, James Lee Delacroy; Greg Germann as Andy, a young associate in Carrie's firm; Jim Antonio as Ross, an older attorney in the firm; and Cree Summer as Reese Dawkins, another new lawyer in the firm.

SWEET SURRENDER NBC

18 APRIL 1987–16 MAY 1987 Short-lived sitcom about an earnest yuppie couple trying to raise two small children. With Dana Delany as Georgia Holden, who quit work to be with the kids; Mark Blum as her husband, Ken Holden; David Doyle as Georgia's divorced father, Francis Macklin; Marjorie Lord as Ken's mother, Joyce Holden; Edan Gross as Georgia and Ken's kindergartener, Bart; Rebecca and Sarah Simms as their baby, Lynnie; Thom Sharp as neighbor Marty Gafney; Louise Williams as Lyla Gafney; Victor DiMattia as Taylor Gafney; Christopher Rich as swinging bachelor Vaughn Parker; Damon Wayans as Ray; and Viveka Davis as the Holdens' punk babysitter, Cak. Five episodes were shown in a Saturday night time slot in the spring of 1987, temporarily replacing 227. A sixth episode was run on 8 July. Dana Delany went on to bigger fame a year later in an altogether different series, China Beach.

SWEET VALLEY HIGH SYNDICATED

1994– Half-hour dramatic series for teens and preteens, based on the popular series of books created by Francine Pascal. With twins Cynthia Daniel and Brittany Daniel as 16-year-old twins Elizabeth and Jessica Wakefield (Elizabeth was the shy one, Jessica the flirt); Amarilis as Patty; Ryan James Bittle as Todd Wilkins; Brock Burnett as Bruce; Amy Danles as Enid, Elizabeth's pal; Bridget Flanery as Lila Fowler, Jessica's pal; and Michael Perl as nerdy Winston Egbert.

SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON ABC

14 SEPTEMBER 1975–11 APRIL 1976 Based on Johann Wyss's novel, this hour-long adventure series told the story of a family marooned on a tropic isle. With Martin Milner as Karl Robinson; Pat Delany as his wife, Lotte Robinson; Willie Aames as their son Fred; Eric Olson as their son Ernie; Cameron Mitchell as Jeremiah Worth, a shipwrecked sea captain; and Helen Hunt as Helga Wagner, a teenager adopted by the Robinsons. Irwin Allen produced the series.

THE SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON SYNDICATED

1976 This Canadian import was similar to the 1975 network show, except that it was a half-hour series. Featured were Chris Wiggins as Johann Robinson; Diana Leblanc as his wife, Elizabeth Robinson; Ricky O'Neill as their son, Franz; Heather Graham as their daughter, Marie; Michael Duhig as their son, Ernest; and Bruno, the dog. Gerald Mayer produced the series.

SWITCH CBS

9 SEPTEMBER 1975–3 SEPTEMBER 1978 An hour-long adventure series about an ex-cop and an ex-con who teamed up as private investigators; their specialty, like that of The Rogues, was fleecing the fleecers and outconning the con artists. The show starred Eddie Albert as Frank MacBride, the ex-cop, and Robert Wagner as Peterson T. (Pete) Ryan, the ex-con. Also featured were Sharon Gless as their receptionist and assistant, Maggie; Charlie Callas as Malcolm Argos, an occasional helper; William Bryant (1976–1978) as Lieutenant Shilton; and James Hong (1977–1978) as Wang, Malcolm's cook. Glen A. Larson was the executive producer during the first season, Matthew Rapf during the second, and Jon Epstein during the third, for Glen Larson Productions in association with Universal Television.

THE SWORD OF FREEDOM SYNDICATED

1957 Half-hour adventure series imported from Europe and set during the Italian Renaissance. Edmund Purdom starred as Marco del Monte, a painter and freedom fighter who battled the Medici family. Also featured were Martin Benson as the Duke de' Medici, Adrienne Corri as Angelica; Kenneth Hyde as Machiavelli.

SWORD OF JUSTICE NBC

9 SEPTEMBER 1978–31 DECEMBER 1978 An hour-long crime show starring Dack Rambo as Jack Cole, a man who served three years in prison on a trumped-up embezzlement charge after his father's death and who vowed upon his release to go after those wrongdoers whom the law couldn't touch; while in prison Cole learned all he could about such subjects as lock-picking and bugging in order to facilitate his crimefighting career. Also featured were Bert Rosario as Hector Ramirez, Cole's former cellmate and present partner, and Alex Courtney as Arthur Woods, the federal agent who was always a step or two behind Cole and Ramirez. Glen A. Larson was the executive producer.

SYDNEY CBS

21 MARCH 1990–6 AUGUST 1990 Half-hour sitcom about a female private eye in Los Angeles. With Valerie Bertinelli as Sydney Kells; Craig Bierko as Matt Keating, the lawyer who hired her; Matthew Perry as Sydney's brother, Bill Kells; Rebeccah Bush as Sydney's best friend, Jill; Barney Martin as Ray, owner of the Blue Collar, Sydney's favorite hangout; Daniel Baldwin as Chester "Cheezy" Chadwell, the womanizing regular at the bar; and Perry Anzilotti as Perry the snitch.

SYLVANIAN FAMILIES SYNDICATED

1987 Cartoon series, inspired by the toy line, in which the animal residents of an enchanted forest worked together to make a child's wish come true.

SYLVESTER AND TWEETY CBS

11 SEPTEMBER 1976–3 SEPTEMBER 1977 Though Warner Brothers' most famous cat-and-bird twosome had been featured on several earlier cartoon shows, it was not until 1976 that Sylvester ("Thufferin' thuckotash!") and Tweety ("I taut I taw a puddy tat!") starred in a series of their own. Mel Blanc provided the voices of the two characters in the half-hour Saturday-morning show.

THE SYLVESTER & TWEETY MOVIES WB

9 SEPTEMBER 1995– The venerable Warner Bros. cat and bird duo appeared in a set of new cartoons on this Saturday-morning series, in which they teamed up with Granny and Hector the bulldog to solve mysteries all over the world.

SZYSZNYK CBS

1 AUGUST 1977–29 AUGUST 1977; 7 DECEMBER 1977–25 JANUARY 1978 Szysznyk starred Ned Beatty as Nick Szysznyk, a twenty-seven-year Marine Corps veteran who became the supervisor of the Northeast Community Center in Washington, D.C. The half-hour sitcom also featured Leonard Barr as Leonard Kriegler, the custodian; Olivia Cole as Ms. Harrison, the district supervisor; Susan Lanier (summer 1977) as Sandi Chandler, the nursery school instructor; Thomas Carter as Ray Gun; Scott Colomby as Tony; Barry Miller as Fortwengler; and Jarrod Johnson as Ralph. Jerry Weintraub was the executive producer, Rich Eustis and Michael Elias the producers. Writers Jim Mulligan and Ron Landry created the series, which languished at the bottom of the ratings when it returned in December of 1977.

T AND T SYNDICATED

1988–1989 Half-hour crime show starring the inimitable Mr. T as T. S. Turner, an ex-con who became a private investigator for a female attorney after she sprung him from imprisonment for a crime he hadn't committed. Alex Amini played his partner, lawyer Amanda Taler, during the first season; Kristina Nicoll took over in 1989 as lawyer Terri Taylor. Also on hand were Jackie Richardson as Turner's Aunt Martha, with whom he lived; Rachael Crawford as her daughter, Renee; David Nerman as Dick Decker, owner of the gym where Turner (who was also a former boxer) worked out; Ken James as Detective Ted Jones; and Catherine Disher as Sophie, Amanda's secretary. The series was filmed in Toronto. In an attempt to get it off to a popular start, the producers reportedly offered ABC $1 million to air the premiere episode immediately after the Super Bowl in January 1988, but were turned down by the network.

T.H.E. CAT NBC

16 SEPTEMBER 1966–1 SEPTEMBER 1967 Half-hour adventure series starring Robert Loggia as T.H.E. (Thomas Hewitt Edward) Cat, a former cat burglar who turned to crimefighting. Also on hand were R. G. Armstrong as Captain McAllister, and Robert Carricart as Pepe, proprietor of the Casa del Gato (House of the Cat), the club where Cat's services could be obtained. Robert Loggia had played another catlike character previously on Walt Disney Presents, when he played western hero Elfego Baca, "the man with nine lives." T.H.E. Cat was produced by Boris Sagal.

T. J. HOOKER ABC/CBS

13 MARCH 1982–10 APRIL 1982; 4 SEPTEMBER 1982–7 SEPTEMBER 1985 (ABC); 25 SEPTEMBER 1985–17 SEPTEMBER 1987 (CBS) William Shatner starred in this hour cop show as Sergeant T. J. Hooker, a hard-nosed veteran police officer. When the show was introduced in the spring of 1982, Hooker was assigned mainly to the police academy to train new recruits. The cast included Adrian Zmed as Officer Vince Romano, a trainee assigned to Hooker; April Clough as Vicki, a recruit; Richard Herd as Captain Sheridan, Hooker's superior; and Lee Bryant as Fran, Hooker's ex-wife. When the series returned in the fall of 1982, Hooker had more general responsibilities, and Clough and Bryant had been dropped. Heather Locklear joined the force as Stacy Sheridan (the Captain's daughter), a new officer, and early in 1983 James Darren began to appear regularly as Officer Jim Corrigan, Stacy's partner. The series left ABC's prime-time scheule in the fall of 1985 and was picked up by CBS for a weekly late-night slot. Seventeen new episodes were filmed during the 1985–1986 season, with Shatner, Darren, and Locklear (Adrian Zmed quit, as he was unwilling to take a pay cut). CBS reran the series during the 1986–1987 season, again in a late-night slot.

TV AUCTION ABC

10 JULY 1954–28 AUGUST 1954 Sid Stone hosted this fifteen-minute series on which viewers were invited to submit bids on merchandise featured on stage.

TV GENERAL STORE ABC

14 JUNE 1953–12 JULY 1953 On this Sunday-morning hour series, cohosts Dave and Judy Clark offered merchandise for sale to viewers.

TV HOUR

See THE MOTOROLA TV HOUR

TV NATION NBC/FOX

19 JULY 1994–30 AUGUST 1994; 28 DECEMBER 1994 (NBC); 21 JULY 1995–8 SEPTEMBER 1995 (FOX) Michael Moore's idiosyncratic documentary series came to prime time television in the summer of 1994. Moore, who made the 1989 film "Roger & Me," described the series as a "nonfiction, comedic newsmagazine with a point of view." The description was apt; Moore's point of view was decidedly liberal, and his main targets were corporations and government agencies. Among the features Moore presented were a real estate agent who sold properties at Love Canal in New York, a fully staffed prison with no inmates, and efforts to persuade American businesses to relocate to Mexico. Moore even challenged several corporate chiefs to demonstrate their companies' products; the CEO of Ford Motor Company obliged by changing the oil on one of Ford's automobiles. Wearing his trademark baseball cap, Moore himself handled most of the on-camera reporting, although Merrill Markoe and Rusty Cundieff were also regular contributors on the NBC version. When the series shifted to Fox in the summer of 1995, Janeane Garofalo joined Cundieff as a regular correspondent. Karen Duffy and Louis Theroux also contributed.

TV 101 CBS

29 NOVEMBER 1988–25 MARCH 1989 An offbeat hour series about a high school journalism teacher who returned to his alma mater, where he had edited the school paper, and motivated his students to produce a video news show instead of a newspaper. With Sam Robards as teacher Kevin Keegan; Leon Russom as the principal of Roosevelt High, Edward Steadman; Brynn Thayer as the department head (and Kevin's former teacher), Emilie Walker; Andrew White as Vance Checker; Mary B. Ward as Penny; Teri Polo as Amanda; Andrew Cassese as Sherman Fischer; Alex Desert as Holden Hines; Matthew LeBlanc as Chuck; Stacey Dash as Monique; and Stewart Goddard as Marty Voight. The series ranked 120th out of 126 prime-time series for the 1988–1989 season.

TV READERS DIGEST ABC

17 JANUARY 1955–9 JULY 1956 The presentations on this filmed half-hour dramatic anthology series were adapted from stories appearing in Readers Digest magazine. The series was produced by Chester Erskine, directed by William Beaudine, and hosted first by Hugh Reilly, then by Gene Raymond.

TV SCREEN MAGAZINE NBC

8 JANUARY 1948–30 APRIL 1949 One of television's first magazine shows, TV Screen Magazine was a potpourri of features, including interviews, musical numbers, and fashion shows. It was originally hosted by John K. M. McCaffery (editor of American Mercury) and Millicent Fenwick (an editor of Vogue; later, of course, she became a Congresswoman). Ray Forrest, who had been the announcer on the early shows, later took over as host.

TV SHOPPER DUMONT

1 NOVEMBER 1948–1 DECEMBER 1950 Kathi Norris, who hosted this early daytime series for most of its run, dispensed shopping hints to housewives.

TV SOUNDSTAGE NBC

10 JULY 1953–3 SEPTEMBER 1954 Half-hour dramatic anthology series. James Dean appeared in one program, "Life Sentence," broadcast 16 October 1953.

TV TEEN CLUB ABC

2 APRIL 1949–28 MARCH 1954 One of the first network musical shows aimed at teenagers, TV Teen Club was the brainchild of bandleader Paul Whiteman. It was an outgrowth of a series of Saturday-night teen dances Whiteman had staged in his home town, Lambertville, New Jersey, in a successful effort to combat juvenile delinquency. The TV verson, broadcast live from Philadelphia, was primarily a talent contest for youngsters. Regulars included cohosts Margo Whiteman (1949–1950; she was Paul's daughter) and Nancy Lewis (1950–1953; she was a high school student when she began the job), singers Junie Keegan and Andrea McLaughlin (who was only three and a half when she began appearing on the show), and accordionist Stan Klet. Among the contestants was Leslie Uggams, who sang on the show in 1950 at age seven. The show, which was also titled Paul Whiteman's TV Teen Club, was produced by Jack Steck and directed by Herb Horton.

TV TWIN DOUBLE SYNDICATED

1977 George DeWitt hosted this syndicated game show on which home viewers could win prizes based on the results of previously filmed horse races. Local sponsors who purchased the series arranged to distribute the race tickets required for viewer participation. Jack O'Hara announced the races and Laura Lane assisted George DeWitt.

TV'S BLOOPERS & PRACTICAL JOKES NBC

9 JANUARY 1984–24 FEBRUARY 1986; 20 MAY 1988–2 SEPTEMBER 1988 Dick Clark and Ed McMahon were the cohosts of this hour series. Clark and McMahon introduced clips of "outtakes"—fluffs and miscues from TV shows and movies—commercials from yesteryear, and videotaped "practical jokes" played on unsuspecting celebrities. The genesis of the weekly series was a group of popular specials on "bloopers" and commercials which had been hosted separately by Clark and McMahon. See also Foul-Ups, Bleeps & Blunders. Additional programs popped up sporadically during subsequent seasons under the title Super Bloopers.

TV'S TOP TUNES CBS
2 JULY 1951–17 AUGUST 1951; 29 JUNE 1953–21 AUGUST 1953; 28 JUNE 1954–20 AUGUST 1954; 9 JULY 1955–3 SEPTEMBER 1955 TV's Top Tunes was a frequent summer replacement series. In 1951, 1953, and 1954 it was seen Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays in a fifteen-minute format as a replacement for The Perry Como Show; it was hosted by Peggy Lee and Mel Tormé in 1951, Helen O'Connell and Bob Eberle in 1953, and Ray Anthony in 1954. The 1955 version was a half-hour series, shown on Saturdays; produced and directed by Lee Cooley, it was hosted by Julius LaRosa and featured the Mitchell Ayres Orchestra.

THE TAB HUNTER SHOW NBC
18 SEPTEMBER 1960–10 SEPTEMBER 1961 Tab Hunter starred as fun-loving cartoonist Paul Morgan, creator of the Bachelor at Large strip, in this half-hour sitcom. Also featured were Richard Erdman as his bachelor pal Peter Fairfield and Jerome Cowan as Paul's publisher, John Larsen.

TABITHA ABC
10 SEPTEMBER 1977–25 AUGUST 1978 This irregularly scheduled comedy series was a sequel to Bewitched, and starred Lisa Hartman as Tabitha Stevens, the now grown daughter of Bewitched's Samantha Stevens. Also featured were David Ankrum as Tabitha's mortal brother, Adam; Robert Urich as Paul Thurston, star of the TV talk show for which Tabitha worked as a production assistant; and Mel Stewart as Marvin, Thurston's producer. Jerry Mayer was the executive producer and Bob Stambler the producer.

TAG THE GAG NBC
13 AUGUST 1951–27 AUGUST 1951 Hal Block hosted this short-lived prime-time game show on which guest panelists tried to supply the punch lines to jokes acted out in charade form.

TAKE A CHANCE NBC
1 OCTOBER 1950–24 DECEMBER 1950 Don Ameche hosted this prime-time half-hour quiz show.

TAKE A GIANT STEP NBC
11 SEPTEMBER 1971–2 SEPTEMBER 1972
TALKING WITH A GIANT NBC
9 SEPTEMBER 1972–1 SEPTEMBER 1973 Take a Giant Step was an unusual Saturday-morning show. Developed by George Heinemann, NBC's vice president for children's programming, the hour series featured a group of seven- to fourteen-year-olds who, with the help of staff researchers, put together a program that centered on a particular theme each week. In 1972 the concept was revised, but the new version, titled Talking with a Giant, was equally ignored by young viewers; the half-hour show featured a guest celebrity who was interviewed by a panel of youngsters. Gloria Peropat and Giovanna Nigro produced and directed Take a Giant Step.

TAKE A GOOD LOOK ABC
22 OCTOBER 1959–16 MARCH 1961 Ernie Kovacs hosted this half-hour prime-time game show. At the beginning of the first season, the show involved two contestants, who tried to identify famous newsmakers from documentary clues. By early 1960, a panel format had been substituted and three celebrities tried to identify a celebrity guest from clues suggested in a skit performed by Kovacs, Bobby Lauher, and Peggy Connelly. Frequent panelists included Edie Adams, Hans Conried, Ben Alexander, Cesar Romero, and Carl Reiner. As with any show involving a comic genius like Ernie Kovacs, the emphasis was on comedy rather than on the game itself.

TAKE A GUESS CBS

11 JUNE 1953–10 SEPTEMBER 1953 A summer replacement for The Burns and Allen Show, Take A Guess was a half-hour game show emceed by John K. M. McCaffery. Contestants tried to identify a secret phrase, with help from a celebrity panel that consisted of John Crawford, Dorothy Hart, Ernie Kovacs, and Margaret Lindsay.

TAKE CHARGE! PBS

1988 Thirteen-part series on personal finance, hosted by Jane Bryant Quinn.

TAKE FIVE CBS

1 APRIL 1987–8 APRIL 1987 Take Five premiered the same evening as CBS's other short-lived 1987 sitcom, Roxie; both were dropped after only two outings. This one starred George Segal as Andy Kooper, a recently divorced man who landed a job as operations manager at a San Francisco public relations agency; in his spare time Kooper played banjo in a dixieland band. Also featured were Jim Haynie as clarinetist Lenny Goodman, leader of the band (the Lenny Goodman Quartet); Derek McGrath as Al, the pianist; Bruce Jarchow as drummer Monty, Kooper's best friend; Todd Field as Kevin Davis, Kooper's boss at Davis & Son; Eugene Roche as Kevin's retired father, Max; Melanie Chartoff as Laraine McDermott, Kooper's in-house rival for his job; and Severn Darden as Kooper's shrink, Dr. Noah Wolf.

TAKE IT FROM ME

See THE JEAN CARROLL SHOW

TAKE MY ADVICE NBC

5 JANUARY 1976–11 JUNE 1976 Kelly Lange hosted this daytime series on which celebrities and their spouses suggested answers to problems submitted by viewers. The twenty-five-minute show was produced by Mark Massari for Burt Sugarman Productions.

TAKE TWO ABC

5 MAY 1963–11 AUGUST 1963 Don McNeill hosted this Sunday-afternoon game show on which celebrities were paired with noncelebrity contestants. The object of the game was to determine the common feature of two photographs from an array of four photos.

TAKING ADVANTAGE SYNDICATED

1983 Matters relating to personal finance were discussed on this half-hour informational series, cohosted by Jerry Graham and Sybil Robson. The show was produced by the same company that developed Entertainment Tonight.

TALE SPIN SYNDICATED

1990–1994 One component of the two-hour cartoon block Disney Afternoon, this one was based on Disney's Jungle Book. Set in the town of Cape Suzette, its main characters were Baloo the Bear (now a cargo pilot), King Louie the Ape, and the tiger Shere Khan.

TALENT JACKPOT DUMONT

19 JULY 1949–23 AUGUST 1949 Vinton Freedley and Bud Collyer cohosted this five-week prime-time talent show on which five acts competed. Each act could win a "jackpot" of as much as $250, based on the amount of applause the act received from the studio audience. The evening's top winner received not only his or her own jackpot, but whatever was left in the other acts' jackpots.

TALENT PATROL ABC

19 JANUARY 1953–28 JUNE 1954 Contestants on this half-hour talent show were selected from the nation's armed forces. Steve Allen was the first host of the series and was succeeded by Arlene Francis. See also Soldier Parade.

TALENT SCOUTS CBS

6 DECEMBER 1948–28 JULY 1958; 1 AUGUST 1960–26 SEPTEMBER 1960; 3 JULY 1962–11 SEPTEMBER 1962; 2 JULY 1963–17 SEPTEMBER 1963; 22 JUNE 1965–7 SEPTEMBER 1965; 20 DECEMBER 1965–5 SEPTEMBER 1966 This long-running prime-time talent show, on which celebrity guests introduced amateur or young professional talent, was hosted first by Arthur Godfrey, who began the show on radio in 1946. From 1948 to 1958 it was a weekly show; when Godfrey was unavailable due to illness or other commitments, substitute hosts such as Steve Allen or Robert Q. Lewis filled in. Beginning in 1960 it was seen as a summer replacement series for several years and was titled Celebrity Talent Scouts or Hollywood Talent Scouts; Sam Levenson hosted it in 1960, Jim Backus in 1962, Merv Griffin in 1963, and Art Linkletter in 1965. Linkletter also hosted the show when it was revived later in 1965 as a midseason replacement. Among the many future stars who were introduced on Talent Scouts were Pat Boone, Shari Lewis, the McGuire Sisters, Carmel Quinn, and June Valli. One of the many performers who flunked the audition was Elvis Presley.

TALENT SEARCH NBC

15 FEBRUARY 1950–6 SEPTEMBER 1951 Skitch Henderson hosted this half-hour talent show.

THE TALENT SHOP DUMONT

13 OCTOBER 1951–29 MARCH 1952 A half-hour talent show for young people, The Talent Shop was set at a New York City drugstore and was hosted by Fred Robbins and Pat Adair.

TALENT VARIETIES ABC

28 JUNE 1955–1 NOVEMBER 1955 Slim Wilson hosted this country-and-western talent show. Broadcast from Springfield, Missouri, the half-hour series was produced and directed by Bill Ring.

TALES FROM THE CRYPT HBO

10 JUNE 1989–3 JANUARY 1996 Horror anthology series, based on stories that originally appeared in the 1950s magazine of the same name. Several of the early segments were directed by such Hollywood luminaries as Richard Donner, Robert Zemeckis, and Walter Hill. The finale of the 1994–1995 season (first aired 15 February 1995), "You, Murderer," directed by Zemeckis, starred Isabella Rossellini, John Lithgow, and Sherilyn Fenn. It also featured, through computerized wizardry, images of Humphrey Bogart (colorized from several of his films) as narrator.

Edited versions of episodes were syndicated in 1993, and were picked up by the Fox network beginning in January 1994. A Saturday-morning cartoon series debuted in 1993: see below.

TALES FROM THE CRYPTKEEPER ABC

18 SEPTEMBER 1993–15 JULY 1995 Saturday-morning cartoon series loosely derived from the series Tales from the Crypt. The tales on the cartoon show were considerably tamer than those on the live action show.

TALES FROM THE DARKSIDE SYNDICATED

1984–1987 Half-hour horror anthology series, including some with humorous endings. The series was produced by George Romero, who is perhaps best known for his 1968 low-budget horror classic, Night of the Living Dead. A feature film consisting of four gruesome stories was released in 1990.

TALES OF THE BLACK CAT SYNDICATED

1950 Half-hour filmed suspense anthology series, hosted by James Monks and his cat, Thanatopsis.

TALES OF THE CITY CBS

25 JUNE 1953–17 SEPTEMBER 1953 A summer replacement for Four Star Playhouse, this half-hour dramatic anthology series was hosted by Ben Hecht and was officially titled Willys Theatre Presenting Ben Hecht's Tales of the City.

TALES OF THE GOLD MONKEY ABC

22 SEPTEMBER 1982–3 AUGUST 1983 This hour adventure series, set on the South Pacific island of Boragora in 1938, starred Stephen Collins as local cargo pilot Jake Cutter; Cutter's travels brought him in contact with an assortment of people searching for the "Gold Monkey," a thousand-year-old relic made of an alloy believed to be heat resistant. Also featured were Jeff MacKay as Corky, Jake's mechanic; Caitlin O'Heaney as Sarah White, an American spy masquerading as a singer; Ron Moody (in the premiere) and Roddy McDowall as Bon Chance Louie, co-owner of the Monkey Bar, a popular watering hole in Boragora; Marta DuBois as the evil Princess Kogi; John Fujioka as Todo, leader of Kogi's private army; John Calvin as Tenboom, a German spy masquerading as a Dutch priest; Les Jankey as Gushie, Louie's partner; and Leo as Jack, Cutter's one-eyed mutt. Of the three 1982 series that appeared to have been inspired by the film Raiders of the Lost Ark (see also Bring 'Em Back Alive and The Quest), Tales of the Gold Monkey seemed to be the closest clone. The series' creator and producer, Don Bellisario, maintained, however, that he took his idea not from Raiders, but rather from the 1938 film Only Angels Have Wings.

TALES OF THE RED CABOOSE ABC

22 OCTOBER 1948–14 JANUARY 1949 Fifteen-minute prime-time series, sponsored by Lionel Trains, which consisted of films of model railroads. Dan Magee was the host. See also Roar of the Rails.

See 77TH BENGAL LANCERS

TALES OF THE TEXAS RANGERS CBS

3 SEPTEMBER 1955–25 MAY 1957 This half-hour western from Screen Gems starred Willard Parker as Jace Pearson and Harry Lauter as Clay Morgan, a pair of Texas Rangers. The most interesting feature of the show was that the stories were not confined to any one era of Texas history; Pearson and Morgan could be seen battling villains from the 1850s one week and tracking down desperadoes from the 1950s the following week. The series, which was seen Saturday mornings on CBS, was later rerun on ABC.

TALES OF THE UNEXPECTED NBC

2 FEBRUARY 1977–24 AUGUST 1977 This hour-long suspense anthology series was first slated opposite ABC's Charlie's Angels and was later seen on an irregular basis. Narrated by William Conrad, the series was produced by John Wilder for Quinn Martin Productions. See also Roald Dahl's Tales of the Unexpected.

TALK SOUP E!
26 DECEMBER 1991– This offbeat but entertaining series provided a daily recap of highlights from TV's stable of talk shows, with dry commentary from host Greg Kinnear, who was succeeded by John Henson in Janary 1995. After two years, some talk shows (such as Geraldo, Sally Jessy Raphael, and The Oprah Winfrey Show, among others) declined to make clips available to Talk Soup. TV Guide quoted a Warner Bros. executive, who asserted that Talk Soup "degrades our shows and makes fools of the guests."

TALKABOUT SYNDICATED
1989 Wayne Cox hosted this game show on which two teams of two persons competed. While one team was offstage, the other had to "talk about" a given subject for a period of time, trying to name words from a hidden list as they did so; words named were removed from the list. The other team then returned onstage, and tried to guess the topic from the list of words remaining.

TALKING WITH A GIANT
See TAKE A GIANT STEP

TALL HOPES CBS
25 AUGUST 1993–8 SEPTEMBER 1993 Short-lived sitcom about a black family living in Philadelphia. With George Wallace as George Harris, a cop; Anna Maria Horsford as his wife, Lainie; Terrence Dashon Howard as their older son, Chet, a top high school basketball player; Kenny Blank as their younger son, Ernest, who shot videos at home; and Karla Green as their young daughter, Dee Dee. Michael Elias and Rich Eustis created the series.

THE TALL MAN NBC
10 SEPTEMBER 1960–1 SEPTEMBER 1962 This fanciful western starred Barry Sullivan as New Mexico Deputy Sheriff Pat Garrett and Clu Gulager as William H. Bonney, better known as Billy the Kid; on the series Billy was not depicted as a sadistic murderer, but rather as a misguided chap who occasionally helped out Garrett. The half-hour show was created and produced by Samuel Peeples.

TALL TALES SHOWTIME
20 DECEMBER 1985–23 MAY 1988 Shelley Duvall followed up her successful Faerie Tale Theatre with this anthology series. Officially titled Shelley Duvall's Tall Tales and Legends, it presented adaptations of famliar stories from American folklore. Among the presentations were "Annie Oakley," with Jamie Lee Curtis (20 December 1985); "Darlin' Clementine," with Duvall (30 December 1987); and "John Henry," with Danny Glover (22 April 1988).

TALLAHASSEE 7000 SYNDICATED
1961 Walter Matthau starred in this half-hour crime show as Lex Rogers, special agent for the Florida Sheriffs Bureau. The twenty-six episodes were filmed on location in Florida.

TAMMY ABC
17 SEPTEMBER 1965–15 JULY 1966 This half-hour sitcom was based on the Tammy films, and starred Debbie Watson as Tammy Tarleton, a young Southern lass who left her family's houseboat to become private secretary to a wealthy plantation owner. Also featured were Frank McGrath as Uncle Lucius Tarleton; Denver Pyle as Grandpa (Mordecai) Tarleton; Dennis Robertson as Cousin Cletus; Donald Woods as her employer, John Brent; Doris Packer as Mrs. Brent; Jay Sheffield as Steven Brent, John's son; George Furth as Dwayne Witt; Dorothy Green as Lavinia Tate, a local widow who had hoped to have her daughter hired for Tammy's job; Linda Marshall as Gloria Tate, Lavinia's daughter, and David Macklin as Peter Tate, Lavinia's son.

THE TAMMY GRIMES SHOW ABC

8 SEPTEMBER 1966–29 SEPTEMBER 1966 The first fatality of the 1966–1967 season, The Tammy Grimes Show was an ill-conceived half-hour sitcom that starred musical comedy star Tammy Grimes as Tamantha Ward, a madcap heiress. Also featured were Dick Sargent as her parsimonious twin brother, Terence Ward; Hiram Sherman as their thrifty Uncle Simon, a banker; and Maudie Prickett as Mrs. Ratchett, the housekeeper. The series was canceled after four episodes had been televised, though ten shows had actually been completed by that time. William Dozier was the executive producer for Greenway Productions in association with 20th Century-Fox; Richard Whorf and Alex Gottlieb were the producers.

TANNER '88 HBO

15 FEBRUARY 1988–27 AUGUST 1988 Garry Trudeau, creator of the Doonesbury comic strip, teamed up with director Robert Altman on this satirical look at an American presidential campaign. Michael Murphy starred as hopeful Democratic nominee Jack Tanner. Also featured were Cynthia Nixon as Alex Tanner, and Pamela Reed as T. J. Cavanaugh. Some real-life political figures also made cameo appearances on the twelve-part series, including Bruce Babbitt and Kitty Dukakis.

TARGET SYNDICATED

1958 Adolphe Menjou hosted, and occasionally starred in, this series of half-hour dramas from Ziv TV.

TARGET: THE CORRUPTORS ABC

29 SEPTEMBER 1961–21 SEPTEMBER 1962 Stephen McNally starred in this hour crime show as crusading newspaper columnist Paul Marino, who tracked down and exposed racketeers; Robert Harland costarred as his investigator, Jack Flood. Leonard Ackerman and John Burrows produced the series, and Gene Roddenberry (who later created Star Trek) supplied at least one script.

TARZAN NBC

8 SEPTEMBER 1966–13 SEPTEMBER 1968 Edgar Rice Burroughs's famous jungle character, who had been featured in films for decades, finally came to television (without Jane) in 1966. The hour adventure series starred Ron Ely as Tarzan, who was born Lord Greystoke, but who preferred jungle life. Also featured were Manuel Padilla, Jr., as young Jai, who, like Tarzan, was a jungle orphan; Alan Caillou as Jason Flood, Jai's tutor; and Rockne Tarkington as Rao, a veterinarian. Filmed on location in Brazil and Mexico, the show was produced by Banner Productions.

TARZAN SYNDICATED

1991–1992 TV's second live-action version of the adventure series starred Wolf Larson as Tarzan, who lived in an elaborate treehouse, sported long blond hair, and spoke in more than monosyllables. Also featured were Lydie Denier as environmentalist Jane Porter; Sean Roberge as her young assistant, Roger Taft Jr.; and Malick Bowens as Simon, a native. A chimp named Cheetah was also on hand. Though set in Africa, the thirty-minute syndicated program was filmed in Yucatan.

TARZAN, LORD OF THE JUNGLE CBS

TARZAN AND THE SUPER 7 CBS
9 SEPTEMBER 1978–30 AUGUST 1980
THE TARZAN/LONE RANGER ADVENTURE HOUR CBS

THE TARZAN/LONE RANGER/ZORRO ADVENTURE HOUR CBS

12 SEPTEMBER 1981–11 SEPTEMBER 1982 Edgar Rice Burroughs's character was featured not only in a live-action prime-time series (see above), but also in cartoon form on Saturday mornings. Tarzan, Lord of the Jungle was a half-hour show, which ran for one season. In the fall of 1977 Tarzan teamed up with Batman in The Batman/Tarzan Adventure Hour (see that title), and in the fall of 1978 Tarzan regained top billing in Tarzan and the Super 7, a ninety-minute show with seven segments: "Tarzan," "Batman and Robin," "The Freedom Force" (a group of superheroes including Hercules, Isis, Super Samurai, Merlin, and Sinbad), "Superstretch and Microwoman" (a husband-and-wife team), "Moray & Manta" (a pair of underwater crimefighters), "Web Woman," and "Jason of Star Command." The latter segment was a live-action feature set in outer space with Craig Littler as Jason, a young trainee with Star Command, a galactic police force; Sid Haig as Dragos, the archvillain; Susan O'Hanlon; Charlie Dell; and James Doohan. Norm Prescott and Lou Scheimer are the executive producers of both Tarzan, Lord of the Jungle and Tarzan and the Super 7. Jason of Star Command became a separate series in 1979 (see also that title), while Tarzan and the Super 7 carried on for another season in an hour format. In 1980 "Tarzan" segments were mixed with "Lone Ranger" cartoons on The Tarzan/Lone Ranger Adventure Hour. A third hero, Zorro, joined them in 1981 for The Tarzan/Lone Ranger/Zorro Adventure Hour. Norm Prescott and Lou Scheimer produced the several incarnations of the series.

TATE NBC

8 JUNE 1960–28 SEPTEMBER 1960 This summer western starred David McLean as Tate, a one-armed gunslinger (his bad arm was encased in leather). Robert Redford made two guest appearances on the half-hour show, in "The Bounty Hunter" (22 June) and "Comanche Scalps" (10 August).

TATTINGER'S (NICK AND HILLARY) NBC

26 OCTOBER 1988–11 JANUARY 1989; 20 APRIL 1989–26 APRIL 1989 Tattinger's was an unsuccessful hour comedy-drama from the St. Elsewhere creative crew. Set at an elegant Manhattan restaurant, it featured Stephen Collins as Nick Tattinger, the former owner of Tattinger's who returned from Paris to New York and again became involved with the restaurant; Blythe Danner as his ex-wife, Hillary, the owner; Patrice Colihan as their older daughter, Nina; Chay Lentin as their younger daughter, Winnifred; Jerry Stiller as Sid, the assistant manager; Mary Beth Hurt as the new chef, Sheila Bradley; Yusef Bulos as the old chef, Alphonse; Sue Francis Pai as Billie; Robert Clohessy as bartender Tom Smaraldo; Rob Morrow as bartender Marco; Zach Grenier as drug dealer Sonny Franks; and Simon Jones as Norman, Hillary's new beau. Each episode featured cameo appearances by showbiz or sports celebrities, as guests at the restaurant.

Tattinger's left the air in January 1989 after nine episodes for "retooling." It returned three months later, considerably retooled: in a new time slot, in a half-hour format, as a sitcom, with a new title, Nick and Hillary. This time, Nick had again returned from a trip (this time to Brazil), only to find that Hillary had completely transformed the restaurant into an ultra-trendy nightspot in his absence. Most of the former cast returned. Jessica Prunell replaced Chay Lentin as Winnifred, and two new characters were introduced: Spin and Marti. Chris Elliott (son of Bob Elliott of Bob and Ray fame) was Spin, the ultra-hip maitre d' hired by Hillary to insure the proper atmosphere for the new venture, and Anna Levine was Marti, a waitress. Nick and Hillary proved even less popular than Tattinger's, and vanished after only two showings.

TATTLETALES CBS/SYNDICATED

18 FEBRUARY 1974–31 MARCH 1978 (CBS); 1977 (SYNDICATED); 18 JANUARY 1982–1 JUNE 1984 (CBS); 1983–1985 (SYNDICATED) Bert Convy hosted this game show on which three celebrity couples competed, each playing for one-third of the studio audience; the spouses were separated while one set of partners is asked questions. Couples won points by matching responses correctly. Tattletales was a Mark Goodson-Bill Todman Production.

TAXI ABC/NBC

12 SEPTEMBER 1978–10 JUNE 1982 (ABC); 30 SEPTEMBER 1982–20 JULY 1983 (NBC) A half-hour sitcom set at the Sunshine Cab Company in New York, Taxi was created by four former Mary Tyler Moore Show staffers—Ed. Weinberger, David Davis, Stan Daniels, and James L. Brooks. Like Mary Tyler Moore, Taxi was an ensemble comedy set around a workplace. The cast included: Judd Hirsch as Alex Reiger, a career cabbie; Jeff Conaway (1978–1981) as Bobby Wheeler, a struggling actor; Tony Danza as Tony Banta, a struggling boxer; Randall Carver (1978–1979) as John Burns; Marilu Henner as Elaine Nardo, an aspiring art dealer; Danny DeVito as Louie DiPalma, the sadistic dispatcher; and Andy Kaufman as mechanic Latka Gravas, a befuddled immigrant. Subsequently added were: Christopher Lloyd (1979–1983) as "Reverend" Jim Ignatowski, a burned-out survivor of the psychedelic sixties (Lloyd had played the character in one episode of the first season); J. Alan Thomas (1980–1983) as Jeff Bennett, the assistant dispatcher; and Carol Kane (1982–1983) as Latka's wife, Simka, who was also from "the old country." Taxi finished in Nielsen's Top Ten at the end of its first season and won the first of its three consecutive Emmys as Outstanding Comedy Series. Nevertheless, ratings dipped slightly during the second season and dropped significantly thereafter. ABC canceled the series after four seasons, and NBC quickly picked it up. Unfortunately, the ratings failed to improve, and NBC dropped Taxi after a single season. Andy Kaufman died of lung cancer in May 1984 at the age of thirty-six. A ninety-minute series retrospective, "The Best of Taxi," aired on CBS 19 December 1994.

TAZ-MANIA FOX

7 SEPTEMBER 1991–3 SEPTEMBER 1994 Half-hour cartoon series starring the hyperkinetic and perpetually hungry creature from Australia, the Tasmanian Devil. Following a prime-time premiere on 1 September 1991 the series was aired on Saturday mornings for three seasons.

TEACHERS ONLY NBC

14 APRIL 1982–23 SEPTEMBER 1982; 12 FEBRUARY 1983–21 MAY 1983 The central characters in this half-hour sitcom were the faculty and staff at Millard Fillmore High School, an inner-city institution. The 1982 cast included Lynn Redgrave (late of House Calls) as teacher Diana Swanson, who took an active interest in the problems of her students and colleagues; Norman Fell as the phlegmatic principal, Ben Cooper; Adam Arkin as Michael Dreyfuss, the biology teacher; Norman Bartold as Mr. Brody, the assistant principal; Van Nessa Clarke as Gwen Edwards; Richard Karron as Pafko, the janitor; and Kit McDonough as Lois, the nosy clerk. When the series returned in 1983 as a midseason replacement, Fillmore High was firmly located in Brooklyn, and Diana Swanson had become the school's guidance counselor. Only Redgrave and Fell remained from the 1982 cast. New regulars included Jean Smart as Shari, Cooper's earthy secretary; Joel Brooks as Barney; Tim Reid as Michael; and Teresa Ganzel as Sam, Diana's best friend, an English teacher. Aaron Ruben created the series.

THE TED KNIGHT SHOW CBS

8 APRIL 1978–13 MAY 1978 Disappointing sitcom starring Ted Knight as Roger Dennis, operator of a New York City escort service. His employees included: Fawne Harriman as Honey; Cissy Colpitts as Graziella; Tanya Boyd as Phil; Janice Kent as Cheryl; Ellen Regan as Irma; Deborah Harmon as Joy; and Iris Adrian as Dottie, Roger's salty secretary. Also featured were Normann Burton as Roger's brother, Burt, and Thomas Leopold as Roger's son, Winston. The series was created by Lowell Ganz and Mark Rothman, who also served as its executive producers; Martin Cohan and David W. Duclon were the producers. The pilot for the half-hour series was televised on Busting Loose. The program should not be confused with The Ted

Knight Show of 1986, which was the short-lived successor to Too Close for Comfort (see also that title).

TED MACK'S FAMILY HOUR ABC

7 JANUARY 1951–25 NOVEMBER 1951 Ted Mack hosted this Sunday-evening variety half hour, which also featured singer Andy Roberts and announcer Dennis James.

TED MACK'S MATINEE NBC

4 APRIL 1955–28 OCTOBER 1955 This half-hour daytime variety show was hosted by Ted Mack and featured Elise Rhodes, Beth Parks, Dick Lee, and the Honey Dreamers. A regular feature of the program awarded prizes to wives who wrote in to praise their husbands. Louis Graham produced the series.

TED MACK'S ORIGINAL AMATEUR HOUR DUMONT/NBC/ABC/CBS

18 JANUARY 1948–25 SEPTEMBER 1949 (DUMONT); 4 OCTOBER 1949–11 SEPTEMBER 1954 (NBC); 30 OCTOBER 1955–23 JUNE 1957 (ABC); 1 JULY 1957–4 OCTOBER 1958 (NBC); 1 MAY 1959–9 OCTOBER 1959 (CBS); 7 MARCH 1960–26 SEPTEMBER 1960 (ABC); 2 OCTOBER 1960–27 SEPTEMBER 1970 (CBS) Television's most famous talent show was a direct descendant of radio's best-known talent show, Major Bowes' Original Amateur Hour, which began in 1934; Major Edward Bowes hosted the radio program from 1934 until his death in 1946. A year later Ted Mack, who had directed the auditions for the Bowes show, took over as host and brought the show to television (the radio version lasted until 1952). The show, which was originally titled Major Bowes' Original Amateur Hour even on TV, was seen sporadically in 1947, with regularly scheduled broadcasts beginning in 1948. It was one of the few programs to have been broadcast on all four commercial networks. For most of its long run it was a half-hour series; it was a prime-time show from 1948 until 1960, when it began a lengthy Sunday-afternoon run on CBS. The format of the show was simple and straightforward, changing little over the years: each week a number of amateur performers displayed their talents, and the viewing audience was invited to vote—by postcard—for their favorite act.

THE TED STEELE SHOW NBC/DUMONT/CBS

29 SEPTEMBER 1948–29 OCTOBER 1948 (NBC); 27 FEBRUARY 1949–12 JULY 1949 (DUMONT); 6 JUNE 1949–8 JULY 1949 (CBS); 10 OCTOBER 1949–28 APRIL 1950 (CBS) Singer Ted Steele hosted several musical variety shows. He first hosted a prime-time show on NBC. His DuMont series was seen in both daytime and prime-time versions, and before it was over he had begun a daytime show on CBS. In the fall of 1949 his CBS daytime series was seen Mondays through Fridays at 5:00 P.M.

TEECH CBS

18 SEPTEMBER 1991–16 OCTOBER 1991 This half-hour sitcom may have been inspired by the film "Dead Poets' Society." It starred Phill Lewis as music teacher "Teech" Gibson, who was furloughed from a Philadelphia public school job and landed a position at a private school, Winthrop Academy, where he was the sole black faculty member. Also featured were Maggie Han as Cassie Lee, the assistant headmistress; Steven Gilborn as Alfred Litton, the stuffy headmaster who disapproved of Teech's unorthodox efforts to educate his students; Curnal Achilles Aulisio as George Dubcek, the dumb jock; Joshua Hoffman as Kenny Freedman, the smart kid; Ken Lawrence Johnston as Boyd Askew, the rich kid; Jack Noseworthy as Adrian Peterman, the nerd; and Jason Kristofer as boisterous Albie Nichols. Music for the show was provided by B. B. King, who guested on one episode as Teech's uncle.

TEEN TIME TUNES DUMONT

7 MARCH 1949–15 JULY 1949 Fifteen-minute Monday-through-Friday-evening musical show, featuring the music of the Alan Logan Trio.

TEEN WOLF CBS

13 SEPTEMBER 1986–27 AUGUST 1988; 29 OCTOBER 1988–2 SEPTEMBER 1989 Saturday morning cartoon series based on the 1985 film about a teenager who discovered that he was a werewolf.

TEENAGE BOOK CLUB ABC

13 AUGUST 1948–29 OCTOBER 1948 Half-hour panel show featuring discussions on current books of interest to teenagers.

TEENAGE MUTANT NINJA TURTLES SYNDICATED/CBS

1987 (SYNDICATED); 8 SEPTEMBER 1990– (CBS) First came the comic book in 1984, a black and white effort created by two young men from Massachusetts, Kevin Eastman and Peter Laird, and produced for $1200. It told the tale of a quartet of turtles who lived in the New York City sewer system, where they were exposed to a radioactive substance, mutagen, that transformed them into pizza-craving, half-turtle, half-human creatures—"heroes on the halfshell." Each took a classical Italian name and a favorite weapon—Leonardo (a ninja sword), Michelangelo (nunchucks), Donatello (a bow or staff) and Raphael (a scythe). Assisted by their comrade Splinter, a sushi-eating rat who taught them the martial arts, and by a TV news reporter, April O'Neil, they battled the evil Shredder.

This half-hour syndicated cartoon series followed in 1987. A 1990 motion picture, with live-action characters, boosted their popularity tremendously, prompting CBS to announce the addition of a new Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles cartoon series to its Saturday morning schedule in the fall of 1990. A Japanese network also purchased the show in 1990, planning to retitle it Teenage Mutant Hero Turtles.

TEKNOMAN UPN

10 SEPTEMBER 1995– Sunday-morning cartoon series set in the year 2087, pitting the hero, Teknoman, in a battle against the evil Dakon for control of the world.

TELECOMICS SYNDICATED/NBC

1949 (SYNDICATED); 18 SEPTEMBER 1950–30 MARCH 1951 (NBC) Produced by Vallee Video, Telecomics included some of the first cartoons made especially for television. Among the first segments were: "Brother Goose," "Joey and Jug," "Rick Rack, Special Agent," and "Sa-Lih." When the series was picked up by NBC (and broadcast under the title NBC Comics) segments included "Danny March," "Johnny and Mr. Do-Right," "Kid Champion," and "Space Barton."

TELEDRAMA SYNDICATED

1952 Half-hour dramatic anthology series.

TELEPHONE TIME CBS/ABC

8 APRIL 1956–31 MARCH 1957 (CBS); 4 JUNE 1957–1 APRIL 1958 (ABC) The stories on this half-hour filmed dramatic anthology series were based on true incidents. Jerry Stagg produced the series, which was hosted by John Nesbitt on CBS and by Dr. Frank Baxter on ABC.

TELESPORTS DIGEST SYNDICATED

1953 Harry Wismer hosted this sports series, on which films of the past week's top athletic events were shown.

TELE-THEATRE NBC

27 SEPTEMBER 1948–26 JUNE 1950 A half-hour dramatic anthology series, Tele-Theatre was sponsored by Chevrolet and was titled Chevrolet on Broadway in its early weeks. Vic McLeod was the producer.

TELEVISION PBS

25 JANUARY 1988–7 MARCH 1988 Edwin Newman hosted this eight-part examination of television itself, which focused principally on the medium's history and its effect on American society. The series was an edited version of an eleven-part series produced in England by Granada Television.

TELEVISION: INSIDE & OUT NBC

5 DECEMBER 1981–2 JANUARY 1982 This prime-time Saturday series took a superficial look at television and other entertainment media. Gossip columnist Rona Barrett was the host, assisted by Chicago TV critic Gary Deeb, comic Wil Shriner, and Sylvester "Pat" Weaver, NBC's visionary programmer of the 1950s.

TELEVISION RECITAL HALL NBC

1 JULY 1951–21 AUGUST 1953; 9 AUGUST 1954–6 SEPTEMBER 1954 This highbrow musical series, on which classical performers appeared, began as a summer replacement for The Colgate Comedy Hour and later shifted to Sunday afternoons. During the summer of 1954 it was seen in prime time. Charles Polacheck produced the series.

TELL IT TO GROUCHO CBS

11 JANUARY 1962–31 MAY 1962 Tell It to Groucho, a half-hour midseason replacement series, was similar in format to You Bet Your Life, except that the quiz segment was emphasized even less. Two contestants appeared and were perfectly free to state their problems or air their gripes during the interview with host Groucho Marx. A top prize of $500 was available in the quiz segment to a contestant who could identify a photograph of a celebrity that appeared for a split second. Jack Wheeler and Patty Harmon served as Groucho's assistants and George Fenneman was the announcer; Bernie Smith produced the show. See also Tell It to the Camera; You Bet Your Life.

TELL IT TO THE CAMERA CBS

25 DECEMBER 1963–18 MARCH 1964 Tell It to the Camera was hastily devised as a midseason replacement for Glynis on Wednesdays. People on the street were invited to state their opinions, thoughts, or complaints to the camera. Red Rowe hosted the half-hour series, which was taped on location throughout the United States; Allen Funt was the producer.

TELL ME, DR. BROTHERS

See DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

TELLER OF TALES

See SOMERSET MAUGHAM THEATRE

THE TELLTALE CLUE CBS

8 JULY 1954–23 SEPTEMBER 1954 Half-hour crime show starring Anthony Ross as Detective Richard Hale of the New York Police Department.

TEMPERATURES RISING ABC

12 SEPTEMBER 1972–8 JANUARY 1974 Half-hour sitcom set at Capitol General Hospital in Washington, D.C. During the 1972–1973 season the cast included: Cleavon Little as Dr. Jerry Noland; James Whitmore as Dr. Vincent Campanelli; Joan Van Ark as Nurse Annie Carlisle; Reva Rose as Nurse Mildred MacInerney; and Nancy Fox as Nurse Ellen Turner. In the fall of 1973 the show was retitled The New Temperatures Rising Show; only Cleavon Little was retained from the previous cast. The new regulars included: Paul Lynde as Dr. Paul Mercy, the hospital administrator; Sudie Bond as Agatha, Paul's mother, owner of the hospital; Alice Ghostley as Edwina, Paul's sister; Jeff Morrow as Dr. Lloyd Axton; Barbara Cason as Nurse Tillis; Jennifer Darling as Nurse Winchester; and John Dehner as Dr. Claver. William Asher was the executive producer of the series.

TEMPESTT SYNDICATED

1995– Hour daytime talk show hosted by Tempestt Bledsoe, best known to television viewers as daughter Vanessa on The Cosby Show.

TEMPLE HOUSTON NBC

19 SEPTEMBER 1963–10 SEPTEMBER 1964 This hour western starred Jeffrey Hunter as lawyer Temple Houston, son of Sam Houston. Jack Elam played his sidekick, George Taggart, a former gunslinger. Also featured were Mary Wickes as Ida Goff; Frank Ferguson as Judge Gurney; Chubby Johnson as Concho; and James Best as Gotch.

TEMPTATION ABC

4 DECEMBER 1967–1 MARCH 1968 Art James hosted this daytime game show, which combined a question-and-answer segment with a merchandise-swapping segment.

THE $10,000 PYRAMID (THE $20,000 PYRAMID) (THE $25,000 PYRAMID) (THE $50,000 PYRAMID) (THE $100,000 PYRAMID) CBS/ABC/SYNDICATED

26 MARCH 1973–29 MARCH 1974 (CBS); 6 MAY 1974–27 JUNE 1980 (ABC) 1974–1979 (SYNDICATED); 1981 (SYNDICATED); 20 SEPTEMBER 1982–1 JULY 1988 (CBS); 1985–1989; 1991 (SYNDICATED) On this half-hour game show from Bob Stewart Productions, two teams, each with a celebrity and a contestant, competed in a two-part word game. In the first part players tried to get their partners to identify a list of words in a given category by supplying definitions to those words. The team with the higher score after three rounds then progressed to the second part of the game, where the procedure was reversed: by naming elements of a listed category, one player tried to get the other to identify the category; the top prize at the second level was originally $10,000 on the network version, but was increased to $20,000 on 19 January 1976, as the show was retitled The $20,000 Pyramid. The top prize on the 1974–1979 syndicated version remained steady at $25,000. A new syndicated version was introduced early in 1981 with a top prize of $50,000 (and the show was retitled accordingly), but the figure was scaled down again to $25,000 when the series returned to CBS's daytime schedule in the fall of 1982. The 1985 and 1991 syndicated versions offered a potential grand prize of $100,000. Except for the first syndicated version, which was emceed by Bill Cullen, and the 1991 syndicated version, which John Davidson emceed, all versions of the show were hosted by Dick Clark.

TEN WHO DARED SYNDICATED

1977 Ten-part historical documentary series on great explorers. Produced by the BBC in cooperation with Time-Life Films, the hour series was sponsored by Mobil Oil. Among the explorers whose lives were dramatized were Columbus, Pizarro, Cook, von Humboldt, Jedediah Smith, Mary Kingsley, and Roald Amundsen. Anthony Quinn was the host and narrator.

TENAFLY NBC

10 OCTOBER 1973–6 AUGUST 1974 One segment of The NBC Wednesday Movie, Tenafly alternated for one season with Banacek, Faraday and Company, and The Snoop Sisters. It starred James McEachin as Harry Tenafly, a decidedly unflashy black private eye who worked in Los Angeles. Also featured were Lillian Lehman as his wife, Ruth Tenafly; David Huddleston as Lieutenant Church; Rosanna Huffman as his secretary, Lorrie; and Paul Jackson as his son, Herb.

THE TENNESSEE ERNIE FORD SHOW NBC/ABC

3 JANUARY 1955–28 JUNE 1957 (NBC); 4 OCTOBER 1956–29 JUNE 1961 (NBC); 2 APRIL 1962–26 MARCH 1965 (ABC) Tennessee Ernie Ford, best known as a country-and-western singer and folksy humorist, was actually born in Tennessee; by the early 1950s, however, he had moved West and was hosting a local show in Los Angeles called Hometown Jamboree. In 1954 he emceed a revival of Kay Kyser's College of Musical Knowledge, and a few months later he began hosting the first of his three network variety shows. The first was a half-hour daytime series, which also featured Molly Bee. The second, which started in the fall of 1956, was a Thursday-night half-hour series (when it was sponsored by the Ford Motor Company, it was known simply as The Ford Show); it featured the Top Twenty, Harry Geller's Orchestra, and the Voices of Walter Schumann. Ford's third series was a half-hour daytime show on ABC, which featured Dick Noel and Anita Gordon. His NBC shows were produced and directed by Bud Yorkin, who later teamed up with Norman Lear on All in the Family. Ford's ABC show was produced and directed by William Burch.

TENNESSEE TUXEDO CBS

28 September 1963–3 September 1966 Segments on this Saturday-morning cartoon show included "Tennessee Tuxedo," a penguin, "The Hunter," the story of a beagle tracking a fox, "Tutor the Turtle," and "The World of Commander McBragg."

TENSPEED AND BROWN SHOE ABC

27 January 1980–27 June 1980 Hour adventure series about a black con artist and a white stockbroker who teamed up as private investigators. With Ben Vereen as E. L. "Tenspeed" Turner and Jeff Goldblum as Lionel "Brown Shoe" Whitney. The series was a Stephen J. Cannell production. Vereen later appeared as Tenspeed on the last few episodes of another Cannell venture, J. J. Starbuck.

TEQUILA AND BONETTI CBS

17 January 1992–18 April 1992 Based loosely on the film "Turner & Hooch," this light hour crime show featured Jack Scalia as Nico Bonetti, a New York cop who moved to South Coast, California, after accidentally killing a younsgter, and found himself teamed up with a drooling French mastiff named Tequila. Also featured were Charles Rocket as Captain Midian Knight, an aspiring writer; Mariska Hargitay as Officer Angela Garcia, a widow; Terry Funk as Officer Nuzo; Joe Vita as Officer Vita; Noley Thornton as Angela's young daughter, Teresa; and Brad Sanders as the voice of Tequila, whose observations were communicated to the viewing audience.

The series was produced by Don Sharpe Enterprises.

THE TEX AND JINX SHOW NBC

18 February 1957–31 January 1958 This half-hour daytime interview show was hosted by the husband-and-wife team of Tex McCrary and Jinx Falkenburg. Broadcast from New York, the show was originally titled Closeup.

THE TEXAN CBS

29 September 1958–12 September 1960 This half-hour western starred Rory Calhoun as Bill Longley, a fast-drawing drifter. Calhoun and Vic Orsatti were the executive producers, and Jerry Stagg was the producer.

TEXAS NBC

4 August 1980–31 December 1982 The phenomenal popularity of the prime-time serial Dallas led to the creation of this daytime soap opera. The hour series was set in Houston, where (according to NBC's ads) "living is fast, loving is free, and rules are meant to be broken." To help Texas acquire an audience, two popular performers from the NBC serial Another World— Beverlee McKinsey (who received star billing in the credits) and Jim Poyner— were cast as central characters. Nevertheless, Texas failed to attract a large audience, principally because it was scheduled at 3:00 P.M., opposite ABC's General Hospital, then enjoying a strong ascendancy in the ratings race. The network changed Texas's time slot on 26 April 1982, but the new hour—mornings at 11:00—proved even worse for the show, and Texas bit the dust after a twenty-nine-month run.

Principal players included: Beverlee McKinsey as Iris (Cory) (Carrington) (Delaney) Bancroft, who left Another World's Bay City to join her son in Houston; Jim Poyner (who had also emigrated from Bay City) as her son, Dennis Carrington; Bert Kramer as Alex Wheeler, an old flame of Iris's, who (unknown to himself and to Dennis) was really Dennis's father; Donald May as Grant Wheeler, the head of World Oil; Sharon Acker as his wife, Judith Wheeler; Michael Woods as their son, Mark Wheeler, World Oil's president; Harley Kozak as their daughter, Brett Wheeler; Gretchen Oehler as Vivian Gorrow (who had also appeared on Another World), the Wheelers' maid; David Forsyth as lawyer Thomas Jefferson (T. J.) Canfield; Larry Weber as his father, Burton Canfield; Lori March as his mother, Mildred Canfield; Josephine Nichols as Kate Marshall; Jerry Lanning as her son, Justin Marshall, head of Marshall Oil; Lisby Larson as her daughter, Paige Marshall; Pamela Long as Justin's wife, Ashley Marshall (Long, also known as Pamela Long Hammer, became a writer for Texas and would later become the head writer of Guiding Light); Damian Scheler as Gregory Marshall, son of Ashley by T. J.; Terri Garber as Allison Linden, Ashley's sister; Robert Gerringer as Striker Bellman; Elizabeth Allen as TV executive Victoria Bellman, Striker's ex-wife; Carla Borelli as Reena Cook Dekker, Striker's daughter; Randy Hamilton as Rikki Dekker; Caryn Richman as Elena Dekker; Shirley Slater as Maggie Dekker; Shanna Reed as Terry Dekker; Chandler Hill Harben and Jay Hammer as Max Dekker; Barbara Rucker as Ginny Connor; John McCafferty as TV star Billy Joe Wright; Dianne Neil as his sister, Ruby Wright; Joel Colodner as Dr. Bart Walker; Ann McCarthy as Samantha Walker; Charlie Hill as Joel Walker; Cathy Hickland as Dr. Courtney Marshall; Dana Kimmel as Dawn Marshall; Lee Patterson as Kevin Cook; Scott Stevenson as unsavory Clipper Curtis; Tina Johnson as Lurlene Harper; Michael Longfield as Hunt Weston; Chris Goutman as George St. John; Ellen Maxted as Anita Wright; Phil Clark as Ryan Connor; Gregory Sutton as Ginny's son, Steve Marshall; Kin Shriner (who left General Hospital and returned to it after Texas folded) as Jeb Richmond; Philip English as Miles Renquist; Maher Boutros as Colonel Hassein; and Donna Cyrus as Princess Jasmine of Tanquir. In the fall of 1983, Texas achieved a minor distinction when it became one of the few soap operas to be rerun; Procter and Gamble, which owned the serial, sold the reruns (beginning with episode #104) to WTBS, the Atlanta "superstation" whose programs were carried by many cable systems throughout the country.

TEXAS RODEO NBC

30 APRIL 1959–2 JULY 1959 Half-hour rodeo show videotaped in Houston. L. N. Sikes and Bob Gray were the producers.

THE TEXAS WHEELERS ABC

13 SEPTEMBER 1974–4 OCTOBER 1974; 26 JUNE 1975–31 JULY 1975 The Texas Wheelers was the first casualty of the 1974–1975 season, axed after only four episodes (though a few additional shows were broadcast during the summer of 1975). The half-hour comedy starred Jack Elam as Zack Wheeler, a lazy opportunist who hoped to live off his four children. Also featured were Gary Busey as his oldest son, Truckie; Mark Hamill as second son Doobie; Karen Oberdiear as daughter Boo; Tony Decker as youngest son T. J.; Lisa Eilbacher as Boo's friend, Sally; Bill Burton as Bud; and Dennis Burkley as Herb. Dale McRaven was the executive producer and Chris Hayward the producer for MTM Enterprises.

THAT GIRL ABC

8 SEPTEMBER 1966–10 SEPTEMBER 1971 Marlo Thomas, daughter of Danny Thomas, starred in this half-hour sitcom as Ann Marie, an aspiring young actress living in New York; Ted Bessell costarred as her boyfriend, Don Hollinger, a writer for Newsview magazine (the two were finally engaged in the fall of 1970). Also featured were Lew Parker as Ann's father, Lew Marie, who owned a French restaurant in Brewster, New York, and Rosemary DeCamp as Ann's mother, Helen Marie. A considerable number of performers appeared from time to time on the show, including: Bonnie Scott as Ann's neighbor, Judy Bessemer; Dabney Coleman as Judy's husband, Leon Bessemer, an obstetrician; George Carlin (1966–1967) as Ann's agent, George Lester; Ronnie Schell (1967–1968) as agent Harvey Peck; Morty Gunty as agent Sandy Stone; Billy DeWolfe (1966–1968) as Ann's acting coach, Jules Benedict; Bernie Kopell as Don's pal, Jerry Meyer (Kopell later played pal Jerry Bauman); Alice Borden as Ruth Bauman, Jerry's wife; Reva Rose as Ann's friend, Marcy; Frank Faylen as Don's father, Bert Hollinger; and Mabel Albertson as Don's mother, Mildred Hollinger. That Girl was created by Bill Persky and Sam Denoff, who had both previously written for The Dick Van Dyke Show.

THAT WAS THE WEEK THAT WAS NBC
10 JANUARY 1964–4 MAY 1965 That Was the Week That Was, commonly abbreviated to TW3, was based on a British series created by Ned Sherrin. The half-hour series satirized current events, but the American version was never as well received as its British counterpart. Among the regulars on the American version were David Frost, Elliott Reid, Alan Alda, Henry Morgan, Phyllis Newman, Buck Henry, Pat Englund, Doro Merande, Burr Tillstrom's puppets, Skitch Henderson's Orchestra, and vocalist Nancy Ames. Leland Hayward was the executive producer, and Marshall Jamison was the producer; among the writers were Saul Turteltaub, Robert Emmett, and Gerald Gardner. The show was first introduced as a special in November 1963 and became a weekly series in January, replacing Harry's Girls. ABC aired a one-hour "That Was the Week That Was" special on 21 April 1985, hosted by David Frost.

THAT WONDERFUL GUY ABC
4 JANUARY 1950–28 APRIL 1950 This early musical comedy series starred Jack Lemmon as Harold, a young songwriter-actor who got a job as the manservant of a crotchety drama critic; Neil Hamilton played the drama critic and Cynthia Stone (whom Lemmon later married) played Harold's girlfriend. Bernard Green's orchestra was also featured. Broadcast live, the half-hour series was produced by Charles Irving and directed by Babette Henry.

THAT'S AMORE SYNDICATED
1992 This American version of the game show which originated in Italy in 1989 was hosted by Luca Barbareschi, and featured married couples who were feuding or quarreling. The studio audience selected the most deserving couple, who were then sent on a second honeymoon.

THAT'S HOLLYWOOD! SYNDICATED
1977–1980 This half-hour documentary series consisted of film clips from the archives of 20th Century-Fox. Jack Haley, Jr. (who put together the nostalgic film, That's Entertainment) was the executive producer, Draper Lewis the writer and producer, and Tom Bosley the narrator.

THAT'S INCREDIBLE! ABC
3 MARCH 1980–30 APRIL 1984 That's Incredible! was ABC's response to NBC's popular "reality show," Real People. The hour prime-time series was hosted by John Davidson, Cathy Lee Crosby, and former footballer Fran Tarkenton. Many of the incredible features presented on the show were staged specifically for the program. Some of the stunts proved too dangerous for those who attempted them. Stan Krumi, for example, was badly burned as he ran through a "tunnel of fire"; his "fireproof" gloves melted in the 1800-degree heat. Other features turned out to be bogus, such as an inventor's claim that he had found an easy way to make hydrogen fuel by using mass-produced solar cells; the claimant was later convicted on ten counts of fraud. Still other segments were just plain silly, such as one about a Frenchman who ate a ten-speed bicycle. See also Incredible Sunday.

THAT'S LIFE ABC

24 SEPTEMBER 1968–20 MAY 1969 One of television's few musical comedy series, That's Life starred Robert Morse as Robert Dickson and E. J. (short for Edra Jeanne) Peaker as Gloria Quigley, who, as the show progressed, got married and had a child. Also featured were Shelley Berman as Gloria's father, Mr. Quigley, and Kay Medford as her mother, Mrs. Quigley. Liza Minnelli made a rare guest appearance on 17 December.

THAT'S MY BOY CBS

10 APRIL 1954–1 JANUARY 1955 Half-hour sitcom starring Eddie Mayehoff as Jarrin' Jack Jackson, a former college football star; Rochelle Hudson as his wife, Alice Jackson; and Gil Stratton, Jr., as their son, Junior, a bookish lad who tried to resist his father's continual efforts to interest him in athletics. The series was based on the motion picture of the same title, in which Mayehoff had starred with Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis.

THAT'S MY LINE CBS

9 AUGUST 1980–23 AUGUST 1980; 3 FEBRUARY 1981–11 APRIL 1981 Bob Barker hosted this hour "reality show," which focused on people with unusual occupations. Assisting him were reporters Tiiu Leek, Suzanne Childs, and (in the spring of 1981) Kerry Millerick. The show was supplied by Goodson-Todman Productions; its founders, Mark Goodson and Bill Todman, had created the classic game show What's My Line? some thirty years earlier.

THAT'S MY MAMA ABC

4 SEPTEMBER 1974–24 DECEMBER 1975 Set in Washington, D.C., That's My Mama told the story of a black family and their friends. Featured were Theresa Merritt as Eloise (Mama) Curtis, a widow; Clifton Davis as her bachelor son, Clifton Curtis, operator of a barber shop; Lynne Moody (1974–spring 1975) and Joan Pringle (fall 1975) as her daughter, Tracy; Lisle Wilson as Tracy's husband, Leonard Taylor; Theodore Wilson as Earl Chambers, the local mail carrier; Jester Hairston as Wildcat, a jive-talking dude; Ted Lange as Clifton's friend, Junior; and DeForest Covan as Josh. Created by Dan T. Bradley and Allan Rice, the half-hour sitcom was a Blye-Beard Production.

THAT'S O'TOOLE ABC

13 MARCH 1949–5 JUNE 1949 Broadcast from Chicago, this half-hour show was aimed at the do-it-yourselfer and featured Arthur Peterson as handyman Tinker O'Toole and Norma Ransome as his wife.

THESE ARE MY CHILDREN NBC
31 JANUARY 1949–4 MARCH 1949 One of TV's first daytime serials, These Are My Children was created by Irna Phillips, who later achieved success with The Guiding Light, As the World Turns, and Another World. Directed by Norman Felton, the fifteen-minute show was broadcast live from Chicago. The cast included Alma Platts as Mrs. Henehan, a widow who ran a boardinghouse; Jane Brooksmith as her daughter Patricia; Martha McClain as her daughter Penny; George Kluge as her son, John; Joan Arlt as John's wife, Jean; Eloise Kummer as Kay Carter; and Margaret Heneghan as Aunt Kitty.

THESE ARE THE DAYS ABC
7 SEPTEMBER 1974–5 SEPTEMBER 1976 This Hanna-Barbera cartoon series capitalized on the popularity of The Waltons. Set in a small town at the turn of the century, it depicted the lives of the members of the Day family and their friends and neighbors. The show was seen Saturday mornings during its first season; reruns were shown Sunday mornings during the second season.

THEY STAND ACCUSED DUMONT
11 SEPTEMBER 1949–5 OCTOBER 1952; 9 SEPTEMBER 1954–30 DECEMBER 1954 On this hour-long anthology series fictional court cases were dramatized. Broadcast live from Chicago, the show featured Chicago attorney Charles Johnston as the judge and Harry Creighton as the announcer. The jurors were chosen from the studio audience, and the verdict was theirs alone. Originally titled Cross Question, the show was directed by Sheldon Cooper and written by William C. Wines, an Illinois assistant attorney general.

THEY'RE OFF DUMONT
7 JULY 1949–18 AUGUST 1949 Prime-time game show modeled after a horse race.

THICKE OF THE NIGHT SYNDICATED
5 SEPTEMBER 1983–15 JUNE 1984 This ninety-minute late-night talk show was designed to compete with The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson and was scheduled opposite that show in most areas where it was carried. The program was hosted by Alan Thicke, a singer-comedian who had hosted a popular daytime series in Canada. The show also featured a resident company of comic actors, who appeared in various sketches and ad-lib with Thicke: Richard Belzer, Chloe Webb, Isabel Grandin, Gilbert Gottfried, Mike McManus, and Charles Fleischer. The show opened to mediocre reviews and low ratings, and within five weeks it had taken on a new producer, a new director, and new sets. Reruns were aired through the summer of 1984.

THICKER THAN WATER ABC

13 JUNE 1973–8 AUGUST 1973 Based on the British series, Nearest and Dearest, this half-hour sitcom told the story of a squabbling brother and sister who were each promised a $75,000 inheritance if they agreed to run the family pickle factory for five years. With Julie Harris as Nellie Paine; Richard Long as Ernie Paine; Malcolm Atterbury as their father, Jonas Paine, who believed that his demise was imminent; Jessica Myerson as Cousin Lily; Lou Fant as Cousin Walter; and Pat Cranshaw as longtime employee Bert Taylor.

THE THIN MAN NBC

20 SEPTEMBER 1957–26 JUNE 1959 Half-hour crime show based on the Dashiell Hammett novel and the film series. With Peter Lawford as New York publisher Nick Charles, a former private eye who dabbled in sleuthing for the fun of it; Phyllis Kirk as his wife and frequent partner in crime-solving, Nora Charles; Jack Albertson as Lieutenant Evans; and Asta as Asta, the Charles' pet terrier. The series was produced by M-G-M TV.

THINK FAST ABC

26 MARCH 1949–8 OCTOBER 1950 Celebrity panelists tried to outtalk each other on this prime-time game show by extemporizing on subjects suggested by the host. Mason Gross was the first emcee and was succeeded by Gypsy Rose Lee. Robert Kennings produced the half-hour series.

THINK TWICE PBS

1994–1995 The first adult game show produced by PBS, Think Twice was hosted by Monteria Ivey. Pairs of contestants competed in quiz and story-building segments; the winning team was awarded a small investment portfolio instead of cash.

3RD DEGREE! SYNDICATED

1989–1990 A syndicated game show, hosted by Bert Convy, on which two pairs of celebrities (one female, one male) tried to determine what relationship or bond a panel of three contestants had in common. The celebs were permitted to ask yes or no questions of the panel.

THE THIRD MAN SYNDICATED

1959–1960 Graham Greene's adventure novel was made into a movie in 1949 and a radio series in 1950. Almost a decade later it came to television, where Michael Rennie starred as Harry Lime, international trouble-shooter (James Mason had previously been considered for the part); Jonathan Harris was also featured as Lime's assistant, Bradford Webster. Vernon Burns was executive producer of the half-hour series, filmed both in Hollywood and on location in Europe.

13 EAST NBC

29 JULY 1989–2 SEPTEMBER 1989; 14 APRIL 1990–25 AUGUST 1990 An unfunny sitcom centering on a group of nurses at a large hospital. With Diana Bellamy as nursing supervisor Maggie Poole; Jan Cobler as nurse Monique Roberts; Barbra Isenberg (1989) as Kelly; Ellen Regan (1989) as Janet Tom; Timothy Wade (1989) as Dr. Warren Newman; Rosemarie Jackson (1990) as A. J.; Eric Glenn (1990) as Sidney; and Wayne Powers (1990) as Mr. Frazier, the administrator. Scoey Mitchlll was the executive producer of the show, which was taped not in Hollywood or New York, but in Irving, Texas.

13 QUEENS BLVD. ABC

20 MARCH 1979–17 APRIL 1979; 10 JULY 1979–24 JULY 1979 An adult sitcom set in a Queens apartment building. The spring cast included Eileen Brennan as Felicia Winters; Jerry Van Dyke as her husband, Steven Winters; Marcia Rodd as her divorced friend and neighbor, Elaine Dowling; Helen Page Camp as her widowed friend and neighbor, Millie Capestro; and Louise Williams as Millie's daughter, Jill Capestro. The summer cast included Brennan, Camp, and Williams, along with Frances Lee McCain as Lois, Felicia's sister-in-law, and Karen Rushmore as Camille. Richard Baer created the half-hour show, which was developed by Bud Yorkin, Bernie Orenstein, and Saul Turteltaub.

30 MINUTES CBS

THIRTY MINUTES WITH PBS

12 JANUARY 1971–21 MAY 1973 Half-hour interview show, hosted by Washington political analyst Elizabeth Drew.

thirtysomething ABC

29 SEPTEMBER 1987–28 MAY 1991; 23 JULY 1991–3 SEPTEMBER 1991 An hour dramatic series for baby-boomers, about baby-boomers, thirtysomething was created by two baby-boomers, Ed Zwick and Marshall Herskovitz, who had previously written for the 1970s drama Family. Asked by MGM/UA to develop a series, Zwick and Herskovitz drew from their own experiences as husbands and fathers, and created a series not unlike Family, which explored the everyday details of contemporary urban domestic life.

Instead of focusing on one household as Family had done, thirtysomething looked at the interwoven lives of seven adults, all in their thirties, living in Philadelphia (Zwick and Herskovitz both hailed from the area). The seven were longtime friends: two couples were married as the show got underway, and three persons were single. The cast included: Mel Harris as Hope Murdoch, a wife and mother who placed her career as a freelance writer on hold to raise a child; Ken Olin as Hope's husband, Michael Steadman, an advertising executive; Timothy Busfield as Elliot Weston, Mike's business partner; Patricia Wettig (who was married to Ken Olin in real life) as Elliot's wife, Nancy; Polly Draper as Hope's best friend, Ellyn Warren, an administrator at City Hall; Melanie Mayron as Michael's cousin, Melissa Steadman, a photographer; Peter Horton as Gary Shepherd, a college teacher; Jade Mortimer (1987) and Brittany and Lacey Craven (1988–1991) as Jane, Hope and Michael's young daughter; Luke Rossi as Ethan, Elliot and Nancy's son; and Jordana "Bink" Shapiro (1987–fall 1990) and Lindsay Riddell (1990–1991) as Brittany, Elliot and Nancy's daughter. Hope and Michael had a second child, Leo, in 1990.

The series was generally well received by the critics, and would win a Peabody Award in 1988. It promptly attracted a modest-sized, but very loyal audience. Indeed, the show evoked strong reactions from most viewers, who either adored it or loathed it for its talky, self-analytical style. Those in the former category were soon immersed in thirtysomething's emotional plot developments: the breakup of Elliot and Nancy's marriage, the unexpected collapse of Elliot and Michael's business, Michael's coping with his father's death, Ellyn and Melissa's concerns about staying single, Nancy's battle with ovarian cancer, and the unexpected death of Gary, who was killed in a car accident while on his way to visit Nancy in the hospital. Not all of the episodes dealt with such serious matters, however; some dealt humorously with such mundane matters as Hope and Michael's attempt to go out for an evening by themselves, while others drifted into fantasy. Part of one program was a black-and-white recreation of The Dick Van Dyke Show.

David Clennon joined the cast in the spring of 1989 as overbearing Miles Drentell, head of the ad agency where Michael and Elliot found jobs after their shop foundered. Also featured were Patricia Kalember (1988–1991) as Susannah Hart, Gary's love interest (they were later married); Terry Kinney (1987–1988) as Steve Woodman, Ellyn's boss and erstwhile lover; Richard Gilliland (1988–1989) as Jeffrey Milgrom, Ellyn's love interest; Erich Anderson (1990–1991) as Billy Sidel, who married Ellyn; and Corey Parker (1989–1990) as Lee Owens, Melissa's younger boyfriend. The series' acoustic guitar score was composed by Snuffy Walden and Stewart Levin.

THIS IS ALICE SYNDICATED
1958 Half-hour family sitcom. With Patty Ann Gerrity as nine-year-old Alice Holliday; Tom Farrell as her father; Phyllis Coates as her mother; Stephen Wootton as her brother; and Leigh Snowden as her friend, Betty Lou. Set in Atlanta, the series was produced and directed by Sidney Salkow.

THIS IS AMERICA, CHARLIE BROWN CBS
21 OCTOBER 1988–11 NOVEMBER 1988; 10 FEBRUARY 1989–10 MARCH 1989; 19 APRIL 1989–29 MAY 1989; 30 MAY 1990–25 JULY 1990 Although Charles Schulz's "Peanuts" characters had appeared in many TV specials since 1965, this was their first regular prime-time series. On each half-hour animated program, Charlie Brown and his friends re-enacted various events from American history. In the premiere, for example, they found themselves aboard the Mayflower in 1620. The voice of Charlie Brown was supplied by a fourteen-year-old girl, Erin Chase.

THIS IS CHARLES LAUGHTON SYNDICATED
1953 A series of dramatic readings by British actor Charles Laughton; the series marked his American TV debut.

THIS IS GALEN DRAKE ABC
12 JANUARY 1957–11 MAY 1957 Half-hour variety show for children hosted by Galen Drake.

THIS IS MUSIC DUMONT/ABC
29 NOVEMBER 1951–9 OCTOBER 1952 (DUMONT); 6 JUNE 1958–21 MAY 1959 (ABC) On this half-hour musical series the show's regulars pantomimed to popular musical recordings. Regulars on the DuMont version of the series, which was broadcast from Chicago, included Alexander Gray and Colin Male. Regulars on the ABC version included Ramona Burnett, Bob Shreve, Gail Johnson, and Bob Smith.

THIS IS SHOW BUSINESS CBS/NBC
15 JULY 1949–9 MARCH 1954 (CBS); 26 JUNE 1956–11 SEPTEMBER 1956 (NBC) On this half-hour variety show guest celebrities dropped by to visit a celebrity panel; in theory, anyway, the guests were supposed to present a problem to the panelists, who could then offer their advice on solving it. By the fall of 1953, however, this requirement had been abandoned. Clifton Fadiman hosted the series, and the CBS panel regularly included Sam Levenson, Abe Burrows, and George S. Kaufman, who was suspended from the show as the result of viewer complaints after he remarked on the broadcast of 21 December 1952, "Let's make this one program on which no one sings 'Silent Night'!" In 1956, when the series was revived on NBC, the panel included Abe Burrows, Walter Slezak, and Jacqueline Susann. Irving Mansfield (Susann's husband) produced the series, and Byron Paul directed it. In late September 1951 This is Show Business was the first CBS regular series to be televised live from coast to coast.

THIS IS THE ANSWER SYNDICATED

1956–1961 Religious program produced by the Southern Baptist Convention. It is believed to be the first television religious show to be filmed in color.

THIS IS THE LIFE SYNDICATED

1952–1988 This long-running religious show presented dramas dealing with contemporary problems. In the early seasons it centered on the Fisher family of Middleburg, and the regular cast included Forrest Taylor, Onslow Stevens, Nan Boardman, Randy Stuart, Michael Hall, and David Kasday. In later years, however, it relied on guest stars. The show was produced by the International Lutheran Laymen's League, an auxiliary of the Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod. The half-hour series was also carried by ABC and DuMont in 1952 and 1953.

THIS IS TOM JONES ABC

7 FEBRUARY 1969–15 JANUARY 1971 Welsh singer Tom Jones hosted his own musical variety hour, which also featured Big Jim Sullivan, The Ace Trucking Company, the Norman Maen Dancers, and the Johnnie Spence Orchestra.

THIS IS YOUR LIFE NBC/SYNDICATED

1 OCTOBER 1952–10 SEPTEMBER 1961 (NBC); 1970 (SYNDICATED); 1983 (SYNDICATED) Ralph Edwards hosted this sentimental human interest show, which he began on radio in 1948. Each week a special guest was lured to the studio by a ruse, and then surprised as Edwards announced, "This is your life!" Long-lost friends and relatives materialized during the ensuing half hour to relive long-forgotten incidents in the past. Most of Edwards's guests were celebrities, but some of his most effective shows centered on ordinary people. One program featured a rare television appearance by Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy; another, honoring educator Laurence C. Jones, generated more than $700,000 in contributions toward the endowment of Piney Woods (Miss.) College, after Edwards suggested that viewers send Dr. Jones a dollar for the fund. One of the very few guests who was not pleasantly surprised by the evening's festivities was Lowell Thomas, who said, "This is a sinister conspiracy!" and refused to crack a smile during the whole show.

NBC televised a special "30th Anniversary Show," cohosted by Edwards and David Frost, on 26 February 1981. In the fall of 1983 a second syndicated version appeared, which combined a few reruns from the old series with a group of new programs; Joseph Campanella was the host. NBC also televised two "This Is Your Life" specials in 1987, both hosted by Ralph Edwards. The first (19 April) honored Betty White and Dick Van Dyke, and the second (26 November) saluted Tim Conway and Barbara Mandrell. On another NBC special, aired 26 November 1993, Edwards handed the hosting duties over to Pat Sajak, who proceeded to salute Kathie Lee Gifford and Roy Scheider (Angie Dickinson had been one of the intended recipients, but refused to participate).

THIS OLD HOUSE PBS

1979– Bob Vila hosted this informative series on home repair and construction. Among the projects undertaken on the series have been a modest city house (1979), a stately home (1980), a suburban ranch house (1981), and a Greek revival farmhouse (1982). An even bolder undertaking was made in 1983: The All New This Old House showed the construction of a house from scratch. By the mid-1980s master carpenter Norm Abram had become a regular. Vila was fired as host in the spring of 1989 because of the various products he had endorsed in commercials. He was succeeded by Steve Thomas. Vila later developed a similar show: see Home Again with Bob Vila.

20 SEPTEMBER 1949–13 DECEMBER 1949 Fifteen-minute sports newsreel.

THIS WEEK WITH DAVID BRINKLEY ABC

15 NOVEMBER 1981– Shortly after he severed his thirty-eight-year association with NBC, veteran newsman David Brinkley was given his own hour newsmagazine show on ABC's Sunday morning schedule; the program replaced Issues and Answers. Among the commentators regularly featured on This Week have been George Will, Ben Bradlee, Karen Elliott House, Hodding Carter, James Wooten, and ABC correspondents Sam Donaldson, Brit Hume, and Cokie Roberts.

THIS WEEK'S MUSIC SYNDICATED

1984 Basically a clone of American Bandstand, This Week's Music was hosted by Livingston Taylor and featured a live audience dancing to recorded music and appearances by contemporary rock artists. The show was taped in New York.

THE THORN BIRDS ABC

27 MARCH 1983–30 MARCH 1983 A four-night, ten-hour adaptation of Colleen McCullough's best-selling novel The Thorn Birds proved enormously popular on TV. It ranked as the second highest-rated miniseries ever televised (Roots was the top-ranked), with its latter three installments ranking among the ten most widely watched programs of all time. The sprawling epic, set in Australia between 1920 and 1962, starred Richard Chamberlain as Ralph de Bricassart, a Roman Catholic priest torn between his desire for advancement within the priesthood and his love for a woman. Rachel Ward costarred as his love, Meggie Carson (Sydney Penny played the character as a child). Other major performers included Barbara Stanwyck as Meggie's imperious grandmother Mary Carson; Jean Simmons as Fee Cleary; Richard Kiley as Paddy Cleary; Christopher Plummer as Archbishop Contini-Verchese; Bryan Brown as Luke O'Neill; Mare Winningham as Meggie's daughter, Justine; and Philip Anglim as Meggie's son, Dane. ABC rebroadcast the miniseries in July 1993.

THE THORNS ABC

15 JANUARY 1988–11 MARCH 1988 Mike Nichols was the executive producer, and Allan Leicht the creator, of this unfunny sitcom about an obnoxious Manhattan yuppie family. With Tony Roberts as Sloan Thorn, public relations executive; Kelly Bishop as his wife, Ginger; Adam Biesk as their elder son, Chad; Lisa Rieffel as their daughter, Joey; Jesse Tendler as their younger son, Edmund; Marilyn Cooper as Sloan's live-in mother, Rose; Lori Petty as Cricket, the mother's helper; Mary Louise Wilson as Toinette, the maid; Maureen Stapleton as Mrs. Hamilton, a wealthy widowed neighbor, and as Mrs. Hamilton's maid, Peggy; and Kathryn Marcopulos as neighbor Katina Pappas.

THOSE AMAZING ANIMALS ABC

24 AUGUST 1980–23 AUGUST 1981 Broadcast Sunday evenings at 7:00 P.M., this "reality hour" was aimed principally at younger viewers. It focused, of course, on animals, some of which appeared on stage, others of which were featured in filmed segments. The principal humans on the hour series were Burgess Meredith (who may have qualified for the position because he had played The Penguin on Batman), Priscilla Presley, and Jim Stafford. Joan Embry, a naturalist at the San Diego Zoo, oceanographer Jacques-Yves Cousteau, and underwater photographers Ron and Valerie Taylor also appeared regularly.

THOSE ENDEARING YOUNG CHARMS NBC
30 DECEMBER 1951–26 JUNE 1952 A comedy series, Those Endearing Young Charms told the story of the Charms, a family living in a small New England town. Featured were Maurice Copeland and Betty Arnold as Mr. and Mrs. Charm, Clarence Hartzell as the eccentric uncle, Gerald Garvey as the son, and Pat Matthews as the daughter. Ben Park produced and directed the half-hour show, broadcast live from Chicago.

THOSE TWO NBC
26 NOVEMBER 1951–24 APRIL 1953 Pinky Lee cohosted this musical variety show with Vivian Blaine until May 1952, when Martha Stewart succeeded her. The fifteen-minute show was seen Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays before the evening news.

THOSE WHITING GIRLS CBS
4 JULY 1955–26 SEPTEMBER 1955; 1 JULY 1957–30 SEPTEMBER 1957 This half-hour sitcom was twice a summer replacement for I Love Lucy; it was created by two of Lucy's writers, Madelyn Pugh and Bob Carroll, Jr. Sisters Barbara and Margaret Whiting played themselves, Barbara an actress and Margaret a singer. Also featured were Mabel Albertson as their mother, Mrs. Whiting; Jerry Paris as Margaret's accompanist Artie; Beverly Long as their friend, Olive; and Kathy Nolan (1957) as their friend, Penny.

11 AUGUST 1948–20 OCTOBER 1948 One of ABC's first network programs, this fifteen-minute musical series was hosted by singer Betsi Allison.

THE THREE FLAMES SHOW NBC
13 JUNE 1949–20 AUGUST 1949 This summer musical series starred the Three Flames, a black trio. The group had previously been featured on a daytime show seen locally in New York, and later appeared on Washington Square.

3 FOR THE MONEY NBC
29 SEPTEMBER 1975–28 NOVEMBER 1975 Two 3-member teams matched wits on this daytime game show; each was composed of a celebrity captain and two contestants. A Stefan Hatos-Monty Hall Production, the show was hosted by Dick Enberg.

THREE FOR THE ROAD CBS
14 SEPTEMBER 1975–30 NOVEMBER 1975 A Sunday-evening family drama about a widowed photographer and his two sons who traveled around the country in their camper, the "Zebec." With Alex Rocco as Pete Karras; Vincent Van Patten as son John; Leif Garrett as son Endy (short for Endicott). Jerry McNeely was the executive producer for MTM Enterprises.

3 GIRLS 3 NBC
30 MARCH 1977–29 JUNE 1977 3 Girls 3, an imaginative variety hour that introduced three unknowns, was highly acclaimed but suffered from a lack of publicity and poor scheduling—one hour was shown in March, the remaining three in June. Gary Smith and Dwight Hemion were the executive producers, and the three stars were Debbie Allen, Ellen Foley, and Mimi Kennedy.

THE THREE MUSKETEERS SYNDICATED
1956 Half-hour adventure series produced in Europe, based on Alexandre Dumas's classic novel. With Jeff Stone as D'Artagnan; Paul Campbell as Aramis; Peter Trent as Porthos; Alan Furlan as Sasquinet; and Sebastian Cabot as the Count de Brisemont.

THREE ON A MATCH NBC

2 AUGUST 1971–28 JUNE 1974 Bill Cullen hosted this daytime game show on which three contestants competed for money by answering true-false questions, then got to spend it on the prize board.

THE THREE ROBONIC STOOGES CBS

28 JANUARY 1978–2 SEPTEMBER 1978 Half-hour cartoon series which began as one segment of The Skatebirds. On this series, Moe, Curly, and Larry were mechanical superheroes. The show was rerun on Sunday mornings between 1979 and 1981.

THREE STEPS TO HEAVEN NBC

3 AUGUST 1953–31 DECEMBER 1954 Daytime serial about a young woman who left the small town where she grew up to become a model in New York City. With Kathleen Maguire, Phyllis Hill, and Diana Douglas as model Poco Thurmond; Gene Blakely and Mark Roberts as Poco's boyfriend, Bill Morgan; Lori March as Jennifer Alden; Ginger MacManus as Angela; Laurie Vendig as Alice Trent; John Marley as Vince Bannister; Beth Douglas as Nan Waring; Madeline Belgard as Beth; Harriet MacGibbon as Mrs. Montgomery; Lauren Gilbert as Jason Cleve; and Walter Brooke and Joe Brown, Jr. Adrian Samish was the producer, Irving Vendig the writer.

3-2-1 CONTACT PBS

1980–1992 A science series for children, featuring Liz Moses, Ginny Ortiz, and Leon W. Grant, produced by Kathy Mendoza for the Children's Television Workshop.

THREE'S A CROWD SYNDICATED

1979 Half-hour game show from Chuck Barris Productions which sought to answer the age-old question: Who knows a man better, his wife or his secretary? First, three husbands were asked a series of questions; their secretaries then came onstage and were asked the same questions. Finally the three wives were brought on and asked the questions. If the three secretaries scored more matches, they split $1000; if the three wives had more matches, they divided up the prize. Jim Peck was the host.

THREE'S A CROWD ABC

25 SEPTEMBER 1984–10 SEPTEMBER 1985 This was the sequel to the popular sitcom Three's Company, in which Jack Tripper (played by John Ritter) moved in with his girlfriend, flight attendant Vicky Bradford (Mary Cadorette), at her insistence. They lived together in an apartment above his restaurant, Jack's Bistro. Robert Mandan played Vicky's meddlesome father, James Bradford, who bought the building. Alan Campbell played E. Z. Taylor, Jack's assistant chef. Like most sequels, Three's a Crowd never equalled the popularity of the parent show, and was canceled after a single season.

THREE'S COMPANY CBS

18 MAY 1950–29 SEPTEMBER 1950 This fifteen-minute musical series, seen Tuesdays and Thursdays following the network news, featured Cy Walters, Stan Freeman, and Judy Lynn.

THREE'S COMPANY ABC

15 MARCH 1977–21 APRIL 1977; 11 AUGUST 1977–18 SEPTEMBER 1984 This sex comedy, based on a British show called Man About the House, was introduced as a limited series in the spring of 1977 and returned to stay a few months later; it wound up as the third top-rated show for the 1977–1978 season. Set in Los Angeles, it told the tale of a young man sharing an apartment with two young women; the landlord, mistakenly believing the man to be homosexual, permitted the arrangement. Created and produced by Don Nicholl, Michael Ross, and Bernie West, the half-hour series featured: John Ritter as Jack Tripper, a self-employed caterer who later opened up his own restaurant, The Little Bistro; Joyce DeWitt as Janet Wood, Jack's sensible roommate, a florist; Suzanne Somers (1977–1981) as Chrissy Snow, Jack's daffy roommate, a secretary; Norman Fell (1977–1979) as the apparently impotent landlord, Stanley Roper; Audra Lindley (1977–1979) as his sex-starved wife, Helen Roper; and Richard Kline (1978–1984) as Larry Dallas, Jack's best friend. Fell and Lindley left the series in 1979 to star in a spinoff (see The Ropers), and Don Knotts was added in the fall of 1979 as the new landlord, Ralph Furley. Ann Wedgeworth also appeared during the 1979–1980 season as neighbor Lana Shields, a buyer for a department store.

In the summer of 1980 Suzanne Somers asked for a fivefold salary increase—from $30,000 to $150,000 per show—and a share of the profits. Three's Company's producers did not renegotiate and held Somers to her contract for a final year. During the 1980–1981 season she appeared only in one-minute inserts at the end of each show, in which her character, Chrissy, spoke with one of the other regulars by telephone from Fresno (where Chrissy was visiting relatives); these sequences were taped separately on a closed set. Jennilee Harrison was added in the fall of 1980 as Chrissy's cousin, Cindy Snow, who moved into the apartment with Jack and Janet. After one season Cindy moved out, to study veterinary medicine at U.C.L.A. (Harrison stayed on as a regular for the 1981–1982 season, however). Priscilla Barnes joined the cast in the fall of 1981 as the new roommate, nurse Terri Alden. Major changes took place in the spring of 1984, as Jack and Janet each met the loves of their lives and plans were made for a sequel series, Three's a Crowd, which would focus on Jack and his love, Vicky Bradford (played by Mary Cadorette).

THRILL HUNTERS SYNDICATED

1966 A series of half-hour films about people with exciting occupations or hobbies, Thrill Hunters was hosted by Bill Burrud, and was thus distinguishable from such shows as Danger Is My Business and The Thrillseekers.

THRILLER NBC

13 SEPTEMBER 1960–9 JULY 1962 Boris Karloff was the host and occasional star in this anthology series of crime and horror stories. Hubbell Robinson was the executive producer of the hour show for Revue Studios. Fletcher Markle, the original producer, and James P. Cavanaugh, the story editor, were replaced after eight episodes by producers Maxwell Shane and William Frye. A total of sixty-seven episodes were produced.

THE THRILLSEEKERS SYNDICATED

1973 Chuck Connors hosted this half-hour series, which profiled persons with dangerous occupations and interests.

THROB SYNDICATED

1986–1988 Half-hour sitcom about a divorced woman who moved from Buffalo to New York, where she landed a job with Throb Records, a small punk label. Featured were Diana Canova as Sandy Beatty; Paul W. Walker (1986–1987) and Sean de Veritch (1987–1988) as her son, Jeremy; Maryedith Burrell as Meredith, Sandy's neighbor; Jonathan Prince as Zach Armstrong, the head of the label; Jane Leeves as Blue, the talent handler, who moved in with Sandy during the second season; and Richard Cummings, Jr., as Phil, who also worked for the record company.

THROUGH THE CRYSTAL BALL CBS

18 APRIL 1949–4 JULY 1949 Pantomime and ballet were prominently featured on this offbeat half-hour prime-time series. The premiere telecast was a version of "Robinson Crusoe," while the second program, "Cinderella," featured choreography by George Balanchine. Mime Jimmy Savo hosted and starred for the first few weeks. Paul Belanger produced and directed.

THROUGH THE CURTAIN ABC

21 OCTOBER 1953–24 FEBRUARY 1954 This fifteen-minute prime-time public affairs program was hosted by George Hamilton Combs. It consisted of interviews with people who had been behind the Iron Curtain and digests of press reports from Communist news agencies.

THROUGH WENDY'S WINDOW
See THE WENDY BARRIE SHOW

THUNDARR THE BARBARIAN ABC/NBC
4 OCTOBER 1980–18 SEPTEMBER 1982 (ABC); 9 APRIL 1983–8 SEPTEMBER 1984 (NBC) This Saturday-morning cartoon series was set in the future, some two thousand years after the destruction of civilization in 1994 (when a comet passed too close to Earth). Thundarr was a slave who was set free by Princess Ariel, stepdaughter of Sabian, an evil wizard. Together with Ookla the Mok, a semi-human creature, Thundarr and Ariel roamed the ravaged planet fighting for the rights of the enslaved against an assortment of wizards, mutants, and monsters. Joe Ruby and Ken Spears were the executive producers for Ruby-Spears Enterprises.

THUNDER NBC
10 SEPTEMBER 1977–2 SEPTEMBER 1978 The central character in this live-action Saturday-morning show was a wild black stallion named Thunder, the equine equivalent of Lassie. The human roles were filled by: Clint Ritchie as rancher Bill Williams; Melissa Converse as his wife, Anne Williams, a veterinarian; Melora Hardin as their daughter, Cindy; Justin Randi as their son, Willie. Thunder and Cupcake, the mule ridden by Cindy and Willie, were owned by Bobby Davenport. The half-hour series was created and produced by Irving Cummings and Charles Marion for Charles Fries Productions.

THUNDER ALLEY ABC
9 MARCH 1994–4 MAY 1994; 10 AUGUST 1994–2 NOVEMBER 1994; 7 MARCH 1995–25 JULY 1995 Half-hour sitcom about a retired race car driver whose daughter and grandchildren moved in with him. With Edward Asner as gruff but lovable Gil Jones, who owned Thunder Alley, a garage; Diane Venora (spring 1994) and Robin Riker (fall 1994–1995) as his daughter, Bobbi Turner; Kelly Vint as eleven-year-old Claudine; Lindsay Felton as eight-year-old Jenny; Haley Joel Osment as five-year-old Harry; and Jim Beaver as Leland, Gil's employee at the garage.

THUNDER IN PARADISE SYNDICATED
1994–1995 This hour adventure series, set in Florida, starred pro wrestler Terry "Hulk" Hogan as ex-Navy Seal R. J. "Hurricane" Spencer, who owned a super-powered speedboat known as Thunder; the 43-foot craft was able to reach speeds of 500 miles per hour. With Chris Lemmon as Thunder's builder, Martin "Bru" Brubaker, who had worked with Spencer in the Navy Seals; Carol Alt as Kelly La Rew, a part-time sculptress and manager of the Scuttlebutt Beach Bar; Ashley Gorrell as R. J.'s nine-year-old adoptive daughter, Jessica Whitaker; and Patrick Macnee as Jessica's grandfather, Edward Whitaker, former British intelligence agent and owner of the Paradise Beach Hotel.

THUNDERBIRDS SYNDICATED
1967 Another of the marionette adventure series developed in England by Gerry Anderson, Thunderbirds was the most highly sophisticated of Anderson's efforts. Anderson had by now refined the technique of Supermarionation, a process using wires and electric devices to manipulate the marionettes, which he had previously used on such shows as Fireball XL-5 and Supercar. Thunderbirds, produced in hour-long form, told the story of a group of twenty-first-century space heroes. Edited and redubbed reruns appeared on the Fox network's Saturday morning schedule briefly during the summer of 1994.

THUNDERCATS SYNDICATED

1983; 1985 Another of the several cartoon shows of the mid-1980s inspired by a line of toys, ThunderCats told the tale of a band of catlike creatures led by Lion-O, who battled the Mutants.

TIC TAC DOUGH NBC

30 JULY 1956–30 OCTOBER 1959

THE NEW TIC TAC DOUGH CBS/SYNDICATED

3 JULY 1978–1 SEPTEMBER 1978 (CBS); 1978–1986; 1990 (SYNDICATED) Two contestants played tic-tac-toe on this game show. The game board was divided into nine categories; one of the players selected a category, and a question was read. Whoever answered correctly won the square, and then selected another category; the winner of the game then faced a new challenger. Tic Tac Dough was seen in both daytime and prime-time versions; the latter ran from September 1957 to December 1958, and was hosted for most of its run by Jay Jackson. The daytime version, which ran for more than three years, was hosted by Jack Barry, Gene Rayburn, and Bill Wendell. Nineteen years later two versions of The New Tic Tac Dough surfaced, both hosted by Wink Martindale. The network version was seen during the daytime on CBS, while the syndicated version was shown evenings in most markets. Both reincarnations were basically similar to the original version of the show. One contestant on the syndicated version, Navy lieutenant Thom McKee, became the biggest money winner in game-show history. Over a span of several weeks, McKee amassed $307,400 in cash and prizes, including eight automobiles. Patrick Wayne hosted the 1990 version.

THE TICK FOX

10 SEPTEMBER 1994– Half-hour cartoon series based on the cartoon characters created by Ben Edlund. The Tick was a bumbling 400-pound superhero who took a bus to The City, intending to save it from evildoers. There he teamed up with Arthur, a mild-mannered accountant who dressed as an oversized moth to assist the Tick.

TIGHTROPE! CBS

8 SEPTEMBER 1959–13 SEPTEMBER 1960 Half-hour crime show starring Michael Connors as an undercover police agent who hid his gun in the small of his back. In the earliest episodes Connors's character had no name, but by late autumn the character was christened Nick Stone. Clarence Greene and Russell Rouse produced the series.

THE TIM CONWAY COMEDY HOUR CBS

20 SEPTEMBER 1970–13 DECEMBER 1970 Tim Conway's second 1970 show was a variety hour, but it was even less successful than his previous effort. Conway did, however, line up an impressive list of regulars: McLean Stevenson, Sally Struthers, Art Metrano, Bonnie Boland, singers Belland and Somerville (during the 1950s Bruce Belland had sung with the Four Preps and Dave Somerville with the Diamonds), the Tom Hansen Dancers, the Jimmy Joyce Singers, and announcer Ernie Anderson.

THE TIM CONWAY SHOW CBS

30 JANUARY 1970–19 JUNE 1970 The first of Tim Conway's two 1970 series was a half-hour sitcom in which he was reunited with his McHale's Navy costar, Joe Flynn. They played Tim "Spud" Barrett and Herb Kenworth, owners and crew of the one-plane Anytime Anyplace Airlines. Also aboard were Anne Seymour as Mrs. Crawford, owner of the local airport; Johnnie Collins III as her son, Ronnie; Fabian Dean as Harry, operator of the airport burger stand; and Emily Banks as Becky, a Crawford employee and Spud's romantic interest.

THE TIM CONWAY SHOW CBS

22 MARCH 1980–17 MAY 1980; 30 AUGUST 1980–7 MARCH 1981 Comedian Tim Conway was given yet another shot at a series in this, his second variety show (see also The Tim Conway Comedy Hour). Conway's cohorts on the show included Dick Orkin, Bert Berdis, Jack Riley, Maggie Roswell, Miriam Flynn, Eric Boardman, and the Don Crichton Dancers, a talented group of child hoofers. The show started out in an hour format, but when it returned in August 1980 it had been trimmed to thirty minutes, and Jack Riley and Eric Boardman had left. Early in 1981 Harvey Korman, Conway's former foil on The Carol Burnett Show, became a regular, and Dick Orkin and Bert Berdis were dropped. Like all of Conway's starring ventures, this one failed to last more than a year; undaunted, he returned in 1983 in still another show (see Ace Crawford, Private Eye).

TIM CONWAY'S FUNNY AMERICA ABC

29 JULY 1990–2 SEPTEMBER 1990 This half-hour series borrowed heavily from Candid Camera. A hidden camera recorded Tim Conway, in various guises, playing jokes on unsuspecting passers-by. Conway then showed the results to a studio audience.

TIME EXPRESS CBS

26 APRIL 1979–17 MAY 1979 Four-week fantasy series set aboard a mysterious train on which passengers personally selected by "the head of the line" were given the opportunity to return to an incident from their past. With Vincent Price as Jason Winters and Coral Brown as Margaret Winters, the on-board hosts; Woodrow Parfrey as the Ticket Agent; William Edward Phipps as E. Patrick Callahan, the engineer; James Reynolds as Robert Jefferson (R.J.) Walker, the conductor. Ivan Goff and Ben Roberts created the series and were the executive producers; Leonard B. Kaufman was the producer.

TIME FOR BEANY SYNDICATED

1950–1955

THE BEANY AND CECIL SHOW ABC

6 JANUARY 1962–3 SEPTEMBER 1967

BEANY AND CECIL ABC

10 SEPTEMBER 1988–15 OCTOBER 1988 Beany and Cecil, two characters created by Bob Clampett, first appeared nationally in a fifteen-minute puppet show broadcast from Hollywood. Beany was a little boy who sailed the high seas aboard the Leakin' Lena with his uncle, Captain Horatio K. Huffenpuff; Cecil was a sea serpent (and a seasick one at that) who was, at first, visible only to Beany, but who later revealed himself to the Captain as well. In their travels the trio encountered a host of unusual characters, such as Tearalong the Dotted Lion and The Staring Herring, but their most persistent nemesis was Dishonest John. The creator of the series, Bob Clampett, was an animator for Warner Brothers who dabbled in puppetry. Cecil, whom Clampett had created several years earlier, was introduced on a local show in Los Angeles in 1948; the show soon acquired a sizable audience and attracted the attention of Paramount Television, which offered it nationwide in 1950. Stan Freberg provided the voice of the Captain; Daws Butler (later the voice of Huckleberry Hound, Quickdraw McGraw, and Yogi Bear) that of Beany; and Clampett himself that of Cecil. Clampett's characters later appeared in a half-hour cartoon series which was carried by ABC for several years. Originally sponsored by Mattel Toys, the latter series was titled Matty's Funnies with Beany and Cecil in its early weeks. A new cartoon series surfaced briefly on ABC's Saturday morning lineup in 1988.

TIME FOR REFLECTION DUMONT

30 APRIL 1950–14 JANUARY 1951 David Ross read poetry on this fifteen-minute Sunday-evening show.

A TIME FOR US ABC

28 DECEMBER 1964–16 DECEMBER 1966 This half-hour daytime serial premiered in 1964 under the title Flame in the Wind and was renamed in June of 1965. Set in the town of Havilland, its stories centered on young people. The cast included: Beverly Hayes as Jane Driscoll; Joanna Miles as her sister, Linda Driscoll, an aspiring actress; Ray Poole as their father, Al Driscoll, a contractor; Lenka Peterson as their mother, Martha Driscoll; Gordon Gray and Tom Fielding as Steve Reynolds, the romantic interest of both Jane and Linda; Maggie Hayes as Roxanne Reynolds; Walter Coy as Roxanne's father, Jason Farrell; Ian Berger as Doug Colton; Morgan Sterne as Tony Gray; Josephine Nichols as Louise; Conrad Fowkes as Paul; Elaine Hyman as Fran; Terry Logan as Dave, a medical student; Lesley Woods as Miriam Bentley; Kathleen Maguire as Kate Austin, a widow; Richard Thomas as her son, Chris; and Jacqueline Brookes as Flora Perkins.

TIME MACHINE NBC

7 JANUARY 1985–26 APRIL 1985 Contestants' knowledge of nostalgia and recent events was tested on this daytime game show, hosted by John Davidson. Most questions put to the three daily competitors involved matching events with the correct years in which they occurred, or guessing whether an event happened before or after a given date.

A TIME TO LIVE NBC

5 JULY 1954–31 DECEMBER 1954 This fifteen-minute daytime serial starred Pat Sully and Larry Kerr as journalists Kathy Byron and Don Riker. Also featured were Barbara Foley as Lenore Eustice; Len Wayland as Chick Buchanan, Kathy's boyfriend (they were married on the final episode); Jeanne Jerrems and Zora Alton as Greta Powers; and Muriel Monsel as Doanna Sims. The program was broadcast from Chicago.

TIME TO REMEMBER SYNDICATED

1963 Half-hour filmed documentary series on great historical events of the twentieth century.

TIME TRAX SYNDICATED

1993–1994 High-tech crime show about a 22nd-century cop who traveled back to the present time to catch a mad scientist who had escaped through time. "Trax" was an acronym for Trans-Time Research and Experimentation. With Dale Midkiff as the cop, Darien Lambert; Peter Donat as the villain, Dr. Mordicai Sahmbi; Elizabeth Alexander as Selma, a holographic computer image ("Selma" was an acronym for Specified Encapsulated Limited Memory Archive); Henry Darrow as Darien's boss, the Chief; and Mia Sara as Elissa. The hour series was produced at Warner Bros. facilities in Australia.

THE TIME TUNNEL ABC

9 SEPTEMBER 1966–1 SEPTEMBER 1967 Hour-long science fiction series about two research scientists who, working on a government-sponsored project, developed a time machine by which they could be transported into the past or the future. With James Darren as Dr. Tony Newman; Robert Colbert as Dr. Doug Phillips; Whit Bissell as Lieutenant General Heywood Kirk, project supervisor; John Zaremba as Dr. Raymond Swain; Lee Meriwether as Dr. Ann MacGregor; and Wesley Lau as Master Sergeant Jiggs, the security officer. The series was created by Irwin Allen, who was also its executive producer (Allen also developed Land of the Giants, Lost in Space, and Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea). Special effects were supervised by Bill Abbott, who won an Emmy for his services.

TIME WILL TELL DUMONT

27 AUGUST 1954–15 OCTOBER 1954 Ernie Kovacs hosted this short-lived prime-time game show.

TIMON & PUMBAA CBS

16 SEPTEMBER 1995– The title characters of this Saturday-morning cartoon series—Pumbaa the warthog and Timon the meerkat—had originally appeared in the Disney motion picture "The Lion King." The pair were assisted by their pals Rafiki the baboon, Ned the elephant, and Speedy the snail.

TIN PAN ALLEY TV ABC

28 APRIL 1950–29 SEPTEMBER 1950 Each week this half-hour variety show featured the music of a guest composer. Regulars included Johnny Desmond, Gloria Van, Chet Roble, Montero and Yvonne, the Visionaires, and the Rex Maupin Orchestra. Broadcast from Chicago, the show was produced by Fred Kilian and Tim Morrow.

TINY TOON ADVENTURES SYNDICATED/FOX

1990–1992 (SYNDICATED); 14 NOVEMBER 1992– (FOX) Younger versions of classic Warner Bros. cartoon characters were the stars of this all-new daily animated series, set at Acme Acres. Among the animated headliners were Buster and Babs Bunny, Plucky Duck, a pig named Hamton, ornery Montana Max, Dizzy Devil, Furrball, and Snazzer. The series premiered as a half-hour prime time special on CBS, 14 September 1990. See also The Plucky Duck Show.

TO ROME WITH LOVE CBS

28 SEPTEMBER 1969–1 SEPTEMBER 1971 Half-hour sitcom about a widowed professor and his three daughters, all of whom moved to Rome when he was hired to teach at an American school there. With John Forsythe as Professor Mike Endicott; Joyce Menges as daughter Alison; Susan Neher as daughter Penny; Melanie Fullerton as daughter Pokey; Kay Medford (1969–1970) as Aunt Harriet; Walter Brennan (1970–1971) as Andy Pruitt, the girls' maternal grandfather; Peggy Mondo as Mama Vitale, the landlady; Vito Scotti as cabbie Gino Mancini; and Gerald Michenaud as Penny's pal, Nico. Don Fedderson was the executive producer.

TO SAY THE LEAST NBC

3 OCTOBER 1977–21 APRIL 1978 Daytime game show hosted by Tom Kennedy on which two 2-member teams (each with a celebrity and a player) played a word game. The half-hour show was from Heatter-Quigley Productions.

TO TELL THE TRUTH CBS/SYNDICATED/NBC

Nighttime: 18 DECEMBER 1956–5 SEPTEMBER 1966 (CBS); 12 DECEMBER 1966–22 MAY 1967 (CBS); Daytime: 18 JUNE 1962–6 SEPTEMBER 1968 (CBS); 1969–1977 (SYNDICATED); 1980 (SYNDICATED); 3 SEPTEMBER 1990–31 MAY 1991 (NBC) One of TV's most popular game shows, To Tell the Truth was developed by Mark Goodson and Bill Todman, who also put together What's My Line?, I've Got a Secret, The Match Game, and a host of other game shows. The format was simple—a panel of four celebrities tried to determine which of three guests, each claiming to be the same person, was telling the truth. The three guests stood at center stage while an affidavit, reciting the story of the real claimant, was read aloud; the guests were then seated, and the panelists took turns questioning them. The two impostors were free to lie, but the real claimant was sworn to tell the truth. At the conclusion of the questioning each panelist voted separately, and the identity of the claimant was revealed ("Will the real ________ please stand up?"). The three guests then split a cash award, calculated on the number of incorrect votes. Because the identity of the real claimant was not revealed to the viewing audience until the end of the questioning, viewers were able to play the game along with the panelists. To Tell the Truth began in 1956 as a prime-time show. The title was changed shortly before the premiere from Nothing But the Truth. The celebrity panel on the premiere included Polly Bergen, Dick Van Dyke, Hildy Parks, and John Cameron Swayze. Other panelists who appeared frequently on the network versions were Tom Poston, Kitty Carlisle, Peggy Cass, Orson Bean, and Phyllis Newman. Bud Collyer hosted both the prime-time and the daytime versions on CBS. The syndicated version, which began in 1969, was hosted by Garry Moore until 1977, when Joe Garagiola took over for the last few shows; the celebrity regulars on that version were Kitty Carlisle, Peggy Cass, and Bill Cullen, plus a guest celeb. Robin Ward hosted the 1980 syndicated version, on which Peggy Cass was a regular panelist. Gordon Elliott hosted the 1990 daytime revival until February 1991, when Alex Trebek took over (Richard Kline hosted the premiere telecast, when NBC mistakenly ran the pilot for the series).

TODAY NBC
14 JANUARY 1952– Network television's first early-morning program, Today survived a shaky start to become one of the most profitable shows in history. Not only is it network television's longest-running daytime series, but also because of its two-hours-per-weekday slot it has occupied more total air time—some 24,000 hours—than any other single show. In its early years, Today was actually telecast for three hours a day, though only two hours were carried by any affiliate; the show's first hour was seen from 7:00 to 8:00 A.M. only in the East, and was recreated—live—for the Midwest after the second East Coast hour (by late 1958, when high-quality videotape had become available, the show was broadcast to other parts of the country on a delayed basis, and the extra hour was no longer necessary).

The show was the brainchild of Sylvester "Pat" Weaver, one of the most creative executives in the history of broadcasting. Weaver realized that television was more than radio with pictures and sought to develop new kinds of programs to capitalize on television's unique qualities. One of his first concepts was the Saturday-night comedy program which became Your Show of Shows. He is also credited with developing the special entertainment broadcast, which he called the "spectacular." In addition to the Today show, Weaver also developed Home, Tonight, and Wide Wide World.

Weaver saw the Today show as a program that few people would watch from beginning to end; instead, it was to be designed so that viewers could eat breakfast and get ready for school or work without devoting all of their time and attention to the television set. A news summary was given every half hour, and the other segments (chiefly consisting of sports, weather, interviews, and features) were kept short. As early-morning broadcasting was then virtually unknown (even daytime broadcasting was a rarity in some parts of the country), Weaver sought to make the show attractive to local stations by offering them a share of Today's network advertising revenues plus several minutes of commercial time each hour (the latter feature soon became standardized, as most affiliates "cut away" for a five-minute local newscast at twenty-five minutes past each hour).

The man chosen to host the show was Dave Garroway. Though he started out as a radio newscaster in Pittsburgh, he did not attract attention until he began hosting a variety series, Garroway at Large, over WMAQ-TV in Chicago. Garroway was not Weaver's first choice for the Today job, but his relaxed, conversational manner on camera convinced Weaver that he would be just right for a waking audience. Chosen to assist Garroway were Jack Lescoulie, to handle sports and light features, and Jim Fleming, to read the news.

The show premiered on 14 January 1952, a week behind schedule, in its own studio on the ground floor of the RCA Exhibition Hall on West Forty-ninth Street in New York. A large plate-glass window enabled passersby to see the show and to be seen as the cameras periodically panned it (President Harry S Truman, who liked to take a morning walk wherever he stayed, was once maneuvered into camera range for an abortive interview). Teletape machines, telephones, and a row of clocks showing the time in selected cities throughout the world dominated the set. The show opened with just one sponsor (the Kiplinger Newsletter), thirty-one affiliates, and poor reviews—most of the critics thought that the show was poorly paced and that its human performers seemed overwhelmed by its gadgetry. These early problems were gradually worked out, and the use of electronics was deemphasized; Garroway, Lescoulie, and company even began to appear in skits to help give the show a lighter touch. By the end of 1952 Today had managed to pick up a few new sponsors and a few more affiliates.

The year 1953 proved to be a signal year for Today, as it attracted large audiences and began to make money. One reason for its change of fortune was an aggressive sales staff, but an equally important factor in boosting ratings was a chimpanzee named J. Fred Muggs, whose antics helped lure hundreds of thousands of children, and their parents, to the screen. Owned by trainer Buddy Menella and Roy Waldron, Muggs was ten months old when he came to the show early in 1953; he soon became one of America's most popular animal celebrities and went on several personal appearance tours (he was especially in demand to dedicate supermarkets). Muggs was never popular with the show's staff, but the same could be said of several of Today's human regulars. Having become increasingly hard to handle, Muggs was dropped after four years (the press release announcing his departure stated that he was leaving to "extend his personal horizons"). He was briefly succeeded by another chimp named Mr. Kokomo.

Shortly after Muggs's arrival in 1953, newscaster Jim Fleming announced his departure; he was replaced by Frank Blair, who remained with Today for twenty-two years, longer than anyone else connected with the show. It was also in 1953 that Today began to feature a woman regularly. The "Today Girl," as she was called for many years, originally had few responsibilities, but the role gradually expanded so that by 1974 Barbara Walters, the incumbent, had become a full-fledged cohost. The first "Today Girls," however, were shapely young women who were featured just for the day. The first permanent "Today Girl" was a program staffer whose duties included reading the temperature and a one-word description of the weather in America's major cities; she left the show in 1954 for a more promising career on stage and in films. Her name was Estelle Parsons. Among the other women who appeared during Garroway's tenure were Lee Ann Meriwether (Miss America of 1955), who left the show late in 1956, singer Helen O'Connell (1956–1958), game show panelist Betsy Palmer (1958–1959), actress Florence Henderson (1959–1960), former Miss Rheingold Robbin Bain (1960), journalist Beryl Pfizer (1960–1961), and actress Anita Colby (1961). Physical fitness expert Bonnie Prudden and learned Charles Van Doren (a big winner on Twenty-One) also appeared regularly during the late 1950s.

In 1958, partly to accommodate Dave Garroway's busy schedule (he was hosting Wide Wide World on TV and doing several NBC radio broadcasts), the Today show began to be taped a day in advance (the news segments, of course, continued to be done live), a practice that continued on and off for the next four years. Despite the change of schedule, Garroway became more difficult to work with, and after the death of his second wife in April of 1961, he decided to leave the show. In July of that year, after more than nine years as host of Today (which was by then titled The Dave Garroway Today Show), Garroway closed the show for the last time with his familiar "Peace" signoff, to the accompaniment of Lionel Hampton's version of "Sentimental Journey." Garroway made few appearances on network TV thereafter; he was a guest on Today's fifteenth and twenty-fifth anniversary shows, and also hosted The Newcomers in 1971 on CBS (he committed suicide in 1982). Following Garroway's departure, Today turned more stolid under new host John Chancellor. A veteran newsman, Chancellor never really felt at home in the role, and lasted only fourteen months. Garroway's second banana, Jack Lescoulie, had also left the show, and Chancellor's regulars included Edwin Newman, who was brought in to read the news, Louise King, the new "Today Girl," and a disgruntled Frank Blair, who found himself in the unwanted role of sidekick (the four even appeared in skits from time to time, an idea revived to make the show less wooden).

Chancellor's successor was Hugh Downs, who took over in October 1962; Downs thus became the only person to have been a regular on all three of Pat Weaver's weekday programming concepts, Home, Tonight, and Today. Downs also continued to host a daytime game show, Concentration, for the first few years of his Today tenure. Frank Blair returned to the news desk; Jack Lescoulie also came back to the show that year, but left within twelve months. Though Downs and his producer, Al Morgan, feuded from 1962 to 1968 (when Morgan was dropped at Downs's insistence), Today's ratings remained steady. During this time the show often originated in places other than New York (the practice had actually started with Garroway), and, with the advent of communications satellites, telecasts from Europe were introduced. It was also during Downs's term as host that Barbara Walters began appearing regularly. Walters had previously worked for CBS's The Morning Show, an ineffective competitor of Today, and was hired as a freelance writer by Today's then producer, Fred Freed, in 1961. She was pressed into on-camera service for the funeral of President John Kennedy in November 1963, and thereafter was used regularly on the show. Finally, in 1964 she was selected to succeed actress Maureen O'Sullivan as the next in the series of "Today Girls." O'Sullivan, who had replaced Pat Fontaine, found it difficult to work with Downs and was dropped after only a few months. Walters soon established herself as a first-rate interviewer; always well prepared, she sometimes joined Downs in questioning guests. Variety later hailed her presence on the show as "a victory of brains over mannequin beauty." In 1964 Judith Crist and Aline Saarinen also began to appear regularly, reviewing films and art respectively. By 1967 Joe Garagiola had also signed on as a regular. A onetime second-string catcher for the St. Louis Cardinals, the affable Garagiola had been an NBC sportscaster; his quick wit helped offset Downs's tendency toward longwindedness.

Having outlasted producer Morgan, Downs departed from Today on 11 October 1971, concluding a reign only slightly shorter than Garroway's. Downs's successor, Frank McGee, signaled another shift toward the stolid. McGee was a tough, well-respected newsman who had worked in Oklahoma City, Montgomery, Washington, and New York. McGee was not well liked by the Today staff. Though he and Barbara Walters appeared to get along on camera, relations between the two were strained—McGee insisted on opening and closing the show himself and also reserved the right to ask the first question of any guest slated to be interviewed by Walters. Whether the rift between the two would have widened will never be known, however, as McGee died of bone cancer in April of 1974, after only two and one-half years on the job.

McGee's replacement, chosen with Barbara Walters's approval, was Jim Hartz. Like McGee, Hartz hailed from Oklahoma (he had delivered the eulogy at McGee's funeral); Hartz had hosted a local newscast in New York beginning in 1965, when he was just twenty-four. Apparently Hartz was never very popular with viewers, for Today's ratings began to decline appreciably during his brief tenure. When Barbara Walters, who was now the official cohost of the show, left the show in June of 1976 for ABC, Hartz too was dropped. It was during Hartz's short stay that Frank Blair left the show; his last newscast was on 14 March 1975, and he was succeeded by Lew Wood. Joe Garagiola had also left the show by this time and was succeeded by bushy-haired Gene Shalit. A former publicity agent, Shalit had originally reviewed films for Today, but by 1974 he was the new number two.

Jim Hartz was succeeded by Tom Brokaw on 29 August 1976; like Chancellor and McGee, Brokaw was an experienced newsman who had worked in Omaha, Atlanta, Los Angeles, and at the White House during the final days of the Nixon administration. Brokaw, however, was not as humorless as his newsmen predecessors. Shortly before Brokaw's arrival, Floyd Kalber was hired to read the news (Lew Wood stayed with the show, but did only the weather; Wood left in the spring of 1978 and was succeeded by Bob Ryan).

An intensive search was undertaken to fill the void left by Barbara Walters. Six women were tested on the air for the job—Cassie Mackin, Betty Rollin, Linda Ellerbee, Kelly Lange, Betty Furness, and Jane Pauley. Pauley was finally selected. Born in 1950, Pauley was barely older than the show itself; she had previously worked in Indianapolis and at WMAQ-TV in Chicago (the same station that Garroway had worked for almost thirty years before). By the end of 1977, Today's ratings, which had deteriorated for several years (due in part to competition from ABC's Good Morning, America) finally turned around. Tom Brokaw, Jane Pauley, Gene Shalit, Floyd Kalber, and Bob Ryan comprised the show's regular crew; several other people also appeared occasionally, including Betty Furness (reporting on consumer affairs), Dr. Art Ulene (health care), and Edwin Newman (language). In May of 1979 talkshow host Phil Donahue became a regular contributor to the show. Floyd Kalber left during the summer of 1979 and was succeeded by Tony Guida; in the fall of 1979 Guida began to do assignment reporting, and Brokaw and Pauley read the news. Jovial Willard Scott succeeded Bob Ryan as the weather man in March of 1980.

The Brokaw-Pauley-Scott team remained intact for almost two years. Tom Brokaw left at the end of 1981, a few months before he was to begin coanchoring NBC's evening newscast. On 4 January 1982 two new hosts appeared: former NBC sportscaster Bryant Gumbel (who had been contributing sports stories to the show since the fall of 1980) and NBC News correspondent Chris Wallace (son of CBS newsman Mike Wallace). By this time, however, Today's dominance of the early-morning ratings had finally come to an end; ABC's Good Morning America, which had first topped Today for a couple of weeks in 1979, overtook its rival consistently during 1982 and 1983 (Today even slipped to third, for the first time in its thirty-odd year run, during one week in August 1983, as The CBS Morning News edged it out for second place). Late in September 1982 Chris Wallace was reassigned, and John Palmer was brought in to read the news. Jane Pauley went on maternity leave late in 1983 but returned early in 1984.

The Gumbel-Pauley-Scott team carried on through the 1980s. Gene Shalit continued to review films, and Linda Ellerbee anchored a popular weekly essay titled "T.G.I.F." until her departure for ABC in the fall of 1986. A prime-time special was televised 26 August 1985, and the series celebrated its thirty-fifth anniversary with a second special on 1 February 1987. Today fared well against Good Morning America during the latter half of the decade, until a series of events unfolded that sent the series into a decline. The first volley was heard in February 1989, when an internal memo from Gumbel to his superiors was leaked to the press; the memo was extremely critical of Scott and Shalit, and caused Gumbel much embarrassment. The next volley came in the fall of 1989, when NBC Sports executive Dick Ebersol, who had recently been placed in charge of Today, decided to bring Deborah Norville aboard to read the news, and to move John Palmer back to Norville's old beat, NBC News at Sunrise. Ebersol also decided that Norville's role should be greater than Palmer's had been. Though he insisted that he was not trying to oust Jane Pauley, that was exactly what happened; shortly after Norville's arrival Pauley announced her departure, and bade farewell to Today on 28 December 1989 (Pauley remained with NBC News, of course, filling in for Tom Brokaw on The NBC Nightly News and hosting her own prime-time magazine series, Real Life with Jane Pauley, in the summer of 1990).

By the spring of 1990 Today's ratings were down by 15%, and the show was again running second to Good Morning America. Bryant Gumbel had begun hosting some network golf tournaments, and missed several Mondays as a result. Willard Scott seldom appeared in the New York studios, delivering the weathercast either from Washington, D.C., or from a remote location. In June 1990 Joe Garagiola was rehired, and Faith Daniels, who had previously anchored or coanchored The CBS Early Morning News for several years, was signed to read the news. Dick Ebersol severed his ties with Today and moved back to NBC Sports. In April 1991 Katie Couric succeeded Deborah Norville as cohost. Today's ratings began to rise almost immediately. Couric had been a local reporter in Miami and Washington, D.C., before joining NBC News as deputy Penatagon correspondent in the mid-1980s. In 1990 she joined the Today show as national correspondent, and filled in for Norville during the latter's maternity leave in early 1991. Gumbel and Couric were later joined by Matt Lauer, who read the news.

Today marked its fortieth anniversary with a prime time retropsective on 14 January 1992. In June 1994 it moved to a new studio; its ground floor location was a throwback to the program's earliest days (except that the glass was now bulletproof).

TODAY'S BLACK WOMAN SYNDICATED
1981 Half-hour magazine series for black females, hosted by singer Freda Payne.

TODAY'S F.B.I. ABC
25 October 1981–14 August 1982 This hour crime show seemed to have two things going for it, at least on paper: It was a remake of TV's second-longest-running crime show, The F.B.I., and it starred Mike Connors, who had played the title role in Mannix for eight seasons. However, like almost all TV sequels, Today's F.B.I. proved much less popular than yesterday's. Connors portrayed FBI agent Ben Slater, a twenty-year Bureau veteran who supervised four young agents—Joseph Cali as Nick Frazier, who frequently went undercover; Carol Potter as Maggie Clinton, expert psychologist and markswoman; Rick Hill as Al Gordean, skilled climber and daredevil; and Harold Sylvester as Dwayne Thompson, a former Marine intelligence officer.

TOGETHER WE STAND (NOTHING IS EASY) CBS
22 September 1986–29 October 1986; 8 February 1987–24 April 1987 Half-hour sitcom about a multi-ethnic family. The series started out in the fall of 1986 as Together We Stand, and starred Elliott Gould as David Randall, a former coach of the Portland Trail Blazers who now owned a sporting goods store in Portland, and Dee Wallace Stone as his wife, Lori. David and Lori had four children, three of whom were adopted: fifteen-year-old Amy (played by Katie O'Neill), twelve-year-old Scott, their natural son (Scott Grimes); fourteen-year-old Sam, who was Asian (Ke Huy Quan); and six-year-old Sally, who was black (Natasha Bobo). After five episodes (in three different time slots), Together We Stand left the air in October. It returned early in Febrauary with a new title, Nothing Is Easy, and without Elliott Gould. Lori Randall was now a widow, and was studying to become a court reporter. Julia Migenes joined the cast as neighbor Marion Simmons, a divorcée.

TOM CBS
2 March 1994–27 April 1994; 6 June 1994–13 June 1994 A year after the rise and fall of his first sitcom, The Jackie Thomas Show, Tom Arnold returned with a new vehicle on a new network. Again, his series failed to catch on. This time Arnold starred as Tom Graham, a welder who, with his wife and five kids, decided to build his dream house on land next to a city dump near Topeka, Kansas; the brood lived in a trailer while Tom worked on the house. Also featured were Alison LaPlaca (who had costarred on The Jackie Thomas Show) as his wife, Dorothy; Jason Marsden as son Mike; Josh Stoppelworth as son Trevor; Tiffany Lubran and Kathryn Lubran as twin daughters Emily and Charlotte; Andrew Lawrence as son Donnie; Colleen Camp as Tom's sister, Kara; and Danton Stone as Kara's husband, Rodney. Tom and Roseanne Arnold, who created the series together with Steve Pepoon, were the executive producers.

TOM AND JERRY CBS/ABC
25 September 1965–17 September 1972 (CBS); 6 September 1975–3 September 1978 (ABC); 6 September 1980–4 September 1982 (CBS) Tom and Jerry, the cat and mouse cartoon characters created by William Hanna and Joseph Barbera in the 1940s, came to television in 1965; this CBS Saturday-morning show included new episodes as well as some of the theatrical releases. In 1975 Tom and Jerry showed up on ABC's Saturday-morning schedule, sharing an hour with a thirty-foot purple gorilla in The New Tom and Jerry/Grape Ape Show. In 1976 a dog was added and the show was retitled The Tom and Jerry/Grape Ape/Mumbly Show. The ape departed in December 1976, and Tom and Jerry continued in the half-hour Tom and Jerry/

Mumbly Show. Reruns were shown Sunday mornings under the The Great Grape Ape title during the 1977–1978 season. In 1980 Tom and Jerry popped up again on Saturday mornings as the stars of CBS's The Tom and Jerry Comedy Show, which lasted two seasons.

TOM & JERRY KIDS SHOW FOX

8 SEPTEMBER 1990–2 OCTOBER 1993 On this Saturday morning animated series from Hanna-Barbera Productions, younger versions of classic M-G-M cartoon characters starred. The cartoon segments included "Tom and Jerry," the cat-and-mouse duo originally drawn for M-G-M by Bill Hanna and Joe Barbera, and two father-and-son dog teams, "Spike and Tike" and "Droopy and Drippy."

TOM CORBETT, SPACE CADET CBS/ABC/NBC/DUMONT

2 OCTOBER 1950–29 DECEMBER 1950 (CBS); 1 JANUARY 1951–26 SEPTEMBER 1952 (ABC); 7 JULY 1951–8 SEPTEMBER 1951 (NBC); 29 AUGUST 1953–22 MAY 1954 (DUMONT); 11 DECEMBER 1954–25 JUNE 1955 (NBC) This durable space opera was not only one of the few shows to have run on all four commercial networks, but it was also one of the very few shows to have run on two networks simultaneously; this occurred in 1951, when the show was seen Saturday mornings on NBC and three weekday evenings on ABC. Set during the 2350s at the Space Academy, a training school for Solar Guards, the show starred Frankie Thomas as Tom Corbett, a hopeful cadet. Also on hand were Edward Bryce as Captain Steve Strong; Jan Merlin as Cadet Roger Manning; Jack Grimes as Cadet T. J. Thistle; Patricia Ferris and Margaret Garland as Dr. Joan Dale; John Fiedler as Cadet Alfie Higgins; Frank Sutton as Cadet Rattison; Denise Alexander as Tom's sister, Betty Corbett; Norma Clarke as Cadet Jo Spencer; and Al Markim as Astro, a Venusian crewman aboard the Polaris, the Academy's training ship. The series premiered as a fifteen-minute, thrice-weekly show on CBS, and continued in that format on ABC; the NBC and DuMont versions were half-hour shows, telecast on Saturday mornings.

TOM COTTLE: UP CLOSE. SYNDICATED

1982 Boston psychologist Tom Cottle interviewed a single guest on each program of this half-hour talk show.

TOM, DICK AND MARY NBC

5 OCTOBER 1964–4 JANUARY 1965 The third segment of 90 Bristol Court, NBC's unsuccessful attempt to set three sitcoms at the same California apartment complex, Tom, Dick and Mary told the story of a young married couple who moved in with a swinging bachelor. With Don Galloway as Tom Gentry, an intern; Joyce Bulifant as his wife, Mary Gentry; Steve Franken as their roommate, Dick Moran, also an intern; John Hoyt as Dr. Krevoy, chief of staff at the hospital; J. Edward McKinley as Horace; and Guy Raymond as Cliff Murdock, the handyman. See also Harris Against the World; Karen.

THE TOM EWELL SHOW CBS

27 SEPTEMBER 1960–18 JULY 1961 Tom Ewell, who had costarred with Marilyn Monroe in The Seven Year Itch, starred in this half-hour sitcom as Tom Potter, a real estate agent who was surrounded by women at home. Also featured were Marilyn Erskine as his wife, Fran; Mabel Albertson as Fran's mother, Irene (Grandma); Cindy Robbins as Tom and Fran's daughter, Carol; Sherry Alberoni as daughter Debbie; and Eileen Chesis as daughter Cissy.

TOMA ABC
4 OCTOBER 1973–6 SEPTEMBER 1974 Toma was an hour-long crime show based on the adventures of David Toma, a real-life detective for the Newark Police Department who relied on the art of disguise to apprehend his prey. The series starred Tony Musante as David Toma; Susan Strasberg as his wife, Patty Toma; Simon Oakland as Toma's supervisor, Inspector Spooner; Sean Manning as David and Patty's son, Jimmy; Michelle Livingston as their daughter, Donna; David Toma himself also appeared in several episodes, usually in disguise. Roy Huggins was the executive producer for Universal Television. Though Toma was renewed by ABC for a second season, Tony Musante surprised everyone by announcing his intention not to continue with the show. To fill the void, Universal Television signed Robert Blake and developed an hour crime show for him: see Baretta.

TOMAHAWK SYNDICATED
1957 Produced in Canada, this little-known western starred Jacques Godet as Pierre Radisson and Rene Caron as Medard, a pair of scouts.

TOMBSTONE TERRITORY ABC/SYNDICATED
16 OCTOBER 1957–17 SEPTEMBER 1958; 13 MARCH 1959–9 OCTOBER 1959 (ABC); 1959 (SYNDICATED) Half-hour western from Ziv TV, starring Pat Conway as Sheriff Clay Hollister and Richard Eastham as Harris Claibourne, the editor of the Tombstone (Ariz. Terr.) Epitaph. The series' theme song ("Whistle me up a memory. . .") was composed by William M. Backer. The show ran for one season on ABC and was recalled in March of 1959 to replace Man with a Camera. Following the network run another 26 episodes were produced for first-run syndication.

TOMFOOLERY NBC
12 SEPTEMBER 1970–4 SEPTEMBER 1971 The segments on this Saturday-morning cartoon show were based on stories from children's literary classics.

TOMORROW ABC
26 MARCH 1955–29 MAY 1956 This public affairs program was produced by Johns Hopkins University and moderated by Lynn Poole. It was originally a discussion program, but in September of 1955 it changed its title to Tomorrow's Careers and focused on presenting profiles of various occupations to young people.

TOMORROW NBC
15 OCTOBER 1973–28 JANUARY 1982 Network television's first entry into late-late-night programming on weeknights (NBC had introduced The Midnight Special on Fridays some months earlier), Tomorrow was scheduled at 1:00 A.M., immediately following the Tonight show. The hour-long talk show was hosted by Tom Snyder; it was originally broadcast from NBC studios in Burbank, but moved to New York in December 1974. In June 1977 the show returned to Burbank until 1979, when Snyder headed back to New York. On 16 September 1980, when the Tonight show was shortened to sixty minutes, the Tomorrow show was lengthened to ninety minutes nightly. A month later Hollywood gossip columnist Rona Barrett was added to the show. After numerous squabbles and changes of production executives, Barrett was granted equal billing as the series' West Coast cohost. As of 12 January 1981 the show was retitled Tomorrow Coast to Coast. Rona Barrett left the show in the spring of 1981.

Early in 1982, NBC replaced Tomorrow Coast to Coast with a new talk show (see Late Night with David Letterman).

THE TONI TENNILLE SHOW SYNDICATED

1980 Singer Toni Tennille hosted this daytime talk show, aimed principally at women between the ages of 30 and 39.

TONI TWIN TIME CBS

5 APRIL 1950–20 SEPTEMBER 1950 Jack Lemmon hosted this Wednesday-night talent show, which alternated with What's My Line? The half-hour series was sponsored by Toni home permanents; each week a pair of twins was featured, one of whom sported a Toni permanent. The show was written and produced by Sherman Marks.

TONIGHT ON BROADWAY CBS

6 APRIL 1948–23 MAY 1948; 2 OCTOBER 1949–18 DECEMBER 1949 Scenes from current Broadway plays were enacted on this half-hour anthology series. Martin Gosch hosted the show in 1948, John Mason Brown in 1949.

THE TONIGHT SHOW NBC

27 SEPTEMBER 1954– NBC's late-night talk show is television's most profitable series. Though it was not the first late-night network series (Broadway Open House holds that distinction), it is by far the most successful. Until 1993 it was never seriously challenged in its time slot by any other late-night series, network or syndicated. The chief reason for the show's profitability is that production costs are relatively low and that revenues are high; because of its time slot, the show carries more minutes of commercials than do prime-time programs. The Tonight Show has remained popular with viewers because it has kept a predominantly light touch, steering a middle course between brainless burlesque and wordy tedium.

Like most of NBC's innovative programs of the 1950s, The Tonight Show was the brainchild of Sylvester "Pat" Weaver, the network executive who also conceived the Today show, Home, Wide Wide World, and Your Show of Shows. Though Tonight's predecessor, Broadway Open House, perished after a fifteen-month run, it had demonstrated to Weaver that late-night television was a viable concept. Weaver abandoned the idea of a slapstick show in favor of a more relaxed, conversational program; his intuition proved right, as The Tonight Show has remained on the air for more than thirty years. The Tonight Show was based in New York from 1954 until May of 1972, when it moved to Los Angeles. It has had four principal hosts (and a host of guest hosts) over the years. The first three hosts—Steve Allen, Jack Paar, and Johnny Carson—came to the series from similar backgrounds: all were born in the Midwest, all had brief but unspectacular careers in radio, and all had had considerable experience in television, hosting game shows and variety shows of their own, before taking their seat behind the desk of The Tonight Show. The fourth host, Jay Leno, was born and raised in New England, and had twenty years experience doing standup comedy before taking on the job (he had also been the program's permanent guest host for several years). All four are quick-witted people who can keep a conversation going and who can ad-lib skillfully.

As a matter of convenience, the several eras of The Tonight Show (all of which have borne slightly different titles) are discussed individually.

I. Steve Allen—Tonight! (27 September 1954–25 January 1957)

The first host of The Tonight Show (which was then titled Tonight!), Steve Allen began his broadcasting career as a disc jockey. In 1950 he came to New York, where he hosted a number of TV series during the next three years (see Songs for Sale; The Steve Allen Show; Talent Patrol). On 27 July 1953, Allen began hosting a local show over WNBC-TV in New York. Allen's show, which ran from 11:20 P.M. to midnight, Mondays through Fridays, had been developed by station executive Ted Cott to lure a potential sponsor, Ruppert Breweries, away from a late-night show on New York's Channel 7 (that show, Talk of the Town, was hosted by Louis Nye, who would later be featured on Steve Allen's variety shows). After a successful fourteen-month run, The Steve Allen Show became a network show; beginning 27 September 1954, the show (retitled Tonight!) was offered to NBC affiliates as far west as Omaha, and was expanded to 105 minutes nightly. Ruppert Breweries, the original sponsor, insisted on the unusual length; though few affiliates ever carried the first fifteen minutes, it was not until the late 1960s, at Johnny Carson's insistence, that the show was shortened to ninety minutes.

The basic format of The Tonight Show was established during Allen's tenure: an opening monologue, a segment involving the studio audience (through interviews or games such as "Stump the Band"), and a simple set (a desk and chair for the host, a couch for the guests), were all trademarks of the Allen era. Allen inaugurated the out-of-town broadcast (the first was done from Miami), the one-guest show (Carl Sandburg was the first solo guest), and the one-topic show (entire programs were devoted to such subjects as narcotics, civil rights, and black music). Allen also established the practice of paying his guests only "scale," the minimum fee required by union-network contract (this practice led to a highly publicized feud between Steve Allen and Ed Sullivan, and later between Jack Paar and Ed Sullivan, as Sullivan paid top dollar for his guests).

Though Allen's Tonight! show closely resembled the shows of his successors, Jack Paar and Johnny Carson, it was a more musical show; Allen himself was an accomplished musician and composer (he wrote his theme, "This Could Be the Start of Something"), and he employed a nucleus of musical regulars on his show. In addition to announcer-sidekick Gene Rayburn, the show featured singers Steve Lawrence (who was only seventeen when he began singing on Allen's local show), Eydie Gormé (who subsequently married Steve Lawrence), Andy Williams (who later hosted several series of his own), and Pat Marshall (who was succeeded by Pat Kirby). Skitch Henderson led the orchestra. The show was produced by Bill Harbach and Nick Vanoff, and directed by Dwight Hemion; Harbach and Vanoff later produced The Hollywood Palace, and Hemion has produced and directed a number of award-winning variety series and specials.

Allen introduced audiences to several new comedians, including Mort Sahl, Lenny Bruce, and Shelley Berman. Other, more unusual guests also appeared, such as Joe Interleggi ("the human termite"), Ben Belefonte ("the rhyming inventor"), and upstate farmer John Schafer (who delivered terse film reviews). Two other people were also part of the show, though they sat in the audience: Mrs. Sterling and Miss Dorothy Miller, both of whom were frequently interviewed by Allen. Finally, there was Allen himself, who used his wide-ranging improvisational skills. Sometimes he might dash out of the studio to stop traffic; sometimes he would deliver an extemporaneous narration to a street scene broadcast from a remote camera; sometimes he would compose a melody on the piano, using notes suggested by the audience. Above all, he kept the show moving.

In the summer of 1956 Allen began a Sunday-night variety hour, which NBC had devised to dent the ratings of The Ed Sullivan Show on CBS. To ease the strain on Allen (who obviously could not maintain a six-nights-a-week schedule for long), in the fall of 1956 Ernie Kovacs was brought in to host the Tonight! show on Mondays and Tuesdays. By the end of the year the network, intent on battling Ed Sullivan on Sundays, ordered Allen to drop his Tonight! show chores altogether and to concentrate instead on the Sunday variety show. On 25 January 1957, Allen hosted his last Tonight! show, as the series' first era came to a close.

II. The First Interregnum—Tonight: America After Dark (28 January 1957–26 July 1957)

Tonight: America After Dark was a disaster. An ill-conceived, diffuse program, it was more of a magazine show than a variety or talk show. There was no central figure around whom the show revolved: though Jack Lescoulie (who had been with the Today show) was nominally the host, the show featured a group of correspondents, from different cities, who reported nightly. The original lineup included Hy Gardner, Bob Considine, and Earl Wilson in New York; Irv Kupcinet in Chicago; and Paul Coates and Vernon Scott in Los Angeles. Music was provided by the Lou Stein Trio. Designed to resemble the Today show, Tonight: America After Dark was supposed to provide a window on American nightlife; mobile units were dispatched to cover celebrity-studded parties, motion picture premieres, nightclub shows, and other "special events" such as a tribute to the ninety-sixth anniversary of the statehood of Kansas, which was a highlight of the show's premiere broadcast. The show was also supposed to provide hard news coverage as well. Tonight: America After Dark opened to poor reviews and low ratings, as affiliates began to drop the show in favor of more profitable local programs. NBC executives began tinkering with the show: Vernon Scott was replaced by Lee Giroux; singer Judy Johnson joined in March; the Mort Lindsey Quartet replaced the Lou Stein Trio, and was in turn replaced by the Johnny Guarnieri Quartet; in June, Al "Jazzbo" Collins became the new host, broadcasting from a set called the Purple Grotto. All of these efforts proved fruitless; when Tonight: America After Dark ended its run after twenty-six weeks, only five dozen NBC affiliates carried the show.

III. The Jack Paar Tonight Show (29 July 1957–30 March 1962)

As soon as it became apparent that no amount of tinkering could salvage Tonight: America After Dark, NBC executives began looking for someone to host its successor. Jack Paar was one of the first people contacted and was eager to take the job. A high school dropout, Paar had entertained servicemen during World War II (where his irreverence toward military brass made him a favorite of enlisted men), and had hosted several TV shows during the early 1950s, including Bank on the Stars and Up to Paar (both game shows), The Morning Show (CBS's abortive attempt to compete with Today), and the Jack Paar Show (which was first a morning variety show, and later an afternoon show).

With Paar at the helm, the new version of NBC's late-night show set sail on 29 July 1957; it was originally titled Tonight (without the exclamation point of Steve Allen's era), but was later officially retitled The Jack Paar Tonight Show. Paar's first task was to win back the network affiliates that had dropped his predecessor during the first half of 1957. He succeeded; within eighteen months, Paar's lineup grew from sixty-two stations and two sponsors to 115 stations and full sponsorship. Paar, unlike Allen or Carson, was not a standup comic who could also conduct a conversation; rather, he was a conversationalist who could also deliver a joke. To lure and retain viewers, his show relied more on conversation—and controversy—than on humor. Audiences came to expect the unexpected on Paar's shows; sparks could fly at any time between the host and his guests. A mercurial and petulant person who was surrounded by conflict and controversy (though he professed to detest it), Paar became enmeshed in a series of feuds with other show business luminaries, such as Steve Allen, Dorothy Kilgallen, Walter Winchell, and Ed Sullivan.

Paar began his show with a crew of regulars, but only two stayed with him for the entire run: announcer-sidekick Hugh Downs and bandleader José Melis, a former Army buddy. Others who came and went included Dody Goodman, "weather girl" Tedi Thurman, singer Betty Johnson, and the Bil and Cora Baird Puppets. Another group of people could be classified as semiregulars; all were good talkers who dropped by frequently to chat with the host. This group included, among others, Washington hostess Elsa Maxwell, British humorist Alexander King, French chanteuse Genevieve, writer Jack Douglas (and his Japanese wife, Reiko), Zsa Zsa Gabor, Hans Conried, Peggy Cass, Cliff (Charley Weaver) Arquette, and Mary Margaret McBride. Among the most famous guests who appeared were Robert Kennedy (then counsel to a Senate committee investigating racketeers, Kennedy appeared 22 February 1959), John Kennedy, Richard Nixon (who appeared, separately, during the 1960 Presidential campaign), and Barbra Streisand (who made her network TV debut on 5 April 1961, when Orson Bean was the guest host).

By 1960 the popularity of The Jack Paar Tonight Show was assured. The show was videotaped in the early evening, which enabled Paar, like most of his viewers, to watch the show in bed. Paar was able to cut his own appearances on the show back to three nights a week (Paar worked some Monday nights, but most Mondays featured either Hugh Downs or a guest host, and all Friday shows were reruns). Most importantly, from the network's point of view, the show was a huge moneymaker and was carried by 158 affiliates. Commercial success, however, did little to ease Paar's tensions. As early as 1958 Paar had talked publicly about leaving the show, and in February 1960 he made good on his promise. The incident that precipitated Paar's celebrated walkout was the "W.C. Joke." It was a shaggy-dog story about an Englishwoman who planned to travel abroad and wrote her host to inquire if her accommodations included a w.c., her abbreviation for water closet. Her host, who was not fluent in English, was baffled by the term; after some thought he concluded that w.c. stood for wayside chapel, and wrote back to the woman extolling in detail the sumptuousness of the nearby w.c., but cautioning her that it was likely to be crowded on the two days a week that it was open. By today's standards, the story would hardly raise an eyebrow, but in 1960 it was unacceptable, at least to NBC censors. The network deleted the entire story from the show, without advising Paar of its decision. The following night (11 February 1960) a furious Paar walked on stage, announced his displeasure with NBC's unilateral action and his weariness at being a constant center of controversy, and bade an emotional farewell to the audience. His sudden departure left a startled Hugh Downs to entertain the evening's guests, Orson Bean and Shelley Berman. Paar returned to his desk a month later, but the storm of controversy never abated; shortly after his return Paar reignited his feuds with Walter Winchell and Ed Sullivan (Jack Benny finally helped to mediate the Paar-Sullivan tiff).

The most serious incident occurred when Paar took himself, Peggy Cass, and a film crew to West Berlin in September of 1961, less than a month after the erection of the Berlin Wall. In one segment of the film, a detachment of American troops was deployed to stand in the background as Paar stood in the foreground near the Brandenburg Gate. The incident spurred a Defense Department inquiry and the censure of the U.S. Commander in West Berlin. Paar was excoriated in the press for the militaristic overtones of the Berlin broadcast; Paar blamed the press for the brouhaha, insisting that his visit had actually helped ease East-West tensions. Shortly afterward, however, Paar again announced that he would leave the show; this time he gave advance notice and remained firm in his decision to leave at the end of March 1962. His last first-run show was shown 29 March 1962 (the final show on 30 March was a rerun), as dozens of celebrities dropped by or sent film clips wishing him a fond farewell. Though Paar left his late-night show in March, he returned to NBC that fall to host a prime-time variety hour, which ran for three seasons (see The Jack Paar Show); in 1973 he again tried a late-night show, this time on ABC (see Jack Paar Tonite), which made no waves.

IV. The Second Interregnum (2 April 1962–28 September 1962)

Because of his previous contract, Jack Paar's successor, Johnny Carson, was unable to take over the show until October 1962. The twenty-six-week gap was filled by a succession of guest hosts, most of whom stayed for a week at a time. The parade included, among others, Mort Sahl, Soupy Sales, Art Linkletter, Groucho Marx, Merv Griffin, Jerry Lewis, and Arlene Francis (the first woman to guest-host the show). Hugh Downs stayed on as the announcer until August, when he succeeded John Chancellor as host of the Today show; Ed Herlihy replaced Downs on Tonight. Skitch Henderson led the band during the transition period. Though the six-month hiatus was uneventful, it was by no means a ratings disaster as Tonight: America After Dark had been.

V. The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson (1 October 1962–22 May 1992)

Johnny Carson had originally turned down NBC's offer to host The Tonight Show. Having substituted for Jack Paar, he was familiar with the job and initially felt that it would be too much of a grind (Carson told an interviewer in 1961 that the average life expectancy of a TV comic was about five years). Ultimately, Carson reconsidered and stayed with the show to become one of the most popular entertainers in show business history. His thirty-year stewardship of the show was five times the combined tenure of Allen and Paar. He has hosted more total hours of network programming than anyone.

Born in Corning, Iowa, and raised in Norfolk, Nebraska, Carson made a little money as a teenager doing magic tricks (as "The Great Carsoni"), and developed a ventriloquist act in the Navy. He attended the University of Nebraska, where he wrote his senior thesis on comedy. After a brief stint with radio station WOW in Omaha, he headed for Los Angeles and soon got his own local TV show, a half-hour

Sunday program called Carson's Cellar. He later wrote for The Red Skelton Show, hosted a summer game show (Earn Your Vacation), and finally got his own prime-time variety show (The Johnny Carson Show), which lasted thirty-nine weeks. In 1956 he hosted a daytime variety show, and a year later he began his second game show, Who Do You Trust? It was on this five-day-a-week program that Carson honed his interviewing and ad-libbing skills, for the quiz portion of Who Do You Trust? was clearly secondary to the conversational portion. When Carson left the show five years later (executive producer Don Fedderson refused to release him from his contract before it expired in September 1962), it was TV's top-rated daytime series.

Carson brought with him his sidekick from Who Do You Trust?, Ed McMahon, as well as producer Art Stark, who became the producer of The Tonight Show; Carson's brother, Dick Carson, was the director, and Skitch Henderson, who had led the band since Paar's departure, stayed on. Carson's guests on the 1962 premiere included Rudy Vallee, Joan Crawford, Mel Brooks, and Tony Bennett. The show opened to good reviews, and the ratings, which were fairly strong to start with, improved over the next few months.

Above all, Carson sought to entertain viewers. A keen student of comedy (and of television in general), Carson intentionally discouraged direct confrontation on his show in order to appeal to the broadest possible public. Though he was criticized for his failure to take sides on controversial issues, he defended the show's middle course ("It's not my job to deliver opinions," he once told an interviewer), while pointing out that the show has had its share of "serious" guests, such as Robert Kennedy, Barry Goldwater, Hubert Humphrey, Martin Luther King, Jr., and Carl Sagan.

Among the more celebrated incidents in the long history of The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson were: Carson's "first-person adventures," a series of filmed segments showing Carson pitching to members of the New York Yankees, flying with the Navy Thunderbirds, or skydiving; Carson's escorting an incoherent and physically exhausted Peter O'Toole offstage during a commercial break on a 1963 program (a sleepless O'Toole had flown to the show directly from the set of Lord Jim); guest Ed Ames's demonstration of tomahawk-throwing on a 1964 show, in which he hit a cardboard dummy directly in the crotch (thereby triggering one of the longest bursts of sustained laughter in TV history); a rare TV appearance by John Lennon and Paul McCartney in the spring of 1968 (announcing the formation of Apple Records to guest host Joe Garagiola); the wedding of singer Tiny Tim to Victoria May Budinger on 17 December 1969; Carson's joking reference in a 1973 monologue to a possible toilet paper shortage, which led to mass hoarding of toilet tissue by American consumers; and author Alex Haley's presentation (to a surprised Carson) of the latter's genealogical charts on a 1977 show.

Carson's most serious dispute with NBC arose in 1967, when Carson honored a strike by members of AFTRA, a performers' trade union. During the strike NBC aired reruns of Carson's shows, without his consent, in apparent violation of Carson's contract. Carson rescinded his contract and refused to return to the Tonight show after the AFTRA strike was settled until a new contract was negotiated. From that point on Carson became more actively involved in the financial arrangements and in the production details of the show. Art Stark, Carson's first producer, left the show in 1967 and was replaced by Stan Irwin (Irwin was succeeded by Rudy Tellez, who was in turn succeeded by Fred DeCordova, who had previously worked with Jack Benny). Carson's brother and director, Dick Carson, left in 1968 and was succeeded by Bob Quinn; Dick Carson later went to work for Merv Griffin, directing the latter's talk show. In 1969 Johnny Carson formed Raritan Enterprises with business partner Sonny Werblin; Raritan took over the actual production of The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson and also served as a vehicle for other ventures, such as television specials, an abortive fast-food restaurant chain, and the successful Johnny Carson Apparel, Inc.

Skitch Henderson, the show's bandleader, left in 1966 and was succeeded briefly by Milton DeLugg. In 1967 trumpet player Carl "Doc" Severinsen took over as bandleader; Severinsen's outlandish stage clothes inspired many a one-liner in Carson's nightly monologue. Through it all, Ed McMahon remained with Carson. A onetime boardwalk pitchman at Atlantic City, and a former all-purpose on-camera performer at a Philadelphia TV station, McMahon hooked up with Carson on Who Do You Trust? and stayed with him. McMahon's services as audience warm-up man, announcer, and commercial spokesman were fully appreciated, and he is surely television's best-known second banana. McMahon's famous introduction ("Heerre's . . . Johnny!") was intoned to the strains of "Johnny's Theme," which was composed by Carson and Paul Anka.

In 1972 the show moved from New York to Los Angeles (the show had been broadcast from the West Coast on a periodic basis before then). In 1977 Carson negotiated a new contract with NBC, which not only gave him a lot of money (the exact figure was not divulged, but was said to be well above $2 million a year), but also a lot of time off; his schedule called for about twenty-five 3-show weeks and twelve 4-show weeks, with fifteen weeks' vacation. Carson's work weeks were made even shorter on 16 September 1980, when the Tonight show was trimmed (at Carson's request) from ninety to sixty minutes. Carson also acquired ownership of the program in 1980.

In 1983 comedienne Joan Rivers was named as Carson's permanent substitute host. Rivers's association with the show was terminated abruptly in the spring of 1986 when she announced that she would be hosting her own late-night talk show on the fledgling Fox Network (see The Late Show Starring Joan Rivers). Garry Shandling appeared frequently as guest host from 1986 to 1988, when standup comic Jay Leno took over the assignment.

Through the years The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson was almost impervious to competition. ABC scheduled The Les Crane Show, The Joey Bishop Show, and The Dick Cavett Show before "counterprogramming" with Nightline, a news show that attracted a different audience. CBS introduced The Merv Griffin Show and The Pat Sajak Show, both without success; Rivers's The Late Show was a ratings disaster. Syndicated efforts such as David Brenner's Nightlife were unimpressive. The Arsenio Hall Show was the only talk show to hold its own against Carson's, and it did so not by siphoning away Carson viewers, but by attracting a younger audience.

Carson's production company (appropriately named Carson Productions) has produced a number of series and specials for NBC, such as "Johnny Carson's Greatest Practical Jokes" (28 November 1983), several retrospectives on TV commercials, and Amen, among others.

As the 1990s dawned, there was speculation about how long Carson would remain as host. NBC executives expressed no public concern about the matter, as Carson's ratings remained high; however, it was also apparent to the network that Carson was attracting an ever-aging audience, and that younger viewers were likely to be watching competition such as The Arsenio Hall Show. Carson himself put the rumors to rest in May 1991 at a meeting of network affiliates in New York, where he stunned the audience by announcing that he would leave the show in May 1992 (Carson repeated the news that night when he appeared on Late Night with David Letterman).

Although NBC had no advance knowledge of Carson's announcement, it had already selected his successor: Jay Leno, who had served as the show's permanent guest host since the late 1980s. The network was anxious to keep Leno and, to keep him from going to CBS, had negotiated a contract with him days earlier under which Leno was promised the Tonight show upon Carson's departure. Not until later did the network learn of David Letterman's burning desire to host the program, and of his deep hurt about not being considered for it.

Carson's thirtieth and final season went smoothly, as a more emotional side of him was revealed to audiences. In July 1991 Carson delivered a deeply moving tribute to his son Richard, who had been killed in an auto accident four weeks earlier. In September 1991 the starting time of the program was moved to 11:35 P.M., which allowed local stations to sell more commercial time during their eleven o'clock newscasts. During the show's final weeks a steady stream of celebrities dropped by to express their appreciation, including Bob Hope, Clint Eastwood, Roseanne Arnold, Elizabeth Taylor, Steve Martin, James Stewart, and David Letterman (who thanked Carson "for my career"). Curiously, Jay Leno was not booked on the program. Robin Williams and Bette Midler were Carson's final guests (both appeared 21 May 1992); the very last program featured no guests, as Carson, McMahon and Severinsen reminisced and showed clips from previous shows. The last show reached an audience estimated at 50 million, the largest ever for a late-night program.

VI. The Tonight Show with Jay Leno (25 May 1992– )

Born in New Rochelle, New York, and raised in Andover, Massachusetts, Jay Leno began doing standup comedy while still a student at Emerson College in Boston. In 1974 he moved to Los Angeles and quickly became a headliner at local comedy clubs; by the end of the decade he was traveling all over the country, making a good living doing more than 200 one-night comedy shows a year. He made his first appearance on the Tonight show 12 March 1977; he appeared three more times during the next several months. After his fourth appearance eight years elapsed before he returned to the Tonight show. By 1988, however, he had been named permanent guest host, and in 1991, shortly before Carson announced his upcoming departure, Leno signed a contract with NBC which provided that he would succeed Carson as host. Under the terms of Leno's contract, NBC reacquired ownership of the Tonight show, and Leno's longtime manager, Helen Kushnick, became the show's executive producer.

The Tonight Show with Jay Leno premiered 25 May 1992. At Kushnick's insistence, Leno made no mention of Carson on his first program. The Leno show looked much like the Carson show, although there were a few changes. Leno had no sidekick; announcer Edd Hall rarely appeared onstage. The new band, led by jazz trumpeter Branford Marsalis, veered away from a big band sound and toward a funky, progressive sound. Billy Crystal was Leno's first guest.

The first months of Leno's tenure were rocky. Kushnick, who had had no experience in producing a television show, soon engaged in bitter wars with the two syndicated talk shows which she perceived as Leno's main competition, The Arsenio Hall Show and The Dennis Miller Show. Guests of the Leno show were strongly discouraged from appearing on the rival programs, and those who did sometimes found it impossible to book a subsequent appearance on the Leno show. Kushnick also canceled the taping of an August 1992 program after learning that NBC's coverage of the Republican Convention would run late that evening; the network had only a few minutes to find a Leno show to rebroadcast. In mid-September Kushnick was fired. [Leno would later stipulate that the Kushnick-produced programs were never to be rerun.]

Kushnick's departure did not herald the end of Leno's troubles, however. NBC was anxious to keep both Leno and David Letterman, but Letterman had made known his desire to host the Tonight show. In December 1992 Letterman received an extraordinarily lucrative offer from CBS to host a late-night show; under the terms of his contract with NBC, the network had thirty days to match it. Leno waged an all-out campaign to keep his job, garnering support from NBC local affiliate managers and from friends in the press. Ultimately, he succeeded; though NBC did make an oral counter-proposal to Letterman, it withdrew the offer in early January, freeing Letterman to accept the CBS bid.

For the first eight months of 1993 The Tonight Show with Jay Leno fared well. The Dennis Miller Show had expired in the fall of 1992, and The Arsenio Hall Show's ratings were already beginning to decline. The show's set was redesigned and new theme music was added. The real test came on 30 August 1993, when Late Show with David Letterman premiered on CBS. Letterman's show, which was a ratings success from the outset, proved to be the first serious competitor to the Tonight show. After thirty-nine years, the Tonight show's monopoly of late-night talk had finally come to an end.

Although Letterman's program consistently outdrew Leno's, the Tonight show has remained highly profitable. After taking the show to New York for a week in May 1994, Leno again had the set redesigned so that he would be much closer to the studio audience. It now more closely resembled a comedy club, an environment in which Leno felt at home. By 1995 Leno had begun to narrow the ratings gap between his show and Letterman's.

The new set also moved the band closer to the host's desk. Bandleader Branford Marsalis took a leave of absence in January 1995; his replacement, guitarist Kevin Eubanks, was named permanent bandleader in April.

A full account of the events of 1992 and 1993 involving Jay Leno and David Letterman may be found in Bill Carter's 1994 book, The Late Shift.

THE TONY BENNETT SHOW NBC

11 AUGUST 1956–8 SEPTEMBER 1956 Singer Tony Bennett hosted a summer replacement for The Perry Como Show. An hour series, it also featured the Spellbinders. In 1959 Bennett again replaced Como for the summer: see Perry Presents.

TONY BROWN'S JOURNAL SYNDICATED/PBS

1976–1981 (SYNDICATED); 1982– (PBS) Tony Brown, who had been the host and executive producer of PBS's Black Journal, brought his show to commercial television in 1976. The half-hour weekly series was sponsored by Pepsi-Cola. Each show was devoted to a single topic of interest to black Americans. In 1982 Brown returned to public television.

THE TONY MARTIN SHOW NBC

26 APRIL 1954–27 FEBRUARY 1956 Singer-actor Tony Martin hosted his own fifteen-minute musical show on Monday nights before the network news; also on hand were the Interludes.

TONY ORLANDO AND DAWN CBS

3 JULY 1974–24 JULY 1974; 4 DECEMBER 1974–28 DECEMBER 1976 After a short recording career in 1961 (during which he recorded "Bless You" and "Halfway to Paradise"), Tony Orlando became a record producer and promoter. In 1970, as a favor for a friend, he added the lead vocal to a demonstration record, "Candida"; as the background vocals had already been recorded, Orlando did not meet the other singers—Telma Hopkins and Joyce Vincent Wilson, who called themselves Dawn—until after the record became a national hit. The three recorded several more hits, including "Knock Three Times" and "Tie a Yellow Ribbon," the biggest record of 1973. In 1974 they hosted a four-week summer replacement for The Sonny and Cher Comedy Hour; the series resurfaced later that year in the Wednesday slot previously occupied by Sons and Daughters. During the 1975–1976 season regulars included Alice Nunn, Lonnie Schorr, and Lynn Stuart. In the fall of 1976 the show was retitled Tony Orlando and Dawn Rainbow Hour; the regulars included George Carlin, Susan Lanier, Bob Holt, Edie McClurg, Adam Wade, and Nancy Steen. Saul Ilson and Ernest Chambers were the producers.

THE TONY RANDALL SHOW ABC/CBS

23 SEPTEMBER 1976–10 MARCH 1977 (ABC); 24 SEPTEMBER 1977–25 MARCH 1978 (CBS) Half-hour sitcom starring Tony Randall as Judge Walter Franklin, a widowed Superior Court judge who lived and worked in Philadelphia. Also featured were Devon Scott (1976–1977) and Penny Peyser (1977–1978) as his daughter, Roberta (Bobby); Brad Savage as his son, Oliver; Rachel Roberts as the housekeeper, Bonnie McClellan; Allyn Ann McLerie as his prim and proper secretary, Janet Reubner; Barney Martin as court stenographer Jack Terwilliger, an ex-cop; Zane Lasky as the aggressive but addled Mario Lanza, who worked as a law clerk during the first season and as a prosecutor during the second. In the fall of 1977 Hans Conried was added as Walter's father, Ryan Franklin, and Diana Muldaur was seen as Walter's romantic interest, Judge Eleanor Hooper. Tom Patchett and Jay Tarses produced the series for MTM Enterprises.

TOO CLOSE FOR COMFORT ABC/SYNDICATED

11 NOVEMBER 1980–15 SEPTEMBER 1983 (ABC); 1984–1986 (SYNDICATED) Ted Knight starred in this half-hour sitcom as cartoonist Henry Rush, creator of the "Cosmic Cow" comic strip; Nancy Dussault costarred as his wife, Muriel Rush, a photographer. The Rushes owned a two-family home in San Francisco; after the death of their downstairs tenant (who, it was discovered, had been a transvestite), Henry and Muriel agreed to let their two grown daughters move into the apartment. Also featured were Deborah Van Valkenburgh as the older daughter, Jackie, a brunette who worked in a bank; Lydia Cornell as the younger daughter, Sarah, a blonde who attended San Francisco State; Hamilton Camp (spring 1981) as Henry's publisher, Arthur Wainwright; Jm J. Bullock as Sarah's befuddled college friend, Munroe Ficus; Deena Freeman (1981–1982) as Henry's niece April, an aspiring songwriter; and Audrey Meadows (1982–1983) as Muriel's mother, Iris Martin. During the 1981–1982 season Henry and Muriel learned that they were going to be parents again, after an eighteen-year hiatus; their baby son, Andrew, was born in the fall of 1982 (twins Jason and Eric Willis played the part during the 1982–1983 season; William and Michael Cannon played the role in 1983–1984).

Too Close for Comfort was based on a British series, Keep It in the Family, created by Brian Cooke. Too Close made history in 1983; after its cancellation by ABC, the supplier (Don-El Productions, headed by D. L. Taffner) and the syndicator (Metromedia) announced that new episodes would be produced in 1984, to be shown by individual stations on a syndicated basis. The principal reason for this decision was to make more episodes available by the time reruns were sold to local stations; only sixty-three half-hours had been produced for ABC, a quantity regarded as too small to assure success in syndication. Too Close for Comfort thus became one of only a handful of series to remain in production after cancellation by the network. The first-run episodes starred Knight, Dussault, Van Valkenburgh, Cornell, and Bullock from the old series. The part of Andrew was now played by Joshua Goodwin. Van Valkenburgh and Cornell left after the first forty-two syndicated episodes had been produced. The series carried on for another twenty-two episodes (until Knight's death in 1986) under a new title, The Ted Knight Show. In this batch, Henry, Muriel, and Andrew moved across the bay to Marin County, as Henry bought into a weekly paper, The Marin Bugler. Joining the cast were Pat Carroll as Henry's new partner, Hope Stinson, and Lisa Antille as Lisa Flores, the Rushs' housekeeper.

One of the series' visual gimmicks was Henry Rush's habit of wearing a different college sweatshirt for each episode.

TOO SOMETHING FOX

1 OCTOBER 1995–29 OCTOBER 1995 Another of the several "buddy" sitcoms of the 1995 fall season, this one starred Donal Lardner Ward as Donny Reeves and Eric Schaeffer as Eric MacDougal. Donny, a frustrated photographer, and Eric, a frustrated writer, shared a New York apartment and worked together in the mailroom of Crown, Fink & Wagner, an investment brokerage firm. Also on hand were Lisa Gerstein as their pal, Evelyn, who worked in a boutique; Portia De Rossi as Maria Hunter, a new executive at the firm who became interested in Eric; Mindy Seeger as Daisy, who rented a room from the lads and made her living as a dog-walker; and Charlie Schlatter as Jeffrey Crown, Donny and Eric's insufferable young boss. The series was lifted from Fox's schedule for retooling in October, and the network announced a contest to rename it.

TOO YOUNG TO GO STEADY NBC

14 MAY 1959–25 JUNE 1959 Half-hour sitcom starring Brigid Bazlen as fourteen-year-old Pam Blake, boy-crazy teenager; Donald Cook as her father, attorney Tom Blake; Joan Bennett as her mother, Mary Blake; and Martin Huston as her brother, seventeen-year-old John Blake. David Susskind was executive producer of the series, which was broadcast live from New York.

TOON NIGHT CBS

17 APRIL 1991–3 JULY 1991 A rarity in prime time television, Toon Night was an animated anthology series that presented a mixture of new and vintage cartoons during its brief run. On some weeks two half-hour programs were televised back to back.

TOOTSIE HIPPODROME ABC

3 FEBRUARY 1952–30 JANUARY 1954 This half-hour children's show consisted of variety acts and games for the kids in the studio audience. John Reed King was the first host but was succeeded by Whitey Carson and His Musical Ranch Hands; Mary Reynolds also appeared as Whitey's assistant, Judy Ann. The show began on Sunday mornings and shifted to Saturdays in August of 1953.

TOP CAT ABC

27 SEPTEMBER 1961–26 SEPTEMBER 1962 First introduced as a prime-time series a year after The Flintstones, this cartoon series lasted a season in prime time before reverting to Saturday mornings, where reruns were shown for several years. A Hanna-Barbera production, the series was inspired by The Phil Silvers Show; its central character, Top Cat, was a scheming feline who lived in a Manhattan trash can. Arnold Stang provided his voice. The voices of T. C.'s henchcats were supplied by Marvin Kaplan as Choo-Choo, Maurice Gosfield (better known as Doberman on The Phil Silvers Show) as Benny the Ball, Leo DeLyon as Spook and as The Brain, and John Stephenson as Fancy-Fancy.

TOP COPS CBS

18 JULY 1990–27 AUGUST 1993 An unusual series, Top Cops presented dramatic recreations of actual events in the lives of real police officers. Each story was introduced and narrated by the real-life officer whose story was depicted. Among them was officer Ken Osmond of the Los Angeles Police Department, who is better known as Eddie Haskell on Leave It to Beaver. The series was produced by Sonny Grosso (himself a former New York cop) and Larry Jacobson, who had previously produced Night Heat. Top Cops premiered as an hour series, was trimmed to a half hour in the fall of 1990, and expanded again to an hour early in 1991. Two additional programs were telecast in the fall of 1993 after the series' cancellation.

TOP DOLLAR CBS

Nighttime: 29 MARCH 1958–30 AUGUST 1958; Daytime: 18 AUGUST 1958–23 OCTOBER 1959 Contestants played a word game similar to "ghosts" on this game show, hosted first by Toby Reed, later by Jack Narz. Home viewers who owned dollar bills with serial numbers that matched numbers announced on the show could also win cash by sending the matching bills in to the show.

TOP OF THE HEAP FOX

14 APRIL 1991–21 JULY 1991 Half-hour sitcom set in Chicago. With Joseph Bologna as building superintendent Charlie Verducci; Matt LeBlanc as his son, Vinnie, who landed a job at a country club; Joey Adams as sixteen-year-old Mona Mullins, who lived in the building and adored Vinnie; and Rita Moreno as Vinnie's boss, Alixandra Stone. Charlie Verducci had been introduced on Fox's popular sitcom Married with Children as Al Bundy's lifelong friend. Following Top of the Heap's demise, LeBlanc reprised the role of Vinnie in 1992's Vinnie and Bobby.

TOP OF THE HILL CBS

21 SEPTEMBER 1989–7 DECEMBER 1989 Hour dramatic series about an idealistic young Congressman. With William Katt as Thomas Bell, who won a special election to fill the seat vacated by his ailing father; Dick O'Neill as his father, Pat Bell; and Jordan Baker, Tony Edwards, and Robby Weaver as Thomas's aides, Susan Pengilly, Link, and Mickey. The series was a Stephen J. Cannell Production.

TOP OF THE POPS CBS

25 SEPTEMBER 1987–25 MARCH 1988 Another of CBS's attempts to create a late-night Friday series, Top of the Pops was an hour rock music series divided into two segments. The London segment was hosted by Gary Davies, the Los Angeles segment by Nia Peeples. The series, coproduced by The Entertainment Network, the BBC, and Lionheart Television International, was based on the long-running British series of the same name; reruns of that series, repackaged and introduced by former rocker Dave Clark, popped up on the Disney Channel late in 1989.

TOP OF THE WORLD PBS

17 JANUARY 1982–11 APRIL 1982 British TV personality Eamonn Andrews hosted this unusual quiz show. Each week three contestants competed—one from the United States, one from England, and one from Australia. Each player remained in his or her home country, and the proceedings were broadcast simultaneously by satellite. On the final program the top point-scorers from each nation played for the grand prize, a 1924 Rolls-Royce.

TOP PRO GOLF ABC

6 APRIL 1959–28 SEPTEMBER 1959 Network television's only prime-time golf series, Top Pro Golf presented filmed coverage of eighteen-hole head-to-head matches.

TOP SECRET SYNDICATED

1955 Half-hour adventure series starring Paul Stewart as Professor Brand, an agent for the Bureau of Science Information.

TOP VIEWS IN SPORTS NBC

5 OCTOBER 1949–21 DECEMBER 1949 Fifteen-minute sports newsreel.

TOPPER CBS

9 OCTOBER 1953–30 SEPTEMBER 1955 This sitcom, based on Thorne Smith's novel (which was made into a film in 1937) starred Leo G. Carroll as Cosmo Topper, a staid banker who moved into a new home, only to discover that it was haunted by the ghosts of its previous owners. Also featured were Anne Jeffreys as Marion Kerby, "the ghostess with the mostest," and Robert Sterling as her husband, George Kerby, "that most sporting spirit"; the Kerbys had been killed in a skiing accident while celebrating their fifth anniversary, and their spirits returned to their former home together with that of Neil, the alcoholic St. Bernard who also perished trying to rescue the Kerbys (Neil was played by Buck). The three ghosts could be seen and heard only by Topper, much to the consternation of Topper's wife and his employer. Rounding out the cast were Lee Patrick as Henrietta Topper, Cosmo's wife; Thurston Hall as Topper's officious boss, Mr. Schuyler; Edna Skinner (1953–1954) as the Toppers' maid, Maggie; and Kathleen Freeman (1954–1955) as their maid, Katy. The half-hour series was produced by John W. Loveton and Bernard L. Schubert; it made effective use of trick photography by making the ghosts appear transparent in scenes in which Topper was present with other mortals.

THE TORKELSONS NBC

21 SEPTEMBER 1991–22 MARCH 1992; 2 MAY 1992–20 JUNE 1992 Half-hour sitcom about a single mother raising her five kids in Pyramid Corners, Oklahoma. With Connie Ray as Millicent Torkelson; Olivia Burnette as the oldest kid, fourteen-year-old Dorothy Jane; Elizabeth Poyer (pilot episode) and Anna Slotky as Ruth Ann; Benj Thall (pilot) and Aaron Metchik as Steven Floyd; Lee Norris as Chuckie Lee; Rachel Duncan as the youngest kid, Mary Sue; and William Schallert as kindly Wesley Hodges, who rented a basement room from Millicent. Four members of the cast returned in a revamped sitcom in 1993: see Almost Home.

THE TORTELLIS NBC

22 JANUARY 1987–12 MAY 1987 This half-hour sitcom was spun off from Cheers. It starred Dan Hedaya as TV repairman Nick Tortelli (ex-husband of Cheers' barmaid Carla) who married an ex-showgirl and moved to Las Vegas. Also featured were Jean Kasem as Nick's statuesque but dippy wife, Loretta; Carlene Watkins as Loretta's pragmatic sister, Charlotte Cooper, who lived with them; Timothy Williams as Nick's son, Anthony; Mandy Ingber as Anthony's wife, Annie (Anthony and Annie also lived with Nick and Loretta); and Aaron Moffatt as Charlotte's young son, Mark.

TOTALLY HIDDEN VIDEO FOX

9 JULY 1989–7 AUGUST 1992 Steve Skrovan hosted this prime-time series, which in its early months was little more than a clone of Candid Camera: unsuspecting people, lured into participating in various staged stunts, were taped by a hidden camera. Subsequently, the series borrowed from America's Funniest Home Videos, and solicited submissions from home viewers. The show received much publicity in advance of its premiere when word leaked out that some segments of the pilot had featured actors, rather than innocent citizens; the pilot was subsequently reshot. Skrovan left the series in mid-1990. The show employed guest hosts until January 1991, when Mark Pitta took over as permanent host.

A TOUCH OF GRACE ABC

20 JANUARY 1973–16 JUNE 1973 Based on the British series, For the Love of Ada, this half-hour sitcom starred Shirley Booth as widow Grace Simpson; J. Pat O'Malley as Grace's boyfriend, gravedigger Herbert Morrison; Marian Mercer as Grace's daughter, Myra Bradley; and Warren Berlinger as Myra's husband, Walter Bradley (Grace lived with her daughter and son-in-law). The series was written and produced by Saul Turteltaub and Bernie Orenstein.

TOUCHED BY AN ANGEL CBS

21 SEPTEMBER 1994–25 DECEMBER 1994; 25 FEBRUARY 1995–4 MARCH 1995; 3 JUNE 1995– Reminiscent of Highway to Heaven, this hour dramatic series starred Roma Downey as Monica and Della Reese as Tess; both were angels, Monica had just been promoted from "search and rescue" to "case worker," and Tess was her supervisor who guided her in her efforts to help mortals deal with problems.

TOUGH COOKIES CBS

5 MARCH 1986–23 APRIL 1986 Six-episode half-hour comedy-drama about a Chicago cop assigned to patrol his old neighborhood. With Robby Benson as Detective Cliff Brady; Lainie Kazan as Rita, who owned the Windbreaker bar; Art Metrano as Lieutenant Liverson, his commanding officer; Adam Arkin as local bookie Dan Polchek; Matt Craven as Richie the bartender; Alan North as Father McCaskey; and Elizabeth Peña as Detective Connie Rivera.

TOUR OF DUTY CBS

24 SEPTEMBER 1987–27 AUGUST 1988; 3 JANUARY 1989–25 AUGUST 1990 The first network TV dramatic series set during the Vietnam War, Tour of Duty followed the men of Bravo Company beginning in 1967. The cast included Terence Knox as Sergeant Zeke Anderson; Stephen Caffrey as newly arrived Lieutenant Myron Goldman; Tony Becker as Corporal Danny Percell; Ramon Franco as Private Alberto Ruiz; Stan Foster (1987–1990) as Private (later Sergeant) Marvin Johnson; Joshua Maurer (1987–1988) as Private Roger Horn; Kevin Conroy (1987–1988) as Captain Rusty Wallace; Miguel A. Nunez, Jr. as Private Marcus Taylor; Steve Akahoshi (1987–1988) as the medic, "Doc" Matsuda; and Eric Bruskotter (1987–1988) as Private Baker. The first season's episodes were filmed in Hawaii, and Bravo Company was in the field much of the time. For the second season, production was shifted to California, and Bravo Company was reassigned closer to Saigon; the latter move made it easier to add more women to the cast, both as regulars and as guest stars (by that time, a second Vietnam series, China Beach, had premiered). New faces for 1988 included Dan Gauthier as helicopter pilot Lieutenant Johnny McKay; Kim Delaney as reporter Alex Devlin; and Betsy Brantley as Jennifer Seymour, a psychiatrist who took an interest in Zeke. In the fall of 1989 three new regulars joined: John Dye as the new medic, "Doc" Hock; Kyle Chandler as Griner; and Carl Weathers as Colonel Carl Brewster. Lee Majors signed on in the spring of 1990 as Pop, the weary veteran soldier who had seen it all.

TOWARDS THE YEAR 2000 SYNDICATED

1971 Half-hour documentary series on ecology and the future.

TOWN HALL
See AMERICAN RELIGIOUS TOWN HALL

TOWNSEND TELEVISION FOX
12 SEPTEMBER 1993–26 DECEMBER 1993 Hour Sunday-night comedy-variety series, with Robert Townsend, John Witherspoon, Barry Diamond, Roxanne Beckford, and Paula Jai Parker.

THE TRACER SYNDICATED
1957 Jim Chandler starred in this half-hour series as Regan, the Tracer. The thirty-nine episodes were drawn from the files of the Tracers Company, an organization founded in 1924 by Dan Eisenberg to locate lost heirs and missing beneficiaries. At the end of each show, a list of those persons was broadcast, and several viewers were pleasantly surprised to find themselves on it. The series was produced in New Orleans.

THE TRACEY ULLMAN SHOW FOX
5 APRIL 1987–1 SEPTEMBER 1990 One of the first series on the Fox network, The Tracey Ullman Show was one of its best. Using a sketch format, it showcased the many talents of its star, Tracey Ullman, a British performer who could act, sing, dance and, above all, be funny. Little known in the U. S. before her television show, Ullman had appeared in a few films (including Plenty and Give My Regards to Broad Street) and had recorded a top ten single ("They Don't Know" in 1984). Her series, produced by James L. Brooks (whose TV credits include The Mary Tyler Moore Show), consisted of sketches, usually two or three per half-hour show. Not all were comedic, and many incorporated a rock and roll musical number; Paula Abdul was the choreographer, and funkmaster George Clinton composed the show's theme music. Guest stars sometimes appeared, but most of the load was borne by Ullman and her supporting players: Julie Kavner, Dan Castellaneta, Joe Malone, and Sam McMurray. A master of dialects, Ullman was able to play an exceptionally wide variety of characters; some of her recurring portrayals were Kay, the boring secretary; Francesca, the teenager being raised by her gay father and his lover; and Tina, the New York postal worker.

Between the sketches were short animated pieces, created by Matt Groening, author of the "Life in Hell" comics. Groening soon settled on the animated antics of an offbeat family known as the Simpsons. In 1990 The Simpsons became a separate series (see also that title). In 1988 Tracey Ullman won the first Emmy for the Fox network.

TRACKDOWN CBS
4 OCTOBER 1957–23 SEPTEMBER 1959 Half-hour western starring Robert Culp as Hoby Gilman, a Texas Ranger. Vincent Fennelly produced the series for Four Star Films; several episodes were written by Culp.

TRADE WINDS
See GREAT ESCAPES

TRAFFIC COURT ABC
18 JUNE 1958–30 MARCH 1959; 11 SEPTEMBER 1959–2 OCTOBER 1959 Traffic court cases were reenacted on this half-hour prime-time series. Edgar Allan Jones, Jr., played the judge (Jones also presided over ABC's daytime show, Day in Court), Frank Chandler McClure the bailiff, and Samuel Whitson the chief clerk.

TRAINING DOGS THE WOODHOUSE WAY SYNDICATED
1980 An instructional series on training one's dog would hardly seem likely to be a hit show, but that's exactly what happened in England, where this BBC-produced program zoomed to the top of the ratings. The low-budget show was hosted by trainer Barbara Woodhouse and filmed at Campions, her Hertfordshire home. Each week Woodhouse worked her magic on a group of seemingly incorrigible dogs and their baffled owners. Woodhouse spent almost as much time instructing the humans as she did the canines; "the main thing is to get the owner right for the dog," she explained.

TRANSFORMERS SYNDICATED

1985 Half-hour sci-fi cartoon series, starring the Transformers, robot-like creatures who could transform into various vehicles or weapons (and vice versa), whose long-waged battle with the evil Decepticons was now being fought on Earth. Production of the series was subsidized by Hasbro Toys, which manufactured the Transformers toy line.

THE TRAP CBS

29 APRIL 1950–24 JUNE 1950 Half-hour suspense anthology series produced by Franklin Heller.

TRAPPER JOHN, M.D. CBS

23 SEPTEMBER 1979–4 SEPTEMBER 1986 On this hour medical drama Pernell Roberts starred as Dr. John (Trapper) McIntyre, who worked at San Francisco Memorial Hospital; the character had been featured in *M*A*S*H,* the sitcom set during the Korean War some twenty-seven years earlier. Also featured were Gregory Harrison as Dr. G. Alonzo (Gonzo) Gates, a brash young physician who had spent three years in a Vietnam MASH unit and who had heard of the legendary Trapper John during his tour of duty; Mary McCarty (1979–1980) as Nurse Clara "Starch" Willoughby; Charles Siebert as Dr. Stanley Riverside II, chief of emergency services; Christopher Norris (1979–1985) as Nurse Gloria "Ripples" Brancusi (after the first few seasons, the nickname was dropped); Brian Mitchell as Dr. Justin "Jackpot" Jackson; and Simon Scott (1979–1985) as administrator Arnold Slocum. Mary McCarty died after the first season; on the show it was explained that she had gotten married and left the hospital. Madge Sinclair joined the cast as Nurse Ernestine Shoop, a health nut. Marcia Rodd was added in 1982 as a dentist, Dr. E. J. Willoughby, who married Dr. Riverside. Also featured occasionally was Jessica Walter as Trapper John's ex-wife, Melanie McIntyre. Timothy Busfield joined the cast in the fall of 1984 as Trapper John's son, J. T., a doctor who was interning at his father's hospital. Three additional regulars were added in the fall of 1985: Lorna Luft as Nurse Libby Kegler, Janis Paige as administrator Catherine Hackett, and Beau Gravitte as surgeon Andy Pagano. Gregory Harrison left the show during the 1985–1986 season; his character, Gonzo, had suffered a stroke, terminating his surgical career. Gonzo met and married Fran Brennan (played by Andrea Marcovicci), a patient with multiple sclerosis. Frank Glicksman and Don Brinkley, who developed the series, served as its respective executive producer and producer.

TRAPS CBS

31 MARCH 1994–27 APRIL 1994 Although father-and-son teams have shown up in TV crime shows before, Traps skipped a generation, teaming up a grandfather and grandson as the crimefighting good guys. The hour series featured George C. Scott as Joe Trapchek, retired chief of homicide for the Seattle police department, whose son, also a cop, had been killed in the line of duty; Dan Cortese as his grandson, Chris Trapchek, a young cop who often sought the old man's advice on cases; Bill Nunn as Lieutenant Jack Cloud, Chris's partner (he'd also been Chris's dad's partner); Piper Laurie as Joe's wife, Cora Trapchek, who was beginning to suffer from Alzheimer's Disease; and Lindsay Crouse as Commander Laura Parkhurst, the current homicide chief. Filmed in Vancouver, the series was created by Stephen J. Cannell.

TRASH OR TREASURE? DUMONT

1 OCTOBER 1952–27 SEPTEMBER 1953 A panel show similar to What's It Worth?, this half-hour show was hosted by Sigmund Rothschild and Nelson Case, later by Rothschild and Bill Wendell. Each week people brought various antiques to the show for Rothschild's expert appraisal. The show's title changed to Treasure Hunt in April.

TRAUMA CENTER ABC

22 SEPTEMBER 1983–8 DECEMBER 1983 This hour medical drama was reminiscent of Emergency!, which had been a hit series a decade earlier. The "trauma center" was the Medstar Unit of McKee General Hospital, a facility specially designed to treat accident victims during the so-called "golden hour" immediately following the trauma, when the victim's chances of recovery are usually the highest. The cast included James Naughton as Dr. Michael "Cutter" Royce, a surgeon; Wendie Malick as Dr. Brigette Blaine, a surgeon; Dorian Harewood as Dr. Nate "Skate" Baylor, also a surgeon; Jack Bannon as Buck Williams, the helicopter pilot; Lou Ferrigno (late of The Incredible Hulk) as paramedic John Six; Alfie Wise as Six's partner, paramedic Sidney "Hatter" Patelli; Eileen Heckart as Nurse Decker, the head nurse; Bill Randolph as Dr. "Beaver" Bouvier; Jayne Modean as Nurse Hooter; and Arlen Dean Snyder as Dr. Charles Sternhauser, the hospital administrator.

TRAUMA CENTER SYNDICATED

1994– The second series with this title was a weekly half-hour documentary series taped at various hospital emergency rooms and similar facilities.

TRAVELS PBS

2 OCTOBER 1989–18 DECEMBER 1989 The series' title succinctly described it: a twelve-week anthology of travels. On the premiere, John Heminway journeyed to the South Atlantic island of Tristan da Cunha, the world's most remote inhabited place.

THE TRAVELS OF JAIMIE McPHEETERS ABC

15 SEPTEMBER 1963–15 MARCH 1964 Based on the novel by Robert Lewis Taylor, this hour-long western told the story of a twelve-year-old boy from Kentucky who joined a wagon train with his father in 1849. Featured were Kurt Russell as Jaimie McPheeters; Dan O'Herlihy as his father, Doc Sardius McPheeters; Michael Witney as Coulter, the wagonmaster; Donna Anderson as Jenny; James Westerfield as Murrel; Charles Bronson as Murdock; Mark Allen as Matt Kissel; Meg Wyllie as Mrs. Kissel; the singing Osmond Brothers as The Kissel Boys; Sandy Kenyon as Baggott; Hedley Mattingly as Coe; and Vernett Allen as Othello.

TREASURE SYNDICATED

1958 Bill Burrud hosted this half-hour documentary series, presenting films about buried treasure, lost artifacts, and assorted searches for riches.

TREASURE HUNT ABC/NBC/SYNDICATED

7 SEPTEMBER 1956–24 MAY 1957 (ABC); 12 AUGUST 1957–4 DECEMBER 1959 (NBC); 1974–1977 (SYNDICATED) The network versions of this half-hour game show were hosted by Jan Murray. Each day two contestants competed in a question-and-answer segment; the winner then chose one of thirty numbered "treasure boxes," and took home the contents. The show began on ABC as a prime-time series before moving to NBC, where it enjoyed a two-year daytime run as well as a brief prime-time run early in 1958. In 1974 The New Treasure Hunt emerged, hosted by Geoff Edwards; this slow-moving and sometimes cruelly suspenseful version (a Chuck Barris Production) eliminated the quiz portion and featured two treasure-box give-away segments, with a top prize of $25,000.

TREASURE ISLE ABC

18 DECEMBER 1967–27 DECEMBER 1968 This elaborate daytime game show was played on a specially constructed lagoon at the Colonnades Beach Hotel in Palm Beach Shores, Florida. In the first round of the game, married couples paddled around in rafts, picking up pieces of a giant jigsaw puzzle floating off "Puzzle Isle." After putting together the puzzle, the couples deciphered the clue contained in the puzzle and proceeded to Treasure Isle, where they searched for buried treasure. John Bartholomew Tucker hosted the half-hour show, which was produced and directed by Paul Alter for John D. MacArthur, the Florida millionaire who owned the Colonnades Beach Hotel and built the lagoon.

TREASURE QUEST ABC

24 APRIL 1949–26 AUGUST 1949 John Weigel hosted this half-hour game show on which contestants could win a trip by answering questions about geography.

TREASURY MEN IN ACTION ABC/NBC

11 SEPTEMBER 1950–4 DECEMBER 1950 (ABC); 5 APRIL 1951–1 APRIL 1954 (NBC); 7 OCTOBER 1954–30 SEPTEMBER 1955 (ABC) Half-hour crime show that chronicled the exploits of agents for the United States Treasury Department, starring Walter Greaza as The Chief. Everett Rosenthal produced the series, and David Pressman directed it for Prokter Television Enterprises.

TRIAL AND ERROR CBS

15 MARCH 1988–29 MARCH 1988 This sitcom about two Chicano roommates living in Los Angeles was gone after only three episodes. Featured were Eddie Velez as lawyer John Hernandez, the only Hispanic at his law firm; Paul Rodriguez as T-shirt salesman Tony Rivera; Stephen Elliott as John's boss, Edmund Kittle; Debbie Shapiro as John's secretary, Rhonda; John deLancie as one of John's co-workers, Bob Adams; and Susan Saldivar as Lisa.

TRIAL BY JURY SYNDICATED

1989–1990 Half-hour daily courtroom drama series, hosted by Raymond Burr, who played TV's most famous lawyer, Perry Mason. The series' executive producer was Dick Clark, who played the guilty party on the last episode of the old Perry Mason series, "The Case of the Final Fade-Out."

TRIALS OF O'BRIEN CBS

18 SEPTEMBER 1965–27 MAY 1966 Peter Falk starred in this hour-long dramatic series as New York lawyer Daniel J. O'Brien, a shrewd defense attorney. Also featured were Joanna Barnes as O'Brien's ex-wife, Katie; Elaine Stritch as Miss G., O'Brien's secretary; Ilka Chase as Margaret, Katie's mother; Dolph Sweet as Lieutenant Garrison; David Burns as The Great McGonigle, a legendary con man who was a crony of O'Brien's. Richard Alan Simmons was executive producer of the series for Filmways. Among the guest stars who appeared were: Alan Alda ("Picture Me a Murder," 27 November), Faye Dunaway (in her first major TV role, "The 10-Foot, 6-Inch Pole," 14 January), Frank Langella ("How Do You Get to Carnegie Hall," 13 November), and Tony Roberts ("Charlie Has All the Luck," 20 November).

THE TRIALS OF ROSIE O'NEILL CBS

17 SEPTEMBER 1990–9 MAY 1992 Barney Rosenzweig, the guiding light of Cagney & Lacey, developed this series for Cagney & Lacey costar Sharon Gless. Here, Gless played Fiona "Rosie" O'Neill, a Beverly Hills attorney who, on the heels of a painful divorce, quit her job to go to work for the Los Angeles Public Defenders. Also featured were Dorian Harewood as Hank Mitchell, her openly cynical officemate; Ron Rifkin as Ben Meyer, their supervisor; Georgann Johnson as Rosie's mother, Charlotte O'Neill; Lisa Banes as Rosie's married sister, Doreen Morrison; Lisa Rieffel as Kim Ginty, daughter of her ex-husband; Bridget Gless (the star's niece) as office aide Barbara Navis; and Elaine Kagan as the receptionist, Carole Kravitz. Ed Asner joined the cast in the fall of 1991 as politically conservative investigator Walter Kovatch. Each episode opened with Rosie in the office of her psychiatrist (played by Rosenzweig; he and Gless were married in 1991). Rosie's first line on the premiere was one of television's most memorable openings: "I'm thinking about maybe having my tits done."

TRIALWATCH NBC

28 JANUARY 1991–26 JULY 1991 The American legal system was the focus of this half-hour daytime series, which presented excerpts from actual trials, together with interviews of attorneys, litigants, and witnesses. Robb Weller and attorney Lisa Specht coanchored.

TRIBECA FOX

23 March 1993–4 May 1993; 25 July 1993–5 September 1993 Stylish hour dramatic anthology series set in the lower Manhattan neighborhood of Tribeca. Providing continuity from hour to hour were two regulars: Philip Bosco as cafe owner Harry Yeshosky, and Joe Morton as mounted policeman Carlton Thomas. The series's executive producers were David J. Burke, Jane Rosenthal, and Robert DeNiro.

TRIPLE THREAT SYNDICATED

1988 Jim Lange hosted this game show on which two three-member teams competed in a pop music quiz. Each team was comprised of a contestant, a celebrity, and the celebrity's child.

TRIVIA TRAP ABC

8 October 1984–5 April 1985 Bob Eubanks hosted this daytime game show on which two three-person teams competed by answering various multiple-choice general knowledge questions. On each show the members of one team were over thirty years of age, and the members of the other team were under thirty.

TROLLKINS CBS

12 September 1981–4 September 1982 Half-hour Saturday-morning cartoon series about a bunch of dwarflike creatures who lived in Trolltown, a city in the woods. Trollkins should not be confused with Smurfs, NBC's 1981 cartoon series about a group of small sylvan souls.

THE TROUBLE WITH FATHER

See THE STU ERWIN SHOW

THE TROUBLE WITH LARRY CBS

25 August 1993–8 September 1993 Fresh from Perfect Strangers, Bronson Pinchot stumbled into this ill-conceived sitcom which lasted only three episodes. He starred as Larry Burton, who'd suffered the misfortune of being dragged off by a troupe of baboons on his wedding night; he returned home ten years later to find that his wife was happily remarried. Also featured were Shanna Reed as his wife, Sally Flatt; Perry King as her current husband, Boyd Flatt; Courteney Cox as Sally's sister, Gabriella Easden, who ran an art gallery with Sally; and Alex McKenna as Sally's daughter, Lindsay (Larry was actually her father). The show was the first fatality of the 1993–1994 season.

TROUBLESHOOTERS NBC

11 September 1959–17 June 1960 Half-hour adventure series starring Keenan Wynn as Kodiak and former Olympic decathlon champion Bob Mathias as Dugan, a pair of construction engineers who traveled the world troubleshooting problems for their company. Also featured were Bob Fortier as Scotty; Carey Loftin as Skinner; Chet Allen as Slats; and Bob Harris as Jim. The series was the first network show supplied by United Artists.

TRUE BLUE NBC

3 December 1989–19 January 1990; 28 June 1991–5 July 1991 Hour cop show focusing on the members of the New York Police Department's Emergency Services Unit. With Joe Lisi as Captain Motta; Leo Burmester as Red Tollin; Grant Show as Casey Pierce; Timothy Van Patten as Wojeski; Eddie Velez as Avila; Darnell Williams as Odom; Nestor Serrano as Geno; Dick Latessa as Mike; John Bolger as Bobby; Ally Walker as Jessy; and Elya Baskin as Yuri, a Russian cabbie. Filmed on location, the series was one of two midseason shows dealing with the N.Y.P.D.: see also H.E.L.P. The two-hour TV-movie pilot was rerun on 22 April 1990.

TRUE COLORS FOX

2 September 1990–23 August 1992 Half-hour sitcom about a white woman and a black man, each with children, who married each other. With Stephanie Faracy as Ellen Freeman, a kindergarten teacher; Frankie R. Faison (1990–1991) and Cleavon Little (1991–1992) as her husband, Ron Freeman, a dentist; Claude Brooks as Ron's son Terry; Adam Jeffries as Ron's son Lester; Brigid Conley Walsh as Ellen's daughter, Katie Davis; and Nancy Walker as Ellen's mother, Sara Bower, who didn't approve of the marriage. The series was set in Baltimore, Maryland.

TRUE CONFESSIONS SYNDICATED

1986 The stories on this five-day-a-week half-hour dramatic anthology series were drawn from those appearing in True Confessions magazine. Bill Bixby hosted the series.

TRUE DETECTIVES CBS

29 MARCH 1991–12 JULY 1991 Gregory Harrison hosted this prime time series, on which the exploits of real and amateur detectives were re-created. The program, which was introduced as a special on 28 December 1990, was aired in both a thirty- and sixty-minute format.

TRUE STORY NBC

16 MARCH 1957–9 SEPTEMBER 1961 Kathi Norris hosted this half-hour anthology series consisting of stories ostensibly based on actual incidents. Broadcast at noon on Saturdays, the show was originally aired live and later shifted to videotape.

TRUMP CARD SYNDICATED

1990–1991 Half-hour daily game show, taped at the Trump Castle Casino Resort in Atlantic City, New Jersey. Former pro footballer and sportscaster Jimmy Cefalo was the host of the series, on which three contestants competed in a bingo-type game by answering questions.

TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES CBS/NBC/SYNDICATED

7 SEPTEMBER 1950–7 JUNE 1951 (CBS); 14 JANUARY 1952–16 MAY 1952 (NBC); 18 MAY 1954–28 SEPTEMBER 1956 (NBC); 31 DECEMBER 1956–24 SEPTEMBER 1965 (NBC); 1966–1974 (SYNDICATED)

THE NEW TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES SYNDICATED

1977 One of broadcasting's most durable programs, Truth or Consequences ran seventeen years on radio and (with some interruptions) twenty-seven years on TV. The raucous half-hour game show was created by Ralph Edwards in 1940 and was based on a parlor game: contestants who failed to answer a question before the buzzer sounded (the buzzer, nicknamed Beulah, usually went off a fraction of a second after the question was asked) were forced to pay the consequences. Most consequences involved the performance of stunts of all description, much to the delight of the studio audiences. Edwards, who later created This Is Your Life, hosted the radio version for several years as well as the first TV versions of Truth or Consequences. The very first TV version of the show was introduced briefly in New York in 1941. Nine years later the network version came along. It was first seen Thursday nights on CBS for one season, and in 1952, it was a daytime entry on NBC, where it was also known as The Ralph Edwards Show. When the show returned to NBC's schedule in 1954, as a prime-time series, Jack Bailey was the host. Bob Barker succeeded him at the end of 1956, when the show began a nine-year daytime run on NBC (a nighttime version also popped up on NBC early in 1958, hosted by Steve Dunne); Barker continued to host the show during its eight-year syndicated run, which began in 1966. The series was revived in 1977 and was shown under the title The New Truth or Consequences, with Bob Hilton as host.

TRYING TIMES PBS

19 OCTOBER 1987–7 DECEMBER 1987; 12 OCTOBER 1989–19 FEBRUARY 1990 A half-hour comedy anthology series.

TUCKER'S WITCH CBS

6 OCTOBER 1982–10 NOVEMBER 1982; 31 MARCH 1983–8 AUGUST 1983 An hour crime show with a twist, Tucker's Witch starred Tim Matheson and Catherine Hicks as Rick and Amanda Tucker, a husband-and-wife detective team. The twist was that Amanda was a witch, whose clairvoyant and telekinetic powers were impressive but not infallible. Also featured were Alfre Woodard as Marsha, their secretary; Barbara Barrie as Ellen Hobbes, Amanda's live-in mother; Bill Morey as Lieutenant Fisk of the Los Angeles Police Department; and Dickens, Amanda's cat. The show was to have been titled The Good Witch of Laurel Canyon, and the pilot was filmed with Kim Cattrall and Art Hindle in the starring roles; the network was dissatisfied, and both performers were replaced.

TUGBOAT ANNIE SYNDICATED

1958 Half-hour sitcom starring Minerva Urecal as Annie Brennan, skipper of a tug in the Northwest; Walter Sande costarred as Captain Horatio Bullwinkle, Annie's boss.

TURBO-TEEN ABC

8 SEPTEMBER 1984–31 AUGUST 1985 Saturday morning cartoon show about a teenager, Bret Matthews, who turned into an automobile when he became hot. Bret and his pals, Alex and Patty, worked for Dr. Chase.

TURN TO A FRIEND ABC

5 OCTOBER 1953–31 DECEMBER 1953 Cast from the same mold as Queen for a Day and Strike It Rich, Turn to a Friend was a half-hour game show on which contestants related heart-breaking tales of woe and misfortune; at the end of the show, the studio audience selected the most deserving recipient, who was then showered with gifts. Dennis James hosted the half-hour show.

TURNABOUT NBC

26 JANUARY 1979–30 MARCH 1979 Half-hour sitcom about a husband and wife who woke up one morning to find themselves occupying each other's bodies. With John Schuck as Sam Alston, a sportswriter; Sharon Gless as Penny Alston, vice-president of a cosmetics firm; Richard Stahl and Bobbi Jordan as neighbors Jack and Judy Overmeyer; James Sikking as Penny's boss, Geoffrey St. James; and Bruce Kirby as Al Brennan, Sam's boss. Executive producer: Sam Denoff for Universal TV.

TURNING POINT ABC

9 MARCH 1994–28 DECEMBER 1994 Hour prime-time newsmagazine anchored (separately) by Diane Sawyer, Peter Jennings, and Barbara Walters. Sawyer interviewed mass murderer Charles Manson and two of his accomplices on the premiere in March. The series was preceded by a "Turning Point" special on 27 July 1993, and resurfaced as specials beginning in May 1995.

TURN-ON ABC

5 FEBRUARY 1969 Television's most notorious flop, Turn-On was canceled after one outing. Produced by George Schlatter and Ed Friendly, the producers of Laugh-In, and by Digby Wolfe, a Laugh-In production executive, it was a half-hour of skits and blackouts, bridged together not by a host or narrator, but by electronic music. Most of the skits were overly suggestive (at least by 1969 standards)—one featured a vending machine that dispensed birth control pills, and the longest segment consisted of the word "SEX" flashing on the screen while Tim Conway and Bonnie Boland mugged beneath. The pilot for the show had been developed in 1968; both CBS and NBC turned it down, but ABC picked it up, scheduling it to replace the Wednesday broadcast of Peyton Place. Before the first Turn-On was over, however, most ABC affiliates had been swamped with telephone calls, virtually all of them negative. By February 7, seventy-five affiliates had dropped the show, and by the end of the week Turn-On had been turned off by the network. The cast on the lone broadcast included, in addition to Tim Conway (the guest star) and Bonnie Boland, Hamilton

Camp, Teresa Graves, Ken Greenwald, Maxine Greene, Debbie Macomber, Maura McGiveney, Chuck McCann, Carlo Manteca, Alma Murphy, Cecile Ozorio, Bob Staats, Mel Stuart, and Carol Wayne. Mark Warren directed the show, and Bill Melendez Associates provided the animation.

TWELVE O'CLOCK HIGH ABC

18 SEPTEMBER 1964–13 JANUARY 1967 Another of the several World War II shows of the mid-1960s, this one told the stories of the 918th Flyer Squadron based in England. Featured were Robert Lansing (1964–1965) as Brigadier General Frank Savage, who was killed off after the first season (it was reported that Lansing was upset by the network's decision to change the show's time slot and to lessen his role); Lew Gallo (1964–1965) as Major Joe Cobb; Paul Burke as Colonel Joseph Gallagher; Frank Overton as Major Harvey Stovall; Barney Phillips as Major Doc Kaiser; Chris Robinson (1965–1967) as Sergeant Komansky; Andrew Duggan (1965–1967) as Brigadier General Edward Britt; John Larkin (1964–1965) as Major General Wiley Crowe; and Larry Gates as Johnny. The hour series, adapted from the 1949 film, was a Quinn Martin Production.

THE TWENTIETH CENTURY CBS

20 OCTOBER 1957–7 SEPTEMBER 1969 Walter Cronkite hosted this Sunday-evening documentary series, which presented filmed reports on a wide variety of historical and scientific subjects. In January of 1967 the show's title was changed to The Twenty-First Century.

THE 20TH CENTURY-FOX HOUR CBS

5 OCTOBER 1955–18 SEPTEMBER 1957 One of the first television ventures by 20th Century-Fox, this hour dramatic anthology series alternated on Wednesdays with The U.S. Steel Hour for two seasons. Peter Packer produced the series, and Joseph Cotten hosted it during the first season.

TWENTY QUESTIONS NBC/ABC/DUMONT

26 NOVEMBER 1949–24 DECEMBER 1949 (NBC); 17 MARCH 1950–29 JUNE 1951 (ABC); 6 JULY 1951–5 APRIL 1954 (DUMONT); 6 JULY 1954–3 MAY 1955 (ABC) A game show based on the old parlor game, Twenty Questions began on radio in 1946 and first came to TV three years later. The object of the game was for a celebrity panel to identify an object by asking up to twenty questions about it; the only clue given to the panel was whether the object was "animal, vegetable, or mineral." Bill Slater hosted the NBC and DuMont versions of the show, Jay Jackson the ABC version. Regular panelists included Fred Van Deventer, Florence Rinard (Van Deventer's wife), Herb Polesie, and Johnny McPhee.

20/20 ABC

6 JUNE 1978– An hour newsmagazine, 20/20 is ABC's answer to CBS's 60 Minutes. Poorly organized, it got off to a rocky start—the original hosts, TV newcomers Harold Hayes and Robert Hughes, were axed after the first show, and Hugh Downs was brought in the following week. After the first show, an uneven blend of investigative reports and humorous features, interspersed with definitions of polysyllabic words, 20/20 settled down under Downs to a more straightforward presentation of investigative and background reports. The show was scheduled weekly during the summer of 1978 and switched to a monthly slot in the fall before returning to a weekly berth. Barbara Walters became Downs's coanchor in the fall of 1984. Regular contributors have included Tom Jarriel, Sylvia Chase, Geraldo Rivera, Thomas Hoving, Bob Brown, John Stossel, Lynn Sherr, and Stone Phillips. Rivera resigned from ABC News in 1986 in protest over the network's decision to kill a 1985 story (by another reporter) on Marilyn Monroe's love life. 20/20 settled into a Friday night time slot in 1987, and its popularity began to grow. It televised footage of an exorcism in the spring of 1991, and cracked Nielsen's top twenty for the first time the following season (its fourteenth), finishing 20th.

TWENTY-ONE NBC
12 SEPTEMBER 1956–16 OCTOBER 1958 One of TV's most famous big-money, prime-time game shows, Twenty-One was NBC's answer to CBS's The $64,000 Question. It was hosted by Jack Barry, who created the series with his longtime partner, Dan Enright. Each week two contestants competed; the object of the game was to score twenty-one points as quickly as possible. Each contestant was placed in an isolation booth on stage and could choose a question from an announced category; within the category the questions were rated for difficulty from one to eleven points. Thus, a contestant who correctly answered a ten-point and an eleven-point question in succession was assured of at least a tie. The money was big—Charles Van Doren, who defeated Herbert Stempel in 1957, won $129,000 in fourteen appearances (Van Doren was beaten by Vivian Nearing). The biggest winner of all was Elfreda Von Nardroff, who went home with $253,500 after twenty-one appearances. Contestant Stempel may have had the last laugh, however, as it was he who revealed that Van Doren had been given some of the answers before air time (it was reported that Stempel was an unpopular contestant). Stempel's allegations, together with charges concerning other game shows, precipitated the cancellation of Twenty-One, Dotto, The $64,000 Challenge, and The $64,000 Question—all in the fall of 1958. Jack Barry, Twenty-One's host and creator, did not work again in national television for a decade. The rigging scandal was the subhect of the 1994 motion picture "Quiz Show."

21 BEACON STREET NBC/ABC
2 JULY 1959–24 SEPTEMBER 1959 (NBC); 27 DECEMBER 1959–20 MARCH 1960 (ABC) Set in Boston, this half-hour crime show starred Dennis Morgan as private eye Dennis Chase; Joanna Barnes as Lola, his confederate; Brian Kelly as Brian, their legman, a recent law school graduate; James Maloney as Jim, an expert machinist who worked with them. More than most of the detective shows of the late 1950s, 21 Beacon Street emphasized gadgetry. The series was introduced as a summer replacement for The Tennessee Ernie Ford Show on NBC, and later turned up on ABC.

21 JUMP STREET FOX/SYNDICATED
12 APRIL 1987–17 SEPTEMBER 1990 (FOX); 1990–1991 (SYNDICATED) An updated version of The Mod Squad, 21 Jump Street epitomized the Fox network's strategy of attracting younger viewers. It featured a youthful group of big-city cops who could pass as high school (or later as college) students. With teen heartthrob Johnny Depp as Tommy Hanson; Holly Robinson as Judy Hoffs; Dustin Nguyen as H. T. (for Harry Truman) Ioki; Peter DeLuise as Doug Penhall; Frederic Forrest (1987) as the boss, Captain Jenko; and Steven Williams (1987– ) as the new boss, Captain Adam Fuller. In the fall of 1988 Richard Grieco joined the cast as the new member, Dennis Booker; a year later he was given his own series (see Booker). Jeff Yagher had originally been cast as Hanson, but just before production got underway he was replaced by Depp. 21 Jump Street holds the distinction of being the first series on the Fox network ever to beat an ABC, CBS or NBC series in its time slot; this achievement occurred on 23 August 1987, when the series finished third. After three and one-half seasons on Fox, the series moved into first-run syndication in 1990, with DeLuise, Robinson and Williams from the old cast, joined by Michael DeLuise (Peter's brother) as Joey Penhall (Doug's brother), Michael Bendetti as Mac McCann, David Barry Gray as Garrett, and Alexandra Powers as Kati Rocky.

26 MEN SYNDICATED
1957 Half-hour western about the Arizona Rangers, a group of law officers whose membership was limited to twenty-six. Featured were Tris Coffin as Captain Tom Rynning; Kelo Henderson as Ranger Clint Travis. Russell Hayden produced the series. The force was established in 1901 by the Arizona Territorial Legislature.

THE TWILIGHT ZONE CBS

2 OCTOBER 1959–14 SEPTEMBER 1962; 3 JANUARY 1963–18 SEPTEMBER 1964 Television's most popular science fiction anthology series was created and hosted by Rod Serling. One of the medium's most gifted writers, Serling had previously won Emmys for "Patterns," broadcast on Kraft Television Theatre in 1955, and "Requiem for a Heavyweight," shown on Playhouse 90 in 1956. On The Twilight Zone, Serling introduced his audiences to "a fifth dimension, beyond that which is known to man." [Serling stated that he had made up the term "twilight zone," and had later learned that the phrase had an aeronautical connotation—referring to the moment when an aircraft descending on its final landing approach loses sight of the horizon. The term also had a legal connotation, having been used in arguments before the U.S. Supreme Court as early as 1911.] The trademarks of the series were Serling's introductions (usually given about a minute into each episode) and surprise endings. Serling himself wrote eighty-nine of the 151 shows; Charles Beaumont and Richard Matheson also wrote several each, and seven were contributed by Earl Hamner, creator of The Waltons. All of the shows were filmed in black and white. The Twilight Zone began as a half-hour series and was dropped after three seasons; it was brought back by popular demand early in 1963, but in an hour format. The eighteen hour episodes were not as well liked, and the show reverted to a half hour for its final season. Among the best-known episodes were: "Where Is Everybody?" with Earl Holliman (2 October 1959); "People Are Alike All Over," with Roddy McDowall (25 March 1960); "The Mighty Casey," with Jack Warden (17 June 1960); "The Hitch-Hiker," with Inger Stevens (12 August 1960); "The Silence," with Franchot Tone (25 April 1961); "Nothing in the Dark," with Gladys Cooper and Robert Redford (5 January 1962); and "The Dummy," with Cliff Robertson (4 May 1962).

Serling continued to write occasional works for television, and in 1970 he returned as the host of Night Gallery. In 1975 Serling died at the age of 50. The Twilight Zone continued to prosper in reruns, achieving cult status by the end of the 1970s. A theatrical film version was released in 1983. Titled Twilight Zone—The Movie, it comprised four stories (each done by a different director). Three of the four were remakes of TV episodes—"Kick the Can" (directed by Steven Spielberg), "It's a Good Life" (directed by Joe Dante), and "Nightmare at 20,000 Feet" (directed by George Miller)—while the fourth, directed by John Landis, was based on the TV episode "A Quality of Mercy."

On 19 May 1994 CBS televised two previously-unseen Serling stories as "Twilight Zone: Rod Serling's Lost Classics." One, "The Theater," was based on a Serling treatment, and starred Amy Irving and Gary Cole. The other, "Where the Dead Are," featured a Serling script and starred Jack Palance, Patrick Bergin, and Jenna Stern.

THE TWILIGHT ZONE CBS/SYNDICATED

27 SEPTEMBER 1985–18 OCTOBER 1986; 4 DECEMBER 1986–18 DECEMBER 1986; 10 JULY 1987–31 JULY 1987 (CBS); 1988 (SYNDICATED) After an absence of two decades, a new version of The Twilight Zone came to CBS in the fall of 1985. The series was now in an hour format, and of course in color; new theme music was supplied by the Grateful Dead. Philip DeGuere was executive producer, and sci-fi author Harlan Ellison served as creative consultant. Each hour consisted of two or three separate stories of varying lengths; there were no remakes of old Twilight Zone stories. There was no on-screen host, although Charles Aidman (who had starred in two of the old Twilight Zone episodes) was the narrator. The show performed reasonably well in its first four or five outings (perhaps as baby-boomers sampled the new show), but then went into a ratings decline from which it never recovered. Network interference also affected the show; creative consultant Ellison quit when the network refused to air "Nackles," a dark Christmas tale. The series was renewed for a second season, but left the air in October of 1986. It returned briefly in December of that year, trimmed to a half-hour, and surfaced briefly again, as an hour show, in July of 1987. In 1988

CBS, which owned the series, entered into a joint venture with MGM/UA to produce thirty new half-hour episodes which, when added to the 1985–1987 package, would provide enough shows for syndication. The thirty new programs were filmed in Toronto. Robin Ward was the narrator, and his voice was dubbed over Aidman's when the 1985–1987 episodes were edited for inclusion in the new package.

TWIN PEAKS ABC

8 APRIL 1990–23 MAY 1990; 11 AUGUST 1990–16 FEBRUARY 1991; 28 MARCH 1991–18 APRIL 1991 The heavily hyped prime-time serial created by David Lynch and Mark Frost became an instant cult show. It was set in Twin Peaks, a logging town in the Pacific Northwest where a teenage girl had been murdered. Who killed Laura Palmer? That was the question that F.B.I. agent Dale Cooper (and the viewing audience) tried to answer. During the course of the first eight episodes, Cooper gradually learned that much was lurking beneath the placid exterior of Twin Peaks: sex and violence, of course, but also dreams and screams, llamas and log ladies, coffee and doughnuts.

Twin Peaks was the first TV venture for David Lynch, who had made his mark in such films as Eraserhead and Blue Velvet, in which he explored the darker side of human nature. Mark Frost, his coexecutive producer, had previously worked on Hill Street Blues. Lynch directed the two-hour premiere and one other early episode, establishing the series' cinematic look, with its sepia tones, unusual closeups, and distinctive score (by Angelo Badalamenti); allusions to other films also permeated the episodes.

The cast included some newcomers and several others who rarely appeared on television: Kyle MacLachlan (who had starred in Blue Velvet) as Dale Cooper, the clairvoyant, coffee-swigging F.B.I. agent who dictated his thoughts into a hand-held microcassette recorder; Michael Ontkean (of The Rookies) as Harry S Truman, Twin Peaks' sheriff; Madchen Amick as Shelly Johnson, the abused wife of a trucker; Dana Ashbrook as high school student Bobby Briggs, Laura's boyfriend; Richard Beymer as Benjamin Horne, owner of the Great Northern Hotel (and much of the rest of the town); Sherilyn Fenn as his manipulative daughter, Audrey; Warren Frost as kindly Dr. Hayward; Lara Flynn Boyle as his daughter, Donna, Laura's best friend; Peggy Lipton (of Mod Squad fame) as Norma Jennings, who ran the Double R Diner; James Marshall as James Hurley; Everett McGill as his uncle, Ed Hurley, who ran a gas station; Ray Wise as Leland Palmer, Laura's father; Eric Da Re as the trucker Leo Johnson; Joan Chen as widow Jocelyn "Josie" Packard, who owned a half interest in the local sawmill; Piper Laurie as her sister-in-law, Catherine Martell, who owned the other half interest; Russ Tamblyn as psychiatrist Dr. Lawrence Jacoby; Kimmy Robertson as Lucy Moran, dispatcher at the sheriff's office; Harry Goaz as lachrymose deputy sheriff Andy Brennan; Michael Horse as deputy Tommy "Hawk" Hill; and Sheryl Lee as Laura Palmer (who appeared in dream sequences and flashbacks) and as her cousin, Madeleine.

The two-hour premiere episode was released as a theatrical film overseas, with an eighteen-minute ending tacked on which attempted to resolve the mystery. In the U.S., the premiere rated well, but each succeeding episode generally fared worse than its predecessor. Nevertheless, ABC announced in May 1990 that it would renew the series. Twin Peaks moved to Saturday nights in the fall of 1990. The Laura Palmer mystery was finally resolved when it was revealed that Laura's killer was her own father, who turned into a homicidal maniac when possessed by an evil spirit known as Bob (Bob was played by a Twin Peaks crew member, Frank Silva). After steadily declining ratings, the series faded away quietly in April 1991. A two-hour "finale" aired on 10 June 1991. In 1992 a theatrical film was released. "Twin Peaks: Fire Walk with Me" was intended as a prequel to the TV series, focusing on Laura Palmer's last weeks.

THE TWISTED TALES OF FELIX THE CAT CBS

16 SEPTEMBER 1995– Half-hour Saturday-morning animated series starring the venerable feline in newly produced cartoons. Other segments featured such characters as Bag-O-Tricks, Fats Holler, and Sheba Beboporeba.

TWO FACES WEST SYNDICATED

1961 In this half-hour western, star Charles Bateman played two roles—Ben January, the marshal, and Rick January, his twin brother, a doctor. Matthew Rapf produced the show, which was set in the town of Gunnison.

TWO FOR THE MONEY NBC/CBS

30 SEPTEMBER 1952–11 AUGUST 1953 (NBC); 15 AUGUST 1953–22 SEPTEMBER 1956 (CBS); 23 MARCH 1957–7 SEPTEMBER 1957 (CBS) This prime-time general knowledge quiz show was a Goodson-Todman Production. A pilot was made in 1952 with Fred Allen as host, but Allen became ill and was unable to assume the hosting chores when the show was picked up. Herb Shriner, the Hoosier humorist, took over as emcee and hosted the show for most of its run; Walter O'Keefe substituted for Shriner during the summer of 1954, and Dennis James and Sam Levenson later hosted the show.

240-ROBERT ABC

28 AUGUST 1979–10 DECEMBER 1979; 31 MAY 1980–23 AUGUST 1980; 7 MARCH 1981–21 MARCH 1981; 5 SEPTEMBER 1981–19 SEPTEMBER 1981 This hour adventure series focused on the exploits of the Emergency Services Unit of the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department. Featured were: Mark Harmon (1979–1980) as Deputy Dwayne "Thib" Thibideaux; John Bennett Perry as Deputy T. R. "Trap" Applegate; Joanna Cassidy (1979–1980) as helicopter pilot Morgan Wainwright; Lew Saunders (1979–1980) as C. B.; JoeAl Nicassio (1979–1980) as Roverino; Thomas Babson (1979–1980) as Terry; and Steve Tannen as Kestenbaum. When the show returned briefly in 1981, Perry and Tannen were joined by two newcomers: Stephan Burns as Brett Cueva, Trap's rookie partner, and Pamela Hensley as helicopter pilot Sandy Harper. Rick Rosner created the show and was its executive producer.

TWO GIRLS NAMED SMITH ABC

20 JANUARY 1951–13 OCTOBER 1951 Broadcast Saturdays at noon, this half-hour sitcom told the story of two cousins trying to become fashion models in New York. With Peggy French as Frances Smith; Peggy Ann Garner as Babs Smith; Joseph Buloff, as their elderly neighbor, Mr. Basmany; Richard Hayes as Babs's boyfriend, and Nina Foch.

2 HIP 4 TV NBC

10 SEPTEMBER 1988–22 OCTOBER 1988 This live-action hour Saturday morning series was set in a teenager's basement, which was magically transformed into a television studio. Ahmet Zappa, youngest child of musician Frank Zappa, was the teenager; Colin Quinn was his sidekick. Celebrity impersonators dropped by each week, as did real-life rock and roll stars.

TWO IN LOVE CBS

19 JUNE 1954–11 SEPTEMBER 1954 Bert Parks hosted this Saturday-night game show on which engaged couples competed. In the first round, relatives and friends of each couple were asked questions about the couple. In the second round, the couples themselves participated in a quiz segment.

TWO MARRIAGES ABC

23 AUGUST 1983–14 SEPTEMBER 1983; 8 MARCH 1984–26 APRIL 1984 Hour dramatic series about two suburban families—the happily married Daleys and the troubled Armstrongs—who lived next door to one another. With Tom Mason as Jim Daley, who operated a dairy farm with his father; Karen Carlson as his wife, Ann Daley, a construction engineer; Tiffany Toyoshima as Kim, Jim's daughter by a previous marriage; C. Thomas Howell as Scott Morgan, Ann's son by a previous marriage; Ian Fried as Willy, Jim and Ann's son (the Daleys had a baby, Elizabeth, at the end of the show's brief 1984 run); John McLiam as Woody Daley, Jim's father; Michael Murphy as Art Armstrong, a surgeon; Janet Eilber as his wife, Nancy Armstrong, a housewife; Louanne as their daughter, Shelby; and Kirk Cameron as their son, Eric. The show was produced by Carroll Newman.

THE TWO OF US CBS

6 APRIL 1981–27 APRIL 1981; 14 SEPTEMBER 1981–24 FEBRUARY 1982 Half-hour sitcom about a prim and proper British butler who went to work for a New York divorcée in her New York City townhouse, which needed all the domestic help it could get. Featured were Peter Cook as the butler, Robert Brentwood; Mimi Kennedy as his employer, Nan Gallagher, the co-host of "Midmorning Manhattan," a TV talk show; Dana Hill as Nan's teenage daughter, Gabrielle; and Oliver Clark as Nan's agent, Cubby Roy. When the show returned as a midseason replacement in 1981, two new regulars were added: Tim Thomerson as Nan's obnoxious cohost, Reggie Cavanaugh; and Candice Azzara as Shirley Havilmeyer.

2000 MALIBU ROAD CBS

23 AUGUST 1992–9 SEPTEMBER 1992 Short-lived continuing drama set at 2000 Malibu Road, where a retiring prostitute took in three female tenants; murder and corporate intrigue soon followed. With Lisa Hartman Black as the former hooker, Jade O'Keefe; Jennifer Beals as tenant Perry Quinn, a lawyer who fell in love with an accused rapist whom she represented; Drew Barrymore as tenant Lindsay Rule, an actress; Tuesday Knight as tenant Joy Rule, Lindsay's scheming sister; Brian Bloom as screenwriter Eric Adler; Scott Bryce as television executive Scott Sterling; Michael T. Weiss as the accused rapist, Roger Tabor; and Ron Marquette as police officer Joe Munoz. Created by Terry Louise Fisher, the series was put on hiatus after four telecasts and never returned.

227 NBC

14 SEPTEMBER 1985–28 JULY 1990 Half-hour sitcom named for the Washington, D.C., tenement in which its principals lived. The mostly black ensemble cast included Marla Gibbs as Mary Jenkins; Hal Williams as her husband, Lester, a contractor; Regina King as Brenda, their teenage daughter; Alaina Reed (later known as Alaina Reed-Hall) as the landlady, Rose Lee Holloway; Kia Goodwin as Rose's daughter, Tiffany (who was seldom seen after the first season); Jackee Harry (later known as Jackée) as manhungry Sandra Clark; Curtis Baldwin as Calvin Dobbs, Brenda's boyfriend; Helen Martin as Calvin's grandmother, Pearl Shay; Countess Vaughn (1988–1989) as Alexandria, a precocious young student who lived with the Jenkins family for a year; Paul Winfield (1989–1990) as the building owner, Julian Barlow; Barry Sobel (spring 1989–1990) as Brenda's history teacher, Dylan McMillan, who became the only white tenant in the building; and Stoney Jackson (1989–1990) as Dylan's roommate, Travis Filmore. The series was based on a play, 227, by Christine Houston, which had been presented at Marla Gibbs's Crossroads Theatre and Arts Academy in Los Angeles.

THE TYCOON ABC

15 SEPTEMBER 1964–7 SEPTEMBER 1965 A season after The Real McCoys left the air, Walter Brennan returned to star in this unsuccessful sitcom. Brennan played Walter Andrews, a crusty widower who was chairman of the board of Thunder Corporation, a huge California conglomerate. Also featured were Van Williams as Pat Burns, Walter's personal assistant; Jerome Cowan as Herbert Wilson, president of Thunder Corporation; Pat McNulty as Martha, Walter's granddaughter; George Lindsey as Martha's husband, Tom Keane, a naval officer; Janet Lake as Betty Franklin, Walter's secretary; Monty Margetts as Una Fields, Walter's housekeeper; and Grace Albertson as Louise Wilson, Herbert's wife.

UFO SYNDICATED

1972 This hour science fiction series, produced in England by Gerry and Sylvia Anderson, was set in the 1980s at SHADO (Supreme Headquarters, Alien Defense Organization), a top-secret agency which monitored an ever-increasing number of civilization-threatening UFOs. SHADO's cover operation was the Harlington-

Straker Film Studios in London. One reason for the series' lack of success was that many of the shows seemed incomprehensible to American viewers. Featured were Ed Bishop as Commander Edward Straker, SHADO chief; George Sewell as Colonel Alec Freeman; Michael Billington as Colonel Paul Foster; Peter Gordeno as Captain Peter Carlin; and Gabrielle Drake as Lieutenant Gay Ellis.

1981–1982 Produced by the Christian Broadcasting Network and broadcast at 6:00 A.M., this informational hour show was cohosted first by Ross Bagley and former Miss America Terry Meeuwsen, later by Brian Christie and Meeuwsen. Terry Casey read the news, Tom Mahoney gave the weather, and Scott Hatch reported on sports.

USA TODAY: THE TELEVISION SHOW SYNDICATED

12 SEPTEMBER 1988–5 JANUARY 1990 A half-hour daily news magazine show, modeled after the national newspaper USA Today. Like its print counterpart, the TV show was broken up into four "sections," each with its own anchor: USA (with Edie Magnus), Money (Kenneth Walker), Sports (Bill Macatee) and Life (Robin Young). It boasted a fast-paced format with splashy graphics and a set laden with monitors and large video screens. The much-ballyhooed show was produced by GTG Entertainment, a partnership between former NBC head Grant Tinker and the Gannett Company, which owned USA Today; Steve Friedman, who had produced the Today show for seven years, was hired as executive producer. Intended for an early evening time slot, the series premiered in September 1988 on 155 stations; it was an almost instant ratings flop. Many stations moved the show to a less vulnerable time slot, usually after 11:00 P.M. Despite numerous efforts at retinkering the show—including changing the title to USA Today: on TV, and hiring Jim Bellows (formerly of Entertainment Tonight) as managing editor—the show never lived up to its hype and expired after sixteen months.

THE U.S. STEEL HOUR ABC/CBS

27 OCTOBER 1953–21 JUNE 1955 (ABC); 6 JULY 1955–12 JUNE 1963 (CBS) Another of television's high-quality dramatic anthology series, The U.S. Steel Hour was sponsored by United States Steel and produced under the auspices of the Theatre Guild, a group of show business people that was organized in the 1920s and which brought a radio show, The Theatre Guild on the Air (also sponsored by U.S. Steel), to the airwaves in 1945. The television version of the show began eight years later, in the heyday of TV's "Golden Age," and lasted ten years. Broadcast live from New York, the hour show was seen biweekly, alternating with The Motorola TV Hour and The Elgin TV Hour on ABC, and with Armstrong Circle Theater and The 20th Century-Fox Hour on CBS. A small sample of its presentations includes: "P.O.W.," with Richard Kiley, Phyllis Kirk, Gary Merrill, and Sally Forrest (27 October 1953); "No Time for Sergeants," with Andy Griffith (in his TV debut), Harry Clark, and Eddie LeRoy (15 March 1955; directed by Alex Segal, it was later a Broadway play, a motion picture, and a TV sitcom); "The Rack," with Keenan Wynn (12 April 1955); "The Outcast," with Lillian Roth (9 November 1955); "The Old Lady Shows Her Medals," with Gracie Fields (in her first dramatic role on American TV) and Alfred Lunt (23 May 1956); "Bang the Drum Slowly," with Paul Newman (26 September 1956); "A Drum Is a Woman," a musical fantasy composed and narrated by Duke Ellington, with dialogue written by Will Lorin (8 May 1957); "Beaver Patrol," a rare comedy presentation, starring Walter Slezak (9 April 1958); "Little Tin God," with Gene Hackman (in his first major TV role, 22 April 1959); "Queen of the Orange Bowl," with Anne Francis and Johnny Carson (making a rare TV dramatic appearance, 13 January 1960); "Girl in the Gold Bathtub," with Johnny Carson (in another rare TV dramatic appearance, 4 May 1960); "Brandenburg Gate," with Richard Kiley and Gene Hackman (4 October 1961).

THE UGLIEST GIRL IN TOWN ABC

26 SEPTEMBER 1968–30 JANUARY 1969 Asinine sitcom about a Hollywood talent agent who disguised himself as a hip female fashion model in order to be closer to his girlfriend, an actress who had returned home to England; much to his chagrin, he discovered that, as a model, he was suddenly a mod sensation. With Peter Kastner as Tim Blair, the agent, and as Timmy Blair, the model; Patricia Brake as his girlfriend, Julia Renfield; Nicholas Parsons as Mr. Courtney, boss of a London modeling agency; and Gary Marshall as Tim's brother, Gene Blair, a photographer.

UNCLE BUCK CBS

10 SEPTEMBER 1990–23 NOVEMBER 1990; 26 JANUARY 1991–6 APRIL 1991 Sitcom based on the 1989 movie about a bachelor slob who inherited a family. Featured were Kevin Meaney as Buck Russell, who came to care for his two nieces and nephew after the deaths of his brother and sister-in-law (in the movie, the children's parents had only gone on vacation); Dah-ve Chodan as teenage niece Tia; Jacob Gelman as nephew Miles; Sarah Martineck as younger niece Maizy; Audrey Meadows as the kids' maternal grandmother, Mrs. Hogoboom; Dennis Cockrum as Buck's pal Skank; and Thomas Mikal Ford as Buck's buddy Rafer Freeman.

UNCLE CROC'S BLOCK ABC

6 SEPTEMBER 1975–14 FEBRUARY 1976 This Saturday-morning children's show was intended to be a spoof of Saturday-morning children's shows—its host constantly bantered with his assistant and his director and occasionally found the time to introduce a few cartoons. With Charles Nelson Reilly as Uncle Croc, the host; Alfie Wise as Mr. Rabbit Ears, his assistant; and Jonathan Harris as Mr. Bitterbottom, the director. Produced by Mack Bing and Don Christensen for Filmation Productions, the show was trimmed from sixty to thirty minutes late in October. Regular cartoon segments included "Fraidy Cat," "M*U*S*H" (an animal version of *M*A*S*H*), and "Wacky and Packy."

UNCLE JOHNNY COONS CBS/NBC

19 FEBRUARY 1955–3 DECEMBER 1955 (CBS); 3 MARCH 1956–24 NOVEMBER 1956 (NBC) On this Chicago-based Saturday show for children, ventriloquist Johnny Coons introduced silent films and traded quips with his wooden partner, George Dummy, and his invisible dog, Blackie.

UNCOMMON VALOR SYNDICATED

1955 A series of twenty-six half-hour documentaries about the United States Marines narrated by Daniel Riss and featuring General Holland M. (Howlin' Mad) Smith. Cliff Karling and William Karn produced the series.

UNDER COVER ABC

7 JANUARY 1991–16 FEBRUARY 1991 This hour adventure series starred Anthony John Denison and Linda Purl as Dylan and Kate Del'Amico, a husband-and-wife spy team for the National Intelligence Agency. Also on hand were John Rhys-Davies as fellow spy Flynn; Josef Sommer as their boss, Stuart Merriman; G. W. Bailey as the agency director, Mr. Waugh; John Slattery as Graham Parker, a duty officer; Kasi Lemmons as Alex Robbins, a duty officer; Arlene Taylor as Dylan's daughter (from a prior marriage), Megan; Joshua South (pilot program) and Adam Ryen as Dylan and Kate's son, Marlon; and Sumer Stamper (pilot) and Marne Patterson as Dylan and Kate's daughter, Emily. The series premiered only days before the outbreak of war in the Persian Gulf; one episode was hastily pulled from ABC's schedule, as it dealt with Middle East terrorists. It surfaced in July, when ABC cobbled together two two-hour TV-movies from unaired programs and a rerun of the premiere episode.

THE UNEXPECTED SYNDICATED
1952 Half-hour suspense anthology series from Ziv TV, hosted by Herbert Marshall.

UNHAPPILY EVER AFTER WB
11 JANUARY 1995– Ron Leavitt, who had created Married. . . . With Children with Michael Moye, co-created this sitcom with Arthur Silver. Best described as Unmarried . . . with Children, it told the story of a recently divorced couple and their three kids; the parents constantly bickered with each other, while the kids paid no attention. With Geoff Pierson as used car salesman Jack Malloy; Stephanie Hodge as his ex-wife, Jennie Malloy; Kevin Connolly as older son Ryan; Nikki Cox as daughter Tiffany; Justin Berfield as younger son Ross; and Joyce Van Patten as Jennie's meddlesome mother, Maureen Slattery. As the series got underway, Jack had moved into an apartment; young Ross had given Jack his stuffed bunny to keep him company, and, to his amazement, Jack discovered that the creature, Mr. Floppy, could talk and move, but only when Jack was alone. Bobcat Goldthwait provided the voice of Mr. Floppy; Alan Trautman was the puppeteer. In the fall of 1995 Jack moved back into the basement of his old house.

UNION PACIFIC SYNDICATED
1958 Half-hour western, set along the right of way of the Union Pacific Railroad. With Jeff Morrow as Bart McClelland, district supervisor; Judd Pratt as surveyor Bill

Kinkaid; and Susan Cummings as Georgia, the operator of the Golden Nugget Saloon, which was conveniently located in a railroad car that traveled with the train crew.

UNITED OR NOT? ABC

2 JULY 1951–27 OCTOBER 1952 Half-hour discussion series about the United Nations, hosted by John MacVane.

UNITED STATES NBC

11 MARCH 1980–29 APRIL 1980 Larry Gelbart, the cocreator of *M*A*S*H,* was given carte blanche by NBC in developing this half-hour comedy-drama; intended to be a contemporary look at marriage, it starred Beau Bridges and Helen Shaver as Richard and Libby Chapin, with Rossie Harris and Justin Dana as their sons, Dylan and Nicky. Taped with no laugh track, no theme music, and handwritten credits, the much ballyhooed program was dropped after just seven weeks. It ended up as NBC's lowest-rated prime-time series of the 1979–1980 season, finishing 102nd out of 105 shows.

UNIVERSE (WALTER CRONKITE'S UNIVERSE) CBS

12 JULY 1980–2 AUGUST 1980; 23 JUNE 1981–8 SEPTEMBER 1981; 8 JUNE 1982–31 AUGUST 1982 Following his departure from The CBS Evening News, Walter Cronkite returned to TV to host this prime-time science series. In 1980 it was seen in an hour format and was titled Universe. In 1981 and 1982 it was known as Walter Cronkite's Universe and was aired in a half-hour format.

UNIVERSITY HOSPITAL SYNDICATED

1995– Hour dramatic series about four student nurses who roomed together and worked at a Seattle hospital. With Tonya Pinkins as nurse Mary Jenkins, their instructor; Hillary Danner as nurse Jamie Fuller, who had recently left an abusive relationship; Rebecca Cross as nurse Megan Peterson, originally from Montana; Hudson Leick as nurse Tracy Stone, the sexpot; and Alexandra Wilson as fourth generation nurse Samantha (Sam) McCormack. Also featured were Nancy Sivak as Nurse Shane and Liza Huget as Nurse Astor. Aaron Spelling and E. Duke Vincent were the executive producers.

UNSOLVED MYSTERIES NBC

14 SEPTEMBER 1988– Hour non-fiction series, hosted by Robert Stack, which frequently focused on such topics as missing persons, unsolved murders, and unclaimed estates. The series followed a number of specials which had been televised during the previous two seasons, and had been hosted by Raymond Burr and Karl Malden. Like other shows of its ilk (America's Most Wanted, Missing/Reward, etc.), Unsolved Mysteries used interviews with concerned parties and law enforcement officials as well as dramatic recreations of actual events. Some of the mysteries presented on the show were solved. In the spring of 1988, for example, Jerry Strickland, wanted for homicide, was apprehended the day after he was featured on the show. Strickland had seen the program, agreed to tape an interview for an upcoming program, and told the producers that Unsolved Mysteries was still his favorite show. John Cosgrove and Terry Dunn Meurer created the series. A spinoff series of sorts aired briefly in the fall of 1992: see Final Appeal: From the Files of Unsolved Mysteries.

UNSUB NBC

3 FEBRUARY 1989–14 APRIL 1989 An hour crime show about the Behavioral Sciences Unit of the Department of Justice, which employed the latest methods of scientific and intuitive discovery to hunt down the "unknown subjects" (hence the series' title) suspected of perpetrating various gruesome crimes. With David Soul as Wes Grayson; M. Emmet Walsh as Ned; Joe Maruzzo as Tony; and Jennifer Hetrick as Ann.

THE UNTAMED WORLD SYNDICATED/NBC

1968 (SYNDICATED); 11 JANUARY 1969–30 AUGUST 1969 (NBC) Half-hour series of natural history films, narrated by Phil Carey.

THE UNTOUCHABLES ABC

15 OCTOBER 1959–10 SEPTEMBER 1963 This hour-long crime show, set in Chicago during the 1930s was based on the real-life exploits of Eliot Ness and his squad of Treasury agents, nicknamed "The Untouchables." One of TV's most consistently violent series, The Untouchables received much criticism during its four-season run, especially from Italian-American civic groups, who objected to the show's repetitive use of Italian-surnamed gangsters in its early seasons. Their efforts led to a diversification of villains, and by 1963 virtually every ethnic group had been represented (even Russians could not claim to have been slighted, as one hood was named Joe Vodka). More criticism came from the U.S. Bureau of Prisons, which strongly objected to the portrayal of prison officials in certain episodes involving Al Capone. The series was produced by Quinn Martin for Desilu and was narrated by Walter Winchell (Martin would later use offscreen narration in several of his hit series, such as The Fugitive and The Invaders). Featured on-screen were: Robert Stack as Eliot Ness (the part had been offered to Van Johnson and Van Heflin, but both had turned it down); Jerry Paris (1959–1960) as Martin Flaherty; Nicholas Georgiade as Rico Rossi; Anthony George (spring 1960) as Cam Allison; Abel Fernandez as William Youngfellow; Paul Picerni (1960–1963) as Lee Hobson; and Steve London (1960–1963) as Rossman. Guest villains included: Neville Brand as Al Capone; Bruce Gordon as Frank Nitti; and Clu Gulager as "Mad Dog" Coll. James Caan played his first major TV role on one episode, "A Fist of Five" (4 December 1962), and Robert Redford appeared in "Snowball" (15 January 1963). The pilot for the series was televised as a two-part presentation on Desilu Playhouse, 20 and 27 April 1959. In 1987 a successful motion picture was released, based loosely on the series, starring Kevin Costner as Ness. Stack returned to the role in a TV-movie, "The Return of Eliot Ness," broadcast 10 November 1991 on NBC. In 1993 a new version of the series appeared: see below.

THE UNTOUCHABLES SYNDICATED

1993–1994 The remake of the 1959–1963 series (see above) was filmed on location in Chicago. It featured Tom Amandes as Eliot Ness; Michael Horse as wiretap expert George Steelman; John Haymes Newton as driver Tony Pagano; David James Elliott (spring 1993) as Paul Robbins; John Rhys-Davies as honest Chicago cop Mike Malone; Nancy Everhard as Ness's first wife, Catherine; William Forsythe as Al Capone; Paul Regina as Frank Nitti; George Carson as Ness's friend Louis Basile; Hynden Walch as Mae Capone, Al's wife; Jack Thibeau as Bugs Moran; and Byrne Piven as John Torrio.

UP AND COMING PBS

1980 Half-hour comedy-drama about a middle-class black family living in San Francisco. Featured were Yule Caise as Marcus Wilson, the youngest child; Cindy Herron as his sister, Valerie; L. Wolfe Perry, Jr., as his brother, Kevin; Robert DoQui as their father, Frank, who ran a construction company; and Gamy L. Taylor as their mother, Joyce.

UP TO PAAR NBC

28 JULY 1952–26 SEPTEMBER 1952 In his first national television assignment, Jack Paar hosted this current events quiz, which was also known as I've Got News for You. The half-hour show was seen Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings.

UP TO THE MINUTE CBS

28 SEPTEMBER 1981–15 JANUARY 1982 This half-hour daytime newsmagazine series marked CBS's attempt to introduce network programming into its 4:00 P.M. time slot, which for many years had been the private domain of its local affiliates. Relatively few stations were willing to relinquish the time slot for the network offering, and Up to the Minute perished after sixteen weeks. The series had no permanent host—a different CBS journalist hosted the show each week.

UP TO THE MINUTE CBS

29 MARCH 1992– The second CBS news program with this title was used for its late-late-night news service, which had been inaugurated in 1982 as CBS News Nightwatch. Revamped in 1992, the new broadcast was originally coanchored by Monica Gayle and Russ Mitchell.

UPBEAT CBS

5 JULY 1955–22 SEPTEMBER 1955 This fifteen-minute, twice-weekly summer musical series featured the Russ Case Orchestra, the Tommy Morton Dancers, and guests. Jerome Shaw produced and directed.

UPBEAT SYNDICATED

1966–1971 A Cleveland-based rock music show, hosted by Don Webster. Frequent guests on the hour series included Jeff Kutash and the GTOs.

URBAN ANGEL CBS

29 OCTOBER 1991–18 FEBRUARY 1992; 30 AUGUST 1993–10 SEPTEMBER 1993 Part of CBS's late-night Crime Time After Prime Time, this hour series was filmed in Montreal. It starred Justin Louis as Victor Torres, an ex-con who became a reporter for the Tribune; Dorothy Berryman as the managing editor, Francine Primeau; and Jack Langedijk as the city editor, Bob Vanverdan.

V NBC

26 OCTOBER 1984–22 MARCH 1985; 17 MAY 1985–5 JULY 1985 The television series with the shortest title was the sequel to two science fiction miniseries: V (1 and 2 May 1983) and V: The Final Battle (6–8 May 1984). They told the saga of the Visitors, lizard-like aliens from another planet who came to Earth and assumed human form; the Visitors shrewdly masked their plan to take over the planet, but were eventually thwarted by a group of Los Angeles-based "resistance fighters." The parallels to the Nazi takeover of much of Europe were intentional. The latter miniseries was rerun in mid-October 1984, and the weekly series picked up the story a year later. Principal players included: Jane Badler as Diana, leader of the Visitors, who was kidnapped by an American industrialist on the eve of her trial for crimes against humanity; Marc Singer as resistance leader Mike Donovan, a television newscaster; Faye Grant as resistance scientist Julie Parish; Lane Smith as Nathan Bates, Diana's kidnapper and collaborator; Jeff Yagher as Nathan's son, Kyle, who sided with the resistance; Blair Tefkin as Robin Maxwell, who had had an affair with an alien; Jenny Beck and Jennifer Cooke as Robin's half-human, half-alien daughter, Elizabeth; Robert Englund as Willie, a Visitor who defected to the resistance; June Chadwick as Lydia, a Visitor who was Diana's chief rival; Duncan Regehr as Charles, a Visitor who forced Diana to marry him and died shortly thereafter; Nicky Katt as Mike's young son, Sam Donovan; and Howard K. Smith as himself, a newscaster who introduced most of the episodes. In the final episode (22 March) the Visitors' leader traveled to Earth to negotiate a lasting peace. The series was not without flashes of humor. On the episode of 1 February, when Charles and Diana were married, Diana was shown luxuriating in a bath—of live eels.

VR.5 FOX

10 MARCH 1995–12 MAY 1995 "Virtual reality is real" was the catchphrase uttered on this sci-fi series. Lori Singer starred as Sydney Bloom, a telephone employee technician who, while using her homebuilt computer, accidentally stumbled into the fifth level of virtual reality; at that level, in which all five senses were involved, Bloom learned that she could create the setting and could bring others into it, but she could not control the outcome. Trying to learn what had become of her father, a prominent scientist who had supposedly drowned, she came in contact with a mysterious organization known as the Committee. Also featured were Michael Easton as Sydney's slacker neighbor, Duncan; Will Patton as Dr. Frank Morgan, one of the pioneers of virtual reality technology, who worked for the Committee; David McCallum as Sydney's father, Dr. Joseph Bloom, who appeared in flashbacks and in VR sequences; and Louise Fletcher as Nora Bloom, Sydney's mother, who appeared in flashbacks and in the present time, where she resided in a nursing home.

VALIANT LADY CBS

12 OCTOBER 1953–16 AUGUST 1957 A daytime serial, Valiant Lady was created by Frank and Ann Hummert and ran on radio from 1938 to 1952. The TV version starred Nancy Coleman and Flora Campbell as Helen Emerson; Jerome Cowan as her husband, Frank, who died; James Kirkwood, Jr., as their son, Mickey; Anne Pearson, Dolores Sutton, Sue Randall, and Leila Martin as their daughter, Diane; Lydia Reed (who later appeared on The Real McCoys) and Bonnie Sawyer as their younger daughter, Kim; Terry O'Sullivan as Elliott Norris; Martin Balsam as Joey Gordon; and Frances Helm as Linda Kendall. The fifteen-minute show, broadcast live from New York, was produced by Carl Green, written by Charles Elwyn, and directed by Herb Kenwith.

VALLEY OF THE DINOSAURS CBS

7 SEPTEMBER 1974–4 SEPTEMBER 1976 Saturday-morning cartoon series from Hanna-Barbera Productions about the Butler family, who found themselves trapped in a prehistoric world. Though the show ran for two seasons, the second season consisted entirely of reruns.

VAN DYKE AND COMPANY NBC

20 SEPTEMBER 1976–30 DECEMBER 1976 An unsuccessful variety hour hosted by Dick Van Dyke. Other regulars included Andy Kaufman, Pat Proft, Marilyn Sokol, and the Los Angeles Mime Company. Allan Blye and Bob Einstein were the producers.

THE VAN DYKE SHOW CBS

26 OCTOBER 1988–7 DECEMBER 1988 Dick Van Dyke and Mary Tyler Moore each returned to CBS in back-to-back Wednesday night sitcoms in the fall of 1988; both were unsuccessful. The Van Dyke Show starred Dick Van Dyke as Dick Burgess, a veteran Broadway star who decided to help out his son, who ran a small regional theater company. Van Dyke's real-life son Barry Van Dyke co-starred as the son, Matt Burgess. Also aboard were Kari Lizer as Chris, Matt's wife; Billy O'Sullivan as their son, Noah; Whitman Mayo as Doc, the ancient stage manager; and Maura Tierney as Jillian, the all-purpose assistant.

VANISHING SON SYNDICATED

1995– Hour adventure series starring Russell Wong as Jian Wa Chang, a martial artist and musician falsely accused of killing two federal agents; Chang tried to find the people who had framed him as he eluded his pursuers. Also featured were Jason Adams as Immigration & Naturalization Service agent Dan Standler, who had organized the Asian Crime Task Force in an effort to get Chang; and Stephanie Niznik as INS agent Judith Phillips, Standler's newly assigned partner, who had doubts about Chang's guilt. The hour series had been preceded in 1994 by a syndicated made-for-TV movie.

VANITY FAIR CBS

12 OCTOBER 1948–2 NOVEMBER 1951 One of CBS's first daytime shows, Vanity Fair began as a twice-weekly show, but by January of 1949 it was broadcast five days a week. Hosted by Robin Chandler and by Dorothy Doan, it presented features of interest to housewives. In 1949 it was produced and directed by Frances Buss, and in 1951 it was written and produced by Virginia Schone and directed by Dan Levin.

VAUDEO VARIETIES ABC

14 JANUARY 1949–15 APRIL 1949 One of the first Chicago-based programs to be broadcast in the East following the opening of the coaxial cables between New York and Chicago, Vaudeo Varieties presented five acts each week. Eddie Hubbard hosted the hour show.

VAUDEVILLE SYNDICATED

1974 A variety hour with no regulars (except Donna Jean Young, the cardholder), Vaudeville consisted of assorted vaudeville acts, introduced by celebrity guest hosts. Burt Rosen was the executive producer for Metromedia.

VAUDEVILLE SHOW ABC

9 DECEMBER 1953–30 DECEMBER 1953 Five vaudeville acts were presented each week on this short-lived variety show.

VEGA$ ABC

20 SEPTEMBER 1978–16 SEPTEMBER 1981 Glittery Las Vegas was the setting of this hour crime show, which starred Robert Urich as private eye Dan Tanna, who drove around town in a red 1957 Thunderbird convertible. Also featured were Phyllis Davis as his woman Friday, Beatrice Travis; Bart Braverman as his inept assistant, Binzer; Naomi Stevens (1978–1979) as Sergeant Bella Archer of the Las Vegas Police Department; Judy Landers (1978–1979) as Angie Turner, a chorus girl who sometimes took messages for Tanna; and Greg Morris (1979–1981) as Lieutenant Dave Nelson. Tony Curtis appeared occasionally as Roth, a Vegas hotelier who sometimes hired Tanna. Aaron Spelling and Douglas S. Cramer were the executive producers.

VEGETABLE SOUP SYNDICATED

1975 An ambitious magazine show for children, Vegetable Soup featured such guest hosts as Bette Midler and James Earl Jones, who introduced live and animated segments. Yanna Kroyt Brandt was the executive producer for the New York State Department of Education. The show was seen in most areas in half-hour form, though it could be adapted into a fifteen-minute format.

VERDICT CBS

21 JUNE 1991–5 SEPTEMBER 1991 This prime time reality series covered trials. Each program was hosted by a CBS News correspondent, who introduced the case and showed edited footage from the trial.

THE VERDICT IS YOURS CBS

2 SEPTEMBER 1957–28 SEPTEMBER 1962 This popular courtroom drama began as a daytime show; it also enjoyed a prime-time run on CBS during the summer of 1958. The series was done without scripts; the show's writers prepared an outline for each case, which served as the starting point for the performers. Professional actors played the litigants and witnesses, while real attorneys played the lawyers and judges. Jurors were chosen from the studio audience. Jim McKay, Verdict's first "court reporter," was succeeded by Bill Stout in July 1960. Stout was succeeded by Jack Whitaker in June 1962. The half-hour show was produced by Eugene Burr.

VERSATILE VARIETIES NBC/CBS/ABC

26 AUGUST 1949–19 JANUARY 1951 (NBC); 28 JANUARY 1951–22 JULY 1951 (CBS); 21 SEPTEMBER 1951–14 DECEMBER 1951 (ABC) Versatile Varieties premiered as a prime-time variety revue in 1949, hosted by George Givot and Bob Russell. Produced by Charles Basch and Frances Scott, and directed by Jay Strong, it was officially titled The Bonny Maid Versatile Variety Show; commercials were handled by an eighteen-year-old model named Anne Francis. When the show switched networks in January 1951, it retained little else but its title, as it moved from prime time to Sunday mornings and became a children's show. Lady Iris Mountbatten was the new host, telling stories and singing songs. In the fall of 1951 Versatile Varieties again shifted networks.

THE VIC DAMONE SHOW CBS/NBC

2 JULY 1956–24 SEPTEMBER 1956 (CBS); 3 JULY 1957–11 SEPTEMBER 1957 (CBS); 22 JUNE 1967–7 SEPTEMBER 1967 (NBC) Born Vito Farinola, singer Vic Damone appeared on the radio version of Arthur Godfrey's Talent Scouts, and began making records in 1947. He hosted the first of his TV shows in 1956, a summer replacement for December Bride. In 1957 he hosted an hour series, a summer replacement for Arthur Godfrey and His Friends, which featured Peggy King and the Spellbinders. After hosting The Lively Ones for two summers (see that title), he filled in for The Dean Martin Show during the summer of 1967; other regulars on that series included Gail Martin (Dean's daughter) and Carol Lawrence; the latter series was rerun on NBC during the summer of 1971.

VICKI! SYNDICATED

1992–1994 Hour daytime talk show, hosted by actress and singer Vicki Lawrence, and produced by Group W Productions.

THE VICTOR BORGE SHOW NBC

3 FEBRUARY 1951–30 JUNE 1951 A Danish pianist with a sense of humor, Victor Borge hosted his own half-hour comedy-variety series on Saturday evenings.

VICTORY AT SEA NBC

26 OCTOBER 1952–26 APRIL 1953 A documentary series of twenty-six half hours on naval warfare during World War II, Victory at Sea was produced by Henry Salomon and narrated by Leonard Graves. Richard Rodgers composed a special score for the program.

VICTORY GARDEN PBS

1976– Aimed primarily at the urban gardener, this half-hour show was first hosted by James Underwood Crockett and titled Crockett's Victory Garden. Much of the program was taped at the garden constructed outside the studio of Boston's WGBH-TV. After Crockett's death in 1979, Bob Thomson took over as host, and in 1981 the title was shortened to Victory Garden. Following Thomson's departure in 1990, the show experimented with three regional hosts—Jim Wilson, Bob Smaus, and Roger Swain—before Swain took over as national host.

VIDEO VILLAGE CBS

Nighttime: 1 JULY 1960–16 SEPTEMBER 1960; Daytime: 11 JULY 1960–15 JUNE 1962 On this half-hour game show two couples competed. One spouse rolled a giant die inside a cage, after which his or her spouse advanced along a life-sized game board according to the roll of the die. Jack Narz was the first host, Monty Hall the second; they were assisted by Joanna Copeland and Eileen Barton; Merrill Heatter and Bob Quigley were the producers. See also Video Village Junior.

VIDEO VILLAGE JUNIOR CBS

30 SEPTEMBER 1961-16 JUNE 1962 This Saturday-morning children's version of Video Village was hosted by Monty Hall, with assistance from Eileen Barton.

VIETNAM: A TELEVISION HISTORY PBS

4 OCTOBER 1983–20 DECEMBER 1983 This compelling but objectively presented thirteen-part chronicle of Vietnam centered on the American involvement in the war, though it also examined the French involvement in the first half of the twentieth century. The program made extensive use of news film and of contemporary interviews with most of the surviving principals, both Vietnamese and American. (According to executive producer Richard Ellison, only two people declined to cooperate with the project: former Defense Secretary Robert MacNamara and former South Vietnam President Nguyen Van Thieu). Will Lyman narrated the series, and Mickey Hart and Billy Kreutzmann (both of the Grateful Dead) composed the theme.

VIETNAM WAR STORY HBO

29 AUGUST 1987–20 SEPTEMBER 1987; 20 JULY 1988–7 DECEMBER 1988 The experiences of American soldiers in Vietnam were depicted on this gripping anthology series.

THE VIKINGS SYNDICATED

1960 Officially titled Tales of the Vikings, this half-hour medieval adventure series starred Jerome Courtland as Leif Ericson, Norse explorer. Also on hand were Walter Barnes as Finn, Stefan Schnabel as Firebeard, and Buddy Baer. The show was produced by Brynapod Productions, a company owned by Kirk Douglas, and was filmed on location in Europe using sets, costumes, and ships left over from the motion picture, The Vikings, in which Douglas had starred.

VILLA ALEGRE PBS

1974–1979 Half-hour daytime series for children, presented in Spanish and English ("Villa Alegre" is Spanish for "Happy Village"), geared to Spanish-speaking preschool children. Claudio Guzman was the executive producer, and the show's regulars included Nono Arsu, Linda Dangcil, Sam Edwards, Maria Grimm, Darryl Henriquez, Julio Medina, Federico Roberto, Wilfredo H. Rodriquez, Hal Smith, Catana Tully, and Carmen Zapata.

The first was a fifteen-minute show, seen Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. The second was a half-hour show on Wednesday nights, with Barry Valentino and Ann Warren. The third was a Saturday-evening half hour on CBS, with Judy Lynn, Johnny Amorosa, Johnny Messner, Teddy Norman, Eddie O'Connor, and the Lopezians. See also Dinner Date.

VINNIE & BOBBY FOX

30 MAY 1992–5 SEPTEMBER 1992 This half-hour sitcom rose from the ashes of Fox's 1991 sitcom Top of the Heap, as Matt LeBlanc returned in the role of Vinnie Verducci. Robert Torti costarred as Vinnie's pal from childhood, Bobby Grazzo; the two shared a Chicago apartment (though Bobby neglected to help out with the rent) and were employed as construction workers slowly building a house for a yuppie couple. Also featured were John Pinette and Ron Taylor as their pals Bill and Stanley, who roomed together, and Joey Adams, also reprising her Top of the Heap role, as seventeen-year-old Mona Mullins, who still had the hots for Vinnie.

VIPER NBC

2 JANUARY 1994–1 APRIL 1994 The central character on this hour crime show was not a human being, but rather a super-powered Viper automobile used by the Metro Police in California. The human roles were filled by James McCaffrey as Joe Astor, a former mobster who had been reprogrammed as a cop; Dorian Harewood as the car's designer, Julian Wilkes, who used a wheelchair; Joe Nipote as the motor pool supervisor, Frankie Waters; Faye Hauser as Mara; and Dawn Lyne Gardner as Ronnie.

THE VIRGINIA GRAHAM SHOW SYNDICATED

1970–1972 Hour-long talk show hosted by Virginia Graham, veteran of two previous talk shows (Food for Thought and Girl Talk). Phil Mayer was the producer.

THE VIRGINIAN NBC

19 SEPTEMBER 1962–9 SEPTEMBER 1970

THE MEN FROM SHILOH NBC

16 SEPTEMBER 1970–8 SEPTEMBER 1971 Television's first ninety-minute western series, The Virginian was based on Owen Wister's novel, which had been filmed at least three times. Set at the sprawling Shiloh Ranch in Medicine Bow, Wyoming, its central character was a taciturn foreman known simply as the Virginian, a man trying to come to grips with the inexorable westward advance of technology, culture, and civilization. The only members of the cast who remained with the show for its entire run were James Drury as the Virginian and Doug McClure as Trampas, the headstrong assistant foreman. Other players included: Lee J. Cobb (1962–1966) as Judge Henry Garth, first owner of the Shiloh Ranch; Roberta Shore (1962–1965) as Betsy Garth, his daughter; Pippa Scott (1962–1964) as newspaper publisher Molly Wood; Gary Clarke (1962–1964) as Steve, a ranch hand; Randy Boone (1963–1966) as Randy Garth, Judge Garth's son; L. Q. Jones (1964–1967) as Belden, a ranch hand; Harlan Warde (1964–1966) as Sheriff Brannon; Clu Gulager (1964–1968) as Deputy Ryker; Diane Roter (1965–1966) as Jennifer, Judge Garth's niece; John Dehner (1965–1966) as Starr, a ranch hand; Charles Bickford (1966–November 1967) as John Grainger, second owner of the Shiloh Ranch; Don Quine (1966–1968) as his grandson, Stacy Grainger; Sara Lane (1966–1970) as his granddaughter, Elizabeth Grainger; Ross Elliott (1966–1970) as Sheriff Abbott; John McIntire (November 1967–1970) as his brother, Clay Grainger, who became the third owner of the ranch; Jeanette Nolan (1968–1970) as Holly Grainger, Clay's wife; David Hartman (1968–1969) as David Sutton, a ranch hand; Tim Matheson (1969–1970) as Jim Horn, a ranch hand. In the fall of 1970 the series was retitled The Men from Shiloh, and continued for one final season. Ownership of the Shiloh Ranch again changed hands, as Stewart Granger joined the cast as new owner Colonel Alan MacKenzie, an Englishman. James Drury and Doug McClure remained with the show, and Lee Majors signed on as hired hand Roy Tate. The Virginian and The Men from Shiloh were produced by Universal Television.

THE VISE ABC

1 OCTOBER 1954–5 JULY 1957 Half-hour dramatic anthology series, produced in England, and hosted by Ron Randell during the first season. Some telecasts were from the series Mark Saber (see also that title).

VISION ON SYNDICATED

1972 An inventive British children's series, Vision On was developed to aid children with hearing problems. A total of seventy-four half-hour programs were produced by BBC-TV, with Tony Hart as host (Hart also designed the animated sequences).

VISIONS PBS

1976–1978 An ambitious anthology series, Visions provided a showcase for young American playwrights. Funded by several grants, it was produced by Barbara Schultz at KCET-TV, Los Angeles.

VISIT WITH THE ARMED FORCES DUMONT

1971 Ron Russell hosted this half-hour series, which focused on beauty care.

VIVA VALDEZ ABC

31 MAY 1976–6 SEPTEMBER 1976 Half-hour sitcom about a Chicano family living in East Los Angeles. With Carmen Zapata as Sophia Valdez; Rodolfo Hoyos as her husband, Luis Valdez, owner of a plumbing business; Nelson D. Cuevas as Ernesto, their eldest son, Lisa Mordente as daughter Connie; Claudio Martinez as Pepe, the youngest son; Maria O'Brien as Connie's friend Inez; Jorge Cervera, Jr., as the Valdez' cousin, Jerry Ramirez, newly arrived in the United States. The series was created by Bernard Rothman, Stan Jacobson, and Jack Wohl, who were also its executive producers.

VOICE OF FIRESTONE NBC/ABC

5 SEPTEMBER 1949–7 JUNE 1954 (NBC); 14 JUNE 1954–16 JUNE 1963 (ABC) Voice of Firestone, which began on radio in 1928, was a Monday-night perennial for more than two decades before coming to television in 1949; for the next five years it was simulcast on NBC radio and television, until a dispute between the sponsor and the network over the Monday time slot led Firestone to shift the program to ABC. The half-hour musical series presented all kinds of music, but emphasized classical and semiclassical selections. Each week a guest celebrity was featured, and for many years the principal guests came from the Metropolitan Opera Company. The Firestone Orchestra was conducted by Howard Barlow, and the show was hosted by John Daly during its years on ABC; Hugh James was the announcer. Voice of Firestone was seen as a series of specials from 1959 until 1962; it returned as a weekly series in the fall of 1962 for a final season.

VOICES AND VISIONS PBS

30 JANUARY 1988–23 APRIL 1988 The lives of notable American poets were chronicled on this thirteen-week series. Each program was devoted to a single poet. Among those profiled were Robert Frost, Langston Hughes, Walt Whitman, Emily Dickinson, T. S. Eliot, Wallace Stevens, and Sylvia Plath.

VOLTRON, DEFENDER OF THE UNIVERSE SYNDICATED

1985 An English language version of the long-running Japanese cartoon series about Voltron, the Ultimate Super-Robot.

VOLUME ONE ABC

16 JUNE 1949–21 JULY 1949 Wyllis Cooper wrote and produced the six programs telecast on this half-hour anthology series; the programs were titled "Volume One, Number One," "Volume One, Number Two," etc. Jack Lescoulie and Nancy Sheridan starred in the premiere, a story about a couple who robbed a bank and became trapped in their hotel room.

THE VOYAGE OF CHARLES DARWIN PBS

1980 This seven-part biography of the nineteenth-century British naturalist starred Malcolm Stoddard in the title role.

THE VOYAGE OF THE MIMI PBS

10 SEPTEMBER 1984–15 OCTOBER 1984 A series designed to interest youngsters in marine life, The Voyage of the Mimi was filmed aboard the Mimi off the Maine seacoast. The vessel was skippered by Clement Granville, with a crew of three teenagers.

VOYAGE TO THE BOTTOM OF THE SEA ABC

14 SEPTEMBER 1964–15 SEPTEMBER 1968 Hour-long science fiction series set aboard the Seaview, an American research submarine whose crew came in contact with a never-ending parade of aliens, monsters, and maniacs. Based on the film of the same name, the series featured Richard Basehart as Admiral Harriman Nelson; David Hedison as Captain Lee Crane; Bob Dowdell as Lieutenant Commander Chip Morton; Henry Kulky (1964–1965) as CPO Curley Jones; Terry Becker (1965–1968) as CPO Sharkey; Del Monroe as Kowalski; and Paul Trinka as Patterson. Irwin Allen created the series and was its executive producer. Some 110 episodes were made.

VOYAGERS! NBC

3 OCTOBER 1982–31 JULY 1983 This hour fantasy series starred Jon-Erik Hexum as Phineas Bogg, a "Traveler," a mysterious but not too bright fellow whose job was travel back in time and, when necessary, set straight the course of history. While traveling through the present, Bogg crashed into an apartment window, where he bumped into young Jeffrey Jones (played by Meeno Peluce), an orphan living unhappily with his aunt and uncle. Jeffrey then decided to accompany Bogg on his journeys, which was fortunate for Bogg, because Jeffrey knew his history cold. Their travels were accomplished by means of Bogg's Omni, an egg-shaped device whose controls could be set for any time and place in the past; when its red light was lit, Bogg and Jeffrey were alerted that the projected course of history was wrong.

W.E.B. NBC

13 SEPTEMBER 1978–5 OCTOBER 1978 The first dramatic series concerning the television industry, W.E.B. was the first fatality of the 1978–1979 season, lasting only five shows. It was inspired by the movie Network and was set at Trans American Broadcasting, a network staffed by a motley crew of lechers and cutthroats. Featured were Pamela Bellwood as Ellen Cunningham, a twenty-nine-year-old programming executive trying to make it in the male-dominated corporate structure; Alex Cord as Jack Kiley, the venal chief of programming; Richard Basehart as news director Gus Dunlap; Andrew Prine as the alcoholic sales chief, Dan Costello; Howard Witt as Walter Matthews, director of operations; Lee Wilkof as Harvey Pearlstein, head of research;

Tisch Raye as Christine Nichols; Peter Coffield as Kevin; and Stephen McNally as the Chairman of the Board. The executive producer of the hour show was Lin Bolen, former vice president in charge of daytime programming for NBC; Bolen was reported to have been the model for Faye Dunaway's character in Network.

WIOU CBS

24 OCTOBER 1990–9 JANUARY 1991; 4 MARCH 1991–20 MARCH 1991 Hour dramatic series set at the newsroom of WNDY-TV, nicknamed WIOU by its staffers because of its precarious financial condition. The ensemble cast included: John Shea as Hank Zaret, the newly hired news director; Harris Yulin as the highly paid, skirt-chasing anchorman, Neal Frazier; Dick Van Patten as weatherman Floyd Graham; Phil Morris as ambitious reporter Eddie Bock; Wallace Langham as intern Willis Teitelbaum; Jayne Brook as field producer Ann Hudson; Joe Grifasi as public relations man Tony Pro; Mariette Hartley as the executive producer of the newcast, Liz McVay; Helen Shaver as Hank's old flame, reporter (and new coanchor) Kelby Robinson; Kate McNeil as new reporter Taylor Young, freshly arrived from Tampa; Scott Harlan as Ralph, the floor director; and Robin Gammell as station manager Kevin Doherty. Rosie Perez appeared in four episodes as sportscaster Lucy Hernandez. John Eisendrath and Kathryn Pratt created the series.

WKRP IN CINCINNATI CBS

18 SEPTEMBER 1978–20 SEPTEMBER 1982 Half-hour sitcom set at WKRP, a moribund radio station in Cincinnati (coincidentally or not, Cincinnati has a real-life radio station with the call letters WKRC). With Gary Sandy as Andy Travis, the new program director hired to turn the station around, and who turned it into a rock and roll station; Gordon Jump as Arthur Carlson, the cautious station manager; Loni Anderson as Jennifer Marlowe, Carlson's gorgeous and intelligent secretary; Richard Sanders as Les Nessman, the station's news, weather, and agricultural department (Les was especially proud of his Silver Sow Award for agricultural reportage); Frank Bonner as Herb Tarlek, the self-infatuated sales manager; Jan Smithers as program assistant Bailey Quarters; Howard Hesseman as disc jockey Johnny Caravella, whose on-the-air nom de plume was Dr. Johnny Fever; and Tim Reid as Gordon Sims (better known as Venus Flytrap), a flamboyant black DJ brought in by Travis. Occasionally featured was Arthur Carlson's mother, who owned the station; Sylvia Sidney and Carol Bruce played Mama Carlson. Hugh Wilson created the series for MTM Enterprises. During its four years on CBS, the show underwent no less than seven time-slot changes.

In 1991 the series was revived for first-run syndication: see The New WKRP in Cincinnati.

THE WACKIEST SHIP IN THE ARMY NBC

19 SEPTEMBER 1965–4 SEPTEMBER 1966 Hour sitcom set during World War II aboard the Kiwi, a decrepit schooner built in 1871 and pressed into service by Army intelligence for use in the South Pacific. With Jack Warden as Major Simon Butcher; Gary Collins as Lieutenant Rip Riddle; Mike Kellin as Chief Miller; Rudy Solari as Nagurski; Mark Slade as Hollis; Don Penny as Tyler; Fred Smoot as Trivers; Duke Hobbie as Finch; William Zuckert as General Cross; and Charles Irving as Admiral Beckett. Based on the 1960 motion picture, the series was produced by Screen Gems.

WACKO CBS

17 SEPTEMBER 1977–3 SEPTEMBER 1978 Half-hour weekend variety series for children, featuring musical numbers, skits, and blackouts. The Sylvers and Rip Taylor were frequent guests.

THE WACKY RACES CBS

14 SEPTEMBER 1968–5 SEPTEMBER 1970 Saturday-morning cartoon series about a transcontinental automobile race. Spinoffs included Dastardly and Muttley and The Perils of Penelope Pitstop.

THE WACKY WORLD OF JONATHAN WINTERS SYNDICATED

1972 Half-hour comedy series starring improvisational comedian Jonathan Winters and featuring Marian Mercer and the Soul Sisters. See also The Jonathan Winters Show.

WACKY WORLD OF SPORTS SYNDICATED

1986 Bloopers from sports were the centerpiece of this syndicated series, hosted by the ubiquitous Bob Uecker, himself a former major league baseballer.

WAGON TRAIN NBC/ABC

18 SEPTEMBER 1957–12 SEPTEMBER 1962 (NBC); 19 SEPTEMBER 1962–5 SEPTEMBER 1965 (ABC) One of television's most popular westerns, Wagon Train was the number-two rated series for three seasons (1958–1959 through 1960–1961) before rising to the number-one spot in 1961–1962. It lost ground after switching networks in 1962 and an attempt to expand it from sixty to ninety minutes (emulating The Virginian) in the fall of 1963 was unsuccessful. Wagon Train was, of course, set aboard a wagon train along the trail from Missouri to California. To a greater extent than most westerns it relied on guest stars—each episode was entitled "The ______ Story," and was named after that week's guest character. Ward Bond (who had starred in Wagonmaster, the 1950 film on which the series was based) starred as the wagonmaster, Major Seth Adams, from 1957 until his death late in 1960. On 15 March 1961, John McIntire was introduced as the new wagonmaster, Chris Hale; McIntire remained with the show until the end. Also featured were Robert Horton (1957–1960 and 1961–1962) as scout Flint McCullough; Frank McGrath as Charlie Wooster, the cook; Terry Wilson as Bill Hawks; Denny (Scott) Miller (spring 1961–1963) as scout Duke Shannon; Michael Burns (spring 1963–1965) as Barnaby West, a teenager; Robert Fuller (1963–1965) as Cooper, Wagon Train's last scout. Howard Christie produced the show for Revue Studios.

WAIT 'TIL YOUR FATHER GETS HOME SYNDICATED

1972 This Hanna-Barbera cartoon series was aimed at an adult audience and was strongly reminiscent of All in the Family. Voices included those of Tom Bosley as Harry Boyle, the father; Joan Gerber as wife Irma; Kristina Holland as daughter Alice; David Hayward as son Chet; Jackie Haley as son Jamie; and Jack Burns as neighbor Ralph.

WAKE RATTLE & ROLL SYNDICATED

1990–1991 This half-hour daily kids' show from Hanna-Barbera Productions was intended for early morning time slots. It was set in the basement of the Baxter household, where teenage son Sam (played by R. J. Williams) hung out with a robot known as DECKS, and watched cartoons. Tim Lawrence performed as DECKS, while Rob Paulsen provided the voice. Also appearing were Avery Schreiber as Grandpa Quirk, Ebonie Smith as K. C., and Terri Ivens as Sam's older sister, Debbie.

A WALK THROUGH THE 20TH CENTURY WITH BILL MOYERS PBS

11 JANUARY 1984–27 JUNE 1984 TV journalist Bill Moyers sought to depict the "vivacity of the past" on this wide-ranging, nineteen-week documentary series.

WALKER, TEXAS RANGER CBS

22 APRIL 1993–1 MAY 1993; 25 SEPTEMBER 1993– Chuck Norris, star of numerous action films, literally headlined this hour crime show: Its official title was Chuck Norris Is Walker, Texas Ranger. Norris played Cordell Walker, a modern day Texas Ranger who relied heavily on his fists and his martial arts skills. Also featured were Clarence Gilyard as his new partner, Jimmy Trivette, who preferred to use scientific methods to solve crimes; Gailard Sartain (spring 1993) and Noble Willingham (fall 1993– ) as Walker's pal, C. D. Parker, a retired Ranger; Sheree J. Wilson as prosecutor Alex Cahill; and Floyd Red Crow Westerman as Uncle Ray, the wise Native American who raised the half-Indian Walker after his father had died.

Walker's original production company, Cannon Pictures, ceased production after making only four episodes because of financial difficulties; CBS Entertainment then agreed to provide financing, and production was able to continue.

WALKING TALL NBC

17 JANUARY 1981–6 JUNE 1981 This violent hour crime show was based on the 1973 film and its three sequels (two theatrical films and a 1978 TV-movie, "A Real American Hero"), which in turn were based on a real-life character, Tennessee sheriff Buford Pusser, whose wife was killed in an attempt on his life. The TV series starred Bo Svenson (who had appeared in the theatrical sequels) as Pusser, the club-wielding sheriff of lawless McNeil County. With him were Walter Barnes as his father, Carl Pusser; Harold Sylvester as Deputy Aaron Fairfax; Jeff Lester as Deputy Grady Spooner; Courtney Pledger as Deputy Joan Litton; Rad Daly as Mike, Pusser's teenage son; and Heather McAdam as Dwana, Pusser's preteen daughter.

WALL $TREET WEEK WITH LOUIS RUKEYSER PBS

WALT DISNEY ABC/NBC/CBS

27 OCTOBER 1954–17 SEPTEMBER 1961 (ABC); 24 SEPTEMBER 1961–13 SEPTEMBER 1981 (NBC); 26 SEPTEMBER 1981–24 SEPTEMBER 1983 (CBS); 2 FEBRUARY 1986–11 SEPTEMBER 1988 (ABC); 9 OCTOBER 1988–9 SEPTEMBER 1990 (NBC) Though Walt Disney is remembered chiefly for his films, his television series was one of the most successful, and remarkable, in the history of broadcasting. It was aired on all three commercial networks under several different titles, but it was really one continuous series; as such, it was TV's longest-running prime-time series, lasting twenty-nine consecutive seasons. Disneyland was the first ABC series to crack Nielsen's Top Twenty (this was no mean achievement, because for many years ABC had far fewer affiliates than CBS or NBC). It was also the first prime-time anthology series for children, and the first to incorporate miniseries (though the term itself was not used until much later). It even survived the death of its host and creator.

Walter Elias Disney was born in Chicago in 1901, and began making cartoons in Kansas City in the 1920s. In 1926 he moved to Los Angeles and formed a production company with his older brother, Roy Disney. In 1928 Disney's most famous cartoon character, Mickey Mouse, first came to the screen (Disney himself supplied Mickey's voice). Disney also made some of the first sound cartoons that year, and in 1932 produced the first film in full technicolor. Two years later Disney's second most famous cartoon star, Donald Duck, appeared. By the end of the decade Disney had produced the first feature length animated film, Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs. Other features, such Fantasia, Dumbo, and Bambi followed soon thereafter. By the end of the 1940s he had begun his famous nature documentaries, True Life Adventures, and had also started producing live-action (or combination live and animated) films, such as Song of the South.

Though Disney produced one or two television specials early in the 1950s, it was not until 1954 that he seriously pursued the idea of a weekly show. By this time he had also laid the plans for his real-life "Magic Kingdom," Disneyland, a year-round amusement park divided into four areas—Frontierland, Adventureland, Fantasyland, and Tomorrowland. The ABC network, which had merged with United Paramount Theaters in 1953, agreed to invest in the venture and to carry the proposed series. Disney was thus able to use the show, which was titled Disneyland from 1954 to 1958, not only to promote the park but also to publicize upcoming theatrical features from Disney Studios (a year later, ABC managed to interest two other film studios in similar promotional shows; see M-G-M Parade and Warner Brothers Presents). The series' premiere telecast, "The Disneyland Story," showed the construction of the park and whetted the curiosity of countless young viewers. Over the succeeding years, several shows were devoted to Disneyland.

In general, the mixture of programs during the first year was typical of the subsequent seasons: edited versions of previously released theatrical features, coupled with a number of original productions (teasers for forthcoming releases were also featured in later seasons). The original shows included documentaries on natural history, behind-the-scenes broadcasts from Disney Studios, and several dramatic shows. The most popular programs of the first season (and perhaps of the entire series) fell into the latter category: the three Davy Crockett segments. These shows (together with two more that were televised the following season) may properly be considered as television's first miniseries. All of them starred Fess Parker as American folk hero Davy Crockett, and they included: "Davy Crockett, Indian Fighter" (15 December 1954), "Davy Crockett Goes to Congress" (26 January 1955), "Davy Crockett at the Alamo" (23 February 1955), "Davy Crockett's Keelboat Race" (16 November 1955), and "Davy Crockett and the River Pirates" (14 December 1955). Disney later admitted that the enormous popularity of the first three segments (especially "Davy Crockett at the Alamo") caught everyone at Disney Studios by surprise; fortunately, however, Disney was quick to capitalize on the hit show by licensing the distribution and sale of all kinds of Davy Crockett paraphernalia; hundreds of thousands of "coonskin" caps and bubble gum cards were quickly bought by young fans.

The Disney people tried hard for the next several years to develop a character as popular as Davy Crockett. Several miniseries were launched hopefully between 1957 and 1960, but none of them came close to eclipsing the Crockett stories. Among the also-rans were: "The Saga of Andy Burnett," starring Jerome Courtland as Andy Burnett, a pioneer who traveled from Pittsburgh to the Rockies (the first of the six stories was introduced 2 October 1957; they were written by Tom Blackburn, and were based on the novels by Stewart Edward White); "The Nine Lives of Elfego Baca," starring Robert Loggia as Elfego Baca, a peace-loving New Mexico lawman (introduced 3 October 1958, six episodes were shown during the 1958–1959 season, and more were shown during the following season); "Tales of Texas John Slaughter," starring Tom Tryon as Texas Ranger John Slaughter (at least thirteen segments were shown, beginning 31 October 1958); "The Swamp Fox," starring Leslie Nielsen as General Francis Marion, the Revolutionary War hero of the Carolinas (six episodes were shown during the 1959–1960 season, beginning 23 October, and more were shown during the 1960–1961 season; General Marion even sported a foxtail on his three-cornered hat, but the headpiece failed to capture the public fancy as the Crockett cap had).

In the fall of 1958 the title of Disney's series was changed to Walt Disney Presents. Later that season a Disney experiment produced one of the first stereophonic broadcasts of a television program; on 30 January 1959, "The Peter Tchaikovsky Story" was telecast, and in certain cities the audio portion of the broadcast was transmitted by two radio stations—an AM station carried one channel, while an FM outlet carried the other (FM multiplex stereo was still a phenomenon of the future).

After seven seasons on ABC, Disney switched to NBC in the fall of 1961; the new network affiliation gave Disney the opportunity to broadcast in color, and the show was thus retitled Walt Disney's Wonderful World of Color. On the 1961 premiere (24 September), Disney introduced his first major new cartoon character in years, the highly knowledgeable Professor Ludwig von Drake, in "An Adventure in Color, Mathmagic Land." It was the first of several educational shows hosted by von Drake, who was an uncle of Donald Duck (some of the shows were cohosted by Disney himself). The first few seasons of Wonderful World of Color consisted mainly of new features, such as the three-part "The Prince and the Pauper," or the two-part "The Mooncussers." The miniseries idea was revived briefly in 1964, with "The Adventures of Gallagher," starring Roger Mobley as Gallagher, a nineteenth-century boy reporter. By the late 1960s, however, more and more of the programs consisted of reruns of Disney films and cartoons. In 1969, almost three years after Disney's death, the show was retitled The Wonderful World of Disney. In the fall of 1978 the show celebrated the beginning of its twenty-fifth year on television with a two-part retrospective. The show was retitled Disney's Wonderful World in the fall of 1979.

In 1981 the series ended its twenty-year affiliation with NBC and moved to CBS, where it ran another two seasons. In 1983 a cable service was established; The Disney Channel presented entertainment for children, culled from the TV series Zorro (Disney's 1957 series) and other Disney films and cartoons.

After a two-and-one-half-year absence from network television, Disney-produced product returned in February 1986, back again on ABC. The Disney Sunday Movie ran for two and one half years, in a two-hour format from 1986 until September 1987, when it was trimmed to an hour. The series was hosted by Michael Eisner, the head of Disney Studios, and consisted of reruns of classic Disney theatrical films and first-run made-for-TV movies.

In the fall of 1988 the series again switched networks and titles, moving to NBC as The Magical World of Disney. Again hosted by Eisner, the series presented some recurring programs, such as "Parent Trap III," with Hayley Mills (who had starred in the 1961 Disney film The Parent Trap), Barry Bostwick, and the Creel Triplets (Joy, Leanna and Monica), "The Absent-Minded Professor," starring Harry Anderson, and "A Brand New Life," starring Barbara Eden. On 20 November 1988 an updated Davy Crockett story was telecast; "Davy Crockett: Rainbow in the Thunder" starred Tim Dunigan as Crockett and Gary Grubbs as Georgie Russell.

WALTER & EMILY NBC

16 NOVEMBER 1991–22 FEBRUARY 1992 Half-hour sitcom about two grandparents who, when not bickering with each other, helped their grown son raise his own son. The cast included Brian Keith as the grandfather, Walter Collins, a retired salesman; Cloris Leachman as the grandmother, Emily; Christopher McDonald as their son, Matt, a divorced San Francisco sportswriter whose job often took him away from home; Matthew Lawrence as their grandson, eleven-year-old Zack; and Edan Gross as Zack's pal, Hartley. Occasionally featured were Sandy Baron and Shelley Berman as Walter's cronies, Stan and Albert, who were also retired salesmen.

THE WALTER WINCHELL SHOW ABC/NBC

5 OCTOBER 1952–26 JUNE 1955 (ABC); 5 OCTOBER 1956–28 DECEMBER 1956 (NBC); 2 OCTOBER 1960–6 NOVEMBER 1960 (ABC)

THE WALTER WINCHELL FILE ABC/SYNDICATED

2 OCTOBER 1957–28 MARCH 1958 (ABC); 1958 (SYNDICATED) Syndicated newspaper columnist Walter Winchell tried several formats on television, but none was particularly successful (Winchell, who died in 1972, is probably best remembered by TV audiences as the narrator of The Untouchables). His first series was a fifteen-minute Sunday-night newscast, which lasted three seasons. In 1956, and again in 1960, he was the host of a half-hour variety show; both series were dropped in midseason. In 1957 he was the host and narrator of The Walter Winchell File, a half-hour series of crime dramas produced by Mort Briskin. Twenty-six programs were shown on ABC during the 1957–1958 season, and an additional thirteen were added to the first twenty-six when the series went into syndication.

THE WALTONS CBS

14 SEPTEMBER 1972–20 AUGUST 1981 An unpretentious, low-key dramatic series, The Waltons told the story of a close-knit family living in rural Virginia during the Depression years. Its creator, Earl Hamner, Jr., based the show largely on his own experiences. One of eight children, Hamner grew up near Schuyler, Virginia, and left home in the late 1930s to become a professional writer. Hamner's first effort at dramatizing his boyhood ended up as a film, Spencer's Mountain, set in Wyoming, and starring Henry Fonda, Maureen O'Hara, and James MacArthur as Clay-Boy.

The genesis of the TV series was a Christmas special, "The Homecoming" (19 December 1971), written by Hamner; the telecast was not intended to be a pilot for a series, but it attracted such favorable public reaction that CBS decided to build a series around the Walton family that Hamner had created. The roles of three of the four Walton adults were recast for the series, but the roles of the seven Walton children were filled by those who had appeared in "The Homecoming": Richard Thomas as John (John-Boy) Walton, Jr.; the eldest; Jon Walmsley as Jason; Judy Norton as Mary Ellen; Eric Scott as Ben; Mary Elizabeth McDonough as Erin; David W. Harper as James Robert (Jim-Bob); and Kami Cotler as Elizabeth. The adult roles on the series were played by: Michael Learned as Olivia Walton, the mother; Ralph Waite as John Walton, the father; Will Geer as Zeb Walton, the grandfather; Ellen Corby as Esther Walton, the grandmother (in "The Homecoming," those parts were played by Patricia Neal, Andrew Duggan, Edgar Bergen, and Ellen Corby).

As a series, The Waltons was given little chance to succeed in 1972 when CBS scheduled it on Thursdays opposite The Flip Wilson Show on NBC. However, the show attracted not only good reviews (and several Emmys), but also a large enough audience to warrant its renewal (it finished twentieth its first season); in its second season it toppled Flip Wilson, finishing second to All in the Family in the seasonal Nielsens. Its popularity remained fairly steady through the 1970s. One reason for its endurance was that, as the show evolved in time (between 1972 and 1980, it moved from 1933 to 1943), its characters were allowed to mature and develop. A second reason may be that the large Walton family was complemented by a small host of supporting characters. Principal members of the latter category included: Joe Conley as Ike Godsey, proprietor of the general store in Walton's Mountain, the tiny Jefferson County hamlet where most of the action took place; Helen Kleeb and Mary Jackson as sisters Mamie and Emily Baldwin, a pair of spinsters who innocently brewed moonshine in their stately home; John Crawford as Sheriff Ep Bridges; Mariclare Costello (1972–1975) as Emily Hunter, the schoolteacher; John Ritter (1973–1975) as Reverend Fordwick, who married Miss Hunter; Ronnie Claire Edwards (January 1975–1981) as John's distant cousin, Cora Beth, a frustrated socialite who married Ike Godsey; and Rachel Longaker (1976–1979) as Aimée, a little girl adopted by Ike and Cora Beth.

Life did not remain static for the several members of the Walton clan. John-Boy, an aspiring writer (like his creator, Earl Hamner, Jr.), graduated from high school, attended Boatwright University, started a local newspaper, finally left Walton's Mountain for New York, and later became a war correspondent in London (in real life, Richard Thomas decided to leave The Waltons in 1977 after five seasons, though he returned afterward for guest appearances); Jason, a musician, also finished high school and got a job playing piano in a roadhouse in order to pay for further studies; Mary Ellen became a nurse, got married (Tom Bower joined the cast in November 1976 as her husband, Dr. Curtis Willard), and had a baby, John Curtis (in real life, Judy Norton was married in 1976, and was billed as Judy Norton-Taylor afterward; John Curtis was played by Marshall and Michael Reed); Ben helped out John-Boy on the newspaper, and later worked for the family lumber business; and Erin found secretarial work.

Other changes affected the Walton adults. Ellen Corby, who played Grandma, suffered a stroke in the fall of 1976 and was absent from the series for a year and a half, returning at the end of the 1977–1978 season. Before production resumed for the 1978–1979 season, Will Geer (Grandpa) died. He was not replaced, and the opening show of the seventh season concerned the family's adjustment to Grandpa Walton's death. During the 1978–1979 season an episode was televised in which Mary Ellen's husband, Dr. Curtis Willard, was killed at Pearl Harbor. Later that season, Olivia Walton learned that she had tuberculosis and left Walton's Mountain for a sanitarium (in real life, Michael Learned's contract with the show's production company expired late in 1978, and she announced her intention to cease appearing as a regular). In the spring of 1979 Leslie Winston joined the cast as Cindy, Ben's wife, and in the fall of that year more changes occurred. Ellen Corby did not return to the series, but Michael Learned agreed to make a number of appearances. Three new regulars were also added: Peggy Rea as Olivia's cousin, Rose Burton, who came with her two grandchildren to take care of the Walton household; Martha Nix as Rose's granddaughter, Serena; and Keith Mitchell as her grandson, Jeffrey. Robert Wightman appeared as John-Boy in the 1979 Thanksgiving episode. Later that season Ben and Cindy's daughter, Virginia, was born. Lewis Arquette was also featured as Erin's employer, J. D. Pickett.

More changes occurred in the fall of 1980. All four Walton boys had left home—John-Boy was writing for Stars and Stripes in Paris, Jason was also stationed in France, Ben had joined the Seabees and was sent to the South Pacific, and Jim-Bob was being trained at Fort Langley, Virginia. Jeffrey and Serena Burton had gone off to live with their father and his new wife. Mary Ellen's husband, Curtis Willard, thought to have been killed at Pearl Harbor, turned up alive—but not well—in Florida. Rendered impotent by an injury, he refused to return to her.

The Waltons left the weekly schedule in 1981. A few specials were subsequently televised on NBC, such as "A Wedding on Walton's Mountain" (in which Erin got married; 22 February 1982), "Mother's Day on Walton's Mountain" (9 May 1982), and "A Day for Thanks on Walton's Mountain" (22 November 1982). The surviving members of the clan returned to CBS for "A Walton Thanksgiving Reunion" (21 November 1993), which was set at the time of President Kennedy's assassination in 1963, and for "A Walton Wedding" (12 February 1995), when John-Boy tied the knot.

The Waltons was the first family dramatic series of the 1970s; its success led to a proliferation of similar efforts, such as Apple's Way, Eight Is Enough, Family, The Family Holvak, The Fitzpatricks, Little House on the Prairie, Mulligan's Stew, and The New Land. It was also the first series from Lorimar Productions, a company founded in 1968 by Lee Rich and Merv Adelson (Apple's Way and Eight Is Enough were also from Lorimar). Lee Rich and Earl Hamner were the executive producers of The Waltons.

WANTED CBS

20 OCTOBER 1955–12 JANUARY 1956 Fugitives from justice were the quarry on this half-hour documentary series hosted by Walter McGraw. Dossiers of wanted criminals were presented, along with interviews with law enforcement officials and relatives of those wanted.

WANTED—DEAD OR ALIVE CBS

6 SEPTEMBER 1958–29 MARCH 1961 Western starring Steve McQueen as bounty hunter Josh Randall, who toted an 1892 44/40 center-fire Winchester carbine that he affectionately referred to as his "Mare's Laig." In the spring of 1960, Wright King was featured as Jason Nichols, a deputy sheriff who teamed up with Randall. A total of 94 half-hour episodes were filmed, with Vincent Fennelly the executive producer for Four Star Films. The pilot for the series, "The Bounty Hunter," was aired on Trackdown on 7 March 1958. In 1987 a theatrical film was released: Wanted: Dead or Alive starred Rutger Hauer as Nick Randall, grandson of Josh.

WAR: A COMMENTARY BY GWYNNE DYER PBS

1 OCTOBER 1985–19 NOVEMBER 1985 British military historian Gwynne Dyer hosted the first seven programs in this eight-part examination of war and warfare, historical and contemporary. The eighth program, "War: The Knife Edge of Deterrence," was moderated by Edwin Newman, and featured Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger and three former secretaries of defense.

WAR AND PEACE PBS

20 NOVEMBER 1973–15 JANUARY 1974 The fourteen-and-a-half-hour adaptation of Tolstoy's novel by the BBC was shown on American television in nine parts. Principal players included: Anthony Hopkins as Pierre; David Swift as Napoleon; Morag Hood as Natasha; Alan Dobie as Andrei; and Anthony Jacobs as Prince Nikolai.

WAR AND PEACE IN THE NUCLEAR AGE PBS

23 JANUARY 1989–17 APRIL 1989 The development and proliferation of atomic weapons were chronicled in this thirteen-week documentary series.

WAR AND REMEMBRANCE ABC

13 NOVEMBER 1988–23 NOVEMBER 1988; 7 MAY 1989–14 MAY 1989 The thirty-hour sequel to the 1983 miniseries The Winds of War, War and Remembrance was based on Herman Wouk's novel about World War II, and was written for television by Wouk, Dan Curtis and Earl W. Wallace. Curtis also served as executive producer and director. It was filmed in ten countries, using 757 sets; some of the concentration camp scenes were filmed on location at Auschwitz in Poland. The November portion of the miniseries, shown in seven installments, went from 1941 to 1943, while the May airing, in five parts, ran from 1943 to the end of the war in 1945. Principal players included: Robert Mitchum as American naval officer Victor "Pug" Henry; Polly Bergen as his wife, Rhoda Henry; Victoria Tennant as Pamela Tudsbury; Jane Seymour as Natalie Jastrow; Hart Bochner as Byron Henry; Michael Woods as Warren Henry; Sir John Gielgud as Aaron Jastrow; Peter Graves as Palmer Kirby; Robert Hardy as Winston Churchill; and Steven Berkoff as Adolf Hitler. Some of the combat footage consisted of outtakes from a 1941 motion picture, Dive Bombers. Because of the huge expense of the production (estimated at $110 million), and the mediocre ratings it garnered, ABC is believed to have lost at least $20 million on the telecast. The era of the long-form miniseries had, unfortunately, already begun its eclipse.

WAR OF THE WORLDS SYNDICATED

1988–1990 This hour sci-fi series was set in the present time, thirty-five years after the 1953 film version of H. G. Wells's novel. At the end of the film, the alien invaders had supposedly been neutralized by bacteria. As the TV series opened, however, it turned out that the aliens had not been killed, but had reawakened from their underground disposal sites. They now had the power to take over a human body. Fighting the new menace was a team of four: Dr. Harrison Blackwood (played by Jared Martin), computer scientist Norton Drake (Philip Akin), microbiologist Suzanne McCullough (Lynda Mason Green), and Lieutenant Colonel Paul Ironhorse (Richard Chaves). During the show's second season another group of aliens, known as the Morthrens, came to Earth, making life even more difficult for the home team. Also featured were Rachel Blanchard as Suzanne's daughter, Debi; Adrian Paul as good guy John Kincaid; Catherine Disher as alien leader Mana; and Denis Forest as alien leader Malzor. Greg Strangis created the TV series.

WARNER BROTHERS PRESENTS ABC

13 SEPTEMBER 1955–4 SEPTEMBER 1956 This hour umbrella series, which heralded Warner Brothers' entry into television series production, was hosted by Gig Young. During the season three series were regularly shown in the time slot, together with occasional hour dramas. All three shows were based on popular Warner Brothers films: Casablanca, Cheyenne, and King's Row. Cheyenne was the only one of the trio to be renewed for a second season. See individual titles for details.

WASHINGTON: BEHIND CLOSED DOORS ABC

6 SEPTEMBER 1977–11 SEPTEMBER 1977 Six-part miniseries adapted from John Ehrlichman's novel, The Company. Principal players included: Jason Robards as President Richard Monckton; Cliff Robertson as William Martin, director of the CIA; Lois Nettleton as Linda Martin; Stefanie Powers as Sally Whalen; Andy Griffith as Esker Anderson, Monckton's predecessor in office; Robert Vaughn as Frank Flaherty, Monckton's brusque chief of staff; Barry Nelson as Bob Bailey; Harold Gould as Carl Tessler; Tony Bill as Adam Gardiner; Nicholas Pryor as Hank Ferris, press secretary; John Houseman as Myron Dunn; and Skip Homeier as Lars Haglund. Stan Kallis was the executive producer for Paramount TV; David Rintels and Eric Bercovici wrote the script.

THE WATCHER UPN

17 JANUARY 1995–11 APRIL 1995 This unusual hour anthology series was set in Las Vegas, where the week's story was observed and narrated by a man known simply as the Watcher. A security executive at the Desert Flower Casino in the Riviera Hotel, the omniscient observer did his watching on a bank of video screens. Rapper Sir Mix-a-Lot starred as the Watcher. Christopher Crowe created the series.

WATER WORLD SYNDICATED

1972–1975 Half-hour documentary series on the oceans and marine world, narrated first by Lloyd Bridges, later by James Franciscus.

WATERFRONT SYNDICATED

1954–1956 Half-hour adventure series, set principally aboard the Cheryl Ann, a tugboat in the San Pedro (Calif.) harbor. With Preston Foster as Captain John Herrick; Lois Moran as his wife, May Herrick; Pinky Tomlin as Tip Hubbard; Douglas Dick as Carl, the Herricks' son, who worked aboard the tug. Ben Fox created and produced the show, which was filmed at Hal Roach Studios. The Cheryl Ann was really the Milton S. Patrick, an honest-to-goodness tug which plied the San Pedro harbor.

THE WAVERLY WONDERS NBC

22 SEPTEMBER 1978–6 OCTOBER 1978 An early fatality of the 1978–1979 season, The Waverly Wonders was dropped after only three airings. The half-hour sitcom, apparently inspired by the movie The Bad News Bears, starred Joe Namath as Joe Casey, the newly arrived coach of the hapless basketball team at Waverly High School. Also on hand were Gwynne Gilford as the principal; James Staley as faculty member Alan Kerner; Ben Piazza as faculty member George Benton; Joshua Grenrock as Faguzzi; Kim Lankford as Connie Rafkin; Tierre Turner as Hasty; and Charles Bloom as Johnny Tate. The show was created by William Bickley and Michael Warren, and produced by Steve Zacharias and Bruce Kane; Lee Rich and Marc Merson were the executive producers for Lorimar Productions.

WAYNE AND SHUSTER TAKE AN AFFECTIONATE LOOK AT . . . CBS

17 JUNE 1966–29 JULY 1966 Canadian comics Johnny Wayne and Frank Shuster hosted this semidocumentary series. Each show focused on a particular aspect of comedy; one show, for example, was a tribute to Jack Benny and incorporated clips from Benny's films and TV series.

WE GOT IT MADE NBC/SYNDICATED

8 SEPTEMBER 1983–30 MARCH 1984 (NBC); 1987–1988 (SYNDICATED) Half-hour sitcom about two Manhattan bachelors who hired a gorgeous live-in housekeeper, much to the consternation of their girlfriends. With Teri Copley as the naive housekeeper, Mickey Mackenzie, a Marilyn Monroe clone; Matt McCoy as natty lawyer David Tucker; Tom Villard as his unkempt New Wave roommate, Jay Bostwick, an importer of marginally useful merchandise; Bonnie Urseth as Jay's girlfriend, Beth, a kindergarten teacher; and Stepfanie Kramer as David's girlfriend, Claudia. Gordon Farr and Lynne Farr Brao created the series; Fred Silverman (former NBC president) was the executive producer. Writing in the Boston Globe, critic Jack Thomas proclaimed We Got It Made as "This year's absolutely, positively unchallenged, worst new show." Nevertheless, the series' premiere telecast ranked second for the week. In 1987 MGM/UA produced new episodes for syndication. Copley and Villard returned from the original cast. John Hillner replaced Matt McCoy as David Tucker, and Ron Karabatsos and Lance Wilson-White appeared as neighbors Max Papavasilios Sr. and Jr.

WE TAKE YOUR WORD CBS

1 APRIL 1950–23 JANUARY 1951; 9 MARCH 1951–1 JUNE 1951 John K. M. McCaffery hosted this prime-time game show on which a celebrity panel tried to supply the definitions and derivations of words suggested by home viewers. Ilka Chase and Abe Burrows were regular panelists.

WE, THE PEOPLE CBS/NBC

1 JUNE 1948–25 OCTOBER 1949 (CBS); 4 NOVEMBER 1949–26 SEPTEMBER 1952 (NBC) This early interview series began on radio in 1936. When it came to television in 1948, Dwight Weist was the host, but in 1949 Dan Seymour replaced him. The show combined celebrity interviews with human interest stories.

WE THE PEOPLE PBS

22 SEPTEMBER 1987–13 OCTOBER 1987 ABC news anchor Peter Jennings hosted this four-part study of the impact of the United States Constitution on modern society. President Ronald Reagan introduced the series, which examined the following topics: "Free to Believe," "What Price Equality?" "Law and Order," and "Who's in Charge?"

THE WEAKER (?) SEX SYNDICATED

1968 Pamela Mason interviewed female guests on this half-hour talk show.

THE WEB CBS/NBC

4 JULY 1950–26 SEPTEMBER 1954 (CBS); 7 JULY 1957–6 OCTOBER 1957 (NBC); A half-hour dramatic anthology series, The Web specialized in stories about people who created the very crises in which they became involved. Jonathan Blake hosted. Frank Heller, and then Vincent McConnor, produced the show for Goodson-Todman Productions. After a four-year run on CBS The Web surfaced on NBC as a summer replacement for The Loretta Young Show. William Bryant narrated.

THE WEBB PIERCE SHOW SYNDICATED

1955 Webb Pierce hosted this half-hour country-and-western-music show, broadcast from Nashville.

WEBSTER ABC/SYNDICATED

16 SEPTEMBER 1983–11 SEPTEMBER 1987 (ABC); 1987–1988 (SYNDICATED) This half-hour sitcom bore a passing resemblance to NBC's Diff'rent Strokes—here, a white couple become the guardians of a diminutive black child who had recently been orphaned. Featured were Alex Karras as George Papadopolis, an ex-pro football player who had promised a black teammate that he would, if necessary, look after his young son; Susan Clark (Karras's real-life wife) as George's wife, Katherine Calder-Young, an ombudsperson for the city of Chicago; Emmanuel Lewis as the orphan, seven-year-old Webster Long (Lewis was actually twelve, but only three feet, four inches tall); and Henry Polic II as Katherine's secretary, Jerry Silver. In the fall of 1984 three new cast members were added, as Webster and his family moved out of their apartment and into a Victorian house. Eugene Roche and Cathryn Damon played Bill and Cassie Parker, owners (and renovators) of the house; Ben Vereen appeared as Webster's uncle, Phillip Long, who tried to win custody of the child. Vereen left after one season, Roche and Damon after two, when George and Katherine bought the house from the Parkers, who moved to Florida. Corky Nemec was added for the show's final season, as George's nephew Nicky, who lived with them while his parents were overseas.

The genesis of the series came from two sources: ABC programming chief Lew Erlicht had spotted Emmanuel Lewis in a Burger King commercial, and wanted to build a series around him. At the same time, producer Stu Silver had wanted to create a sitcom with characters modeled after those played by Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn in the 1942 film Woman of the Year.

WEDDING DAY NBC

8 JUNE 1981–12 JUNE 1981 A throwback to Bride and Groom, this half-hour daytime series featured a wedding—and a wedding party—every day during its one-week tryout. The ratings were disappointing, and the series was not picked up. Mary Ann Mobley and Huell Howser were the cohosts.

WEDDING PARTY ABC

1 APRIL 1968–12 JULY 1968 Al Hamel hosted this daytime game show on which prospective brides and grooms could win prizes if their selections matched.

THE WEDNESDAY NIGHT FIGHTS

THE WEEK IN REVIEW CBS

20 JULY 1947–13 JANUARY 1951 One of television's first news shows, The Week in Review was a fifteen-minute wrapup of the week's top news stories.

WEEKEND NBC

20 OCTOBER 1974–22 APRIL 1979 A monthly series, Weekend evolved from two previous NBC magazine shows, First Tuesday and Chronolog. Hosted by Lloyd Dobyns, it aimed at a younger audience than CBS's 60 Minutes. From 1974 until 1978 it was a ninety-minute show, usually scheduled on the first Saturday of the month; in the fall of 1978 it was trimmed to an hour and moved to prime time (Sundays at 10:00 P.M., again once a month). Linda Ellerbee joined Lloyd Dobyns as cohost that season. Reuven Frank was the executive producer.

WEEKEND HEROES SYNDICATED

1981 Former pro footballer Paul Hornung and Jayne Kennedy hosted this half-hour series, which presented biographies and interviews with famous gridiron stars.

WELCOME ABOARD NBC

3 OCTOBER 1948–20 FEBRUARY 1949 Half-hour musical variety show, hosted by a guest celebrity each week. The Russ Morgan Orchestra was featured during the early weeks, the Vincent Lopez Orchestra during the latter weeks.

WELCOME BACK, KOTTER ABC

9 SEPTEMBER 1975–3 AUGUST 1979 Half-hour sitcom about a high school teacher who returns to his alma mater, James Buchanan High in Brooklyn, to teach the "sweathogs," a supposedly untrainable group of hard-core underachievers. With Gabriel Kaplan as Gabe Kotter; Marcia Strassman as his wife, Julie Kotter; John Travolta (who would later skyrocket to superstardom in Saturday Night Fever) as Vinnie Barbarino; Robert Hegyes as Juan Epstein; Ron Palillo as Arnold Horshack; Lawrence Hilton-Jacobs as Freddie "Boom-Boom" Washington; John Sylvester White as Michael Woodman, the vice principal; and James Wood as Alex Welles, another teacher. In the fall of 1977 Julie Kotter gave birth to twin girls, and in January 1978 Melonie Haller joined the cast as Angie Globagoski, a female sweathog. In the fall of 1978, as John Travolta's contract permitted him to appear less frequently, a new sweathog was added: Stephen Shortridge as Beau De Labarre, an experienced high schooler with seven expulsions to his credit. James Komack was the executive producer of the show, and its theme song, "Welcome Back," was sung by John Sebastian.

WELCOME TRAVELERS NBC/CBS

8 SEPTEMBER 1952–2 JULY 1954 (NBC); 5 JULY 1954–28 OCTOBER 1955 (CBS) Broadcast from Chicago, this daytime show was created by Tommy Bartlett, who brought it to radio in 1947. Travelers to Chicago were invited to come to the show, where they talked with Bartlett and were presented with gifts. When the show came to TV, Bartlett added a cohost, Bob Cunningham; Jack Smith and Pat Meikle later took over as hosts. The set for the TV version was made to look like the Porterhouse Room of the College Inn, the site of the radio version.

WE'LL GET BY CBS

14 MARCH 1975–30 MAY 1975 Alan Alda created this family sitcom, set in suburban New Jersey. With Paul Sorvino as lawyer George Platt; Mitzi Hoag as his wife, Liz Platt; Jerry Houser as son Muff; Devon Scott as daughter Andrea; and Willie Aames as son Kenny.

WELLS FARGO NBC

18 MARCH 1957–8 SEPTEMBER 1962 Officially titled Tales of Wells Fargo, this western starred Dale Robertson as Jim Hardie, an agent for the transport company. When the show expanded from thirty to sixty minutes in the fall of 1961, Hardie had bought a ranch, and the cast was also expanded; newcomers included Jack Ging as Beau McCloud, another Wells Fargo agent; Virginia Christine as Ovie, a widow who owned a nearby ranch; Lory Patrick as Ovie's daughter, Tina, the schoolteacher; Mary Jane Saunders as Ovie's daughter, Mary Gee; and William Demarest as Hardie's ranch foreman, Jeb Gaine. The show was first produced by Earle Lyon for Overland Productions and Universal Television, and later by Nat Holt for Juggernaut Productions and Universal. Jack Nicholson appeared in one of his first major TV roles in one episode, "The Washburn Girl," aired 13 February 1961.

WENDY AND ME ABC

14 SEPTEMBER 1964–6 SEPTEMBER 1965 Half-hour sitcom about an airline pilot and his wife, who move into an apartment building where George Burns (who appeared as himself, and addressed the camera as he did in The Burns and Allen Show) was the landlord. With Ron Harper as pilot Jeff Conway; Connie Stevens as his wife, Wendy Conway; James Callahan as Jeff's friend and copilot, bachelor Danny Adams; J. Pat O'Malley as Mr. Bundy, the handyman; and Bartlett Robinson as Willard Norton, Jeff's boss.

THE WENDY BARRIE SHOW NBC/DUMONT/ABC

10 NOVEMBER 1948–2 FEBRUARY 1949 (NBC); 17 JANUARY 1949–4 MARCH 1949 (DUMONT); 7 MARCH 1949–13 JULY 1949 (DUMONT); 26 SEPTEMBER 1949–16 FEBRUARY 1950 (ABC); 21 FEBRUARY 1950–27 SEPTEMBER 1950 (NBC) One of TV's first popular female personalities, Wendy Barrie had several shows of her own in the medium's early days. The first was a ten-minute prime-time show on NBC, titled Picture This; it featured guest cartoonists who drew sketches. Early in 1949, while Picture This was still running on NBC, she started a daytime show on DuMont; in March of 1949 she moved to prime time on DuMont, with a half-hour interview show sponsored by Photoplay magazine. That show shifted to ABC in the fall of 1949, and in February of 1950 Barrie returned to NBC with a twice-weekly fifteen-minute show. Toward the end of its run this series was titled Through Wendy's Window.

WE'RE MOVIN' SYNDICATED

1981 Half-hour magazine show for teenagers. Scott Baio (of Happy Days) was the original host of the series; he was succeeded by Willie Aames (late of Eight Is Enough) early in 1982.

WEREWOLF FOX

11 JULY 1987–21 AUGUST 1988 Frank Lupo created this stylish series about a young man searching for a 1600-year-old werewolf. Featured were John York as Eric Cord, who had been bitten by a werewolf himself (and killed that werewolf in self-defense) and now had to find "the source of the bloodline" in order to rid himself of the werewolf curse; Chuck Connors as the 1600-year-old fishing boat captain Janos Skorzeny, now a diabolical killer; and Lance LeGault as Alamo Joe, a bounty hunter who was after Cord for the apparent "murder" he had committed. In a two-part finale, broadcast in February 1988, Cord finally tracked down Skorzeny and killed him, only to discover that the real "source of the bloodline" was an even more ancient werewolf, Nicholas Remy (played by Brian Thompson). Unfortunately for Cord, the series went into reruns shortly thereafter. John Ashley, who was coexecutive producer with series creator Frank Lupo, cheerfully admitted borrowing the character name of Janos Skorzeny from the 1972 TV-movie "The Night Stalker," as a tribute to the show, which was the first pilot for the series of the same name. The TV-movie had featured Barry Atwater as a vampire named Janos Skorzeny.

WESLEY CBS

8 MAY 1949–30 AUGUST 1949 Half-hour sitcom about a precocious twelve-year-old and his family. With Donald Devlin and Johnny Stewart as Wesley; Frank Thomas as his father; Mona Thomas (the real-life wife of Frank Thomas) as his mother; Joe Sweeney as his grandfather; Joy Reese as his sister; Jack Ayers as the sister's boyfriend; and Billy Nevard as Wesley's pal. The show was produced by Worthington Miner, directed by Franklin Schaffner, and written by Samuel Taylor.

WEST 57TH CBS

13 AUGUST 1985–17 SEPTEMBER 1985; 30 APRIL 1986–23 JULY 1986; 6 APRIL 1987–9 SEPTEMBER 1989 A prime-time newsmagazine show, West 57th symbolized the changing of the guard at CBS News, spearheaded by CBS News President Van Gordon Sauter and his successors, Ed Joyce and Howard Stringer. It was designed to be hipper and faster-paced than CBS's long-running 60 Minutes; more significantly, all of its correspondents would be under age thirty-five. Though 60 Minutes was highly popular through the early 1980's (ranking among the top four series every season between 1980 and 1985), many of the "new guard" at CBS News believed that it was showing its age (seventeen seasons as of 1985) and that its ratings would soon erode. West 57th was intentionally promoted as a series that would, in effect, compete with 60 Minutes and (it was hoped) eventually replace it.

West 57th was given a trial run in the late summer of 1985. It was produced by Andrew Lack, who had previously produced documentaries for CBS Reports. Some of the show's support staff came from within the ranks of CBS News; others had been hired away from MTV and Entertainment Tonight. West 57th was named for the Manhattan street on which the offices of CBS News were located. According to one writer, Lack's choice of the title was inspired by such contemporary dramatic programs as St. Elsewhere and Hill Street Blues, which bore the titles of the workplaces at which they were set. West 57th's fast-paced opening title sequence showed the four correspondents—John Ferrugia, Bob Sirott, Meredith Vieira and Jane Wallace—walking the halls, grabbing coffee, talking on the phone and meeting with each other, all to a musical score. While the show's basic format was similar to that other news magazine program, West 57th usually presented five stories each week, two more than did 60 Minutes. Show business figures, especially rock and roll stars, were regularly profiled; there were a large number of investigative reports as well, including reports on drugs, right-to-lifers, and the Nicaraguan contras. In spite of their youth, three of the four correspondents had network news experience; Sirott, the sole exception, had been a "lifestyle and entertainment editor" at a Chicago station.

Reviews were generally unimpressive, especially from past and present CBS News staffers. CBS reporter Bill Moyers (whose 1983 show, Our Times, had been produced by Andrew Lack) hated it. 60 Minutes executive producer Don Hewitt called it "light summer fare." Correspondent Andy Rooney even prepared an eight-minute parody of the new show for 60 Minutes, but CBS News president Ed Joyce refused to let it be broadcast. Despite the internal turmoil, the network was determined to give West 57th a fair shot. The series returned during the summer of 1986, and returned again in April 1987; in June of that year it moved to Saturdays at 10:00 P.M., and would remain there for two more years. Of the original four correspondents, only Ferrugia and Vieira remained for the entire run. Steve Kroft was added as a fifth correspondent in April 1987. Jane Wallace left in December 1987, and was succeeded by Karen Burnes. Bob Sirott left in 1988. Selina Scott joined the show as a contributor in 1987, and Stephen Schiff also became a contributor in 1988.

West 57th was succeeded in August 1989 by another newsmagazine show, Saturday Night with Connie Chung. Meanwhile, 60 Minutes, the prime-time dinosaur, continued to do well in the ratings, never ranking below eighth. Don Hewitt, its executive producer, hired Meredith Vieira and Steve Kroft in the fall of 1989 to replace Diane Sawyer, who had defected to ABC and her own series, PrimeTime Live.

THE WEST OF THE IMAGINATION PBS

22 SEPTEMBER 1986–26 OCTOBER 1986 A six-part look at the American west, as seen through the eyes of artists, photographers, and filmmakers. James Whitmore was the narrator.

WEST POINT CBS/ABC

5 OCTOBER 1956–27 SEPTEMBER 1957 (CBS); 8 OCTOBER 1957–1 JULY 1958 (ABC) Half-hour anthology series about life at the United States Military Academy, produced by Maurice Unger for Ziv TV. The show was hosted by Donald May, who appeared as Cadet Charles C. Thompson. Among the notable guest stars who appeared were Barbara Eden ("Decision," 23 November 1956, her first major TV role), Leonard Nimoy ("His Brother's Fist," 16 November 1956, his first major TV role), and Clint Eastwood ("White Fury," 4 February 1958). The show's theme music, "West Point March," was composed by Philip Egner and Alfred Parham.

THE WESTERNER NBC

30 SEPTEMBER 1960–30 DECEMBER 1960 Short-lived half-hour western starring Brian Keith as drifter Dave Blasingame and John Dehner as his occasional companion, Burgundy Smith. Sam Peckinpah, who created, produced, and directed the show, blamed its failure on the fact that it was "too adult."

WESTINGHOUSE PLAYHOUSE NBC

6 JANUARY 1961–7 JULY 1961 Sponsored by Westinghouse, this half-hour domestic sitcom was also known as The Nanette Fabray Show or Yes Yes Nanette. It starred Nanette Fabray as Nan McGovern, an actress who married a writer with two children from a former marriage. The story line closely paralleled Fabray's life, as she married writer Ranald MacDougall and inherited three children by MacDougall's former marriage in 1957. (MacDougall created the show for Fabray.) Also featured on the series were Wendell Corey as Nan's husband, widower Dan McGovern, a Hollywood writer; Jacklyn O'Donnell as Dan's daughter, Nancy; Bobby Diamond (late of Fury) as Dan's son, Buddy; Doris Kemper as the housekeeper, Mrs. Harper; and Mimi Gibson as Barby.

WESTSIDE MEDICAL ABC

15 MARCH 1977–25 AUGUST 1977 Hour-long dramatic series about three young physicians operating a medical clinic. With James Sloyan as Dr. Sam Lanagan; Linda Carlson as Dr. Janet Cottrell; Ernest Thompson as Dr. Phil Parker; and Alice Nunn as Carrie. Martin Starger was the executive producer.

WESTWIND NBC

6 SEPTEMBER 1975–4 SEPTEMBER 1976 Live-action Saturday-morning show about a family sailing aboard the Westwind off the coast of Hawaii. With Van Williams as underwater photographer Steve Andrews; Niki Dantine as his wife, marine biologist Kate Andrews; Kimberly Beck as their daughter, Robin; and Steve Burns as their son, Tom. William P. D'Angelo was the executive producer.

WE'VE GOT EACH OTHER CBS

1 OCTOBER 1977–7 JANUARY 1978 Half-hour domestic sitcom. With Oliver Clark as Stuart Hibbard, who took care of the apartment and wrote copy for the Herman Gutman Mail Order Catalog; Beverly Archer as his wife, Judy Hibbard, office manager for a photographer; Tom Poston as Damon Jerome, Judy's befuddled boss; Joan Van Ark as Dee Dee, Jerome's main model; Ren Woods as Donna, Jerome's secretary; and Martin Kove as the Hibbards' neighbor, Ken, a swimming pool contractor. The series was created by Tom Patchett and Jay Tarses, the executive producers of The Bob Newhart Show.

WHAT A COUNTRY! SYNDICATED

1986–1987 TV's most ethnically diverse sitcom was set in Los Angeles at a citizenship class for newly arrived immigrants. Featured were Garrett M. Brown as Taylor Brown, the teacher; Gail Strickland (1986) as the first principal, Miss Joan Courtney; Don Knotts (1987) as the next principal, Bud McPherson; Yakov Smirnoff (himself a Russian emigre) as Nicolai Rostopovich; Vijay Amritraj as Ali Nadeem, a Pakistani; George Murdock as Laszlo Garbo, a Hungarian; Julian Reyes as Victor Ortega, a Hispanic; Ada Maris as Maria Conchita Lopez, another Hispanic; Leila Hee Olsen as Yung Hee, an Asian; and Harry Waters, Jr., as Robert Moboto, an African.

WHAT-A-MESS ABC

9 SEPTEMBER 1995– This half-hour Saturday-morning cartoon series starred a clumsy but lovable dog whose given name was Prince, but who was nicknamed What-A-Mess by his family.

WHAT DO YOU HAVE IN COMMON CBS

1 JULY 1954–23 SEPTEMBER 1954 Ralph Story hosted this prime-time game show on which teams of three specially selected contestants were given three minutes to figure out what they had in common.

WHAT DO YOU THINK? ABC

17 JANUARY 1949–14 FEBRUARY 1949 Chicago-based panel-discussion series.

WHAT EVERY BABY KNOWS LIFETIME

1984– Half-hour daytime show on infant care and parenting, hosted by pediatrician Dr. T. Berry Brazelton.

WHAT EVERY WOMAN WANTS TO KNOW SYNDICATED

1972 Half-hour talk show hosted by Bess Myerson.

WHAT HAPPENED? NBC

25 SEPTEMBER 1992–9 OCTOBER 1992 Short-lived prime time show, hosted by Ken Howard, which attempted to show viewers "what happened" by taking them behind the scenes of various accidents and other disasters. Dramatizations of events were sometimes used. Although the series was canceled after only three outings, single programs popped up on NBC's schedule in March and April of 1993.

WHAT IN THE WORLD CBS

7 OCTOBER 1951–2 APRIL 1955 Perhaps the most erudite game show in television history, What in the World was hosted for most of its run by Dr. Froelich Rainey. Each week a panel of experts tried to identify archaeological artifacts. Regular panelists included Dr. Carlton Coon and Dr. Alfred Kidder. The show was broadcast from Philadelphia, where it began as a local show.

WHAT REALLY HAPPENED TO THE CLASS OF '65? NBC

8 DECEMBER 1977–27 JULY 1978 An hour anthology series, inspired by the book of the same title by Michael Medved and David Wallechinsky, two graduates of the class of 1965, Palisades High School, Los Angeles, who tracked down several members of their class eleven years later and wrote about them. The TV series was entirely fictional; set at Bret Harte High School, it was hosted by Tony Bill as Sam, a member of the class of 1965 who returned to teach at his alma mater. Richard Irving was the executive producer.

WHAT'S GOING ON? ABC

28 NOVEMBER 1954–26 DECEMBER 1954 Prime-time game show from Goodson-Todman Productions, hosted by Lee Bowman. Each week six celebrity panelists were divided into groups of three, the "ins" and the "outs." By watching the monitors, the "ins," who remained in the studio, had to guess where the "outs" were headed and what they were doing.

WHAT'S HAPPENING!! ABC/SYNDICATED

5 AUGUST 1976–26 AUGUST 1976; 13 NOVEMBER 1976–28 APRIL 1979 (ABC); 1985–1988 (SYNDICATED) Based on the film Cooley High, this half-hour sitcom told the story of three black high school students in Los Angeles. Introduced for a four-week trial run in the summer of 1976, it returned to the network schedule that fall. With Ernest Thomas as Roger "Raj" Thomas; Haywood Nelson, Jr., as his friend Dwayne; Fred Berry as their rotund friend Rerun (Freddie Stubbs); Mabel King (1976–1978) as Mama, Roger's mother; Danielle Spencer as Dee, Roger's sassy sister; and Shirley Hemphill as Shirley, the surly waitress at the boys' favorite hangout, Rob's. In the fall of 1978 Roger and Dwayne started college, and moved to an apartment of their own. Added to the cast were: John Welsh as their neighbor, Big Earl, a cop; David Hollander as his son, Little Earl; and Leland Smith as Roger and Dwayne's friend Snake. Bud Yorkin, Saul Turteltaub, and Bernie Orenstein were the executive producers.

Most of the original cast was reassembled for the 1985 syndicated revival of the sitcom, titled What's Happening Now!! Ernest Thomas played Raj, now married; Haywood Nelson, Jr., was Dwayne, now a computer programmer; Fred Berry was Rerun, a used-car salesman who roomed with Dwayne; Shirley Hemphill was Shirley, who now ran Rob's; and Danielle Spencer was Dee, now a college student. Added to the cast were Anne-Marie Johnson as Raj's wife, Nadine, and Reina King (1985–1986) as Carolyn, a foster child they took in. Fred Berry was dropped in 1986 after a salary dispute with the producers. In the fall of 1987 two more regulars were added: Martin Lawrence as Maurice, a busboy at Rob's, and Ken Sagoes as Darryl, Maurice's pal.

WHAT'S IN A WORD CBS

22 JULY 1954–9 SEPTEMBER 1954 Clifton Fadiman hosted this prime-time game show, on which a celebrity panel had to guess a pair of rhyming words from clues supplied by the host. The panel included Audrey Meadows, Faye Emerson, Mike Wallace, and Jim Moran.

WHAT'S IT ALL ABOUT, WORLD? ABC

6 FEBRUARY 1969–1 MAY 1969 What's It All About, World? started out as an hour of satire, hosted by Dean Jones. It proved to be a feeble effort; late in March the first format was scrapped and the show became a straightforward variety series, The Dean Jones Variety Hour. The second attempt was as unsuccessful as the first, and the show departed after thirteen uneventful weeks. Other regulars included Dennis Allen, Maureen Arthur, Dick Clair and Jenna McMahon, Scoey Mitchlll, Gerri Granger, Ron Prince, and Bayn Johnson (as Happy Hollywood). Writer Harlan Ellison, reviewing the series in 1969 for the Los Angeles Free Press, characterized it as "a horror of right-wing imbecility."

WHAT'S IT FOR? NBC

12 OCTOBER 1957–4 JANUARY 1958 Prime-time game show, hosted by Hal March, on which a celebrity panel tried to guess the purpose of new or unusual inventions. Panelists included Abe Burrows, Hans Conried, Betsy Palmer, and Cornelia Otis Skinner.

WHAT'S IT WORTH? CBS

21 MAY 1948–28 APRIL 1949 Prime-time show on which professional art restorer Sigmund Rothschild evaluated heirlooms and art objects, answered inquiries from viewers, and interviewed guest appraisers. Rothschild was assisted by Gil Fates, who later became the executive producer of What's My Line? See also Trash or Treasure?

WHAT'S MY LINE? CBS SYNDICATED

2 FEBRUARY 1950–3 SEPTEMBER 1967 (CBS); 1968–1975 (SYNDICATED) Television's longest-running prime-time game show involved a simple format—a panel of four celebrities tried to guess the occupations of the contestants. The panelists were permitted to ask yes-or-no questions, and the contestant was awarded $5 each time a "no" answer was given; if ten "no" answers were given, the game ended and the contestant won the top prize of $50. Each week a mystery guest also dropped by, and the panelists (who were blindfolded for this segment) tried to guess his or her identity. The show was a Mark Goodson-Bill Todman Production; Goodson and Todman were responsible for several other of TV's best known and most successful game shows, such as I've Got a Secret, To Tell the Truth, and Match Game, but What's My Line? was their first hit show. The show was hosted for its entire seventeen-year network run by John Daly (during many of those years Daly anchored the evening newscasts on ABC as well). The first panel included syndicated columnist Dorothy Kilgallen, Louis Untermeyer, Governor Harold Hoffman (of New Jersey), and psychiatrist Dr. Richard Hoffman. Phil Rizzuto of the New York Yankees was the first mystery guest. Kilgallen remained with the show until her death in 1965, but the other original panelists did not last long. Fred Allen, Hal Block, and Steve Allen (who coined the famous question, "Is it bigger than a breadbox?") were frequently fluctuated during the early 1950s, but by the end of the decade the regular panel consisted of Kilgallen, Arlene Francis, Bennett Cerf, and a guest celebrity. Among the most notable of the hundreds of mystery guests were Warren Beatty (11 September 1960), James Cagney (11 May 1958), Ty Cobb (31 July 1955), Bette Davis (5 October 1952), Walt Disney (11 November 1956), Jimmy Durante (15 August 1954), Judy Garland (5 March 1967), Alfred Hitchcock (12 September 1954), Buster Keaton (2 September 1956), Harold Lloyd (24 April 1955), Jayne Mansfield (12 February 1956), Ronald Reagan (19 July 1953; he later appeared as a guest panelist), Edward G. Robinson (11 October 1953), Carl Sandburg (11 September 1960), Frank Sinatra (27 November 1960; he appeared as a panelist the following week), Barbara Stanwyck (11 April 1954), and Elizabeth Taylor (14 November 1954). Jimmy Carter also appeared, when he was governor of Georgia, as a contestant. The syndicated version of the show was played the same way. The latter version was hosted by Wally Bruner from 1968 until 1972, when Larry Blyden took over. Blyden died in 1975 from injuries sustained in a car crash in Morocco, and production was discontinued. Arlene Francis and Soupy Sales were regular panelists on the syndicated version. WHAT'S ON YOUR MIND? ABC 26 JULY 1951–19 MARCH 1952 Panel show on which psychiatry was discussed in terms comprehensible to lay people. Isabel Leighton was the moderator. The show was retitled How Did They Get That Way?

WHAT'S THE STORY DUMONT
25 JULY 1951–23 SEPTEMBER 1955 On this prime-time game show a panel of journalists tried to identify famous events from incidents performed on stage. Walter Kiernan was the first host; John K. M. McCaffery succeeded him.

WHAT'S THIS SONG NBC
26 OCTOBER 1964–24 SEPTEMBER 1965 Wink Martindale hosted this daytime game show on which two 2-member teams (each with a celebrity and a contestant) tried to identify songs and sing their lyrics.

WHAT'S YOUR BID ABC/DUMONT
14 FEBRUARY 1953–11 APRIL 1953 (ABC); 3 MAY 1953–28 JUNE 1953 (DUMONT) On this prime-time game show merchandise was auctioned off to members of the studio audience; all proceeds were donated to charities. The ABC version was hosted by John Reed King, the DuMont version by Robert Alda. Leonard "Liberal Bill" Rosen was the auctioneer.

WHAT'S YOUR TROUBLE SYNDICATED
1952–1953 Half-hour series on which Dr. and Mrs. Norman Vincent Peale dispensed advice on coping with life's problems.

WHEEL OF FORTUNE CBS
3 OCTOBER 1952–25 DECEMBER 1953 The first of the two series of this title was hosted by Todd Russell. It was a human interest show similar to Mr. Citizen and The Girl in My Life—persons who had done good deeds were rewarded. The half-hour show was introduced as a Friday-morning replacement for Arthur Godfrey Time, and a prime-time version was shown during the summer of 1953.

WHEEL OF FORTUNE NBC/CBS/SYNDICATED
6 JANUARY 1975–30 JUNE 1989 (NBC); 17 JULY 1989–11 JANUARY 1991 (CBS); 14 JANUARY 1991–13 SEPTEMBER 1991 (NBC); 1983– (SYNDICATED) The second show with this title is a daytime game show on which three contestants take turns spinning a large wheel for the chance to guess the letters of a mystery word or phrase.

Chuck Woolery hosted the show from 1975 to 1982, when Pat Sajak took over. Susan Stafford assisted until the fall of 1982, when she was succeeded by Vanna White. In 1983 a syndicated version of the show was introduced, also hosted by Sajak. It soon became the highest-rated daily syndicated series in television history. Even though she said little on camera, Vanna White became a major celebrity; her autobiography, Vanna Speaks!, made the best seller lists.

Sajak hosted the network version until 6 January 1989, shortly before he moved to CBS for his attempt at a late-night talk show (he continued to host the syndicated version, however). Former pro football placekicker Rolf Benirschke took over on 9 January, and lasted until 30 June. When the show shifted networks that summer, Bob Goen became the new host. Early in 1991, the series moved back to NBC, its original home. The syndicated version continued to thrive after the show left NBC's daytime schedule in September 1991.

Doug as high school senior Douglas St. Martin; Yunoka Doyle as his fourteen-year-old sister, Sharon; Sullivan Walker as his father, James; Lorraine Toussaint as his mother, Marie; Flex as his best friend, Reggie Coltrane; Shaun Baker as his friend Malcolm; and Jason Bose Smith as Kwanzi, a neighborhood youngster. When the series returned in the fall of 1993 Douglas had started junior college.

WHERE IN THE WORLD IS CARMEN SANDIEGO? — PBS

30 SEPTEMBER 1991– Weekday game show for kids, based on the popular computer game ostensibly intended to teach children about world geography. Greg Lee was the host, Lynne Thigpen appeared as The Chief who gave out clues to the contestants, and a singing group called Rockapella provided the music. See also Where on Earth Is Carmen Sandiego?

WHERE ON EARTH IS CARMEN SANDIEGO? FOX

5 FEBRUARY 1994– One of two series based on the computer game (see also Where in the World Is Carmen Sandiego?), this one was a Saturday-morning cartoon show which took place inside a home computer, where a pair of teen detectives—Ivy and Zack—chased classy thief Carmen Sandiego around the world; Ms. Sandiego thoughtfully left clues for her pursuers. Rita Moreno provided the voice of the title character.

WHERE THE ACTION IS ABC

27 JUNE 1965–31 MARCH 1967 Half-hour musical show for teenagers. The daytime show was hosted by Dick Clark, and the regular performers included Paul Revere and the Raiders, Steve Alaimo, and Linda Scott. Among the many guests were Sonny and Cher, who made one of their first TV appearances on 30 July 1965.

WHERE THE HEART IS CBS

8 SEPTEMBER 1969–23 MARCH 1973 This half-hour daytime serial, set in the town of Northcross, a suburb of New York City, concerned the sexual goings-on of the members of two families, the Hathaways and the Prescotts. Principal players included: James Mitchell as Julian Hathaway, a widowed English professor; Diana Walker as Mary Hathaway, Julian's second wife; Gregory Abels as Julian's son (by his first marriage), Michael Hathaway, who fell for his stepmother; Robyn Millan and Lisa Richards as Vicky Lucas, who married Mike and later divorced him; Diana Van Der Vlis as Julian's sister, Kate Hathaway; Laurence Luckinbill and Ron Harper as Steve Prescott, who married Kate; Zohra Lampert as Ellie Jardin, who was murdered; Michael Bersell as Ellie's mute son, Peter, who was taken in by Kate and Steve; Tracy Brooks Swope as Liz Rainey, who became Mike Hathaway's second wife; Bill Post, Jr., as Dr. Joe Prescott; Katherine Meskill as Nancy Prescott; Ted Leplat as Terry Prescott; Peter MacLean as John Rainey; David Cryer as Dr. Hugh Jessup; Louise Shaffer as Allison Jessup; Clarice Blackburn as Amy Snowden; Rue McClanahan as Margaret Jardin; and Alice Drummond as Loretta Jardin. After a three-and-a-half-year run, Where the Heart Is was replaced by The Young and the Restless.

WHERE WAS I DUMONT

2 SEPTEMBER 1952–6 OCTOBER 1953 Dan Seymour first hosted this prime-time game show, which went through at least two formats. In one format, a celebrity panel tried to guess where the contestant had been at a certain time, and in a second format, a celebrity panel tried to guess the nature of photographs shown to viewers, but hidden from the panelists' view. Regular panelists included Peter Donald, Nancy Guild, and David Ross. John Reed King became the host late in 1952.

WHERE'S HUDDLES CBS

1 JULY 1970–9 SEPTEMBER 1970 A prime-time cartoon show from Hanna-Barbera Productions, Where's Huddles centered around a football team. Featured voices included Cliff Norton as Ed Huddles, the quarterback; Mel Blanc as Bubba McCoy, the center; Paul Lynde as Pertwee; Jean van der Pyl as Marge Huddles, Ed's wife; Herb Jeffries as Freight Train; Marie Wilson as Penny McCoy, Bubba's wife; and Alan Reed as Coach. The series was rerun during the summer of 1971.

WHERE'S RAYMOND?
See THE RAY BOLGER SHOW

WHERE'S WALDO? CBS

14 SEPTEMBER 1991–5 SEPTEMBER 1992 Saturday-morning cartoon show based on the best-selling books by Martin Handford in which the title character was hidden within detailed drawings. On TV Waldo was a wandering backpacker who was accompanied by his girlfriend, Wilma, and his dog, Woof. On each program an off-screen voice challenged viewers to find certain objects in Waldo's upcoming adventure.

WHEW! CBS

23 APRIL 1979–30 MAY 1980 A fast-paced daytime game show hosted by Tom Kennedy, Whew! involved two contestants, each of whom tried to block the other's progress along a six-level game board. Contestants were given one minute to go from the first level up to the sixth and had to negotiate their way around "blocks" strategically hidden on the board by their opponents. The show was retitled Celebrity Whew! in November 1979.

WHIPLASH SYNDICATED

1961 Half-hour "western," starring Peter Graves as Chris Cobb, an American who founded a stagecoach line in Australia. The series was filmed on location.

THE WHIRLYBIRDS SYNDICATED

1957 Half-hour adventure series about a couple of helicopter pilots who worked for Whirlybird Service, an outfit based at Longwood Field. With Kenneth Tobey as Chuck Martin; Craig Hill as P. T. Moore. The show was produced by Desilu.

WHISPERING SMITH NBC

15 MAY 1961–18 SEPTEMBER 1961 Half-hour western, much criticized during its short run for its excessive violence. Set in Denver during the 1870s, it starred Guy Mitchell as Detective George Romack, Audie Murphy as Tom "Whispering" Smith, and Sam Buffington as Chief John Richards. Richard Lewis was the producer. Filming of the twenty-six episodes began in 1959, but the series did not find a place on NBC's schedule until 1961.

WHISTLE STOP U.S.A. CBS

7 SEPTEMBER 1952–2 NOVEMBER 1952 Sunday-afternoon news show that focused on the 1952 Presidential election. Charles Collingwood was the host.

THE WHISTLER SYNDICATED

1954 Half-hour suspense anthology series, based on the radio program that began in 1942. The show was narrated by an unseen voice, known only as "The Whistler," whose distinctive musical theme preceded his comments. Bill Forman provided the voice.

THE WHISTLING WIZARD CBS

3 NOVEMBER 1951–20 SEPTEMBER 1952 Saturday-morning puppet show, featuring the puppets of Bil and Cora Baird. The story line concerned a child, J.P., who was transported to a fantasy land to search for the Whistling Wizard.

WHITE HUNTER SYNDICATED

1959 Half-hour adventure series set in Africa, starring Rhodes Reason as John Hunter, guide and game hunter.

THE WHITE SHADOW CBS

27 NOVEMBER 1978–12 AUGUST 1981 Hour dramatic series about a basketball star who, after an injury that curtailed his professional career, accepted an offer to coach at Carver High School in Los Angeles. With Ken Howard as coach Ken Reeves; Ed Bernard as the principal, Jim Willis, a former college teammate of Reeves's; Joan Pringle as vice-principal Sybil Buchanon; Robin Rose as Ken's sister, Katie Donahue; Jerry Fogel as her husband, Bill Donahue; Kevin Hooks as Morris Thorpe; Eric Kilpatrick as Curtis Jackson; Byron Stewart as Warren Coolidge; Thomas Carter as James Hayward; Nathan Cook as Milton Reese; Timothy Van Patten as Mario (Salami) Petrino; Ken Michelman as Abner Goldstein; and Ira Angustain as Ricardo Gomez. In the fall of 1979 John Mengatti joined the squad as Nick Vitaglia, Salami's cousin, and Russell Phillip Robinson appeared as the team manager, Phil Jeffers. In a moving episode at the end of the 1979–1980 season, Curtis Jackson, an innocent bystander at a liquor store holdup, was shot to death.

The tone of the show was decidedly lighter for its third, and final, season. Bernard, Rose, Fogel, Kilpatrick, Carter, Cook, Michelman, and Angustain all left the series. Sybil Buchanon had been promoted to principal, and several new regulars joined: Larry Flash Jenkins as Wardell Stone; Wolfe Perry as Teddy Rutherford; Stoney Jackson as Jesse B. Mitchell; John Laughlin as Patrick Falahey; Art Holliday as Eddie Franklin; and Rosey Grier as the wrestling coach, Ezra Davis.

Bruce Paltrow was the executive producer, Mark Tinker the producer, for MTM Enterprises.

WHIZ KIDS CBS

5 OCTOBER 1983–2 JUNE 1984 An hour prime-time adventure series about a teenage computer genius, his talking computer, and his pals. Featured were Matthew Laborteaux as the genius, Richie Adler, who operated RALF out of his bedroom; Todd Porter as Ham Parker; Jeffrey Jacquet as Jeremy Saldino; Andrea Elson as Alice Tucker; Melanie Gaffin as Richie's little sister, Cheryl; Madelyn Cain as Richie's mother, Irene Adler; Max Gail as reporter Lew Farley, a friend of Richie's who provided adult assistance when needed; A Martinez as Lieutenant Quinn of the Los Angeles Police Department; and Dan O'Herlihy (spring 1984) as intelligence agent Carson Marsh.

WHO DO YOU TRUST? CBS/ABC

3 JANUARY 1956–26 MARCH 1957 (CBS); 30 SEPTEMBER 1957–27 DECEMBER 1963 (ABC) A popular game show, this series began as a prime-time show on CBS in 1956 under the title Do You Trust Your Wife? Hosted by Edgar Bergen, it featured two married couples who competed in a quiz segment; the husbands could choose to answer the questions themselves, or they could "trust" their wives to answer. In the fall of 1957 the show moved to ABC, where it became a daytime show and was hosted by Johnny Carson. Carson spent more of his time interviewing the couples than asking them questions. In July of 1958 the show adopted a less chauvinistic title, Who Do You Trust? but continued with the same format. In the fall of 1958 Carson was teamed up for the first time with a new announcer, Ed McMahon, who commuted from Philadelphia to do the show (McMahon succeeded Bill Nimmo). It was the start of a long association, as Carson took McMahon with him when he left Who Do You Trust? in 1962 to host the Tonight show. Carson was succeeded as host of Who Do You Trust? (which by then was actually titled Whom Do You Trust? as a concession to grammatical accuracy) by Woody Woodbury. The series was produced by Don Fedderson.

WHO IN THE WORLD CBS

24 JUNE 1962–16 SEPTEMBER 1962 Prime-time half-hour talk show hosted by Warren Hull.

WHO PAYS NBC

2 JULY 1959–24 SEPTEMBER 1959 Mike Wallace hosted this prime-time game show. Each contestant was employed by a famous person, and the object of the game was for a celebrity panel to ascertain who the well-known employers were; the employers themselves then appeared and chatted with the panel. See also Who's the Boss.

WHO SAID THAT? NBC/ABC

9 DECEMBER 1948–18 FEBRUARY 1951 (NBC); 5 APRIL 1952–26 APRIL 1952 (NBC); 13 APRIL 1953–5 JULY 1954 (NBC); 2 FEBRUARY 1955–26 JULY 1955 (ABC) This prime-time game show began on radio in 1948 and featured a panel of celebrities who tried to identify the sources of quotations taken from recent news events. Robert Trout was the first host and was succeeded by Walter Kiernan. Frequent panelists included June Lockhart, Morey Amsterdam, and H. V. Kaltenborn.

WHO, WHAT OR WHERE NBC

29 DECEMBER 1969–4 JANUARY 1974 Art James hosted this daytime game show on which three contestants competed in a question-and-answer format. Each player was given a stake of $125 and could wager up to $50 on a single question. At the beginning of each round the name of a category was revealed; each category contained three questions—one "Who," one "What," and one "Where." Some questions were more difficult than others and were given higher odds. The player who wagered the most on a single question won the right to answer it, and the player's winnings were increased or depleted by the amount of the wager (or by the odds, if the question was worth more than even money). If two players bid the same amount on a question, an auction was conducted. At the end of the game, players could wager any amount, up to their entire winnings, on the final round.

WHODUNNIT? NBC

12 APRIL 1979–10 MAY 1979 One of the few prime-time game shows since the 1950s, Whodunnit? gave three contestants the chance to match wits with a trio of experts in attempting to solve a dramatized crime. Approximately halfway through the dramatization, contestants were given the opportunity to guess the culprit for the show's top prize of $10,000. Contestants who chose not to hazard a guess at that time could then wait to hear the panel of experts announce their guess as to the culprit (the experts were also permitted to interrogate the several suspects); a contestant who then chose the real culprit won either $2500 (if any of the experts had made the same choice) or $5000 (if none of the experts had chosen correctly). Ed McMahon hosted the half-hour show, which was created by Jeremy Lloyd and Lance Percival. Though Whodunnit? billed itself as television's first mystery game show, it was not. A similar format had been employed thirty years earlier in CBS's Armchair Detective and was again used in the DuMont version of Public Prosecutor.

A WHOLE NEW BALLGAME ABC

9 JANUARY 1995–13 MARCH 1995 Created by the producers of Blue Skies, this half-hour sitcom starred Corbin Bernsen as Brett Sooner, a Milwaukee Brewer baseball star who, while on strike, signed on as a sportscaster at WPLP, a local television station. Also featured were Julia Campbell as the general manager of the station, Meg O'Donnell, who attracted Brett's interest; Richard Kind as sales manager Dwight King; John O'Hurley as news anchor Tad Sherman; Kari Coleman as Meg's assistant, Libby DeSoto; Stephen Tobolowsky as weatherman Dr. Warner Brakefield; Peter Jason as station owner Vernon Redfield; and Shashawnee Hall as Mickey, owner of Spitter's Sports Bar. Campbell, Kind, and Tobolowsky had all been regulars on Blue Skies, and thus became eligible to join the small group of performers who have appeared in two flop shows during the same season.

WHOOPI SYNDICATED

1992–1993 Half-hour talk show on which host Whoopi Goldberg interviewed a single guest. There was no studio audience.

WHO'S THE BOSS ABC

19 FEBRUARY 1954–20 AUGUST 1954 A prime-time game show on which a celebrity panel tried to guess the identities of the famous employers of the show's contestants. Walter Kiernan was the first host of the show and was succeeded by Mike Wallace. Wallace hosted the 1959 version of the show, which was titled Who Pays. See also that title.

WHO'S THE BOSS ABC

20 SEPTEMBER 1984–10 SEPTEMBER 1992 Durable sitcom about a widower who left New York City with his younger daughter to become the housekeeper for a divorced woman and her young son in Connecticut; over the course of the seasons, the adults' relationship gradually inched its way toward love. With Tony Danza (late of Taxi) as Tony Micelli; Judith Light (late of One Life to Live) as Angela Bower, who worked for an ad agency (in the fall of 1986 she opened her own agency); Alyssa Milano as Tony's daughter, Samantha; Danny Pintauro as Angela's son, Jonathan; and Katherine Helmond as Angela's mother, Mona Robinson. Jonathon Halyalkar signed for the 1990–1991 season as Billy, a five-year-old taken in by Tony when the lad's grandmother became too ill to care for him. During the 1991–1992 season Nicole Eggert was seen as Samantha's best friend, Marci, and Curnal Aulisio played Sam's boyfriend, Hank. Although the series toyed with the idea of a marriage betwen Tony and Angela, it wrapped up—refreshingly—without a wedding as Tony finished college.

WHO'S THERE CBS

14 JULY 1952–15 SEPTEMBER 1952 Arlene Francis hosted this prime-time game show on which a celebrity panel tried to identify guest celebrities from physical clues associated with those celebs. The format was later used in a 1953 game show, Personality Puzzle.

WHO'S WATCHING THE KIDS NBC

22 SEPTEMBER 1978–15 DECEMBER 1978 Set in Las Vegas, Who's Watching the Kids was a distant cousin of Blansky's Beauties, the 1977 sitcom that starred Nancy Walker; the two shared the same producers, and a few cast members, but Who's Watching the Kids emphasized the younger regulars rather than the chorus girls. Featured were Caren Kaye as chorus girl Stacy Turner; Lynda Goodfriend as Stacy's roommate and partner, Angie Vitola; Marcia Lewis as their landlady, Mitzi Logan, who was also the emcee at the Club Sand Pile, where Stacy and Angie performed; Scott Baio as Angie's fifteen-year-old live-in brother, Frankie Vitola, who was sent West from South Philadelphia by his folks in the hopes that he could improve his grades; Tammy Lauren as Stacy's nine-year-old live-in sister, Melissa Turner; Larry Breeding as their neighbor, newscaster Larry Parnell; Jim Belushi (brother of John Belushi of NBC's Saturday Night Live) as Bert Gunkle, Larry's camera operator; Lorrie Mahaffey as Memphis; Elaine Bolton as Bridget; and Shirley Kirkes as Cochise. Garry K. Marshall, Tony Marshall, and Don Silverman were the executive producers for Henderson Productions in association with Paramount TV.

WHO'S WHO CBS

4 JANUARY 1977–26 JUNE 1977 An hour-long newsmagazine with a lighter touch than 60 Minutes. On Who's Who the emphasis was on people. Dan Rather was the "chief reporter," and Barbara Howar and Charles Kuralt (reporting "on the road") were regular contributors.

WHOSE SIDE ARE YOU ON? CBS

19 JULY 1991–2 AUGUST 1991 Brief Friday-night fill-in series, hosted by various CBS News correspondents, which examined both sides of a controversial topic each week.

WHY? ABC

29 DECEMBER 1952–20 APRIL 1953 Comedy quiz show, hosted by John Reed King, on which the contestants were told the "Who, What, Where, and When" of an event and were required to supply the "Why." The prime-time show was seen on Monday nights. King cohosted the show with Bill Cullen, who also served as the show's producer.

WICHITA TOWN NBC

30 SEPTEMBER 1959–23 SEPTEMBER 1960 Half-hour western starring Joel McCrea as Marshal Mike Dunbar of Wichita, Kansas, and Jody McCrea (Joel's son) as Ben Matheson, his deputy. Also featured were Carlos Romero as Rico and George Neise as Doc. The series was based on Wichita, the 1955 film which had starred the elder McCrea.

WIDE COUNTRY NBC

20 SEPTEMBER 1962–12 SEPTEMBER 1963 Wide Country was one of a pair of 1962 series set along the professional rodeo circuit (Stoney Burke was the other). The hour show starred Earl Holliman as Mitch Guthrie and Andrew Prine as his younger brother, Andy Guthrie.

WIDE WIDE WORLD NBC

16 OCTOBER 1955–8 JUNE 1958 Another manifestation of Sylvester "Pat" Weaver's fertile imagination, Wide Wide World was a Sunday-afternoon documentary series. Most of the ninety-minute shows focused on a single topic and featured live reports from locations throughout North America (filmed segments from other parts of the world were also used). Dave Garroway, whom Weaver had chosen to host the Today show three years before, was the "guide" of Wide Wide World. The show was first introduced on 27 June 1955, as part of Producers' Showcase, but regular Sunday broadcasts did not begin until the fall. On the October 1955 premiere the topic was "A Sunday in Autumn," and reports were made from Lake Mead, the Grand Canyon, Weeki Wachee (Fla.), Dallas, San Francisco, St. Louis, Gloucester (Mass.), Cleveland, Omaha, and New York City. Barry Wood was the executive producer, Herbert Sussan the producer.

WIDE WORLD OF SPORTS

THE WIL SHRINER SHOW SYNDICATED

1987–1988 A five-day-a-week, sixty-minute daytime talk show, hosted by Wil Shriner (son of humorist Herb Shriner, a TV personality of the 1950s).

THE WILBURN BROTHERS SHOW SYNDICATED

1963–1969 Country-and-western music series, hosted by Ted and Doyle Wilburn.

WILD AMERICA PBS

1982 A half-hour series of nature films, produced, photographed, and narrated by Marty Stouffer.

WILD BILL HICKOK SYNDICATED

1951–1958 Half-hour western starring Guy Madison as U.S. Marshal James Butler (Wild Bill) Hickok, and Andy Devine as his sidekick, Jingles B. Jones ("Wait fer me, Wild Bill!"). Devine's inimitably gravelly voice was the result of a childhood accident, in which he fell with a stick in his mouth. A total of 112 episodes were filmed. Madison and Devine also played the same roles on the radio version of the series, which began in 1951 and ran through 1956.

WILD CARGO SYNDICATED

1963 Half-hour documentary series on capturing wild animals for zoos. Arthur Jones was the host.

WILD KINGDOM NBC/SYNDICATED

6 JANUARY 1963–11 APRIL 1971 (NBC); 1971–1988 (SYNDICATED) Perhaps the best known, and certainly the longest running of the several documentary series about animal life, Wild Kingdom was sponsored by Mutual of Omaha and was hosted for most of its run by Marlin Perkins (formerly the host of Zoo Parade). Other hosts or cohosts have included Jim Fowler, Tom Allen, Stan Brock and Peter Eros.

WILD OATS FOX

4 SEPTEMBER 1994–25 SEPTEMBER 1994 An early casualty of the 1994–1995 season, this sitcom was set in Chicago, and told the tale of a sex-obsessed photographer and his level-headed roommate. With Tim Conlon as the hormone-enhanced Jack Slayton; Paul Rudd as the roommate, Brian Grant, a social worker; Paula Marshall as Jack's ex-girlfriend, Shelly Thomas, a teacher; Jana Marie Hupp as Shelly's pal, Liz, a hairstylist; and Christine Cavanaugh as Kathee, the barmaid at the gang's favorite watering hole.

WILD PALMS ABC

16 MAY 1993–19 MAY 1993 Heavily hyped four-night, six-hour miniseries set in Los Angeles in the year 2007, at the launching of a new television network incorporating virtual reality into its programming. The cast included James Belushi as lawyer Harry Wyckoff; Dana Delany as his wife, Grace; Kim Cattrall as his ex-girlfriend, Paige Katz; Robert Loggia as Senator Anton Kreutzer; Angie Dickinson as his evil assistant, Josie Ito; Ernie Hudson as Tommy Lazlo; Bebe Neuwirth as Tabba Schwartzkopf; and Ben Savage as Cody Wyckoff. Derived from a comic strip in Details magazine, the series was created by Bruce Wagner, who was co-executive producer with Oliver Stone.

THE WILD WEST C.O.W. BOYS OF MOO MESA ABC
12 SEPTEMBER 1992–3 SEPTEMBER 1994 Saturday-morning cartoon series about a trio of law-enforcing cattle—Marshal Moo Montana, the Cowlorado Kid, and Dakota Dude—who observed the "C.O.W." (Code of the West) and battled the evil Wild West Bullies.

THE WILD, WILD WEST CBS
17 SEPTEMBER 1965–19 SEPTEMBER 1969 A fantasy western, The Wild, Wild West combined The Man from U.N.C.L.E. with Maverick. It starred Robert Conrad as James West, a special agent assigned to the frontier by President Ulysses S. Grant. Ross Martin costarred as his associate, Artemus Gordon. The two battled the usual assortment of mad scientists and crazed outlaws, using fanciful gadgets to thwart their adversaries. Occasionally appearing were Michael Dunn as Dr. Miguelito Loveless, West's diminutive archenemy; James Gregory as President Grant; and Charles Aidman as Jeremy, who filled in for Artemus Gordon when Ross Martin was sidelined with a mild heart attack. The hour show was created by Michael Garrison for Bruce Lansbury Productions. It was rerun on CBS during the summer of 1970. On 9 May 1979 Conrad and Martin were reunited in a made-for-TV movie, "The Wild, Wild West Revisited." A second sequel, "More Wild, Wild West," was televised on 7 and 8 October 1980.

WILD, WILD WORLD OF ANIMALS SYNDICATED
1973–1976 Half-hour documentary series on animal life, from Time-Life Films, narrated by William Conrad.

WILD C.A.T.S CBS
1 OCTOBER 1994–2 SEPTEMBER 1995 Saturday-morning cartoon show about a group of alien heroes stranded on Earth. The six—Grifter, Maul, Zealot, WarBlade, Spartan, and Voodoo—were brought together by Jacob Marlowe, who assembled them into a C.A.T., or Covert Action Team.

WILDCAT
See THE TROUBLESHOOTERS

WILDFIRE CBS
13 SEPTEMBER 1986–5 SEPTEMBER 1987 This Saturday morning cartoon series chronicled the efforts of a young princess, Sara, with the assistance of a superpowered stallion (Wildfire), to wrest the throne of her homeland from the evil witch Diabolyn who had deposed her twelve years earlier.

WILDSIDE ABC
21 MARCH 1985–25 APRIL 1985 This short-lived Western chronicled the exploits of the five self-appointed members of the "Chamber of Commerce of Wildside," a rough-and-tumble county in northern California: Brodie Hollister (played by William Smith), the shootist with twenty-nine notches on his gun, who had recently returned from the East; Sutton Hollister (J. Eddie Peck), his son; Bannister Sparks (Howard E. Rollins, Jr.), the card sharp and demolition ace who ran Bannister's Emporium & Trading Company; huge Prometheus Jones (Terry Funk), a wizard with rope; and Varges De La Cosa (John Di Aquino), a knife expert who owned the local gun store. Other regulars included Sandy McPeak as Governor J. W. Summerhayes; Meg Ryan as Cally Oaks, owner of the newspaper (the Daily Flash); Jason Hervey as young Zeke; and Tommy Lamey as Parks Ritche, a rival of Sutton's. Tom Greene created the series.

WILL THE REAL JERRY LEWIS PLEASE SIT DOWN ABC
12 SEPTEMBER 1970–2 SEPTEMBER 1972 Half-hour Saturday-morning cartoon show created by Jerry Lewis.

WILLIAM TELL SYNDICATED
1958 Officially titled The Adventures of William Tell, this half-hour adventure series was filmed in Switzerland and produced by National Telefilm Associates. It starred Conrad Phillips as William Tell, the legendary Swiss freedom fighter; Jennifer Jayne as Hedda Tell; Richard Rogers as Walter Tell; and Willoughby Goddard as Gessler, Tell's nemesis.

WILLIAM TELL SYNDICATED
1991 The second TV version was officially titled The Legend of William Tell. Filmed in Europe, the half-hour series starred Will Lyman as William Tell, who was searching for his wife and son, and Jeremy Clyde as Gessler.

WILLY CBS
18 SEPTEMBER 1954–7 JULY 1955 Half-hour sitcom starring June Havoc as Willa (Willy) Dodger, a lawyer in a small New Hampshire town. Other regulars included Lloyd Corrigan as Papa; Mary Treen as Willy's sister, Emily; Danny Richards, Jr., as her nephew, Franklin; Whitfield Connor as Willy's boyfriend, veterinarian Charlie Bush; and Aaron Spelling (who would achieve far greater fame as a producer) as Homer. In March of 1955 Willy left New England for New York City, where she landed a job as counsel to a vaudeville organization. Added were Hal Peary as her new employer, Mr. Bannister, and Sterling Holloway as Harvey Evelyn, manager of a repertory company. Filmed at Desilu Studios, the series was produced by June Havoc's husband, Bill Spier.

THE WILTON NORTH REPORT FOX
11 DECEMBER 1987–8 JANUARY 1988 An unusual, unsuccessful, and generally unfunny attempt to fill the late-night slot in Fox's schedule previously occupied by The Late Show, The Wilton North Report was a pastiche of comedy skits, serious news items, celebrity interviews, and odd bits of news. A young comedy duo, Phil Cowan and Paul Robins, served as coanchors. Barry Sand, late of Late Night with David Letterman, was the producer. After four weeks, the series was replaced with reruns of The Late Show.

WIN, LOSE OR DRAW NBC/SYNDICATED
7 SEPTEMBER 1987–1 SEPTEMBER 1989 (NBC); 1987–1990 (SYNDICATED) Two versions of this popular game show, which resembled the home game of Pictionary, surfaced in the fall of 1987. On each one, two three-member teams, each consisting of two celebrities and a contestant, competed; one player was given a word or phrase, and had to get a teammate to guess it by drawing pictures on a large sketch pad. The daytime version ran for two years on NBC, and was one of the few game shows to be hosted by a woman: Vicki Lawrence (later known as Vicki Lawrence Schultz). The syndicated version was hosted first by Bert Convy (who was executive producer with Burt Reynolds), later by Robb Weller. A juvenile version, titled Teen Win, Lose or Draw, surfaced on the Disney Channel in 1989, hosted by Marc Price.

WIN WITH A WINNER NBC
24 JUNE 1958–9 SEPTEMBER 1958 Also known as Winners Circle, this prime-time game show was hosted by Sandy Becker and involved five players who, like horses in a race, moved along a track as they answered questions. Home viewers could also participate by sending in postcards predicting the players' exact order of finish.

WIN WITH THE STARS SYNDICATED

1968 Allen Ludden hosted this game show on which teams made up of celebrities and contestants competed in a song-identification game.

WINDOW ON MAIN STREET CBS

2 OCTOBER 1961–12 SEPTEMBER 1962 Robert Young, fresh from Father Knows Best, starred in this comedy-drama as Cameron Garrett Brooks, a widowed novelist who returned to his hometown, Millsburg, to write about the people there. Also featured were Ford Rainey as Lloyd Ramsey, editor of the town paper; Constance Moore as widow Chris Logan, who worked on the paper; Brad Berwick as Arny Logan, Chris's young son; Warner Jones as Harry McGil, desk clerk at the Majestic Hotel; James Davidson as Wally Evans, owner of the hotel; Carol Byron as Wally's wife, Peggy Evans; Marilyn Harvey as Mrs. Miller; Tim Matheson as her son, Roddy Miller; Coleen Gray as Miss Wycliffe; William Cort as Dick Aldrich; and Richard Wyler as Phil Rowan. The half-hour show was created and owned by Robert Young and Eugene B. Rodney, who had owned Father Knows Best; the two were given a free hand by CBS in developing this show.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD DUMONT

27 JANUARY 1949–14 APRIL 1949 Half-hour variety show hosted by Gil Lamb.

WINDOW ON WASHINGTON NBC

4 JANUARY 1953–12 JULY 1953 Fifteen-minute Sunday-afternoon public affairs program, hosted by Bill Henry and produced by Julian Goodman.

WINDOW SHOPPING ABC

2 APRIL 1962–29 JUNE 1962 Bob Kennedy hosted this short-lived daytime game show, on which three contestants studied a picture for a few seconds and could then win points by recalling details about it. Professor William Wood of the Columbia University School of Journalism was the judge. The half-hour series was produced by Alan Gilbert for Wolf Productions.

WINDOWS CBS

8 JULY 1955–26 AUGUST 1955 A live half-hour dramatic anthology series, Windows was produced by Mort Abrahams. Four directors shared the assignments: Jack Garfein, José Quintero, John Stix, and Leonard Valenta.

THE WINDS OF WAR ABC

6 FEBRUARY 1983–13 FEBRUARY 1983 Herman Wouk adapted his mammoth novel for this expensive and lengthy limited series. Almost everything about the project was mammoth—its length (seven nights, eighteen hours), its cost ($40 million), its 962-page script, its 1785 scenes (filmed in 267 locations in six countries over a fourteen-month span). The action spanned the earliest years of World War II, from the Nazi blitzkrieg of Poland in 1939 to the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor in 1941. The central character was American naval officer Victor "Pug" Henry, whose assignments during those years took him all over the world; the part was played by Robert Mitchum, appearing in his second dramatic role on TV (the first, in the made-for-TV movie "One Shoe Makes It Murder," was televised a few months earlier, though it had actually been filmed after production on Winds had been completed). Other key roles were played by Polly Bergen as Pug's wife, Rhoda Henry; Ben Murphy as their older son, Warren; Jan-Michael Vincent as their younger son, Byron; Lisa Eilbacher as their daughter, Madeline; Ali MacGraw (in a rare TV appearance) as Natalie Jastrow, a European Jew who eventually married Byron; John Houseman as Natalie's uncle, Aaron Jastrow; David Dukes as American diplomatic officer Leslie Slote; Victoria Tennant as Pamela Tudsbury, a British woman with whom Pug had an affair; Peter Graves as Palmer Kirby; Ralph Bellamy as Franklin D. Roosevelt; Howard Lang as Winston Churchill; Gunter Meisner as Adolf Hitler; and Jeremy Kemp as German General Von Roon. Dan Curtis, who had previously produced Dark Shad- ows, produced the series. In mid-1984 plans were announced for a sequel, War and Remembrance (see also that title).

WINDY CITY JAMBOREE DUMONT

26 MARCH 1950–18 JUNE 1950 An hour-long musical show, broadcast from the Rainbow Gardens in Chicago. Featured were Danny O'Neil, Gloria Van, Jane Brockman and Bud Tygett, Jimmy McPartland, Dick Edwards, "WooWoo" Stephens, Paula Raye, John Dalce, and the Julian Stockdale Orchestra.

WINGO CBS

1 APRIL 1958–6 MAY 1958 A prime-time game show, Wingo pitted a champion against a challenger in a question-and-answer format. A contestant won $1,000 each time his or her opponent was defeated, plus the chance to compete for the show's top prize of $250,000. Bob Kennedy was the host.

WINGS NBC

19 APRIL 1990–24 MAY 1990; 6 SEPTEMBER 1990– Nantucket Island was the setting for this half-hour sitcom about two estranged brothers who were reunited after their father's death. With Timothy Daly as the serious brother Joe Hackett, owner of Sandpiper Air, a one-plane airline; Steven Weber as the happy-go-lucky brother, Brian Hackett; Crystal Bernard as Helen Chappel, waitress at the airline terminal; Thomas Haden Church (1990–1995) as Lowell Mather, Joe's free-spirited maintenance worker; David Schramm as Roy Biggins, owner of Aeromass, the rival air carrier; Rebecca Schull as Faye Evelyn Cochran, the cheery terminal announcer at Tom Nevers Field; Tony Shalhoub (1992– ) as Antonio the cabbie; Farrah Forke (1992–1994) as Brian's girlfriend, Alex, a helicopter pilot; and Amy Yasbeck (1994– ) as Helen's younger sister, Casey Davenport. Joe and Helen got married at the end of the 1994–1995 season.

WINKY-DINK AND YOU CBS

10 OCTOBER 1953–27 APRIL 1957 Television's first interactive show, Winky-Dink and You was a Saturday morning children's series hosted by Jack Barry. It featured skits and cartoons (Winky-Dink, a gender-neutral pixie-like creature, was the star of many of the cartoons). The gimmick for which the show is best remembered was the Winky-Dink Kit, which could be bought by mail; it consisted of a piece of plastic that could be placed over a television screen, some crayons, and a cloth to wipe clean the plastic. The kit enabled viewers to participate in Winky's adventures by drawing props as suggested by Jack Barry. It also enabled viewers to transcribe a secret message, which was broadcast bit by bit at the end of the day's cartoon adventures. Also featured on the half-hour show was Dayton Allen, who played Barry's inept assistant, Mr. Bungle. Mae Questel provided the voice of Winky. Other cartoon characters included Mike McBean, Dusty Dan, and Mysto the Magician.

The show was an immediate hit with youngsters. From 1954 to 1955 it was also televised on Sunday mornings, and by 1955 more than two million Winky-Dink kits had been sold through the mail. The series was revived briefly for syndication in 1969, with some sixty-four new five-minute cartoons, but without a human host; in this version Winky-Dink was a male character.

WINNER TAKE ALL CBS/NBC

15 JUNE 1948–3 OCTOBER 1950; 12 FEBRUARY 1951–20 APRIL 1951 (CBS); 25 FEBRUARY 1952–2 MAY 1952 (NBC) One of the first game shows developed by Mark Goodson and Bill Todman, Winner Take All began on radio in 1946 and came to television two years later; from 1948 to 1950 it was a prime-time series, and in 1951 and 1952 it was a daytime show. The prime-time version involved a straight question-and-answer format. On the daytime version two contestants competed, answering questions about skits performed on stage by a group of players. Bud Collyer was the prime-time host; the CBS daytime version was hosted by Barry Gray, the NBC version by Bill Cullen. Gil Fates was the producer. During the summer of 1952 "Winner Take All" was a featured segment of the NBC daytime variety series Matinee in New York.

WINNETKA ROAD NBC

12 MARCH 1994–16 APRIL 1994 Hour continuing drama set in the Chicago suburb of Oak Bluff. With Ed Begley, Jr., as Glenn Barker, who left his wife and kids for a shapely aerobics instructor; Josh Brolin as cop Jack Passion; Richard M. Tyson as Duane Serling, who ran a landscaping business; Kristen Cloke as Maybeth Serling, his wife; Kurt Deutsch as newly unemployed Kevin Page; Paige Turco as actress Terry Mears, Jack's former girlfriend, who recently returned home to Oak Bluff; Meg Tilly as George, a mysterious artist; Catherine Hicks as Jeannie; and Megan Ward as stockbroker Nicole Manning, Jack's current girlfriend. Aaron Spelling and E. Duke Vincent were the executive producers.

WINNING STREAK NBC

1 JULY 1974–3 JANUARY 1975 Daytime game show hosted by Bill Cullen on which contestants answered questions to win letters of the alphabet, which they could then use to assemble words. The show was a Bob Stewart Production.

WINSTON CHURCHILL—THE VALIANT YEARS ABC

27 NOVEMBER 1960–11 JUNE 1961 A highly acclaimed series of twenty-six half-hour segments that focused on Churchill's leadership during World War II. The series was produced by Robert D. Graff and Ben Feiner, Jr. It was narrated by Gary Merrill, and selections from Churchill's memoirs were read by Richard Burton. The series was rerun on ABC in 1962 and 1963. Richard Rodgers composed the score.

WIRE SERVICE ABC

4 OCTOBER 1956–23 SEPTEMBER 1957 Hour-long adventure series about three reporters for the Trans Globe News Service; the three stars—Mercedes McCambridge as Kate Wells, Dane Clark as Dan Miller, and George Brent as Dean Evans—appeared on a rotating basis. Sharp-eyed viewers could have noticed Michael Landon in one episode, "High Adventure," playing his first major TV role (20 December). Don Sharpe and Warren Lewis produced the series.

WISDOM OF THE AGES DUMONT

16 DECEMBER 1952–30 JUNE 1953 On this prime-time panel show, Jack Barry combined features of two of his earlier shows, Juvenile Jury and Life Begins at Eighty, both of which he created with his longtime partner, Dan Enright. Wisdom of the Ages featured five panelists—one under twenty, one between twenty-one and forty, one between forty-one and sixty, one between sixty-one and eighty, and one over eighty—who dispensed advice on problems suggested by viewers.

THE WISDOM SERIES NBC

13 OCTOBER 1957–6 APRIL 1958 A Sunday-afternoon series of filmed interviews with some of the world's greatest figures, The Wisdom Series was produced by Robert D. Graff. Like many of NBC's highly praised programming ideas of the decade, it was conceived by Sylvester "Pat" Weaver. Though the series did not reach the air until 1957, filming had begun as early as 1952. As a rule, subjects had to be over sixty-five years of age in order to be eligible for consideration. Among those who participated in the series were Bertrand Russell, Jawaharlal Nehru, Carl Sandburg, Sean O'Casey, Herbert Hoover, Edward Steichen, Pablo Casals, Wanda Landowska, Igor Stravinsky, Edith Hamilton, and Frank Lloyd Wright. The show was rerun in 1959.

WISEGUY CBS

16 SEPTEMBER 1987–19 JULY 1990; 10 NOVEMBER 1990–8 DECEMBER 1990 Hour crime show from Stephen J. Cannell Productions, starring Ken Wahl as Vinnie Terranova, an undercover agent for the Federal Organized Crime Bureau, Jonathan Banks as his hard-driving boss, Frank McPike, and Jim Byrnes as Lifeguard, the communications expert who provided Vinnie's sole link to the O.C.B. when on assignment. In order to establish his credibility with the underworld, Terranova had served eighteen months in prison.

The producers decided to run the stories in "arcs"—each story spanned from five to ten episodes. This innovative idea was a welcome change from the usual "crook of the week" format of most crime shows. Two main stories were presented during the 1987–1988 season: the first starred Ray Sharkey as Atlantic City mobster Sonny Steelgrave, and the second starred Kevin Spacey and Joan Severance as deranged brother-sister duo Mel and Susan Profitt, with William Russ as fellow "wiseguy" Roger LoCocco. The second season began with the death of Vinnie's brother, Peter (played by Gerald Anthony, and occasionally featured during the previous season), drawing Vinnie into investigating a white supremacist group led by Knox Pooley (played by Fred Dalton Thompson). From there Terranova checked out the garment industry in an arc featuring Jerry Lewis and Ron Silver as Eli and David Sternberg; Anthony Denison appeared as federal agent John Raglin, filling in for an injured Terranova (in real life Ken Wahl's foot had been injured after a camera dolly twice ran over it). After a brief hospital stay in which the image of Steelgrave appeared to the heavily drugged Vinnie, Terranova investigated the record industry; real-life rockers Deborah Harry, Glenn Frey, and Mick Fleetwood all appeared in that arc. During the third season Vinnie infiltrated the highest levels of the New York mob (in an arc with Patti D'Arbanville and George Petrie), exposed a foreign counterfeiting operation (with Kim Greist, Norman Lloyd, and Ford Rainey), and flipped out while tracking down a homicidal maniac in a small town (in an arc with Steve Ryan, David Strathairn, and William Russ, who returned as Roger LoCocco).

Filmed on location in Vancouver, the series returned briefly, without Wahl, during the 1990–1991 season. Steven Bauer starred as the new wiseguy, Michael Santana, in the final five-episode arc; his quarry was a villain named Guzman, played by Maximilian Schell.

WISH YOU WERE HERE CBS

20 JULY 1990–24 AUGUST 1990 An offbeat comedy series, starring Lew Schneider as Donny Cogswell, who quit his job as a New York stockbroker and headed off to Europe, where he made first-person videos and sent them back to his ex-girlfriend, family, and friends. Cogswell's journeys were filmed entirely on location using a lightweight video camera, and were deliberately intended to look homemade, with out-of-focus shots, slanted angles, and sudden cuts.

WISHBONE PBS

9 OCTOBER 1995– The title character in this weekday children's series was a Jack Russell terrier, who, with the help of elaborate costumes and props, enacted scenes chosen from children's literary classics. Wishbone was played by Soccer.

WISHKID STARRING MACAULAY CULKIN NBC

14 SEPTEMBER 1991–5 SEPTEMBER 1992 Popular child actor Macaulay Culkin received title billing in this half-hour Saturday-morning cartoon show. Culkin introduced the animated features, and provided the voice of the lead character, Nick McClary, a youngster whose wishes came true when he punched his baseball glove. Other characters included Nick's sister, Katie, his dog, Slobber, and his pal, Darryl Singletary.

WITH THIS RING DUMONT

21 JANUARY 1951–11 MARCH 1951 Prime-time panel show on which engaged couples discussed marriage and marital problems. Bill Slater hosted the show for the first few weeks and was succeeded by Martin Gabel.

THE WITNESS CBS

29 SEPTEMBER 1960–26 JANUARY 1961 This unusual anthology series was cloaked in pseudo-documentary trappings. Each show was set at a Congressional hearing room, where suspected racketeers were grilled by a panel of investigators. Some of the characters who appeared were entirely fictional, while others were based on real people; Telly Savalas guest starred on the premiere as Lucky Luciano. Paul McGrath appeared as the chairman of the investigating panel, and other members of the body were played by Charles Haydon, Frank Milan, and William Smithers. Vern Collett played the stenographic reporter.

THE WIZARD CBS

9 SEPTEMBER 1986–30 APRIL 1987; 9 JUNE 1987–7 JULY 1987 An hour adventure series, starring three-foot, eleven-inch David Rappaport as Simon McKay, a toymaker and inventor who was recruited by the government to help out on various missions. Doug Barr was Alex Jagger, the agent who worked with McKay; Fran Ryan was McKay's housekeeper, Tillie Russell. Occasionally featured was Roy Dotrice as Troyan, McKay's nemesis. Rappaport committed suicide in May 1990.

THE WIZARD OF ODDS NBC

17 JULY 1973–28 JUNE 1974 Alex Trebek hosted this daytime game show, which replaced Sale of the Century. Members of the studio audience competed in a number of rounds, most of which required answering statistical questions posed by the host.

THE WIZARD OF OZ ABC

8 SEPTEMBER 1990–31 AUGUST 1991 In the first TV animated version of the classic children's story, Dorothy and friends returned to the Land of Oz after learning that the Wicked Witch had come back to life.

WIZARDS AND WARRIORS CBS

26 FEBRUARY 1983–14 MAY 1983 This tongue-in-cheek fantasy series was set in a mythical medieval kingdom. Featured were Jeff Conaway as the dashing Prince Erik Greystone; Walter Olkewicz as his manservant, Marko; Duncan Regehr as the villainous Prince Dirk Blackpool; Julia Duffy as empty-headed Princess Ariel; Clive Revill as the wizard Vector; and Randi Brooks as Bethel the sorceress.

WOLF CBS

19 SEPTEMBER 1989–14 NOVEMBER 1989; 21 JUNE 1990–28 JUNE 1990; 18 JULY 1990–12 SEPTEMBER 1990 Jack Scalia appeared in his fifth flop series of the decade, starring in this hour crime show as Tony Wolf, a San Francisco cop who was framed and had to leave the force. Now living aboard a boat, the Sea Wolf, in the harbor, he was planning to be a fisherman, but found himself acting as a private investigator instead. Also on board were Joseph Sirola as his father, Sal Lupo; Nicolas Surovy as his former adversary, attorney Dylan Elliott, who now doubted Wolf's guilt; Mimi Kuzyk as his high school sweetheart (and now platonic friend), Connie Bacarri, who ran a restaurant; and J. C. Brandy as Connie's teenage daughter, Angeline. The series joined CBS's late-night lineup in July 1990.

WOLF ROCK TV ABC

8 SEPTEMBER 1984–24 NOVEMBER 1984 Rock videos were blended into this Saturday morning cartoon series on which Wolfman Jack and a gang of teenagers tried to save an ailing TV station. Disc jockey Wolfman Jack provided his own voice.

THE WOLFMAN JACK SHOW SYNDICATED

1974 Half-hour talk show on which Wolfman Jack, legendary disc jockey of the 1950s, rapped with rock stars.

WOMAN SYNDICATED

1971 Half-hour talk show for women, hosted by Sherrye Henry.

WOMAN PBS

1973–1977 Half-hour public affairs program on topics of interest to women, produced and hosted by Sandra Elkin for WNED-TV, Buffalo.

A WOMAN TO REMEMBER DUMONT

21 FEBRUARY 1949–15 JULY 1949 One of television's first serials, A Woman to Remember began as a daytime show and shifted to an early evening slot after a few weeks. Its format was that of a serial within a serial, as it dealt with the interaction between the cast and crew of a mythical radio soap opera. The fifteen-minute show featured Patricia Wheel as Christine Baker, the leading lady of the radio soap; Joan Catlin as its villain, Carol Winstead; John Raby as its director, Steve Hammond; Frank Thomas, Jr., as its sound man, Charley Anderson; and Ruth McDevitt as Bessie Thatcher.

WOMAN TO WOMAN SYNDICATED

1983 Pat Mitchell (formerly of Hour Magazine) was the moderator of this discussion show, aimed at women viewers. Each day focused on a single topic, and featured an all-female studio audience. The series was made available to local stations in both an hour and a half-hour format.

WOMAN WITH A PAST CBS

1 FEBRUARY 1954–2 JULY 1954 This daytime serial premiered on the same day as The Secret Storm, but lasted one-sixtieth as long. It starred Constance Ford as Lynn Sherwood, a dress designer.

WOMEN IN PRISON FOX

11 OCTOBER 1987–2 APRIL 1988 Cellblock J at Bass Women's Prison in Wisconsin was the locale of this half-hour sitcom. With Julia Campbell as Vicki Springer, a young socialite framed for shoplifting; Peggy Cass as veteran con Eve Shipley; C. C. H. Pounder as husband-murderer Dawn Murphy; Wendie Jo Sperber as Pam; Antoinette Byron as Bonnie Murphy; Denny Dillon as Meg Bando, the guard; and Blake Clark as Clint Rafferty, the warden.

WOMEN OF THE HOUSE CBS

4 JANUARY 1995–20 MARCH 1995; 18 AUGUST 1995 Although Delta Burke had left the popular Designing Women after a disagreement with the producers, the fences were eventually mended. Burke again played her Designing Women character, Suzanne Sugarbaker, whose fifth husband, a Georgia Congressman, had just died; Suzanne took his seat in Washington. Joining her were Teri Garr as the hard-drinking press secretary, Sissy Emerson; Patricia Heaton as aide Natalie Hollingsworth; Valerie Mahaffey (first four episodes) and Julie Hagerty as eager-to-please receptionist Jennifer Malone; Jonathan Banks as Jim, Suzanne's dimwitted brother; and Brittany Parkyn as Desiree, Suzanne's young daughter.

WONDER WOMAN ABC/CBS

18 DECEMBER 1976–30 JULY 1977 (ABC); 16 SEPTEMBER 1977–11 SEPTEMBER 1979 (CBS) An hour adventure series based on the comic book character created by Charles Moulton, Wonder Woman was first introduced to television audiences in a 1974 made-for-TV movie, which starred Cathy Lee Crosby. The character reappeared in three specials aired during the 1975–1976 season, all of which starred Lynda Carter—"The New, Original Wonder Woman," "Fausta, the Nazi Wonder Woman," and "Wonder Woman Meets Baroness Von Gunter." Regularly scheduled broadcasts began the following season, again starring Lynda Carter in the title role. A resident of mysterious Paradise Island, the powerfully endowed Wonder Woman helped the Americans fight the Nazis; she took the name Diana Prince as her cover. Also featured on the ABC version of the series were Lyle Waggoner as Major Steve Trevor, Diana's romantic interest; Richard Eastham as General Blankenship; and Beatrice Colen as Corporal Etta Candy. Debra Winger was seen occasionally as Diana's younger sister, Drusilla (or Wonder Girl). When the series moved to CBS in the fall of 1977, it was updated to the present time; Lynda Carter continued as Diana Prince, and Lyle Waggoner returned as Steve Trevor, Jr. (the son of the major), a government agent. Normann Burton joined the cast as Joe Atkinson, their boss at IADC, the Inter-Agency Defense Command. The CBS version was officially titled The New Adventures of Wonder Woman. Douglas S. Cramer was the executive producer.

THE WONDER YEARS ABC

31 JANUARY 1988; 15 MARCH 1988–19 APRIL 1988; 26 OCTOBER 1988–1 SEPTEMBER 1993 Creators Carol Black and Neal Marlens looked back twenty years to suburban life in 1968 in this highly acclaimed half-hour comedy-drama. Fred Savage starred as the central character, twelve-year-old Kevin Arnold, who was just about to start school at John F. Kennedy Junior High as the series got underway; Daniel Stern provided the voice of the adult Kevin, narrating each episode. Also featured were Jason Hervey as his older brother, Wayne, who delighted in teasing him; Olivia d'Abo (daughter of sixties rock musician Michael d'Abo) as his hippie older sister, Karen; Dan Lauria as his gruff father, Jack; Alley Mills as his mother, Norma; Danica McKellar as his neighbor and sometime girlfriend, Gwendolyn (Winnie) Cooper; Josh Saviano as his nerdy friend, Paul Pfeiffer; Ben Stein as science teacher Mr. Cantwell; and Robert Picardo as the fearsome gym teacher, Coach Ed Cutlip. The series had a special preview in January 1988, immediately following ABC's Super Bowl telecast. It then surfaced for a limited run that spring, before resuming full-time production in the fall. By the fall of 1990 Karen had moved out of the Arnold household and in with her boyfriend, Michael (David Schwimmer); they eventually married. In the fall of 1991 Kevin and his pals left junior high and started at McKinley High.

WONDERFUL JOHN ACTON NBC

12 JULY 1953–6 OCTOBER 1953 Half-hour sitcom set in 1919 in a small Kentucky town on the banks of the Ohio River. With Harry Holcombe as John Acton, the court clerk and town storekeeper; Virginia Dwyer as Julia, John's widowed daughter; Ronnie Walken as Kevin Acton, John's twelve-year-old son; Ian Martin as Uncle Terence; Jane Rose as John's sister, Bessie; and Pat Harrington as Peter Bodkin, Jr. Edward A. Byron was the producer, Grey Lockwood the director. The show was seen Sundays over most NBC outlets; in New York, however, it was shown Mondays.

WONDERWORKS PBS

1984–1994 An anthology series aimed at preteen children. Most of the presentations were adaptations of children's books, but some were original stories. The series' most noteworthy presentation was probably the four-part "Anne of Green Gables," starring Megan Follows, which won a Peabody Award in 1986.

THE WOODY WOODBURY SHOW SYNDICATED

1967 Ninety-minute talk show, hosted by Woody Woodbury.

THE WOODY WOODPECKER SHOW ABC/NBC

3 OCTOBER 1957–25 SEPTEMBER 1958 (ABC); 12 SEPTEMBER 1970–2 SEPTEMBER 1972 (NBC); 11 SEPTEMBER 1976–3 SEPTEMBER 1977 (NBC) Woody Woodpecker, the cartoon character created in the 1930s by Walter Lantz, first came to network TV in 1957 in a half-hour series that was carried by ABC on Thursday afternoons. The cartoon segments included not only Woody Woodpecker, but also Gabby Gator, Andy Panda, and others. Lantz himself hosted the series and showed viewers the basics of animation. NBC later carried the cartoons on Saturday mornings. Woody Woodpecker's voice, and his distinctive laugh, were supplied by Lantz's wife, Gracie Lantz.

WOOPS! FOX

27 SEPTEMBER 1992–6 DECEMBER 1992 Perhaps best summarized as a post-apocalyptic Gilligan's Island, Woops! was a sitcom about six survivors of a nuclear war who gathered at a Midwestern farmhouse. With Meagen Fay as Alice McConnell, a feminist who had run a bookstore; Fred Applegate as Jack Connors, who had been homeless; Evan Handler as Mark Braddock, who had been a teacher; Lane Davies as Curtis Thorpe, who had been a stock analyst; Cleavant Derricks as Frederick Ross, who had been a pathologist; and Marita Geraghty as Suzane Skilman, who had been a manicurist.

THE WRIGHT VERDICTS CBS

31 MARCH 1995–14 APRIL 1995; 4 JUNE 1995—11 JUNE 1995 Dick Wolf created this hour crime show starring Tom Conti as Charles Wright, an English-born criminal defense attorney who worked in New York. Also aboard were Margaret Colin as Sandy, Wright's investigator, and Aida Turturro as Lydia, his secretary.

WUZZLES CBS/ABC

14 SEPTEMBER 1985–6 SEPTEMBER 1986 (CBS); 13 SEPTEMBER 1986–5 SEPTEMBER 1987 (ABC) This Saturday morning cartoon show was set on the Isle of Wuz, where lived the Wuzzles, each of whom was a combination of two different animals.

WYATT EARP ABC

6 SEPTEMBER 1955–26 SEPTEMBER 1961 Officially titled The Life and Legend of Wyatt Earp, this half-hour series, together with Gunsmoke and Cheyenne, marked the beginning of the so-called "adult western." The concept gained popularity over the next few seasons, and by the fall of 1959 there were no fewer than twenty-seven westerns scheduled in prime time. This one was based loosely on fact and starred Hugh O'Brian as Wyatt Earp; for the show's first four seasons Earp was the marshal of Dodge City, Kansas (Gunsmoke's Matt Dillon was also the marshal of Dodge City, but the two lawmen never met, as their shows were on different networks). Also featured were Douglas Fowley and Myron Healey as Doc Holliday and Morgan Woodward as Shotgun Gibbs, Earp's deputy. In the fall of 1959 the show shifted its locale to Tombstone, Arizona (the real Earp had done the same thing), and Earp became the marshal there. Joining the cast were Randy Stuart as saloonkeeper Nellie Cashman; Damian O'Flynn as Doc Goodfellow; Lash LaRue (fall 1959) and Steve Brodie (1959–1961) as Johnny Behan, Tombstone's corrupt sheriff; and Trevor Bardette (1959–1961) as Clanton, the area crime boss. Robert F. Sisk produced the series.

Hugh O'Brian returned as Earp in a two-hour TV movie, "Wyatt Earp: Return to Tombstone" (2 July 1994, CBS), which featured colorized clips from the old series and newly-filmed footage.

THE X-FILES FOX

10 SEPTEMBER 1993– On this stylish hour series a pair of FBI agents teamed up to investigate cases classified as "X-Files"—unexplained phenomena. It starred David Duchovny as Fox Mulder, an Oxford-educated psychologist who believed that his sister had been abducted by aliens as a child, and Gillian Anderson as Dana Scully, who had been recruited from medical school and who took a scientific approach to the cases. Together they encountered a bizarre assortment of cases ranging from encounters with aliens to possession by spirits. Created by Chris Carter, the series quickly acquired a large cult following. Refreshingly, not every mystery was resolved by the end of the episode.

X-MEN FOX

31 OCTOBER 1992– Half-hour cartoon series based on the Marvel comic books about eight youngsters who attended a school for mutants. Taught by Professor Charles Xavier and known as X-Men, the octet—The Beast, Cyclops, Gambit, Jean Grey, Jubilee, Rogue, Storm, and Wolverine—battled the archvillain Magneto. The popularity of the series led to a 49% increase in the ratings of the Fox Children's Network during the 1992–1993 season.

THE XAVIER CUGAT SHOW NBC

27 FEBRUARY 1957–24 MAY 1957 A twice-weekly, fifteen-minute musical series, The Xavier Cugat Show replaced Eddie Fisher's Coke Time on Wednesdays and Fridays. Bandleader Xavier Cugat and his orchestra supplied the music, and vocals were performed by Abbe Lane, Cugat's then wife.

XENA: WARRIOR PRINCESS SYNDICATED

1995– Spun off from the syndicated action series Hercules—The Legendary Journeys, this hour weekly program was also set in ancient times. Lucy Lawless starred as Xena, who decided to relinquish her warlike past and help the oppressed and needy. Renee O'Connor costarred as Gabrielle, a village lass who decided to accompany Xena.

XUXA SYNDICATED

1993–1995 An Americanized version of the highly popular Latin American children's program, in which host Xuxa (pronounced shoo-sha) led youngsters in songs, dances, and games. Born Maria da Graca Meneghel in Brazil, Xuxa had been a model before turning to children's television.

YANCY DERRINGER CBS

2 OCTOBER 1958–24 SEPTEMBER 1959 Half-hour western set in New Orleans after the Civil War. With Jock Mahoney as Yancy Derringer, a suave and stylishly dressed bon vivant who carried the pistol for which he was known in his hat; X Brands as Pahoo, Yancy's silent and unsmiling Indian companion, who always kept a knife in his headdress (Pahoo's full name, Pahoo Ka-Ta-Wah, was Pawnee for "Wolf who stands in water"); Kevin Hagen as John Colton, the beleaguered city administrator of New Orleans; Frances Bergen as Madame Francine, one of Yancy's female friends. The series was created by Mary Loos and Richard Sale, who owned the show together with executive producers Warren Lewis and Don Sharpe.

A YEAR AT THE TOP CBS

5 AUGUST 1977–4 SEPTEMBER 1977 Comedy-fantasy about a pair of songwriters who sold their souls to the devil for a year at the top of their profession. With Greg Evigan as Greg; Paul Shaffer as his partner, Paul Durban; Gabe Dell as their agent, Frederick Hanover, the son of the devil; Nedra Volz as Belle, Paul's grandmother; Priscilla Morrill as Miss Worley, Hanover's secretary; and Julie Cobb as Trish. The pilot for the series, "Hereafter," was shown on NBC 27 November 1975. The series was created by Woody Kling, and developed by Don Kirshner in association with Norman Lear. Darryl Hickman was the producer.

A YEAR IN THE LIFE NBC

24 AUGUST 1987–20 APRIL 1988 Joshua Brand and John Falsey, who had created St. Elsewhere, created this hour dramatic series, which grew out of a three-part NBC miniseries televised on 15–17 December 1986. Loved by the critics ("remarkable television entertainment," wrote Don Merrill in TV Guide), it never attracted an audience, and vanished after an eight-month run. The series focused on the members of the Gardner family of Seattle: Joe Gardner (Richard Kiley), a plastics manufacturer who was widowed in the miniseries; eldest child Anne Maxwell (Wendy Phillips), twice divorced; daughter Lindley Eisenberg (Jayne Atkinson), who worked for her father; prodigal son Jack (Morgan Stevens); youngest child Sam (David Oliver), who also worked for his father; Lindley's husband, attorney Jim Eisenberg (Adam Arkin); Sam's wife, Kay (Sarah Jessica Parker); Anne's son from her first marriage, David Sisk (Trey Ames); Anne's daughter, Sunny Sisk (Amanda Peterson); little Ruthie, Lindley and Jim's daughter (Melissa and Erin Leonard); Dr. Alice Foley (Diana Muldaur), who was interested in Joe; and Max the dog (Beau).

YEARBOOK FOX

7 MARCH 1991–6 JULY 1991 Half-hour documentary series chronicling senior year at Glenbard West High School in suburban Chicago. Ken Dashow narrated.

THE YELLOW ROSE NBC

2 OCTOBER 1983–12 MAY 1984 A sprawling Texas cattle ranch known as the Yellow Rose was the setting of this hour prime-time serial. Principal players included: Cybill Shepherd as Colleen Champion, the young widow of Wade Champion, who founded the Yellow Rose; David Soul as Roy Champion, Wade's son by a former marriage; Edward Albert as Quisto, Roy's son, a lawyer; Tom Schanley as Whit, Roy's son; Susan Anspach as Grace McKenzie, the kitchen boss (dissatisfied with her role, Anspach left after the first nine episodes); Sam Elliott as Chance, a newly hired ranch hand who bore a strong resemblance to Wade; Chuck Connors as Jeb Hollister, the previous owner of the ranch; Noah Beery, Jr., as Luther Dillard, a ranch hand; Kerrie Keane as Caryn Cabrerra; and Ken Curtis as Hoyt Coryell, a ranch hand. Jane Russell joined the cast briefly in midseason as Jeb's sister, Rose Hollister, for whom the ranch had been named. NBC reran the series during the summer of 1990.

YESTERDAY, TODAY & TOMORROW NBC

2 AUGUST 1989–28 NOVEMBER 1989 Yet another of NBC's seemingly endless attempts to establish a prime-time news show, this one boasted three hosts—Maria Shriver, Chuck Scarborough and Mary Alice Williams—and was supposed to examine topics from the past, present and future, using interviews, newsreel footage and, when necessary, "dramatic recreations" of events. It was televised monthly, with the hope that it could go into a weekly slot in midseason, but the series vanished after only four outings.

YESTERDAY'S NEWSREEL SYNDICATED
1948 Vintage theatrical newsreels were repackaged for local television stations on this series, which was the first program offered by Ziv TV. Ziv would become one of the industry's leading suppliers of syndicated programs during the 1950s.

YO! MTV RAPS MTV
6 AUGUST 1988– MTV's first effort at showcasing rap music, Yo! MTV Raps was cohosted by rappers Ed Lover and Dr. Dre.

YOGI BEAR SYNDICATED
1961–1963
YOGI'S GANG ABC
8 SEPTEMBER 1973–30 AUGUST 1975
YOGI'S SPACE RACE NBC
9 SEPTEMBER 1978–3 MARCH 1979
YO, YOGI! NBC
14 SEPTEMBER 1991–25 JULY 1992 Yogi Bear, one of the most famous cartoon creations from Hanna-Barbera Productions, first appeared in 1958 on Huckleberry Hound and two years later was given his own series. At that time he was a resident of Jellystone National Park, where he spent his days devising ways of pilfering picnic baskets, together with his diminutive companion, Boo Boo. Daws Butler provided the voice of Yogi, while Boo Boo's was supplied by Don Messick. Other segments included "Snagglepuss," a lisping lion, and "Yakky Doodle," a duck. After a season or two, Yogi acquired a girlfriend, Cindy Bear. By 1964 the character had become popular enough to warrant a full-length theatrical film, "Hey There, It's Yogi Bear." By the 1970s, however, Yogi and his pals had long since left Jellystone Park. In Yogi's Gang, an hour show, they battled environmental enemies like Mr. Pollution. The "Gang" included many other Hanna-Barbera characters, such as Huckleberry Hound, Wally Gator, and Magilla Gorilla, among others. In the fall of 1978 Yogi and his friends left the planet to star in a ninety-minute show, Yogi's Space Race. This series consisted of several segments: "Space Race," in which characters such as Yogi, Huckleberry Hound, Jabberjaw, the Phantom Phink, and Rita and Wendy piloted their respective vehicles through the solar system; "The Buford Files," starring a slow-witted bloodhound who lived in a swamp; "Galaxy Goof-Ups," starring Yogi, Huck, and others; and "The Galloping Ghost," the adventures of a fast-moving spirit. In November of 1978 Yogi's Space Race was trimmed to sixty minutes, and The Galaxy Goof-Ups became a separate half-hour series. Early in 1979 the show was trimmed to thirty minutes, as Buford became a separate series. After a twelve-year absence Yogi returned to network television in 1991. Yo, Yogi! found the bear and his pals hanging out at a shopping mall.

YOU AGAIN? NBC
27 FEBRUARY 1986–7 JANUARY 1987 Half-hour sitcom based on the British series Home to Roost. With Jack Klugman as divorcé Henry Willows, a buyer for Global Markets, a grocery chain; John Stamos as his seventeen-year-old son Matt, who left his mother and stepfather to move in with Henry (Henry and Matt hadn't seen each other in seven years); Elizabeth Bennett as Henry's English housekeeper, Enid Tompkins (Bennett played the same role simultaneously on the British series); Valerie Landsburg (fall 1986–1987) as Henry's secretary, Pam; and Barbara Rhoades (fall 1986–1987) as Maggie Davis, who also worked for Global.

YOU ARE AN ARTIST NBC
1 NOVEMBER 1946–17 JANUARY 1950 One of television's earliest instructional shows, You Are an Artist was hosted by Jon Gnagy, who showed viewers how to draw.

YOU ARE THERE CBS

1 FEBRUARY 1953–13 OCTOBER 1957; 11 SEPTEMBER 1971–2 SEPTEMBER 1972 An unusual public affairs series, You Are There began in 1947 as a radio show (it was originally titled CBS Was There). Each week a well-known historical event was recreated, and the leading figures in each drama were interviewed by CBS news correspondents (the correspondents always appeared in modern-day dress, regardless of the setting of the story). The television version ran from 1953 to 1957 on Sunday afternoons, and was revived in 1971 as a Saturday-afternoon show, aimed principally at children. Walter Cronkite was the chief correspondent on both TV versions. Paul Newman guest-starred on one program, as Nathan Hale (30 August 1953); and the 1971 premiere, "The Mystery of Amelia Earhart," featured Geraldine Brooks and Richard Dreyfuss.

YOU ASKED FOR IT DUMONT/ABC/SYNDICATED

29 DECEMBER 1950–7 DECEMBER 1951 (DUMONT); 10 DECEMBER 1951–27 SEPTEMBER 1959 (ABC); 1972 (SYNDICATED) A half-hour human-interest series, You Asked for It answered viewers' requests for unusual acrobatic or magic acts, trained animals, good Samaritans, or whatever. On the network versions of the show, the viewer's letter was read before the act or feature was introduced, while a picture of the viewer was superimposed on a jar of the sponsor's product, Skippy Peanut Butter. Kindly Art Baker hosted the show from 1950 until early 1958, when Jack Smith took over; Smith also hosted the 1972 syndicated version. Another syndicated version appeared in 1981 (see The New You Asked for It).

YOU BET YOUR LIFE NBC/SYNDICATED

5 OCTOBER 1950–21 SEPTEMBER 1961 (NBC); 1980 (SYNDICATED); 1992 (SYNDICATED) Television's funniest game show was emceed by "The One, the Only"—Groucho Marx. The game was simple enough—a pair of players tried to answer a few questions in a category of their choice (the exact procedure varied somewhat from year to year)—but it took a back seat to the freewheeling interviews conducted by Groucho. The show's production staff was constantly on the lookout for unusual guests and managed to find quite a few. Some stood on their heads, some danced, and some had funny stories to tell, but all provided targets for Groucho's verbal salvos. Most guests were nonprofessionals, but a few—like Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein—were well known; others, such as Phyllis Diller, Candice Bergen (who appeared with her father, Edgar Bergen), and William Peter Blatty (who wrote The Exorcist), later became celebrities. Contestants could win money not only by answering questions, but also if they managed "to say the secret word"—at the outset of each show, an everyday word was selected, then attached to a toy duck that was raised above the stage. If one of the contestants uttered the preselected word, the duck dropped down, and the couple split an extra $50; occasionally, model Marilyn Burtis came down instead of the duck, and on one show Groucho's brother, Harpo Marx, descended. Groucho's longtime sidekick was George Fenneman, who did the announcing, carried in the questions, and kept score; the two began working together when You Bet Your Life began on radio in 1947. The television version was produced by John Guedel and was one of the few game shows to be filmed (because the interviews with the contestants ran overtime and had to be edited). A revival of the series was attempted in 1980; the short-lived show was hosted by Buddy Hackett, with Ron Husmann as the announcer. A second revival surfaced in 1992, with host Bill Cosby and sidekick Robbi Chong. It too was unsuccessful.

YOU CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU SYNDICATED

1987 A half-hour syndicated sitcom, based on the popular Moss Hart–George S. Kaufman play. Set on Staten Island in the early 1900s, it featured Harry Morgan as Martin Vanderhof; Lois Nettleton as his daughter, Penny Sycamore; Richard Sanders as her husband, Paul; Heather Blodgett as their daughter Essie; Lisa Aliff as their daughter Alice; and Theodore Wilson as neighbor Darwood Pinner.

YOU DON'T SAY NBC/ABC/SYNDICATED

1 APRIL 1963–26 SEPTEMBER 1969 (NBC); 7 JULY 1975–26 NOVEMBER 1975 (ABC); 1978 (SYNDICATED) This durable game show involved both contestants and celebrities, who tried to get each other to say the name of a famous person or place by suggesting sentences with blanks in them. Tom Kennedy hosted the show. The NBC version enjoyed a six-year daytime run and also popped up on the prime-time schedule early in 1964. The ABC version was seen only as a daytime program. The half-hour show was a Ralph Andrews Production.

YOU TAKE THE KIDS CBS

15 DECEMBER 1990–12 JANUARY 1991 Domestic sitcom set in Pittsburgh, with Nell Carter (late of Gimme a Break) as Nell Kirkland, wife, mother of four, and part-time piano teacher; Roger E. Mosley (late of Magnum P.I.) as her husband, Michael Kirkland, a school bus driver; Caryn Ward as their teen daughter, Lorette; Dante Bezé as eldest son Raymond; Marlon Taylor as middle son Peter; Trent Cameron as youngest son Nathaniel; and Leila Danette as Nell's feisty mother, Helen.

YOU WRITE THE SONGS SYNDICATED

1986 An updated version of the 1950–1952 series, Songs for Sale, You Write the Songs was a competition for amateur songwriters. Successful submissions were performed by the show's resident singers—a troupe known as the New Song Singers, and individual songsters Monica Page, Catte Adams, and Kenny James—and were then rated by a panel of celebrity judges. Ben Vereen was the host.

YOUNG AND GAY CBS

1 JANUARY 1950–26 MARCH 1950 Also known as The Girls, this half-hour sitcom was based loosely on two real characters, Cornelia Otis Skinner and Emily Kimbrough. It starred Bethel Leslie as Beth Skinner; Mary Malone as Mary Kimbrough; and Kenneth Forbes as Tod Hunter. Other in the cast included Harry Bannister, John Campbell, Audrey Christie, Alexander Ivo, and Agnes Young. Carol Irwin was the producer, David Rich the director.

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS CBS

26 MARCH 1973– A stylish daytime serial, The Young and the Restless replaced Where the Heart Is in 1973. Specifically aimed at a younger audience than most soaps, the series is generally considered to be TV's most artistic serial. It was created by William Bell and Lee Phillip Bell. John Conboy was its first executive producer. When Conboy left in 1982 for a new serial, Capitol, William Bell and H. Wesley Kenney took over as executive producers. Edward Scott was executive producer in 1989, while Bell held the title of senior executive producer (at the same time Bell was guiding a second CBS daytime drama, The Bold and the Beautiful). The series won the Emmy for outstanding daytime drama series in its third season (1974–1975), and would win again three times during the 1980s, and once again in 1992–1993. Its popularity climbed steadily; for most of the 1980s it ranked second behind General Hospital. By 1988 it had eclipsed GH for the top spot, and remained there through the mid-1990s.

Set in the medium-sized town of Genoa City, its storylines revolved around the several members of the Brooks family—Stuart, Jennifer, and their four daughters—and the Fosters—Liz, her two sons and daughter. By the early 1980s, however, almost all the Brookses and Fosters had been written out, and the main storylines centered around the members of the Abbott and Williams families. The cast has included: Robert Colbert (1973–1983) as Stuart Brooks, owner of the Genoa City Chronicle; Dorothy Green as his wife, Jennifer Brooks; Trish Stewart and Lynne Richter (also known as Lynne Topping) as daughter Chris; Janice Lynde (1973–1977) and Victoria Mallory (1977–1982) as daughter Leslie; Jaime Lyn Bauer (1973–1982) as daughter Lauralee (Lori); Pamela Peters (also known as Pamela Peters Solow) and Patricia Everly as daughter Peggy; Julianna McCarthy as Liz Foster (McCarthy was the only original cast member still on board as of 1984); James Houghton (1973–1976), Brian Kerwin (1976–1977), Wings Hauser (1977–1981; also known as J. D.

Hauser), and Howard McGillin as Liz's son, Greg Foster, a lawyer who married Chris Brooks; William Gray Espy (1973–1975) and David Hasselhoff (1975–1982) as Liz's son, Bill "Snapper" Foster, who had previously been married to Chris; Brenda Dickson, Bond Gideon, Deborah Adair, Brenda Dickson (again), and Jess Walton as Liz's daughter, Jill Foster, a hairdresser who was hired as a personal assistant to a wealthy matron; Lee Crawford as Sally McGuire, who had an affair with Snapper before his marriage; Tom Hallick as Brad Eliot, a former surgeon who married Leslie Brooks; Robert Clary as Pierre Rouland, a nightclub owner who married Sally and was later murdered; Lilyan Chauvin as Pierre's sister, Marianna Rouland; Jeanne Cooper as Kay Chancellor, the woman who hired Jill Foster (Kay Chancellor became one of the series' major characters, as she coped with alcoholism and a fondness for younger men; when actress Cooper underwent a facelift, scenes from the operation were shown on the air); John Considine and Donnelly Rhodes as Kay's husband, Philip Chancellor, who fell for Jill and married her just before his death; Robert Clarke and Paul Stevens as Dr. Bruce Henderson, an old boyfriend of Jennifer's who fell for her again; Steve Carlson as Bruce's son, Mark Henderson, who fell for Peggy Brooks (Jennifer later confessed to Peggy that Bruce Henderson, not Stuart Brooks, was her real father); Beau Kazer as Brock Reynolds, son of Kay Chancellor; Anthony Herrera as Jack Curtis (or Curtzynski), a college teacher who fell for Peggy; Kay Heberle as Jack's wife, Joann Curtis; John McCook and Dennis Cole as Lance Prentiss, who fell for Lori Brooks; Deidre Hall as Barbara Anderson; Jennifer Leak as Gwen Sherman; Charles Gray as Bill Foster, Sr.; Barry Cahill as Sam Powers; Tom Selleck as Jed Andrews; Jordeann Russo as Regina Henderson; Cathy Carricaburu as Nancy Becker; Dick DeCoit as Ron Becker; K. Mead as Philip Chancellor III.

The Young and the Restless was a half-hour serial until 4 February 1980, when it expanded to a full hour. Its theme music, popularly known as "Nadia's Theme," is no doubt the best-recognized theme from any soap opera. The song was composed by Barry DeVorzon and Perry Botkin, Jr., for the 1971 film Bless the Beasts and the Children, and was then titled "Cotton's Theme." Subsequently, it was used for several years on The Young and the Restless, but achieved much greater recognition when it was chosen as performance music for Romanian gymnast Nadia Comaneci during the 1976 Olympics. In 1983 a California jury awarded DeVorzon $241,000 in damages against A&M Records, because of the latter's failure to list DeVorzon as the co-composer on the first pressings of the "Nadia's Theme" record it released in 1976.

YOUNG DAN'L BOONE CBS

12 SEPTEMBER 1977–4 OCTOBER 1977 The first casualty of the 1977–1978 season, Young Dan'l Boone vanished after four episodes. Not to be confused with Daniel Boone, a popular show which lasted six seasons, this one starred Rick Moses as Dan'l Boone, who seemed to be in his mid-twenties; Devon Ericson as his intended, Rebecca Bryan; Ji-Tu Cumbuka as his friend, Hawk, a former slave; John Joseph Thomas as Peter, a twelve-year-old companion of Boone's. Ernie Frankel was the executive producer, and Jimmy Sangster the producer, of the hour show.

YOUNG DR. KILDARE SYNDICATED

1972 A remake of Dr. Kildare, the popular medical show of the early 1960s, Young Dr. Kildare starred Mark Jenkins as the intern, Dr. James Kildare, and Gary Merrill as his guiding light, Dr. Leonard Gillespie. The half-hour series was videotaped; Joseph Gantman was the executive producer.

YOUNG DR. MALONE NBC

29 DECEMBER 1958–29 MARCH 1963 A daytime serial, Young Dr. Malone enjoyed a lengthy radio run (from 1939 to 1960) as well as a moderately successful television run. The TV version replaced another serial, Today Is Ours, and six characters from that show were worked into the story lines of the new soap opera. Set at Valley Hospital in the town of Three Oaks, Young Dr. Malone involved two generations of the Malone family. The cast included: William Prince as Dr. Jerry Malone, chief of staff at the hospital; Virginia Dwyer and Augusta Dabney as Jerry's wife, Tracey Malone (William Prince and Augusta Dabney later married in real life); John Connell as their adopted son, Dr. David Malone, a young physician; Kathleen Widdoes, Freda Holloway and Sarah Hardy as Tracey and Jerry's daughter, Jill Malone; Emily McLaughlin as David's romantic interest, Dr. Eileen Seaton; Peter Brandon as Dr. Tad Powell; Lesley Woods as Clare Bannister; Martin Blaine as Lionel Steele; Zina Bethune, Michele Tuttle, Susan Hallaran and Patty McCormack as Lisha Steele; and Diana Hyland as Gig Houseman.

THE YOUNG INDIANA JONES CHRONICLES ABC

4 MARCH 1992–7 SEPTEMBER 1992; 13 MARCH 1993–17 APRIL 1993; 5 JUNE 1993–23 JULY 1993 Producer George Lucas intended this expensive adventure series to be a prequel to his "Indiana Jones" movies. On TV, a younger Indy travelled with his father, a Princeton professor who lectured internationally, and became involved in adventures all over the world during the early decades of the twentieth century. The episodes were recounted by the elderly Indy in the present day. The title character, Henry "Indiana" Jones, Jr., was played by three actors: Sean Patrick Flannery was the teenage Indy, Corey Carrier was the ten-year-old Indy, and George Hall was Old Indy, the narrator. Also appearing were Ronny Coutteure as Remy, a pal of the teenage Indy, and Margaret Tyzack as Miss Helen Seymour, tutor of the ten-year-old Indy. Among the historical characters encountered by Indy were Pablo Picasso, T. E. Lawrence, Teddy Roosevelt, and Sigmund Freud. Harrison Ford, who played the adult Indy in the movies, appeared in the episode of 13 March 1993.

Following the series' departure from ABC, the first of several planned TV-movies, "Young Indiana Jones and the Hollywood Follies," aired on the Family Channel 15 October 1994.

THE YOUNG LAWYERS ABC

21 SEPTEMBER 1970–5 MAY 1971 An hour-long dramatic series set at the Neighborhood Law Office in Boston, where law students handled cases under the supervision of a senior attorney. With Lee J. Cobb as David Barrett, a private practitioner who oversaw the operation; Zalman King as law student Aaron Silverman; Judy Pace as law student Pat Walters; and Phillip Clark (January 1971–May 1971) as law student Chris Blake. Matthew Rapf produced the show for Paramount TV.

THE YOUNG MARRIEDS ABC

5 OCTOBER 1964–25 MARCH 1966 A late-afternoon serial aimed at a younger audience than most soaps, The Young Marrieds told the stories of several young couples who lived in a suburban town. The cast included: Paul Picerni as Dr. Dan Garrett; Peggy McCay as Susan Garrett; Mike Mikler as Walter Reynolds; Susan Brown as Ann Reynolds; Floy Dean as Liz Forsythe; Constance Moore as Liz's mother, Irene Forsythe; Norma Connolly as Lena Karr Gilroy; Barry Russo as Roy Gilroy; Betty Connor and Brenda Benet as model Jill McComb; Scott Graham and Charles Grodin as Matt Crane; Les Brown, Jr., as Buzz Korman; Frank Maxwell as Mr. Korman; Maxine Stuart as Mrs. Korman; Pat Rossen as Jerry; Irene Tedrow as Aunt Alex; Frank Marvel as Mr. Coleman; Ken Metcalfe as Jimmy; Michael Stefani as Paul; Maria Palmer as Mady; Don Randolph as Theo; Robert Hogan as Gillespie; Ben Astar as Mr. Killeran; and Susan Seaforth as Carol West.

YOUNG MAVERICK CBS

28 NOVEMBER 1979–16 JANUARY 1980 A sequel to Maverick, one of TV's more popular westerns, Young Maverick starred Charles Frank as Harvard-educated Ben Maverick, a younger cousin of Bart and Bret, who shared the family's aversion to violence. Also featured were Susan Blanchard as Ben's friend, Nell McGarrahan, and John Dehner as grim Marshal Edge Troy, the Idaho Territory lawman who tried to keep a watchful eye on young Maverick. Executive producer: Robert Van Scoyk for Warner Brothers TV. See also Bret Maverick.

YOUNG MR. BOBBIN NBC

26 AUGUST 1951–18 MAY 1952 Half-hour sitcom starring Jackie Kelk as Alexander Bobbin, a young man working at his first job, and Jane Seymour and Nydia Westman as his two spinster aunts, Aunt Clara and Aunt Bertie. Patricia Hosley was featured as Bobbin's girlfriend, Nancy.

THE YOUNG REBELS ABC

20 SEPTEMBER 1970–3 JANUARY 1971 A historical adventure series, The Young Rebels was set in Chester, Pennsylvania, in 1777, and chronicled the exploits of the members of the Yankee Doodle Society, a group of young guerrilla fighters. With Rick Ely as Jeremy Larkin, son of the mayor; Lou Gossett as Isak Poole, a blacksmith and freeman; Alex Henteloff as the scientifically inclined Henry Abington, a young Ben Franklin; Hilarie Thompson as Elizabeth Coates; and Philippe Fourquet as the young General Lafayette, one of the few outsiders who knew this group's identities. The hour series was a Screen Gems production.

THE YOUNG RIDERS ABC

20 SEPTEMBER 1989–25 JANUARY 1992; 21 MAY 1992–23 JULY 1992 Ed Spielman created this hour western about six young recruits for the Pony Express. With Anthony Zerbe as the boss, Teaspoon Hunter; Ty Miller as The Kid; Stephen Baldwin as Billy Cody; Josh Brolin as Jimmy Hickok; Travis Fine (1989–1991) as Ike McSwain; Gregg Rainwater as Buck Cross; Yvonne Suhor as Lou McCloud, who disguised herself as a man in order to get the job; Melissa Leo (1989–1990) as Emma Shannon, the cook; Brett Cullen (1989–1990) as Marshal Sam Cain, the local lawman; Clare Wren (1990–1992) as Rachel; and Don Franklin (1990–1992) as Noah Dixon. Apparently, The Kid, Cody and Hickok were all supposed to be the younger incarnations of the future Western notables Billy the Kid, Buffalo Bill, and Wild Bill Hickok, respectively. In the fall of 1991 the action shifted from Sweetwater, Wyoming, to Cross Creek, Nebraska, and Christopher Pettiet signed on as young Jesse James.

THE YOUNG SENTINELS NBC

10 SEPTEMBER 1977–2 SEPTEMBER 1978 This Saturday-morning cartoon show was set in outer space and changed its name to Space Sentinels in midseason. Its central characters were three youngsters who had been endowed with super powers by Sentinel One, a creature from another galaxy, and who were sent back to Earth to help humanity.

THE YOUNG SET ABC

6 SEPTEMBER 1965–17 DECEMBER 1965 An hour daytime talk show, hosted by Phyllis Kirk and a weekly celebrity cohost.

YOUR ALL-AMERICAN COLLEGE SHOW SYNDICATED

1968–1970 Half-hour talent show featuring college-age acts, hosted first by Dennis James and later by Rich Little and Arthur Godfrey.

YOUR BIG MOMENT DUMONT

19 MAY 1953–2 JUNE 1953 Melvyn Douglas hosted this prime-time program, on which viewers who had written to the show requesting blind dates had the chance to meet the person of their dreams. Ken Roberts and the Ray Bloch Orchestra were also featured on the half-hour series, which was retitled Blind Date when Jan Murray succeeded Douglas on 9 June (see also that title).

YOUR FIRST IMPRESSION NBC

2 JANUARY 1962–26 JUNE 1964 On this daytime game show a panel of three celebrities tried to guess the identity of mystery guests from clues supplied by the host. Bill Leyden emceed, and Dennis James was a regular panelist. Monty Hall was the executive producer.

YOUR FUNNY, FUNNY FILMS ABC

8 JULY 1963–9 SEPTEMBER 1963 Amateur filmmakers had a rare chance to show their stuff on network television on this half-hour show, hosted by George Fenneman. The accent was on comedy rather than artistry. See also America's Funniest Home Videos.

YOUR HIT PARADE NBC/CBS

7 OCTOBER 1950–7 JUNE 1958 (NBC); 10 OCTOBER 1958–24 APRIL 1959 (CBS); 2 AUGUST 1974–30 AUGUST 1974 (CBS) Your Hit Parade began on radio in 1935 and came to television fifteen years later (four trial telecasts were aired during the summer of 1950, though regular broadcasts did not begin until the fall). For its first eight years on TV, the show was a Saturday-night fixture on NBC; on each show the top musical hits of the week were performed by the show's regulars. Because some songs remained popular week after week, imaginative production sequences were designed to help sustain viewer interest; some of the medium's best-known choreographers—such as Tony Charmoli, Ernie Flatt, and Peter Gennaro—started out on Your Hit Parade, and one of its featured dancers was Bob Fosse, who later directed Cabaret. The show's early regulars included Dorothy Collins, Eileen Wilson, Snooky Lanson, and Sue Bennett; Russell Arms, June Valli, and bandleader Ray Scott were all aboard by 1952, though June Valli was succeeded by Gisele MacKenzie in 1953. In the fall of 1957 (the series' last season on NBC) the show was overhauled completely, and four new regulars were brought in: Tommy Leonetti, Jill Corey, Alan Copeland, and Virginia Gibson. A year later Your Hit Parade switched to CBS and was again overhauled, but the show failed to generate much interest; Dorothy Collins returned to costar with Johnny Desmond for one season. The show was moved to a Tuesday spot, and later to Fridays, before leaving the air in April 1959. Your Hit Parade was revived in the summer of 1974, but again failed to catch hold; the regulars at that time included Chuck Woolery, Kelly Garrett, and Sheralee.

YOUR LUCKY CLUE CBS

13 JULY 1952–31 AUGUST 1952 A summer replacement for This Is Show Business, this half-hour game show was hosted by Basil Rathbone. Four contestants competed as two twosomes, and tried to solve criminal cases enacted before them by a group of regular performers.

YOUR NEW DAY

SYNDICATED

1980 Designer Vidal Sassoon hosted this half-hour informational series for women, which focused on health, fashion, and self-improvement.

YOUR NUMBER'S UP

NBC

23 SEPTEMBER 1985–20 DECEMBER 1985 Nipsey Russell hosted this daytime game show, on which three contestants tried to identify, from their initial letters, missing words in selected phrases. Each time a correct answer was given, a one-digit number was posted on a board. Members of the studio audience also had the opportunity to play along; each member had a card with the last four digits of his or her home telephone number; anyone whose card matched the list of posted numbers could come onstage, and select one of the three contestants. If that contestant won the day's game, the audience member also won a prize.

YOUR PET PARADE

ABC

18 MARCH 1951–2 SEPTEMBER 1951 A Sunday-afternoon show on pets and pet care, Your Pet Parade was hosted by Jack Gregson; Billy Barty was featured as Billy Bitesize, the commercial spokesman for the sponsor, Ralston Purina. Music was supplied by Ivan Ditmars, and the half-hour show was produced by John Nelson.

YOUR PLAY TIME

CBS/NBC

14 JUNE 1953–6 SEPTEMBER 1953 (CBS); 13 JUNE 1954–5 SEPTEMBER 1954 (CBS); 18 JUNE 1955–3 SEPTEMBER 1955 (NBC) A half-hour dramatic anthology series of little note, Your Play Time popped up three times as a summer replacement series.

YOUR PRIZE STORY

NBC

2 APRIL 1952–28 MAY 1952 The stories on this half-hour dramatic anthology series were submitted by viewers. Any aspiring author whose script was accepted for adaptation by story editor Margaret Sangster won $1,000.

YOUR SHOW OF SHOWS

NBC

25 FEBRUARY 1950–5 JUNE 1954 A ninety-minute variety series, Your Show of Shows was a Saturday-night fixture for four years. It was a showcase not for guest stars, but for the comedic talents of its star, Sid Caesar, and his costar, Imogene Coca, who were backed up by two talented supporting players, Carl Reiner and Howard Morris. Most shows followed the same pattern: Sid Caesar introduced the evening's guest host (who usually played a comparatively minor role on the show), then appeared in a sketch with Imogene Coca. After a couple of production numbers and another sketch or two came the main segment—a satire of a popular film. After that, Caesar did a monologue or pantomime, and the entire company then participated in the final production number.

Your Show of Shows was produced by Max Liebman, who had worked with Caesar and Coca previously in theatrical revues he had staged in the Catskills and in Florida. Liebman first brought the revue idea to television in 1949 on The Admiral Broadway Revue (see also that title), an hour show that lasted seventeen weeks. In 1950, at the request of NBC programming chief Sylvester "Pat" Weaver, Liebman agreed to do a ninety-minute revue on Saturday nights; he brought with him most of the people who had been featured on The Admiral Broadway Revue: Caesar, Coca, Howard Morris, writers Mel Tolkin and Lucille Kallen, choreographer James Starbuck, set designer Frederick Fox, and conductor Charles Sanford. Other regulars on the first season of Your Show of Shows included Tom Avera, dancers Mata and Hari, Nellie Fisher and Jerry Ross, the Hamilton Trio (Bob Hamilton, Pat Horn, and Gloria Stevens), operatic singers Marguerite Piazza and Robert Merrill, pop singers Bill Hayes and Jack Russell, and the Billy Williams Quartet. Tom Avera left after the first season and was replaced by Carl Reiner. Jack Russell also left the show after a short time, and Judy Johnson became Bill Hayes's singing partner. Dancers Fisher and Ross left after the 1951–1952 season and were succeeded by Bambi Linn and Rod Alexander.

In addition to writers Mel Tolkin and Lucille Kallen, several other talented comedy writers worked for the show, including Mel Brooks, Larry Gelbart (*M*A*S*H*), Bill Persky and Sam Denoff (who later worked with Carl Reiner on The Dick Van Dyke Show), Neil Simon, and Woody Allen.

A melancholy man offstage, Sid Caesar brought his own unique style to the show; notorious for his deviations from the scripts, Caesar was a skilled mime, a gifted dialectician, an inimitable monologist, and a superb comic actor, especially when he was paired with Imogene Coca. Coca, who was born into a showbiz family, was a talented singer and dancer as well as a natural comedienne, who brought several years of professional experience to the show. The most famous characters that they portrayed on the show were Charlie and Doris Hickenlooper, a hopelessly mismatched married couple. In the solo spots, Caesar played hundreds of characters, but the best known include jazz musicians Progress Hornsby and Cool Cees (in real life, Caesar played the saxophone and had been in several bands), storyteller Somerset Winterset, and Italian film authority Giuseppe Marinara. Among the dozens of motion pictures that were lampooned were From Here to Eternity (which came out as "From Here to Obscurity") and Shane ("Strange").

Your Show of Shows was seen every Saturday night (with a hiatus each summer) from 1950 until the spring of 1953. In its last season it was seen three of every four weeks and left the air in June of 1954, after some 160 telecasts— all of them live. In the fall of 1954 Caesar and Coca went their separate ways; Caesar to Caesar's Hour, a comedy-variety show which lasted three seasons, and Coca to The Imogene Coca Show, a half-hour effort that lasted one season. The two were reunited in 1958 on Sid Caesar Invites You, but the magic had gone. In 1973 Max Liebman packaged a number of outstanding segments from Your Show of Shows into a theatrical release, Ten From Your Show of Shows.

YOUR SHOW TIME NBC
21 JANUARY 1949–15 JULY 1949 This filmed dramatic anthology series was hosted by Arthur Shields. The half-hour show was a Marshall Grant-Realm Production.

YOUR SURPRISE PACKAGE CBS
13 MARCH 1961–23 FEBRUARY 1962 A daytime game show hosted by George Fenneman (formerly the assistant on You Bet Your Life) on which contestants competed in a quiz segment for the chance to identify and win a "surprise package" of merchandise.

YOUR SURPRISE STORE CBS
12 MAY 1952–27 JUNE 1952 Lew Parker and Jacqueline Susann cohosted this daytime merchandise giveaway show.

YOUR WITNESS ABC
17 OCTOBER 1949–26 SEPTEMBER 1950 Another of TV's early courtroom drama shows, Your Witness should not be confused with its contemporaries, such as Famous Jury Trials and They Stand Accused, or with its successors, such as Day in Court, Divorce Court, Traffic Court, or The Verdict Is Yours.

YOU'RE IN THE PICTURE CBS
20 JANUARY 1961–27 JANUARY 1961 One of TV's biggest flops, You're in the Picture was a prime-time game show hosted by Jackie Gleason. Celebrities would drop by and stick their heads through holes in life-sized tableaux. From clues supplied by Gleason, the celebs (who could not see the scene of which they were part) tried to guess what picture they were in. Gleason abandoned the game show format after one week; on the second show he appeared alone, apologizing to viewers for "that bomb" and turned the show into a half-hour talk show for the remaining weeks (its title was then changed to The Jackie Gleason Show).

YOU'RE ON YOUR OWN CBS
22 DECEMBER 1956–16 MARCH 1957 A prime-time game show hosted by Steve Dunne, You're On Your Own began as a quiz show on which contestants were given time to answer the questions (they were free to use any reference source to obtain the answers). By the end of its short run, however, it had devolved into a stunt show, on which contestants who gave incorrect answers to general knowledge questions had to pay the consequences.

YOU'RE PUTTING ME ON NBC
30 MAY 1969–26 DECEMBER 1969 This daytime game show involved six celebrities, divided into three teams. One member of each team assumed the identity of a famous person (real or fictional), and the other member tried to guess who was being depicted. Bill Leyden hosted the show until late September, when Larry Blyden succeeded him.

YOURS FOR A SONG ABC
Nighttime: 14 NOVEMBER 1961–18 SEPTEMBER 1962; Daytime: 4 DECEMBER 1961–29 MARCH 1963 Bert Parks hosted this half-hour game show, on which contestants won money by supplying the missing words in lyrics sung to them. Bob Russell created the show.

YOUTH ON THE MARCH ABC/DUMONT
9 OCTOBER 1949–25 MAY 1952 (ABC); 5 OCTOBER 1952–7 JUNE 1953 (DUMONT) Sunday-evening religious show with the Reverend Percy Crawford and his Glee Club. Aired live from Philadelphia, the show also featured Crawford's wife, Ruth Duval Crawford, and their five children: Don, Dick, Dan, Dean, and Donna Lee.

YOUTH TAKES A STAND CBS
18 AUGUST 1953–28 MARCH 1954 One of several Sunday-afternoon public affairs programs on which a group of young people questioned a newsmaker, Youth Takes a Stand was moderated by Marc Cramer.

YOUTH WANTS TO KNOW NBC
8 SEPTEMBER 1951–1 JUNE 1958 Like Youth Takes a Stand, Youth Wants to Know was a Sunday show on which a team of youngsters interviewed newsmakers. Theodore Granik was the original moderator of the series; Granik had produced and moderated the adult version of the series, American Forum of the Air. Stephen McCormick succeeded Granik as moderator.

ZANE GREY THEATER CBS
5 OCTOBER 1956–20 SEPTEMBER 1962 Like Death Valley Days and Frontier, Zane Grey Theater was a western anthology series. It was hosted by Dick Powell and was officially titled Dick Powell's Zane Grey Theater; Powell occasionally starred in an episode. Some of the stories were based on those written by Zane Grey, but most were original teleplays. Among the guest stars who appeared were Hedy Lamarr (in her only TV dramatic appearance, "Proud Woman," 25 October 1957), Jack Lemmon ("The Three Graves," 4 January 1957), Ginger Rogers (in a rare TV appearance, "Never Too Late," 4 February 1960), Claudette Colbert (in her last TV dramatic appearance to date, "So Young the Savage Land," 10 November 1960), and Esther Williams (in her last TV dramatic appearance until 1987, "The Black Wagon," 1 December 1960). Hal Hudson was the first producer of the half-hour show, which was supplied by Four Star Films, Zane Grey, and Pamric Productions.

ZAZOO U. FOX
8 SEPTEMBER 1990–19 JANUARY 1991 Half-hour Saturday morning cartoon show set at a school attended by animals. The principal characters were Boink, Tess, Grizzle, and Bully.

THE ZOO GANG NBC
16 JULY 1975–6 AUGUST 1975 A three-hour miniseries, The Zoo Gang was shown in six parts by NBC during the summer of 1975. It told the story of four freedom fighters who worked together during World War II and reunited almost thirty years later to continue their adventures. With Brian Keith as Stephen Halliday (The Fox);

John Mills as Captain Tommy Devon (The Elephant); Lilli Palmer as Manouche Roget (The Leopard); and Barry Morse as Alec Marlowe (The Tiger). Filmed in Europe, the series was developed by Reginald Rose and produced by Herbert Hirschman for ATV-ITC Productions. Theme music was composed by Paul and Linda McCartney.

ZOO PARADE NBC

28 MAY 1950–1 SEPTEMBER 1957 This half-hour Sunday-afternoon series on animals and animal behavior was cohosted by Marlin Perkins and Jim Hurlbut. It was broadcast from Chicago's Lincoln Park Zoo until 1955; for the show's last two seasons, Perkins and Hurlbut traveled to zoos throughout the country.

ZOOBILEE ZOO SYNDICATED

1986 Ben Vereen, who was also hosting the syndicated music show You Write the Songs, starred in the children's music and variety series on which the actors all appeared as animals; Vereen played a leopard, Mayor Ben, the leader of the Zoobles.

ZOOM PBS

1972–1979 A half-hour potpourri of features for children, Zoom was hosted by a group of seven children, whose membership changed periodically. Many of the presentations were games, stunts, or filmed segments suggested by the show's legions of young viewers. The show was produced at WGBH-TV, Boston.

ZOORAMA CBS

25 APRIL 1965–26 SEPTEMBER 1965 Not to be confused with Zoo Parade, this half-hour animalogue was hosted by Bob Dale at the San Diego Zoo.

ZORRO ABC

10 OCTOBER 1957–24 SEPTEMBER 1959 Zorro, the masked Spanish swordsman of California, was created by author Johnston McCulley in 1919, and was the hero of several motion pictures before this Walt Disney TV series came to the air in 1957. The character was essentially the Batman of the 1820s (Zorro is the Spanish word for "fox"); his real identity was Don Diego de la Vega, a young Spanish nobleman who was summoned to California by his father to help fight the region's despotic commandant. On his way to North America Don Diego decided that he would purport to be a timid fop, so that no one would believe him to be the real "Zorro," defender of the people. The half-hour TV series starred Guy Williams as Don Diego/Zorro; George J. Lewis as his father, Don Alejandro de la Vega; Gene Sheldon as Bernardo, Don Diego's mute manservant, the only person who knew of his dual identity at first (Don Alejandro later learned of the fact); Henry Calvin as portly Sergeant Garcia, Zorro's hapless pursuer; Britt Lomond as Garcia's superior, Captain Monastario; Don Diamond as Corporal Reyes, Garcia's lackey; and Jolene Brand (1958–1959) as Anna Maria, Don Diego's sometime girlfriend. Walt Disney was executive producer of the series, William H. Anderson producer. In 1974 the character reappeared in a made-for-TV movie, "The Mark of Zorro," starring Frank Langella (29 October 1974). A second TV series surfaced in 1983 (see Zorro and Son), and a third in 1990 (see below).

ZORRO FAM

5 JANUARY 1990–21 AUGUST 1993 The second remake of the 1957 TV series was filmed in Spain, and starred Duncan Regehr as Zorro/Don Diego de la Vega, Patrice Camhi as Victoria, and Efrem Zimbalist, Jr., (1990) as Zorro's father, Don Alejandro.

ZORRO AND SON CBS

6 APRIL 1983–1 JUNE 1983 This sequel to Zorro was played for laughs. Set in California a generation later than the original, it starred Henry Darrow as the aging Don Diego/Zorro; realizing that he wasn't getting any younger, and finding it increasingly difficult to swing from chandeliers, Don Diego revealed his identity to his son, Don Carlos, and enlisted his help in protecting the citizenry from the military governors. Also featured were Paul Regina as the son, Don Carlos; Bill Dana as their servant, Bernardo; Gregory Sierra as the officious Captain Paco Pico; Richard Beauchamp as Sergeant Sepulveda; fast-talking John Moschitta, Jr. (better known for his Federal Express commercials), as Corporal Cassette, the human dictaphone; and Barney Martin as two local churchmen, Brother Napa and Brother Sonoma. The half-hour show was supplied by Walt Disney Productions, which had produced the original series.

★★★ PART III

PRIME TIMES

Explanatory notes: The following charts show the prime-time fall schedules for each of the major commercial networks. The times shown are the times when the network broadcast the program (eastern standard time), rather than when a local affiliate broadcast it; in most cases, however, the New York City network affiliates (particularly those of CBS and NBC) carried network programs at the same time as the network.

Series that appear in boldface are new for that season; a series is considered "new" if it premiered after 1 June in a given year. Series that are shaded are those which were canceled that season. A series is deemed canceled if it did not appear on a regularly scheduled first-run basis on a network schedule for the following fall season. Examples: Father Knows Best is deemed canceled during the 1959–1960 season, though it was rerun in prime time the following season. The Twilight Zone is deemed canceled during the 1961–1962 season, though it returned the following midseason. Police Story is deemed canceled during the 1976–1977 season, though a few Police Story specials were broadcast during the following season.

The numbers that appear at the right of the boxes indicate the age of the series in seasons.

Motion pictures are not considered "series" for the purposes of renewal or cancellation. The titles of some series have been abbreviated as a matter of convenience.

THE ENVELOPES, PLEASE

EMMY AWARDS

Television's best-known awards, the Emmys were first presented in January 1949 in Hollywood by the newly formed Academy of Television Arts and Sciences. The awards bore a distinctly local flavor for the first few years, but by 1955 (the year of the first coast-to-coast Emmy telecast, honoring achievements for 1954) they had acquired a truly national character. In 1957 the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences was formed, which administered the awards exclusively from that year through 1976. In 1977 tension between the Hollywood and New York chapters of the National Academy led to the secession of the Hollywood group, which was reborn as the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences. Lawsuits and countersuits concerning the right to confer the Emmy statuette ensued; eventually a compromise was struck, permitting the Hollywood-based Academy of Television Arts and Sciences to administer the Emmys for prime-time entertainment programs and the New York-based National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences to award Emmys for daytime, sports, and local shows (the National Academy was also authorized to present awards for news programs, but the news divisions of the three commercial networks for several years declined to participate in the Emmys).

Despite a troubled history of internecine warfare, boycotts and frequently boring awards telecasts, the Emmys remain popular. Presented here are all the winners of Emmy awards from 1948 through 1953; from 1954 on, as the number of award categories began to proliferate, the list has been edited. Included are all awards given to series and individual programs, all awards given to actors, performers, directors, writers, and any noteworthy engineering and special awards. Not included are awards in the technical craft areas (such as cinematography, film and tape editing, sound mixing and editing, lighting, costume design, makeup, choreography, and musical direction). The awards for each year are not listed in the order in which they were presented, but rather have been grouped together insofar as practicable so that awards to programs are listed first, awards to actors and performers second, and awards for directing, writing and other achievements third. The titles of some award categories have been abridged slightly. Though separate awards for daytime shows were first presented in 1974, the daytime Emmys have been integrated with the prime-time Emmys through 1975–1976. Beginning with the 1976–1977 awards—the first to be separately administered by the two Television Academies—the daytime Emmys are listed separately. It should also be noted that for the years 1948 through 1957 the Emmys were presented on a calendar year basis. Beginning in 1958, however, the awards were given on a seasonal basis; the 1958–1959 Emmy season covers a fourteen-month period, and later awards cover a twelve-to-thirteen-month period which usually runs from March to March or April to April. The term "Emmy" is derived from "Immy," a nickname for the image orthicon camera tube developed during the late 1940s.
